For Independent Producers

"THE service couldn't have been better had we owned the plant," says Rollin Sturgeon, director of "What Is Your Daughter Doing?" The picture is an independent production made by Sturgeon and Lucien Hubbard. Both men know the film business. Sturgeon as a director and Hubbard as an author are among the best known of their respective professions. They realized at the start the laboratory's importance in making their picture an artistic and commercial success. So they came to THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES.

"STANDARD Service is the best I've ever known," says Dallas Fitzgerald, who directed "Her Price" for Belasco Productions. Fitzgerald has made many good pictures for some of the industry's biggest producers. He knows the film business, too. So he also came to THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES. Other independent producers are profiting by our service from camera to screen. They know the organization making one picture at a time gets the same high standard of work and the same friendly co-operation extended to the big studios with many units going constantly.

One Problem that Needn't Worry You

NEWSPAPER advertising is one thing the exhibitor doesn't have to worry about.

The newspaper ads prepared by Paramount are used by the largest and the smallest theatres in the country, and they produce results.

They are prepared by a staff of experts, and are supplied in all suitable sizes, in mats or electros, at your exchange.

Below is the four column advertisement on " My American Wife."

GLORIA SWANSON in

A BREEZY American girl winning love and happiness amid hot Spanish passions and intrigue—that's Glorious Gloria in this silken romance. Never was the star so wonderfully gowned, so warmly alluring.

HERE'S the made-to-order crowd-getter of the season—the picture with the showman's smash advertising angle that will attract and satisfy an eagerly waiting audience of MILLIONS—the millions who read the book and the further millions who saw the play.

FOR, sensational as was "THELMA" as a book, overwhelmingly successful as it was as a stage play, as a motion picture it is a Goliath of entertainment that dwarfs even its own gigantic ancestors.

PRODUCED with lavish splendor and supreme artistry. Marie Corelli's immortal love story of the beautiful Norwegian girl who left her bleak, native hills to become the glorious idol of brilliant London society has been brought to life on the screen in a dazzling blaze of smashing drama, stirring spectacle and glittering color.

AND, just as nothing has been left undone in the making of the picture, nothing has been left undone by F. B. O. in furnishing you with a press sheet whose aids will help you sweep "THELMA" on a tidal wave of inundating profits. BOOK IT—PLUG IT!—AND SMILE AT THE RECEIVING TELLER.

After viewing this picture one wonders how and why the young American Releasing Corp. secured it, when the older and perhaps bigger distributing organizations in the field are clamoring so loudly for good picture productions. This one is a good one, no matter from what angle you look at it. It is better than some of the early real good Charlie Ray pictures and a production of the same type. It is cast perfectly, it is directed finely, and it is a picture good and strong enough to play any one of the big pre-release houses and not only satisfy audiences but pull business, because it is a picture that will get word of mouth advertising.

In it Lambert Hillyer seemingly has done something for pictures which in its way is almost as great as the close-up. From this time on one can expect to get a follow up on his idea of splitting action with a spoken title by almost anyone of the directors, for it is a real advancement and the only one that has come along since the close-up. Talking pictures? No, not in the fullest sense of the word, but as near talk as one can get without the words actually beign uttered.

Hillyer takes his characters and starts them on a speech. In the centre of it he gives the spoken title, following it with the character concluding the speech. And you don't have to be a lip reader to get what is uttered even before the title is flashed, so well do the speeches fit into the action.

Incidentally in Robert Gordon, who plays Miles Brewster, Hillyer seems to have picked a boy destined to land as big as Ray did in the matter of personal popularity, providing he has in his next couple of pictures, direction as capable as that which he had the advantage of in this picture. The Irene Hayes contributed by Charlotte Pierce is likewise as clever a piece of work as that which Gordon does. How Booth Tarkington will love both of these two young people on the screen and figure how much he would have liked to have had them characterizing his youngsters of fiction.

As for the story it is one of those that they rave about but seldom get. Clean, wholesome with a delightful vein of comedy, a cleverly handled love story of youth, in a wonderful background of small town home atmosphere.

No matter where your theatre and less matter the kind of theatre it is, from the highest and smartest to the smallest and cheapest, you can't go wrong with this one, your audiences will love it. Fred.

VARIETY

New York Globe: "A faithful reproduction of things that happen in a family where there is an only son. A picture of this sort may not be art but it is a more worthy contribution to the cause of entertaining the public than a majority of pictures seen in the movie theatres."

New York American: "'The Super-Sex' is very interesting. Remarkably fine character work by Gertrude Claire as Grandma Brewster of the bitter tongue. Tully Marshall is in his element."

New York Sun: "Depicts in amusing fashion the hopes, fears, trials and tribulations of a boy of twenty whose self-consciousness of his age brings about his revolt against family and friends."

Journal: "The adventures of a youth who knows, or thinks he knows, all about women is bound to be of interest on the screen; appeals to both sexes equally."

New York Telegraph: "A nice picture that we predict will be well liked in most theatres where it is shown."

Moving Picture World: "This story carries an appeal to those who appreciate fine attention to details; the characters ring true. The picture holds fine entertainment for discriminating patrons of motion picture theatres."

Exhibitors Trade Review: "A good picture of American home life told without any unnecessary embellishments. The story will appeal to people of all races and classes and should prove a good box-office attraction in any locality."

Moving Picture World: "Lambert Hillyer has been directing many, many years and he knows how to dress up a story to sustain the interest. You cannot call the 'Super-Sex' a knockout but it will serve its little hour and bring the breath of romance at the end of the day, which is certainly in its favor."

The New York public and the newspaper critics are getting tired to death of flabby stories overloaded with big casts of players labelled "stars." Besides Mary Pickford and Harold Lloyd and two new American Releasing productions every other picture on Broadway in the so-called big first runs has been panned to a fare-you-well for the past month. One of the American Releasing productions liked and widely-praised is the

CARMEL MYERS ~ JOSEPH J. DOWLING ~ W. P. CARLETON ~ VERNON STEEL

The story of what happened to a young wife whose husband found himself "too busy to love"

Here Is What the Critics Said:

New York American: Constantly vibrating activity, the sense of something always happening; a greatly improved Carmel Myers. A story that sweeps across the screen; the important scenes vivid in brevity without unloosing the grip of the main theme for a moment. A triangle story with a woman moving between two men as restless as a drop of quicksilver on an unsteady surface.

New York Telegraph: Joseph Dowling plays the role of a blind man with all the fine spirituality that characterized "The Miracle Man."

New York Sun: Here is a new phase of the marriage triangle.

Variety: It has dramatic suspense and develops convincingly to a forceful climax. It also has two capital screen punches—the burning of a big oil tank and a realistic train wreck.

Atlanta Film Review: An all-star cast; striking scenic effects; a great oil fire; the crashing of trains in a big wreck scene. A picture above the average attraction.

"There's a good human interest element in 'The Danger Point,'" says Moving Picture World; "Presented with a new angle introducing bits of drama in a gripping way and commendable directness," says Motion Picture News; "It registers at high water mark; a well-told love story," says Exhibitors Trade Review; "Offers unusual opportunities for exploitation; the cast in this is your best bet," says Film Daily.

Remarkable!

Says Reeland Reviews

"IT is a picture that will be remembered for a long time. A remarkable motion picture. It is a pleasure to state that 'The Flirt' as a picture is quite as good as 'The Flirt' as a book—even a little better, perhaps."

First Rate!

Says N. Y. Globe

"A REMARKABLE piece of work in every respect. First rate entertainment. Hobart Henley has handled the Tarkington story with rare skill and intelligence. I hope Mr. Tarkington writes Hobart a letter and tells him so."

Powerful!

Says N. Y. Eve. Mail

One of the Best!

Says N. Y. Telegraph

"ACTED by a flawless cast, it is a picture with tremendous human interest. If it meets with the success it deserves it should be one of the best pictures of the year."

Good for Any House!

Says M. P. News

"ADAPTED to the screen, it (The Flirt) retains its values—its charm—its human appeal, and all its lifelike incident. Good for any house in any locality."

A Big Box Office Attraction!

Says M. P. World

"ONE of the most intensely human stories ever presented on the screen. Every one of the characters seem real living persons. Strikes home. Exceptionally well selected cast. Should appeal to every class of spectator. Should appeal to every type of audience, and prove a big box-office attraction."

Excellent!

Says N. Y. World

"ALL who like Tarkington's works may find this picture worth their while. Most of it is excellent."

"The Inner Man"

Syracuse Motion Picture Co.—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Glenn Watkins)

GOING into widely different fields for its second contribution to the industry, the Syracuse Motion Picture Company has made an entertaining production based on a stirring story laid in the Blue Ridge. Wyndham Standing and Dorothy Mackail again top the well balanced cast and both put over convincing interpretations. Miss Mackail proves she can act in this picture and is an attractive mountain maid. Mr. Standing is a sterling actor and can always be depended upon for something worth while. The stars are fortunate in having a fine supporting cast. (1) (2)

There is much action in the picture, especially when it gets under way in the mountain locale. The "bad men" of the district, in which the hero owns a mine, set out to frighten away the youth, but instead they set off the spark of manhood and there are some stirring fistic and gun battles. (3)

There is an amusing scene introduced when the hero on his first night in the mountains, has a weird dream and we are shown glimpses of maidens dancing on the greensward and then follows our hero clad a la pajamas rollicking forth with the slow motion camera brought into play to bring out the laughs. (4)

The hero makes such a success of running things for father that the lad is made general manager of the mine and after Sally, the Blue Ridge belle is clad in one of milady's modern gowns, love springs forth and in the end all is happiness. During the action of the piece the audience is treated to some fine natural scenery. The photography is flawless. (5)

The Cast

Adapted from novel by Charles Mackay. Directed by Hamilton Smith. Phhotographed by Arthur A. Cadwell. A Playgoers' Picture

The Story—Thurlow Barclay is a young man more given to deep and scientific study and feminine sports than he is to business and his father is much put out because of this fact. He, however, succeeds in getting him to take a vacation and go to inspect Dad's mine, in the Blue Ridge. On his arrival there he meets up with real life, has a list of stirring adventures and is made into a real man, ending up by marrying a fair mountain maid.

Production Highlights—The attractive natural settings "in the Blue Ridge." Wyndham Standing's interpretation of the role of the man who is made over by contact with real life. The kidnapping of Sally by Jud and the ensuing gun play attending her rescue. The fight between Jud and Thurlow. Dorothy Mackail's convincing portrayal of the mountain maid.

Exploitation Angles—This one has a cast of well-known players. Use the names big in your ads. Might put a man on the street dressed in conspicuous golf suit, large horn rim glasses, college hat, etc., and appropriate sign on back of coat, about "the outer man has nothing to do with the 'Inner Man' at the Strand theatre all week."

IN

CONQUERING THE WOMAN

FROM THE FASCINATING NOVEL BY HENRY C. ROWLAND

A KING VIDOR PRODUCTION

"The picture opens with views of life at a seaside resort near Paris and we see Miss Vidor aquaplaning, swimming and indulging in other red-blooded sports. The action shifts to America and then quickly to the South Seas. The fights which David Butler puts up during the 'shanghaiing' moments are real stuff. The island life is well pictured and there are a number of amusing situations here.

"The chase of two ships through the seas is a bit of excitement. Miss Vidor and Mr. Butler do most of the work in the picture and do it well. The supporting cast is adequate. The photography is clear and artistic, while the subtitles are snappy and excellently worded."

Motion Picture News

"Florence Vidor has always been one of this reviewer's screen favorites. She soothes the eye and satisfies the intelligence. Ear rings, negligees and exaggerated eyelids have not figured unduly in her success. And so it is easy to be entertained when Miss Vidor fills the camera eye. 'Conquering the Woman' is entertaining, sprightly and well cast."

The Morning Telegraph

"The picture is so good to look at and made up of such a variety of interesting scenes that will please, that the more or less stereotyped plot will not detract as much from the feature's entertainment value as it might under a less careful production. King Vidor has secured numerous pleasing locations that have been artistically photographed and the atmosphere throughout is one of pictorial appeal. Florence Vidor's ..... pleasing personality and ability to hold her audience regardless of what she has to do, is another redeeming feature for Henry C. Rowland's theme."

The Film Daily — The Recognized Authority

"Florence Vidor in 'Conquering the Woman' is a good, entertaining feature, built along a theme that is familiar, but which is, at the same time, thoroughly pleasing in its unfoldment and picturization. David Butler plays the hero role and is well cast. The picture was directed by King Vidor from a story by Henry C. Rowland. Six reels.

"This newest Florence Vidor feature should not fail to register pleasantly with any audience. There is a genuine, pleasing vein to the story which makes the picture satisfying entertainment of a light, easy-to-follow variety.

"Miss Vidor is appealing and winsome at all times and in selecting David Butler to play opposite her, in the role of the hero, Director Vidor made a particularly effective choice. In this story the two make a great combination."

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT TO FRANCHISE HOLDERS

OF ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, INC.

It is now almost three years since Associated First National Pictures, Inc., put into effect the franchise system.

Though First National has never contended that the Franchise method of selling pictures is entirely perfect, and that all the problems involved in establishing stable and sound methods of dealing between Distributor and Exhibitor have been settled, First National has no apologies to offer for its efforts. I believe that in the Franchise Plan First National has made a great forward step.

First National is as firmly convinced as ever that a great many exhibitors who have invested large sums of money in motion picture theatres desire to be assured of protection for their film supply and placed in a position where they can maintain their independence as exhibitors. The motion picture industry will be firmly established only when there is a proper balance between Producer, Distributor and Exhibitor, which leaves them all secure, both in their policies and investments.

Independence and protection still remain the basis of our franchise, and therein it has been eminently successful. Moreover, in establishing the franchise, First National has made the first notable effort to do away with the old system of individual barter and unfairly varying prices, and to substitute in place firm and properly adjusted prices.

It has been and still will be, our organization's constant effort to bring about more equitable methods of dealing between Producer and Exhibitor, and we are hopeful that the great majority of our franchise holders will realize that their cooperation with us will continue to maintain an organized continuity of effort for the object which means so much to us all.

I feel confident that those franchise holders who believe the plan unsuited to their peculiar circumstances should not be asked to continue under franchise. So, if there are franchise holders who do not share my faith in the First National franchise, I wish to announce the willingness of our organization to cancel the franchise of such exhibitors. Moreover, it is the desire of First National that those franchise holders who are released, if they have faithfully and fairly lived up to their franchise obligations in the past, should suffer no loss on account of the money they paid out in the purchase of the voting trust certificates involved in the sale of the franchise.

Any franchise holder who is not in default under his franchise, who desires to terminate his franchise, as of June 30, 1923, or any subsequent time can do so by giving First National six months notice at any time. It makes no difference whether the notice is given before January 1, 1923, so long as six months notice is given to First National and provided that the termination cannot become effective prior to June 30, 1923.

Therefore, First National is willing, at this time, in cancelling such franchises, to refund to the franchise holder who is not in default under his franchise the consideration he paid for the voting trust certificates in the form of film service consisting of such pictures as First National determines are available in each instance, which must be taken advantage of within six months of notice of cancellation.

First National will, of course, account to its producers for this service just as if it had received the rentals in cash.

In making this voluntary statement (which goes far beyond First National's legal obligations under the franchise) I request that notice be sent immediately by any dissatisfied franchise holders to the manager of the exchange by whom they are being served, so that it may be determined by First National as to whether such franchise holder has been in default and is entitled to this adjustment. Needless to say, I include in this suggestion franchise holders who have sent in their notice prior to January 1st, 1923.

So there may be no misunderstanding, I would say that, under this arrangement, the franchise holder when cancelling will have to forego all his rights in the voting trust certificates.

In making this announcement I wish to say that First National has no other motives than those herein expressly stated. I believe that the great majority of our franchise holders have sufficient confidence in the future of First National, and in the forward looking and perhaps somewhat bold effort First National has made in establishing franchise, to continue with us. I invite such franchise holders to remain members of the First National "franchise family." But those franchise holders who do not wish to continue will, I hope, appreciate the fairness of our voluntary suggestion and terminate their franchise with the same friendly feeling toward First National that First National has, and will have, toward them.

The motion picture industry requires, more than anything else, the spirit of goodwill and fair dealing between all engaged in it. It is in this spirit and with high hopes for the future of First National as an organization grounded on the principle of fairness toward both independent exhibitors and independent producers, that I am making this announcement, and I hope it will be received in the same spirit by all our franchise holders.

What Do Pictures Lack?

IN our recent "Hall of Fame" contest we asked a number of prominent people outside of the industry to contribute selections of notables.

The replies were disquieting. Nearly all wrote back that they couldn't think of anybody.

In the oil, steel, automobile and other industries there are at least two or three names on everyone's tongue; probably no more. But it does seem strange that an industry, whose product is itself publicity—whose millions of feet of film put names and personalities daily in the public eye should have made no impression whatsoever upon the well-read, thinking man.

One of the best known editors in the United States wrote back:

"I don't go to one moving picture show a season. I have been to only one in 1922 and here it is nearly December. I have never seen Douglas Fairbanks' work nor Mary Pickford's nor the Gish girls' nor Bill Hart's."

At least he knows the names of a few film people. He must have read about them in newspapers.

But we can't help wondering what is the matter with the exhibitor in this editor's town that he can't get such a man into his theatre at least once a year.

And we can't help wondering in a general way why this great agent of publicity—the motion picture—doesn't publicize itself more forcefully, in itself and through the public prints.

Is picture entertainment the basic fault? Are pictures making only a superficial impression?

When the New York World says of the picture: "the same old hokum, the same lumbering plots, the same dull made to order situations and flat sub-titles, the same atmosphere of second-hand and fifth rate which hung over the cinema in its infancy all cling to it in 1922"—there is room for much argument and analysis. The statement is not intelligent, not true to the facts at hand. Nevertheless so scathing an indictment from what many regard as the soundest editorial page in this country is to be weighed—thoughtfully.

It is difficult to please the so-called intelligentia with any kind of entertainment. It is, in fact, a commercial impossibility.

But—why so bitter, contemptuous and downright an indictment as this? What basis has it?

The writer has studied the motion picture for ten years—very seriously and always with sympathy and optimism.

Yet he can truthfully state that while today pictures are decidedly better than ever before they are as a whole hitting far short of their true mark. That is his sincere opinion. And he is not optimistic.

That they are failing to get to the heart of the American public is not an opinion. It is a fact.

* * *

And, in the writer's opinion, the broad trouble is this: pictures, the mass of them, are not telling the public anything, certainly nothing new, stirring, awakening and certainly not with the scope and vivid appeal of which pictures alone are capable.

Save for the war period when pictures did rise to their opportunities, we have had no great pictures, great in concept, since "Intolerance."

Many screen personalities have been made; some great pantomimists have been created; good screen acting has been evolved here and there; daring expenditures have been made; great effects created; technical triumphs have been scored.

But—pictures are not telling the public anything. The themes of the best are the themes of the stage and the book and often little more than bald illustrations. Pictures are in a dramatic groove, and the public will look elsewhere for inspiration.

The world today is rocking with the great currents and cross-currents of a new era. From the great problem of Internationalism down to the new problems of each nation and thence to the new problems of every home there are truths to tell, situations to be dramatized, thought to be crystallized; and it is the duty and the privilege of the motion picture to rise to these vast opportunities.

To one who knows the commercial and economic insides of this industry these production paths are not so easily trod as the newspaper editorial may see them; but the New York World is largely right in saying:

"The trouble with the films is not so much lack of morals as lack of brains."

VOL. XXVII DECEMBER 6, 1923 NO. 1

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WE give in this issue the verdict of the man in the street on the Arbuckle films. It is our idea of an editorial. We let the public write it because the public and the public alone will give the verdict. The rest of us, especially the self-appointed saviours of the public, will only rant. There is no law to put people into the theatre or to keep them out. Will they laugh at Arbuckle's comedies?—that's the practical question; should Arbuckle come back to the screen?—that's another question. But the first will settle the latter. We give these opinions of Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Average Citizen at length, because each one is pithy and enlightening, and the whole gives a feel of the public pulse which exhibitors want to have.

* * *

JOE PLUNKETT of the New York Mark-Strand is giving his patrons a great show this Christmas week. The genial Joe is too modest to tell the world that he is something of a showman, but if there is any exhibitor who knows more about providing screen entertainment we would like to be given his name. Week after week, the Mark-Strand has been hitting the high places with its program. The Fokine ballet, a fine orchestra, atmospheric prologues, and worth-while pictures are features which have brought appreciation from its patrons.

This week Joe Plunkett has outdone himself in furnishing his program de luxe. There is an imaginative prologue carrying on a true Christmas spirit followed by the gifted Harold Lloyd in his latest opus, "Dr. Jack." And to be in the audience and noticing the faces of the patrons wreathed in smiles, one cannot help but give Joe Plunkett credit for his showmanship in fashioning a program which appeals to everybody, young or old, poor or rich.

GEORGE FITZMAURICE is coming out on his own. The director will soon launch an independent company. Just recently he has completed "Bella Donna," starring Pola Negri, and will soon begin work upon his last production for the Paramount banner which will be an elaborate re-filming of "The Cheat," a picture once spoken of as the ideal photoplay. Pola Negri will appear in Fannie Ward's original role.

* * *

THE Rialto and Rivoli theatres in New York are housing attractions written by two talented Hoosiers, Booth Tarkington and George Ade. "The Flirt" is one of Tarkington's early stories—a life-like document of small-town life which has been faithfully adapted to the screen. Hobart Henley, the director, has retained all its humanness and appeal. The commonplace family that is exposed here will be recognized as genuine. George Nichols as the father gives one of the most inspired performances of the shadow stage. The character Hedrick, the irrepressible young brother, played with considerable spirit by Buddy Messenger, was our first introduction to Tarkington's study of pre-adolescence. His immortal Penrod was founded upon the boy, Hedrick.

George Ade wrote an original story for Tom Meighan in "Back Home and Broke." This is also an expression of small-town life, revealing a different slant than Tarkington's story. Here we have the youth who applies the acid test to his friends—to discover the genuine from the false. He strikes it rich, but returns home masquerading as broke, and has the satisfaction of showing up the pseudo friends in a manner which will be appreciated by every spectator. The villagers do not know the identity of the man who is doing so much for the town. He is to make his appearance with considerable pomp and ceremony. The entire population turns out at the station. It is a grand welcome home. The train arrives and from the rear platform of the special car appears the youth. You may well imagine the astonishment of the crowd when they see him. This finale is one of the most delightful scenes ever recorded by a camera. It is typically George Ade—conceived with all the subtle humor that has made the author of "Fables in Slang," famous. Tom Meighan's performance is admirable. He takes such advantage of every opportunity that the spectator lives the role.

We advise ever exhibitor not to overlook such sterling pictures as "The Flirt," and "Back Home and Broke." They represent screen story telling at its best.

AL CHRISTIE stepped off the boat from Honolulu the other day with his face wreathed in smiles and full of Christmas cheer principally because he brought back his company and a large assortment of moving pictures taken on the picturesque island, in plenty of time for all concerned to have Christmas dinners at home. The Christie comedy program for 1923 contains some departures from the usual procedure in that there will be still more of the scenic educational factors combined with merriment in the pictures made by Christie and his associates. The picture made in Honolulu, for example, is one of the new program, and the lengthy trip was undertaken for the comedy, "A Hula Honeymoon," for the purpose of bringing new backgrounds and unusual pictorial beauty into the comedy subjects which are being prepared for the coming year.

JOE PINCUS, well known in vaudeville and theatrical circles along Broadway for the last twenty-five years, and recently in charge of comedy scenarios at the Fox studios in Los Angeles, has returned to New York for a short business trip.

* * *

OUR old friend Canon Chase has bobbed up again. The New York Times in its By-Products column of a few Sundays ago has something to say concerning the Canon's newest band-wagon and says it in terms which cannot be misunderstood—not even by that dignitary.

We quote the Times article:

"Meanwhile, a more experienced reformer than Dr. Straton has swung aboard the Ku Klux band wagon. This is Canon William Sheafe Chase, veteran of a dozen holy wars and a publicist of great variety. His last appearance in print before this Klan excitement was as character witness for a gentleman who needed all the character witnessing he could get, and a good deal more. Now Canon Chase says he thinks well of the Klan because it is hated by bootleggers, gamblers, producers of films (the italics are ours), Sabbath breakers and corrupt politicians.

Maybe so. But Canon Chase had the soul of a Klansman long before he began to preach for the Klan. He is best known as the enemy of the moving picture business, and it seems open to doubt whether he hates the movies because they are made by Jews, or the Jews because they make the movies. At any rate, his "Catechism on Motion Pictures" says that "the few producers who control the motion pictures are all Hebrews. If they should petition Congress for an effective and just law regulating their business" (and Canon Chase has that law already written "it would be a conspicuous public-spirited act that might begin a movement which would minimize the anti-Jewish feeling which exists in the United States. If the Klan can use Canon Chase, Canon Chase also can use the Klan.

RODOLPH VALENTINO has been talking over the radio. And it wasn't a bedtime story. At the Grand Central Palace Exposition last Friday night the star of "Blood and Sand" in a speech concerning the trouble with the screen, said in part: "Seventy-five and more per cent of the pictures shown today are a brazen insult to the public's intelligence—that only a few of the leaders, such as Griffith, Fairbanks, Pickford, Chaplin and Barthelmess and a few other independent stars, directors and producers realize that motion pictures can be an art. Independent companies are loath to follow the factory cut-and-dried methods of motion picture artists who are a decided menace to motion pictures as an art as well as an industry."

WHEN D. W. GRIFFITH begins production upon "The White Rose," one of his discoveries, Mae Marsh, will be back in the fold. This will be great news to the followers of the star who helped make "The Birth of a Nation" such a memorable achievement.

* * *

FIRST NATIONAL, over President Robert Lieber's signature, has made an official announcement to its franchise holders to the effect that "independence and protection still remain the basis of our franchise, and therein it has been eminently successful. Moreover, in establishing the franchise, First National has made the first notable effort to do away with the old system of individual barter and unfairly varying prices, and to substitute in place firm and properly adjusted prices."

"I feel confident that those franchise holders who believe the plan unsuited to their peculiar circumstances should not be asked to continue under franchise. So if there are franchise holders who do not share my faith in the First National franchise, I wish to announce the willingness of our organization to cancel the franchise of such exhibitors."

* * *

OFTENTIMES exhibitors hear that certain incidents shown in pictures are impossible of achievement—just hokum stuff. At a private showing of "Skin Deep" recently several prison officials attended. It was prison stuff and they were invited to give their opinions.. They saw Bud Doyle, a "frame-up" gunman, played by Milton Sills, make a dramatic escape from prison, scale penitentiary walls and board a moving train, from the top of which he seized a rope ladder attached to a confederate's airplane and got away.

The prison officials smiled, shook their heads and said: "Very thrilling, but quite impossible."

Yet fact outdid fiction when Clara Phillips, convicted of the hammer murder in Los Angeles, sawed through the bars of her cell, scaled the roof of the Los Angeles prison and is believed to have made her escape by airplane to Mexico

What about the convict who made a sensational getaway from Sing Sing the other day? He was in the "show" given by the prisoners. He donned feminine attire, mingled with the guests and walked out. This would indicate that "Skin Deep" wasn't so far wrong after all.

* * *

BILL HART has become an author. The he-man of the screen has written a book called "Injun and Whitey to the Rescue." It is said to be very entertaining and a big sale is expected. Martin Johnson is another who has blossomed forth with a book. He has written up his exploits in the South Seas and, according to the reviews, the book is destined to become a best-seller.

* * *

CHESTER BEECROFT is a busy man these days in a busy place, to wit, the International Studios, where production is humming and big pictures are promised. Going back over our files we find a lot about this production, publicity and all-around motion picture man, which placed end to end over a period of twelve years give him a who's who to be envied by almost any man.

Here is a list of achievements: pioneer lighting and ventilating devices in picture houses; the first board of censors called into being to offset the rumblings of state and municipal censorship; the first favorable copy on motion pictures in the public press; the first colored insert in the trade press and the first better ad copy in general; advertising manager of the General Film Company; and production and executive activities with Mutual, David Horsley, Chaplin, Famous Players, etc. A record to be proud of and in each job a determined and refreshing originality of thought and aim.

WALTER HIERS, Paramount's newest star, is going to double in brass. Simultaneous with his production activities, the rotund comedian will be the star of a real (not reel) wedding to take place in Syracuse, N. Y., the end of this month. It is then that he will lead Adah (Peaches) McWilliams to the altar, bringing her to New York for a honeymoon and then back to Los Angeles, where they will establish their love nest.

* * *

JACK ALICOATE of the Film Daily has collaborated with Buster Collier in dashing off a play called "Extra," which is now in rehearsal. Jack incidentally is to become a benedict in the near future. Congratulations.

* * *

AMONG the screen celebs who are in New York from locations to talk business with the big boys behind the glasstop desks, or to shop or to search for new film material are Bill Hart, who is looking for appropriate stories; Rex Ingram, Alice Terry, Montagu Love, Charles Gerrard, Harry Morey, Rubye de Remer, Alice Brady, Diana Allen, Ramon Navarro, Dick Barthelmess, Dorothy Gish, Juanita Hansen, Alfred Green and Herbert Brenon.

* * *

BILL FARNUM has taken up golf. Possessing a pair of powerful fists, he is able to swing a mean stroke with a two-ton pressure. The Fox star may be found most any afternoon when the megaphone is silent chasing the little white pills over the green of one of Hollywood's best courses.

* * *

THE many friends of Joseph W. Farnham in and out of the industry were shocked to learn of the death of his wife, Alma, on Tuesday of this week.

WE are all waiting anxiously in New York for Dr. Reisenfeld's program which will include the Einstein theory of relativity. According to all the publicity "dope," one does not have to be a student of geometry, calculus and higher mathematics to understand what the learned German doktor reveals in his justly famous theory.

Hays Action on Arbuckle Brings Criticism

Opinions Vary, with Majority in Favor of Keeping Permanent Ban on Comedian

FROM all parts of the United States comes comment on Will Hays' avowal to give "Fatty" Arbuckle a chance to "come back" because of the comedian's exemplary behavior of the past nine months or more. These comments vary from commending Hays for the Christian spirit he has shown in the matter to claiming that he overturned all the good he has done since his connection with the industry.

One almost unanimous opinion comes from the women of America. Organized bodies of women throughout the United States have condemned the comedian from appearing on the screen. Their action seems to be a more concerted one than that coming from other quarters. Church groups have also combined against Arbuckle.

Mayors of cities, in certain instances, have proclaimed against the showing of Arbuckle pictures, while in some cases city executives are inclined to leave the issue with the picture-going public as to whether or not they will patronize Arbuckle films as these films are released.

From Los Angeles, the home of pictures, comes a wire from the correspondent of Motion Picture News as follows:

"Hays' statement lifting his ban on Arbuckle has brought a storm of protest from newspapers, women's clubs, ministers and societies. The Motion Picture Directors' Association, which extended an honorary membership to Hays during his recent visit, adopted a resolution at a special meeting December 22 and sent the following wire to Hays:

"'Under no circumstances should any person or persons who by their actions have proven a menace to the well being of our industry be tolerated or excused. The aim of this association is to exert eevry influence to improve the moral, social and intellectual standing of persons connected with the producing business.'

"Mayor Cryer in a wire to Hays said Arbuckle films could not be shown in Los Angeles. Local women's club officers are extending the fight to every section of the nation. Ministers are belittling Hays as the hired man to do the bidding of producers who have money invested in Arbuckle films."

In reply to messages from the Westlake Presbyterian Church and ministers of Los Angeles urging him to reconsider the Arbuckle case, Will Hays dispatched the following answer:

"Just now I have your telegram and appreciate it. Everything which I said last Sunday night is reiterated and emphasized. At that time I declared and do now assert and have always and shall always insist, 'Any evil which is in motion pictures can be removed and all the good retained at the place where the pictures are made, at the time they are made, and by the men who make them, and no alibi is possible.' The purposes of our Association are 'Establishing and maintaining the highest possible artistic and moral standard of motion picture production and developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and the general usefulness of motion pictures.' About nine months ago I suggested to those who owned the Arbuckle pictures that they do not release them, but rather that they should give such consideration to the matter as the condition warranted. This they did, and it resulted both in the holding up of the pictures already made and the elimination of Arbuckle from work in his profession. I was sure then that the suggestion I made to them was right and that their action was right, and the only doubt otherwise at that time was whether or not we might be doing an injustice to the individual Arbuckle. I was sure, however, that we were not, but that the whole action was best for the whole situation and best for him. This has proven correct, and from all sources has come the word that his conduct in the last nine months has evidenced an honest and successful effort to do right. This fact was one of the elements, of course, in causing me to make the statement I did, of which I again ask your careful consideration.

"Every man in the right way and at the proper time is entitled to his chance to make good. It is apparent that Roscoe Arbuckle's conduct since his trouble merits that chance. So far as I am concerned there will be no suggestion now that he should not have his opportunity to go to work in his profession. In our effort to develop a complete co-operation and confidence within the industry I hope we can start the New Year with no yesterdays. Live and let live is not enough; we will try to live and help live.

"This is no reinstatement of Arbuckle nor any attempt to reinstate him. Neither you nor I can do that. This is simply a declaration that I shall not stand in the way of this man having his chance to go to work and make good if he can. I neither sponsor him nor stand in his way, but in a spirit of Christian charity and American fair play I propose that as far as I am concerned he shall have his chance, and I am sure that we are doing the right thing to accomplish the greatest good in the end if we practice what we preach, and, in all humility, strive to live and help live as well as live and let live. I offer no apology for the statement and neither do I presume to insist that my ideas should be accepted by others, but I am sure that in your consideration of the matter you will not be unmindful of the words of Him who first taught us to forgive. That there will be some misunderstanding of the motive of the statement until all of the problems are worked out, I have no doubt, but it is eternally right, and while I shall deeply regret any misunderstandings, yet from my knowledge of the whole situation I know it is right and I am content.

(Signed) "Will H. Hays."

The National Board of Review is among those taking the stand that the matter of Arbuckle pictures is one that is strictly up to the public, and his return to the films can be decided only by the public.

A statement from this board follows:

"The National Board is still of the opinion that Mr. Arbuckle having been tried by a jury of his peers and found innocent of the charge brought against him, justice demands he should be allowed to go before the bar of public opinion. The National Board is still of the firm conviction that it is for public opinion, and public opinion alone, to accept or refuse Mr. Arbuckle as a public entertainer."

The soundness of this attitude of the National Board is fully upheld by the conflicting opinion in regard to the matter of Mr. Arbuckle's return to the screen which is rushing in from all parts of the country. The general public's feelings, needs and wishes constitute the only criterion which can safely be considered as adequately expressing the situation."

"The National Board holds no brief for Mr. Arbuckle personally—the fact remains that his pictures have been consistently free from questionable matter. We are glad that the public, the club women of the country are so alive to their power to formulate and express a verdict, which when it is rendered will unquestionably reflect wholesome mindedness and the justice to which every one is entitled."

From St. Louis comes the following:

"The Committee of Fifty, an organization comprising reform associations of every denomination in St. Louis, has announced that it will again endeavor to put through reform bills defeated at the last session of the state legislature, including censorship of moving pictures. The new legislature convenes at Jefferson City in January.

"The St. Louis Church Federation, a Protestant organization, through its executive secretary, Rev. A. H. Armstrong, has sent appeals to similar bodies in the forty principal cities of the country asking that they unite in a drive against the Arbuckle films. Enclosed in the letters are copies of a telegram sent to Rev. Charles S. MacFarland of New York, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, protesting against the exhibition of Arbuckle films.

"Rev. Lansing F. Smith, chairman of the Committee of Fifty, said: 'We are absolutely opposed to the reappearance of the Arbuckle films. I approve of the first order of Hays, and I can not understand why the second order undoing everything of the first was issued.'"

Commenting on the Arbuckle reinstatement, Charles A. McMahon, director of the Motion Picture Bureau of the National Catholic Welfare Council, and a member of the Executive Committee on Public Relations organized by Mr. Hays to cooperate with the motion picture

Specialists Need Thorough Knowledge of Market

MANY theatre owners have seriously taken up the idea of catering to a particular group of their patrons who demand something of an educational nature along with their entertainment. It has been found that added prestige has been gained and a clientele of the "thinking" public built up. To conduct such a department a thorough knowledge of what the market offers is necessary. A greater power of selection is assured through a familiarity of releases.

Harriet Hawley Locher, Director, Public Service and Educational Department, Crandall Theatres, Washington, D. C., finds THE BOOKING GUIDE of value in her work. In a recent letter, Miss Locher writes: "It (THE BOOKING GUIDE) is going to be very useful in my department in getting a general idea on all releases and giving me a broader knowledge of the pictures to use in my work. I shall keep it on file in my office."

THE NEWS IS FILED THROUGHOUT THE FIELD

industry, gave out the following statement, in part:

"The announcement of Arbuckle's reinstatement by Mr. Hays comes as a decided shock to those who had been led to believe that there was no longer any room in the motion picture industry for persons of the Arbuckle type. I feel that Mr. Hays has misjudged the temper of the American people if he thinks they will agree with his action in the Arbuckle case. Mr. Hays and his employers are guilty not only of an error of judgment which is certain to arouse widespread condemnation, but are likewise guilty of failing to keep faith with the American people in making good on the incorporated aims and purposes of the National Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors—as frequently repeated by Mr. Hays—namely, 'to elevate the moral and artistic standards of the screen.'

"The Motion Picture Bureau of the National Catholic Welfare Council, while affiliated with the Committee on Public Relations formed some time ago to cooperate with the motion picture industry to elevate the standard of the screen, condemns this decision to reinstate Arbuckle and will call upon its affiliated organizations of Catholic men and women to work in their respective communities throughout the United States to prevent the showing of the Arbuckle films."

Mr. Hays has stated to members of the Public Relations Committee:

"My statement is not a reinstatement of Arbuckle. It is simply that I will not in this position which I occupy longer autocratically stand in the way of this man having a chance to go to work in some capacity in the motion picture industry and make good if he can. There are no plans whatever for the release of the films already made. Mr. Schenck, who will employ Mr. Arbuckle, is a member of our Association and in determining just what he will do with Mr. Arbuckle he will, of course, consult us. The whole matter will be carefully considered in all its phases by those who are interested in it."

District of Columbia Commissioner Oyster intends to await developments before taking any action on the Arbuckle reinstatement, pending a crystallization of public opinion. "On one hand, I have a great respect for Will Hays' judgment. On the other, I want to serve the people of the District, and I'm going to do my utmost to carry out their wishes."

One of the National Educational Association protests to Hays took the stand that the actor on the screen was an idolized teacher, and that the Arbuckle background was too notorious to permit his return. Miss MacGregor, of Minneapolis, now in Washington, said that she spoke for half a million teachers of 20,000,000 American school children, and although appreciative of film co-operation in producing child photoplays, they resented the tendency shown in the reinstatement of Arbuckle in view of his unsavory past.

Milwaukee exhibitors, members of the Wisconsin Exhibitors Association, in a meeting have taken action in the matter of the "pardon" of Arbuckle. Following the meeting, Walter J. Bauman, executive secretary, made the following statement in part: "Will Hays means nothing to us. He represents the producers and the distributors of films, but does not represent in any way the wishes or attitude of the exhibitor, the theatre owner who shows the film, and is therefore in direct contact with the public. We do not feel that he should arrogate to himself the power to speak for the entire industry, as is his custom."

Mayor Samuel Lewis Shank of Indianapolis through the newspapers has asked local exhibitors to refrain from showing Fatty Arbuckle pictures.

He said he had "something up his sleeve" to force exhibitors to comply with his wishes, if they would not heed the request.

Gustav G. Schmidt, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, said:

"The association went on record some time ago as not favoring the showing of Arbuckle films in Indiana."

Although the Arbuckle films are not under police ban in Providence, R. I., there is some doubt as to whether his pictures will be shown. Sol Braunig, manager of the Modern theatre, booking agent for the Providence theatres which have the exclusive rights to Arbuckle films, declares if public sentiment is against the Arbuckle film it will not be displayed so long as he has anything to do with it.

Mrs. Robert E. Newton, president of the Providence Diocese, National Council of Catholic Women, admits she used to enjoy Arbuckle pictures, but adds "I do not think that Arbuckle is a proper person to go before the public now."

Mrs. Caesar Misch, president of the Rhode Island Federation of Women's Clubs, feels that Mr. Hays has made a mistake. "Curiosity will be stimulated, and curiosity regarding barred subjects is the besetting sin of youth."

Mrs. Charles J. Fletcher, in charge of the better film movement among women's clubs of the state, believes that the verdict rests with the public. "I do not believe in pushing a person down. If a man shows his willingness to do better after a misstep, he should be given a chance."

Arbuckle films are not to be shown in the theatres of Albany, Schenectady and Troy unless patrons make a direct demand for them. This is the statement made by George W. Roberts, of Albany, president of the Theatrical Managers Association of that city.

Harrisburg motion picture exhibitors say they will be governed by the action of the Eastern Pennsylvania, South Jersey and Delaware branches of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which met in Philadelphia and decided that no "Fatty" Arbuckle films will be shown until and unless there is a public demand for them.

Mayor Hoverter, of Harrisburg, when asked whether he would recommend a ban on Arbuckle films, said he was too busy with the coal shortage question to give any consideration to the subject of Arbuckle.

Mayor Marshall A. Chase, of Lebanon, Pa., has expressed opposition to the showing of Arbuckle films in that city. Lebanon motion picture exhibitors will soon meet to agree on a policy to govern them in their attitude toward Arbuckle.

The Virginia Board of Censors, whose broad-minded conception of censor duty has been very satisfactory to the industry, has announced through Chairman Evan R. Chesterman that when an application for the Arbuckle pictures is made, each picture will be considered on its merits. "Arbuckle," he said, "was cleared, therefore, there no longer is any bar to approval of his film comedies in Virginia."

Mrs. J. W. Frizzel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs in Washington, entirely disapproves of the reinstatement of Arbuckle. "Of course," she said, "the only Christian spirit is to give everyone a chance to reform and live a better life, but it is too soon after the Arbuckle affair to allow him to return to the motion pictures as a leading character. Clubwomen of this country will resent this and voice their protests in groups, and individually. I feel that it will not be possible to show these films in communities where there are mothers who have the welfare of their young sons and daughters at heart."

Mrs. Basil Manly, vice president of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters, said that the women of the country did not hesitate to express themselves at the time of the trial, when many resolutions were passed against his pictures being shown throughout the country. "After all," she said, "someone in this group of motion picture directors is going to have a hard job to face these women down. The women of the country hold the purse-strings and dole out the movie money to their families. Bringing Arbuckle back is an affront to the women who expressed themselves on the matter."

Mrs. Faber Stevenson, chairman of the motion picture committee of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, said: "It is up to the American public. No man can say who may and who may not be in pictures for the public to see. It is all right for Arbuckle and those in charge to say that he is coming back, but it is up to the American public to see that he does not come back. He should, of course, have his chance if he is anxious to make good, but not as a star. Let him advance, step by step, to prove his merit."

There will be no showing of the "Fatty" Arbuckle films in Meriden, Conn., according to the statement of Mayor Henry T. King. In this ruling the mayor is upheld by the two women members of the Picture Censor Commission, while the two male members of the commission believe that the films in question should be allowed.

Commenting on the prospective return of Arbuckle to the screen, Mayor J. C. Dahlman of Omaha said that no official intervention would be imposed. He believes that the public should decide whether it wants the comedian back.

A. R. Pramer, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Nebraska and Iowa and a member of the board of directors of the National Association, addressing a meeting of women and ministers announced that exhibitors of his state organizations will not open their doors again to Arbuckle films.

F. J. McWilliams, president of the Wisconsin Theatre Owners Association, has declared positively that Arbuckle films will not be booked by members of the association.

"The Wisconsin Theatre Owners Association cannot afford to let an actor of Arbuckle's stamp step quietly back into his place in the public eye," said Mr. McWilliams. "It would mean that any other screen star mixed up with a disgusting scandal could hope for just as much leniency, and would therefore be establishing a bad precedent."

"We have been deceived by Will H. Hays. Hays promised the women gathered at the national convention of federated clubs in Chautauqua last summer that Arbuckle would not be permitted to reappear in films. He has reversed himself," said Mrs. Charles Siegesmond, chairman of moving picture committee of the Buffalo Federation of Women's Clubs.

"I was shocked when I learned that Arbuckle was to be permitted to return to the screen. I do not think that such a step would be wise. We want our children to see and to absorb only that which is best in pictures," said Mrs. E. J. Howe, president Buffalo Mothers' Club.

Mr., Mrs. and Miss Average-Citizen's Opinion

AS a result of the wave of public agitation and newspaper comment which followed on the heels of the announcement by Will Hays that Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle was free to return to the screen if he could, so far as he (Will Hays) was concerned, Motion Picture News last Saturday wired each of its correspondents throughout the country to go out and interview ten persons, chosen absolutely at random, getting an expression of their opinion as to Arbuckle's return.

The ten persons interviewed were to include five men and five women, and persons connected with the motion picture industry were to be barred. It was hoped in this way to get a representative consensus of public opinion that would be of great interest to those in the industry.

Returns in this "straw vote" have been received from fourteen cities to date, and are presented below in alphabetical order. In cases where less than ten opinions are presented under a city, the correspondent has sent in less than ten. In no case has the News exercised any censorship or selection, and each opinion is printed here just as it was recorded by the correspondent.

An elderly woman: I would not only refuse to see any film in which Arbuckle appears, but I would remain away from that theatre for all time. To my way he is little short of a murderer, and no good can come from showing any such personage on the screen.

A business man: I hardly think the screen has any place for such types as Arbuckle has shown himself to be. His life apparently was as low as his comedies, and I certainly would not spend so much as a cent to see any of his pictures.

A salesgirl: Give him a chance. He is the victim of circumstances. Simply because he erred once, it's no sign that he should be kept from his profession for all times.

A housewife: Don't talk of elevating the motion pictures when they would allow such men as Arbuckle to be flaunted before us. To my way of thinking, Arbuckle's pictures were always poor comedies, requiring neither cleverness nor brains and simply showing a mushy man who later on revealed to us just what he was. I never want to see Arbuckle again on the screen.

A middle-aged woman: To me Arbuckle is disgusting. He thought that money could do everything. Apparently it did save his neck, but I am never going to pay money to see a man whose life outside of the screen was such as was revealed by the newspapers. The sooner we get such characters off the screen the sooner we will get rid of censorship and its hampering influences on our best authors and directors.

A railroad man: Give him another chance. I think the newspapers only told one side of the case, and never Arbuckle's.

A business man: Let's have clean comedies by clean people.

Principal of school: Arbuckle should have more sense than try to force himself upon the public. Let him get some other work. Perhaps it will not pay him so well, but any pecuniary loss should be checked up by the man whose indiscretions brought it about.

Street car conductor: Why not leave it to the general public and let it decide by either attending or staying away from theatres showing Arbuckle pictures?

A stenographer: Arbuckle's films were not objectionable, but he should show better taste than try to come back to pictures.

Atlanta, Ga.

A young flapper (who says she occupies a clerical position in an uptown office): Arbuckle pictures decidedly should not be released, and that she for one, would not look at one he appeared in.

A mother: Of course, my opinion is founded only on the newspaper stories, but from these it is my belief that Arbuckle's character is of a very low level, and I do not believe that after the publicity which was given this case he should be allowed to return to a profession that has such a following of young girls and children, and personally my daughter can never go to see one of his pictures, and I myself shall not.

A young college student: Is more generous in passing judgment and thinks that his pictures should be released, basing his belief on a "square deal for every man."

A young newspaper man: Is still more generous and thinks that the pictures should be released. For, he says, it is only the publicity which has been attached to this case that has made it worse than others, which occur every day everywhere. Of course, those that don't want to see them don't have to. Arbuckle's pictures have always furnished clean, wholesome amusement, which is something that cannot be said of quite a few of our present day luminaries.

Baltimore, Md.

Housewife: I don't think Arbuckle should be allowed to return to the films. His very appearance is bound to have an unwholesome effect, even though the films themselves may be perfectly proper.

Stenographer: I shouldn't go out of my way to avoid an Arbuckle film, although I shouldn't go out of my way to see one. Really I can't see much difference one way or the other.

Stenographer: Personally I shouldn't care to see an Arbuckle film. I don't think people want him—they're through with him.

Housewife: Why shouldn't he come back if he can? I don't believe the man was responsible for that girl's death anyhow.

Student: Arbuckle comedies ought not to be taken away just because Arbuckle, the man, has been in trouble.

Lawyer: No man ought to be deprived by any arbitrary force from seeking to make a living. Personally I don't see that Arbuckle's private life should have anything to do with his public one. It is not allowed to in other cases of scandal.

Clerk: Let him come back—if he can. I don't believe he can. People'll be thinking of the Rappe case. His work won't get over.

Clerk: I wouldn't mind seeing him particularly, but I wouldn't care to have my wife go.

Clerk: Arbuckle has had a tough time. I'd be glad to see him on the screen again.

Real estate dealer: If everybody was like me, they'd be too much disgusted with Arbuckle to want to see him on the screen.

Bridgeport, Conn.

Police official: I have no objections. They are all funny pictures that Arbuckle appears in, and the public seems to like them. If the public wants them, it should have them. This great big public of ours should have something to say about the matter.

Corporation counsel: It seems to me that a man's personal character can be differentiated from his professional character, particularly so in Arbuckle's case, as his pictures are designed purely for amusement and not for educational purposes. If the people enjoy his pictures I don't see where they would do any harm. Mr. Hays has pardoned him; I believe the people should give him an opportunity to earn a living at his profession.

Buffalo, N. Y.

A minister: I have no hesitation in asserting that a man with the ability to entertain the public as Roscoe Arbuckle can, should be allowed to come back and give the people the benefit of his talent, providing that he keeps free from future moral entanglements.

A bond salesman: It's perfectly all right. There's no reason why he should not come back.

A manufacturer: Don't let him come back. I wouldn't let my children go to see him.

An oil man: I am decidedly opposed to Arbuckle's return to the screen. The re-establishment as a screen idol of this man after the sensational episode he was mixed up in would be a very bad thing for the young people who are inclined to worship screen stars to a certain degree.

A financier: There has been too much noise on the question. The films should have been shown and then let the public decide if they were to be continued.

A prominent clubwoman: I am surprised that Mr. Hays has returned Arbuckle to the screen. I am opposed to his appearance locally, and I am sure that our club will join with others to prevent his pictures being shown in this city.

Cincinnati, Ohio

A shoe worker: Not greatly interested either way; would not object to seeing Arbuckle's return.

Horseshoer: Opposed to his return; has followed case in the newspapers, and seemed to be influenced by views expressed by church.

Physician: Opposed to his return; "what we need is a few more such characters barred from the films," was his comment.

Expressman: "Fatty" was acquitted at his trial, and I believe he should be given another chance; then if he does not go straight he should be barred absolutely.

Lawyer: Insisted that there should be an absolute divorce between professional and private life. "There are plenty of men who have been more profligate than Arbuckle, but they have been able to 'get away with it,'" he said. "We don't refuse to read an author's books, because of a scandal in which he has been involved; why take a determined stand against the actor? If his pictures entertain me, I don't care what his private life or opinions may be. I go to the theatre to be entertained, and as long as a comedian's pictures entertain me I'm willing to pay money to see them. He, personally, may be behind the bars for all I care; it's his pictures I'm interested in, not him. It is unjust both to him and to the company handling his pictures to bar them from the screen."

on Arbuckle's Contemplated "Come-Back"

Stenographer: Liked his pictures, and would like to see more of them. Expressed the opinion that "the woman was as much to blame as the man."

Manicurist: Feels that he should be given another chance.

Student: Absolutely opposed to his return; feels that it would be particularly bad to show his pictures to children, on the ground that it would be countenancing immorality.

Housewife, also a clubwoman: Willing to give him another chance; feels that Hays was right in barring him at the beginning. "If Mr. Hays feels that Arbuckle should be given another chance, let it go at that. Mr. Hays probably knows more about Arbuckle than I do, and I'd be willing to let his judgment stand. Undoubtedly Arbuckle has learned a good lesson. He would hardly stray from the 'straight and narrow' again in the future."

Housewife: Opposed to his return, apparently on moral grounds. Did not give definite reasons when pressed; feels that "a man who has acted as he did" should be barred.

Cleveland, Ohio

A broker: That Arbuckle has a right to another chance and that it is up to the public now either to condemn him or to support him.

A prominent judge: Thinks that, from the standpoint of the motion picture business, it is highly undesirable for Arbuckle pictures to be exploited on the ground that the public will think it presumptuous for the producers to offer him as an entertainer. This judge feels that an audience will take it as a personal reflection on its own moral standards if it attends any Arbuckle films, and that whatever stigma may exist in the case of the Arbuckle pictures is apt to spread to other motion picture productions. From a personal standpoint he thinks the comedian should have a chance to come back, but that it would be a poor business move.

College students: Expressed the opinion that Arbuckle had paid enough, and that he should come back to the screen.

Local manufacturer: Says let him try it again. He was a good entertainer. If the public still enjoys his comedy, it is up to the public to decide.

A leading physician: Stated as his opinion Arbuckle should have another chance. But only if the newspapers will co-operate with the producer of his pictures and not keep on re-hashing the Arbuckle scandal every time a picture is released. Bringing up the scandal for public airing has a bad effect on the adolescent audience, and gives added stimulus to the morally weak.

A prominent woman in civic and club work: Says by all means give Arbuckle another chance. But give him a chance in some other industry, or in some other branch of the motion picture industry. He has proven himself unable to cope with the temptations which his profession offer. To reclaim him he should not be placed amid those same temptations. It would be an injustice to the man, because he has been shown to be unfit for that sort of life. On the same principle, I do not think that a banker who has gone wrong should return to the banking business. People go wrong because they are not equipped to meet the demands of their job. Arbuckle was unequal to the demands of his job as comedy king. It is an injustice to put him back in the same surroundings and expect him to come up to requirements.

A woman in public life: Fails to see how Arbuckle can ever seem funny again, but thinks he should have a try at it if he wants it.

Detroit, Mich.

Efficiency man, automobile factory: Certainly not; should never be shown. The wide publicity of a well-known picture star exerts a vast indirect influence, especially on the young, and their (the stars') lives should therefore be clean. Personally, never enjoyed Arbuckle's films, considered man's personality too gross and sophisticated to be really funny.

Foreman automobile factory: We've had plenty of Arbuckle and all that dirt. The pictures might be mirth-provoking on the surface, but the man back of them had better keep off the screen. Why try to kill the industry by forcing such people on the public? That would be what would happen.

Teacher of ballet: The man ought to be allowed to get an inconspicuous job where he can earn a living if he needs to. But to allow him to come back and re-occupy the position which he formerly held puts too cheap a price on morality, besides being a bad example to the youth of the country.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Receiving clerk in department store: I don't blame Arbuckle as much as I do the woman involved in the case. The Hollywood people are a pretty rough bunch, anyway. "Fatty" ought not be treated any worse than the others.

Elevator operator: Will Hays' action was a good thing. I think Lew Shank (mayor of Indianapolis, who said he would not permit showing of Arbuckle pictures) ought to stop rotten shows and let clean pictures like Arbuckle's alone.

President of an engineering company: I admire Will Hays, but I think he has made a mistake.

Laborer: Since Arbuckle has been out of the movies I think it would be a good thing to keep him off.

President of board of directors of a street railway system: The question involves more than the Arbuckle case. It is up to the public whether it discriminates against him. The public must become educated so that it will patronize the fine things and let the others go.

Girl stenographer: There is no reason for discarding his pictures when others who are just as bad are allowed to show their pictures.

Girl stenographer: Arbuckle is one who was unfortunate enough to be caught. Other people out there are just as bad as he is. There is no reason for killing him while the others live.

Housewife: Give Arbuckle a chance. I don't think he will ever be as popular as he was, though, because folks will be thinking about his history when he's being funny on the screen.

Department store clerk: I don't think he should be permitted to return to pictures.

Manicurist: He's a really funny comedian and we all like to laugh. If he makes a lot of us forget our troubles in the future maybe we can forget his.

St. Louis, Mo.

A machinist's helper: Personally, I will go to see "Fatty," but I think Hays pulled a "boner," as he has given the fanatics something more to rave about. I am afraid that it may hurt the movies. But it won't make any difference to me.

A girl stenographer: I don't see why Mr. Hays had to revive that matter. It was dropped some time ago. I thought Arbuckle was dead. I don't think Hays has guessed the sentiments of the theatregoers this time. There isn't any call for Arbuckle or his films.

From an attorney: Poor "Fatty" got caught. That's his hard luck. He isn't any different than thousands of others, Rev. Dr. Hall, for instance. Why don't the ministers clean their own house and let the movies alone for a while. I believe in giving "Fatty" another chance.

A housewife and mother: It is an insult to the womanhood of America to bring back Arbuckle. I thought that Hays was supposed to clean the movies. It doesn't look like it. I certainly won't let any of my children see the Arbuckle films or attend a theatre that shows them.

A chauffeur: We all believe that Roscoe has repented. It is Christmas time and we shouldn't forget that the first virtue of real Christians is charity. "Let he who is without sin cast the first stone." But, after all, it is not the artist but the art we go to see. If the public likes Arbuckle films they will patronize them regardless of what Arbuckle himself does.

Girl office clerk: Although a jury finally adjudged Arbuckle innocent the American people shall always hold him morally guilty. They don't want to see him again. Mr. Hays had better not fly in the face of public opinion.

A merchant: I like the Arbuckle films but haven't any use for the man. I believe that Hays did right. There is no use penalizing the industry because "Fatty" made a mistake. There is too much money tied up in Arbuckle films to destroy them.

A shop girl: "Fatty" from one of the best-liked men in the industry overnight became the most detested. And there hasn't been any change in the feeling of the women toward him. We don't want him or his films.

A building mechanic: Hays has done more to bring censorship of moving pictures in Missouri than any other man. Did you see how quickly the ministers seized this opportunity? Why didn't he stick by his first stand? Judge Landis hasn't receded in the case of the Black Sox, even if a jury did acquit them. The film industry needs a Ban Johnson and not a politician like Will Hays. The Arbuckle case proves conclusively that he is incompetent. A few more moves like it and we will have national censorshsip. Personally, I won't go to see the Arbuckle films.

A housewife: Why not give Arbuckle a chance to come back? None of us are without our faults. It is true that he was a party to a terrible scandal. If he slips again I say banish him for all time. But why not be charitable to the extent of giving him another chance? I say, yes.

Stiffer Penalties For Violations

Pennsylvania Plan Would Increase Fines For Breaking Censorship Laws

NEWS of an official plan to stiffen the penalties for violations of the Pennsylvania Motion Picture Censorship law has just come to light through the publication in Harrisburg of the report of the Commission for the Reorganization of the State Government, which was appointed by Governor William C. Sproul.

This news is likely to stir Pennsylvania exhibitors and others interested in the industry to a realization that with the assembling of the new biennial session of the legislature on January 2 it is high time for the industry to take measures for organized efforts for self-protection against a probable repetition of the flood of hostile legislation such as has been proposed in all recent legislative sessions in the Keystone State.

This commission, which was created under authority of the 1921 legislature, has prepared recommendations affecting practically every department of the State Government. That part of the report concerning the censorship law is as follows:

"An amendment is submitted to the motion picture act of May 15, 1915, P. L. 534, to provide for additional penalties in cases of second and subsequent offenses. Under the present law the penalty for a first offense against the act is not less than $25 and not more than $50. The amendment proposes a fine for a second offense of not less than $50 and not more than $100, and for a third and subsequent offense of not less than $100 and not more than $200."

While the term of Governor Sproul, who appointed the commission, expires on January 16, or two weeks after the new session convenes, there is little doubt but that the report of the commission will receive serious consideration from the lawmakers, as it was the legislature of two years ago that gave the commission its being.

Gifford Pinchot, the governor-elect, who will succeed Governor Sproul, appointed an unofficial commission with much the same object in view during the recent gubernatorial campaign, but it is not yet known whether the Pinchot commission will recommend any changes in the law affecting the motion picture industry.

There have been reports of the intention of the Pennsylvania branches of the M. P. T. O. of A. to hold a convention early in the new year in Harrisburg to consider methods of fighting legislation hostile to the industry and to foster beneficial bills, but the date for the proposed gathering has not yet been announced. It is probable that a legislative committee of the organization will be appointed to keep a line on motion picture measures presented to the lawmakers.

Should Explain Re-Issue Titles, Is Claim

The Federal Trade Commission avers that the re-issue of old photoplays under new titles without properly informing the public is an unfair method of competition. In its complaint against the Signet Films, Inc., of New York City, the commission cites a specific instance where the respondent is alleged to have purchased a negative film of an old photoplay and thereafter distributed positive films of the same play with a title different from the original name of the picture.

The film in question, it is alleged, was distributed in such a way and accompanied by such advertising matter as to lead the exhibitors and the theatre-going public into the belief that the picture was a new one instead of an old picture with a new title.

The Signet company has thirty days in which to prepare its answer, after which the case will go to trial.

Commerce Dept. Report Shows 127 Producing Plants; Product Value $77,397,000

THE Department of Commerce announces that, according to reports made to the Bureau of the Census in connection with the census of manufactures relating to the year 1921, there were 127 establishments engaged primarily in the production of motion pictures during that year, with products valued at approximately $77,397,000. This does not include establishments which reported production valued at less than $5,000 each.

Of the 127 establishments 83 have been classified as producers of motion pictures, and 44 as producers of projection films (positive), the latter classification including the development of exposed films and other laboratory work. In the first-mentioned class, the majority were engaged exclusively in the production of the pictures, their laboratory work being done by independent companies or in the case of some of the larger concerns, in separate plants of their own.

The "cost of materials" reported by these establishments included amounts paid for the unexposed films; for building materials for the construction of scenery, etc.; for wardrobe, purchased or rented; expenses for locations, light and storm effects, titles and inserts, scenarios, stories, etc. A few establishments did both kinds of work, though the motion picture work was limited to short scenic subjects, educational, advertising, and business films. The other 44 establishments did laboratory work only, reporting as "materials" negative stocks, positive raw films, developing chemicals, dyes, artists' materials, miscellaneous supplies, containers, etc.

The establishments were located as follows: 68 in California; 20 in New York; 13 in New Jersey; 8 in Illinois; 5 in Pennsylvania; 3 each in Michigan and Minnesota; 2 in Ohio; and 1 each in Indiana, Iowa, Oregon, Rhode Island, and Washington. California, the leading state in the industry in 1921, reported 61.5 per cent of the total value of products for the year. The combined output of all establishments was approximately 65 per cent of the maximum capacity, based upon a demand requiring full running time.

Hays Envoy Has Mexico Embargo Lifted

BERNON T. WOODLE, who went to Mexico in September as a special representative of Will H. Hays to confer with Mexican Government officials in connection with the recent embargo there against the product of several American film companies, has returned to New York after a successful adjustment of the difficulty. The embargo was lifted on November 6th.

The action of Mr. Hays in issuing instructions to prevent the making of any more pictures offensive to Mexico was conveyed in person by Mr. Woodle to President Obregon. Several conferences followed with Secretary of Foreign Relations Pani, resulting in the signing of an agreement with the Mexican Government lifting the ban and stipulating that certain pictures previously released be reviewed.

Meeting Plans Against Film Theft

An important meeting for consideration of the film theft situation was held last week by representatives of the company members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., at which action was taken to still further tighten the lines of protection against film thieves throughout the country.

A general film theft committee, composed of one representative from each participating company, was appointed and a plan agreed upon whereby the Burns Detective Agency will extend to all exchange centers the service that has operated so successfully in the New York territory. This means that in every city where film exchanges are located local Burns agencies will cooperate with exchange managers in the recovery of strayed or stolen prints and in the prosecution of persons accused of film theft.

Among other matters discussed were plans for improving the film delivery system and the adoption of some practical method of identifiying prints; also a proposal for junking film at one central point where all companies can cooperate in insuring the total destruction of prints that are no longer fit for exhibition.

New Corporations File With Albany

Corporations entering the motion picture business and filing papers in the secretary of state's office in Albany during the past week, show the following directors and capitalization:

Pelem Productions, Inc., $20,000, Abraham Greenberg, Brooklyn, Lionel Golub, J. J. Bulleid, New York City; Big Pictures, Inc., $150,000, Sylvia Stern, Benjamin Abraham, Isaac Schmal, New York City; The Blackmailers, Inc., $10,000, Joseph D. Eagan, Walter Vincent, Sidney Wilmer, New York City; The Animated Miniature Theatre Corporation, $300,000, Sylvia Schwartzman, Alibel Corey, David Schneer, New York City; M. & H. Corporation, $8,000, Alfred H. Messing, Alex Yokel, Louis M. Mansbach, New York City; Russo-American Cinema Exchange Corporation, $100,000, Jacob Neumark, Rhea Finn, Nathan Ginsberg, New York City; Leon Britton, Inc., $10,000, Sylvia Schwartzman, Alibel Corey, David Schneer, New York City; Strabell Hotel Corporation, $500, C. M. Bellak, William E. Webb, Harry Moran, New York City.

ture house as long as Will Hays occupies his present position, that is how strong I feel in the matter. The public will not stand for it, as the movies are well rid of Arbuckle. Bringing him back without any reason after having repudiated Arbuckle makes it look very much as though Will Hays was inspired by commercial reasons only in this action.

Manufacturing jeweler: I don't think that it is right to allow Arbuckle pictures to again be shown. It is bad for the community to return him. I think that he should be permanently barred. I know that I would never hire a man no matter how clever a workman he was once I had been forced to discharge him through public scandal such as occurred in the Arbuckle case.

Public accountant: I don't favor his return. The people don't want it. It is doubtful if he should ever be allowed to come back. It will help pictures to keep him out. I know that I wouldn't allow my children to see him.

Bond salesman: Arbuckle wouldn't draw any business. We can't talk about elevating the films with such men as Arbuckle. Bringing him back would only re-open wide the old scandal which we are all trying to forget.

Druggist: I wouldn't want my children to see Arbuckle. I don't believe that he ought to come back, for the good of the movies. I also think that Will Hays has ended his usefulness as film dictator by "pardoning" Arbuckle.

Member of Municipal League and a mother: I don't want Arbuckle to come back. I think that it is awful for Hays to want to let him come back. He ceases to be funny when he has been connected with such scandal. He is not a man of high ideals and it is not just on account of the one offense for which he was tried. It is his whole career as revealed by the trial. Hays is just a jellyfish in the hands of the producers, and I will never allow my child to see an Arbuckle film.

Member of the woman's club: I don't think that it is a good thing to bring him back at this time. It is all together too soon.

Stenographer: I think that he should be given an opportunity, though I think that it would be a bad thing to do at this time.

President of chapter of War Mothers: I think that the return of Arbuckle to the screen is an outrage. It is not a matter of giving him another chance, or of convicting him for the crime for which he was charged. We want to clean up the movies and we can best do it by keeping out those who are not fitted to be national characters. It seems to me that the only ones that are demanding his return are the producers, with many of whom the public is becoming rather impatient.

Gold star mother: I do not think that it is just the proper thing to bring back Arbuckle films. I feel that he has been made to bear the brunt of all the misdoings in the picture world, but, nevertheless, he is now unsuited for the screen. I don't think that the effect of his pictures upon the public would be a good thing.

Minneapolis, Minn.

Merchant: Arbuckle should not be allowed to return to the films. Outside of the detrimental effect upon the youth of America of his appearance following the scandal which barred him it will be an encouragement to members of the movie profession to continue the practices which at least were partly checked by the barring of Arbuckle.

Clubwoman: I am strongly opposed to Arbuckle, and I hope the women's clubs over the country and American Federation of Women's Clubs take action. Will Hays promised co-operation with the clubs and we are disappointed.

Retired business man: Arbuckle is no worse and much better than some members of the movie colony. He did wrong but suffered from the notoriety more than others. If his repentance is sincere he should have his comeback chance. It is idle to say that he should come back in some other field. The screen is the only place where Arbuckle can come back.

Teacher: Personally, I believed Arbuckle should be kept out of the films, and I believe the majority of students are with me. I recall an incident in the North High School of Minneapolis when by some mysterious chance a picture of Arbuckle was run in during a picture entertainment. The high school students hissed him spontaneously and loudly. The seemingly unanimous opposition of the students was a revelation to me.

Mother: Please keep "Fatty" out. My boys made heroes of him, like they make of Charlie and Doug. They were told that "Fatty" did wrong and that he was in jail. What will they think now that Arbuckle is about to be whitewashed?

Laborer: If the crowd wants to go and see "Fatty," let them go. You don't have to go to a movie if you don't want to. I don't think much of "Fatty" and lots of the other picture folks.

Printer: No, positively no. Come back in his profession? He never had a profession. Any man who makes thousands of dollars and won't send enough to his stepmother to keep her out of need doesn't deserve any sympathy.

Housewife: I don't want my family to go and see "Fatty" if they ever show his pictures again.

Stenographer: Maybe he was misjudged.

Boy: Sure, I am going to see him. I like him.

Omaha, Neb.

Government employe: I would say that Arbuckle should be given a chance to determine whether he is able to come back. He is entitled to a chance.

Farm worker: Give him a chance. He is entitled to that much show.

Omaha coal dealer: Sure, give him a chance. He is not so bad as he has been painted. A lot of clubwomen are stirring up a fuss; they may be sincere in their agitation, but it is all in their mind. I don't believe Arbuckle is half as bad as they have said he is.

Four students in a group: One said they had discussed the subject between them and agreed that Arbuckle films should be permitted to return. One said: His personal record should not be considered. Another said: He was acquitted, wasn't he? The third: I would see his pictures whether the W. C. T. U. wanted them or did not want them. The fourth: His pictures were always clean.

Office man: I always liked his pictures. He may have made a mistake and so have many others. Give him a chance.

Dentist: How many of us have gone through life without making a mistake? Surely, I would say that Arbuckle should be given a chance.

Wife of city clerk: All I care to say is that he should be given a chance. I know how professional people are criticized when they make a little mistake.

Housewife: I am for the return of Arbuckle films and am for giving "Fatty" a chance to redeem himself.

Housewife: I don't think Arbuckle can come back because of the agitation of club women and others.

Stenographer: I never did care much for Arbuckle. I do not have much of an opinion as to whether he should return to the screen.

Stenographer: I am rather indifferent on the subject, but inclined to be against return of Arbuckle.

Two office women together: One said she would patronize Arbuckle films again and believed that the public should be allowed to determine whether Arbuckle was to return to favor. The other asserted that her sentiments were about the same. Both agreed that publicity given Arbuckle would not prejudice them if his films should be shown again.

Wife of coal dealer: Declared that she shared her husband's views that Arbuckle not so bad as charged and that he is entitled to a fighting chance to return to his place on the screen.

Washington, D. C.

Real estate man: It's all right with me. Arbuckle was lynched by the hysterical public, which always follows the loudest yellers. He had a dirty deal all the way through. At that, I have little sympathy for him. He deserved a jolt—but not a death sentence.

A college woman mother: It is disgusting. I was disgusted with Arbuckle; now I'm also disgusted with Will Hays. I concede that every sinner should have a chance, but not in a way that will advertise and glorify his sin. My view is that Hays has struck the movies a knockout blow. I will promote a silent boycott against any theatre that shows an Arbuckle picture here. Hays was to reform the movies; they seem to have deformed him.

Prominent Washington correspondent: Hays is right. Arbuckle should be restored. He is only one of a rotten crowd who happened by a tragic accident to be caught with the goods.

A business man: Hays' decision suits me. Arbuckle, innocent of the crime he was charged with, was pursued by the mob, eager for a sacrifice. Not that I hold any brief for "Fatty" or that I relish the thought of millions of people seeing his pictures again in view of the nastiness they will recall; but that I would give the devil himself a square deal. It was a brave thing for Hays to do, especially as I fear that in this mob-minded country it will be a sad day for the theatres when they begin showing Arbuckle pictures again.

Young matron: I am pleased. Arbuckle has been punished for his sins and acquitted of the judicial charge against him. He ought to have a chance to make good. The whole public, in a calm state of mind, can now judge for itself whether it cares to see pictures of a man with such an affair behind him.

A naval officer: Hays did right to restore Arbuckle. "Fatty" was only human, like the rest of us, was tempted and fell.

Solid merchant: The verdict of the court is good enough for me—and I guess that's the way Will Hays looks at it.

Young woman, civil service employe: Do I favor "Fatty's" reinstatement? Absolutely. The only trouble with "Fatty" is that he got in bad and was found out in connection with a death that was no fault of his. When they will throw out all the bad people that haven't been caught I will turn on "Fatty." In the meantime, I'm just waiting for a chance to see his next picture.

Young married woman: I'm for "Fatty." Give him a chance.

Would Stop Use of Inflammable Film

Industry Faces Added Expense of Twenty Millions Annually if Congress Passes Bill

A BILL designed to prohibit the importation and shipment of inflammable film in the United States has been introduced in Congress and is at present in the hands of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which it has been referred. The tremendous importance to the industry of Congressional action on this measure becomes manifest when it is realized that its passage will impose on the industry the use of non-inflammable film exclusively and thus entail, according to expert opinion, an increased cost of approximately twenty million dollars a year. J. E. Brulatour, a prominent film distributor, issues a warning against the proposed legislation and calls for immediate, definite, and final action on the part of the industry with respect to combatting this measure.

The proposed enactment, known as Bill No. 13448, and introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Sanders of Indiana, would make it unlawful for any person "to deposit or cause to be deposited in the United States mails, for mailing or delivery, or to deposit or cause to be deposited with any express company or other common carrier, for carriage, or to send or carry from one State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to any other State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or to bring or cause to be brought into the United States from any foreign country any inflammable films."

The law would become effective January 1st, 1925, under the terms of the measure, if adopted by Congress. The bill defines "inflammable films" as those made with nitrocellulose as the basic compound or manufactured from materials similar in content, character, and quality to nitrocellulose. It specifically excludes from the bill's jurisdiction such film as is given a protective coating or covering that renders the film flame-proof and protects it from decomposition, combustion, or deformation "upon the application of or when subjected to heat at or above a temperature of seventy-five degrees Fahrenheit."

Violation of any of the provisions of the proposed Act would be punishable, in the event of conviction, by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment of not more than one year, or by both penalties.

Saenger Company Officers Are Indicted

OFFICERS of the Saenger Amusement Company have been indicted by the Orleans parish grand jury in New Orleans for alleged combination in restraint of trade and bail accepted in each instance of $500.

The indictments were made public by foreman Carroll B. Walmsley in a return to Judge Richard Dowling in the criminal district court. The following were named in the action: J. H. Saenger, president; E. V. Richards, secretary and general manager; L. M. Ash, treasurer; E. M. Clarke, representative; N. Sobel, president of the Sobel-Richards-Shear Enterprises; Manning Jacobs, manager and Mrs. A. G. Shear.

The bills charge that the persons named "did on December 20, 1922," the date of an investigation by the grand jury "combine and conspire with each other and unknown parties to monopolize certain parts of the trade and commerce of New Orleans, the motion picture business."

The complaint was filed with the grand jury by a number of independent theatre owners, several of whom appeared before the jury as witnesses.

Motion Picture Golfers Hold First Tourney

Over a course new to all but five of the players and soaking from about six days' continuous rain, which ceased but a few minutes before play was begun, about fifty motion picture amateur golfers Sunday, December 17, participated in the first western motion picture golf handicap arranged by Milton E. Hoffman, production manager of Metro Studio, and J. C. Jessen, representative of Motion Picture News. The fifteen top scores were as follows:

L. H. Buell	85—12—73
Charles Requa	86— 6—80
Stan Kavanaugh	86— 8—72
Neal Burns	87—10—77
Nat Deverich	88—12—76
C. H. Wellington	88—16—72
George Ovey	89—12—77
Harry P. Crist	90—14—76
Tom Kennedy	90—16—74
Milton E. Hoffman	91—18—73
Eddie Sutherland	91—16—75
Owen Moore	91— 8—83
Jack Nash	92—10—82
Brandon Hurst	92—12—80
Al Crowley	93—16—77

Following play over the eighteen-hole course, a meeting of the golfers was held and Motion Picture Golf Association organized, with Nat Deverich, president Fine Arts Studios, president; J. C. Jessen, secretary-treasurer, and Owen Moore, Neal Burns and Larry Semon other members of the Board of Directors. Following the permanent organization prizes were awarded. L. H. Buell, purchasing agent, Famous Players-Lasky Studio, received the permanent trophy, a handsome 20-inch silver cup given by Larry Semon. Charles Requa was second low gross and was awarded the cup given by Christie Comedy Company. C. H. Wellington, of Jess Robbins Productions, won low net and the cup given by E. W. Hammons, of Educational Pictures. The second low net was won by Milton E. Hoffman, who received the cup given by Abe Warner.

Tentative plans were made for a semi-annual tournament open for entry to all people engaged in the motion picture industry.

Robert McGrath Named Advertising Chief

Producers' Security Corporation announces the appointment of Robert McGrath as advertising manager and general purchasing agent. Mr. McGrath, following a successful career in commercial pursuits, entered the employ of the World Film Corporation six years ago. He brings to his new duties not only a complete acquaintance in the business and a knowledge of all the details necessary, but an activity of mind and body and an enthusiastic belief in the bnsiness itself that will splendidly reflect in his results.

Associated Exhibitors Declares Dividend

THE board of directors of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., at its December meeting, voted to declare a 2 per cent current dividend on the preferred stock for the last quarter of 1922, payable to stockholders of record as of December 22.

This is the fourth 2 per cent quarterly dividend declared this year. The directors voted also to declare a 2 per cent accrued and unpaid dividend on the preferred stock for the year 1921 to stockholders of record as of September 1, 1921. Both dividends are payable January 4, 1923.

Cleveland Will Continue Sunday Pictures

Motion picture theatres of Cleveland and its suburbs will continue to operate on Sunday unmolested—at least for a time. This is because Justice of the Peace R. R. Hawkins dismissed ten of the eleven cases of "blue law" violators, who were brought before him for a hearing last Monday afternoon. The cases were dismissed on the ground of insufficient evidence on the part of J. S. Locks, who has been agitating the Sunday Blue Law in the environs of Cleveland, and his attorney, N. D. Davis.

The case of the Lucier theatre, Lakewood, one of the chain of houses belonging to Scoville-Essick & Reif, was bound over to the Probate Court. Locks testified that he had personally attended a performance at the Lucier theatre on Sunday and witnessed a complete show.

Attorney Sam Horwitz, representing the Shaw-Hayden theatre, East Cleveland, got a statement from Locks that he had not personally been inside the Shaw-Hayden on the Sunday specified in the indictment, but that he had his information regarding the kind of entertainment offered from others who had attended the show. Justice of the Peace Hawkins refused to accept this second-hand information as of sufficient weight to carry and so dismissed the case. The cases of the other theatres involved, as well as those of the Cleveland Heights merchants who were also charged with blue law violations, were all dismissed on the ground of insufficient evidence.

Censorship Bill Framing in Nebraska

Exhibitors and distributors were given a thrill that comes about once every two years when announcement came from Lincoln, Nebraska, this week that Lieut. Gov. P. A. Barrows intends to bring before the legislature this winter a bill for the censorship of motion pictures in Nebraska.

Mr. Barrows stated that his proposed bill will contain a provision for a board of censors and that pictures depicting "moral turpitude," murder, robberies and a few other activities will be taboo. In view of the fact that Mr. Barrows goes out of office during the first week of January, speculation arises as to his interest or motive in promoting this measure.

Gov. S. R. McKelvie, who goes out with Mr. Barrows, vetoed a censorship bill two years ago, after a warm fight in both houses of the legislature. The incoming governor next month is Charles W. Bryan, brother of W. J. Bryan. Just what Governor-elect Bryan will do in the matter also offers material for speculation.

Lewis J. Selznick Resigns as Company Head

Hands Over Active Management of Selznick and Select Corporations to His Sons

LEWIS J. SELZNICK has turned over the active management of the Selznick Pictures Corporation and Select Pictures Corporation to his sons, Myron and David O. The transfer of authority was officially made last week at special meetings of the boards of directors of both the Selznick companies. At these meetings Myron Selznick was elected president and David O. Selznick vice president of the Selznick Pictures Corporation and the Select Pictures Corporation. Lewis J. Selznick will retain the office of chairman of the board of directors, giving the newly elected executives the benefit of his long experience, but acting purely in an advisory capacity. Myron Selznick while headquartered for some time in Los Angeles was summoned last week from the West Coast to attend the meetings.

The retiring president commented as follows on his withdrawal from active participation in the affairs of the Selznick enterprises and the inauguration of the new regime:

"Folks have known for a long time that the name of Selznick was in the picture business to stay. I'm merely carrying out a plan which I formed many years ago. I've been building my business for my sons—and I've been building my sons for the business. It has never been my intention to wait until I died to have the boys succeed to their inheritance of labor and responsibility. I've only been waiting for the day when I could feel that they could handle their bigger jobs satisfactorily. That day has come—and come so completely that I am absolutely confident that Myron and David will do as well, if not better, in the future with both the Selznick and Select companies than I have done in the past. There's been a rest coming to me for a long time—and I'm going to take it."

In addition to the election of Myron Selznick as president and David O. Selznick as vice president, last week's meetings of the boards of directors also resulted in the selection of two new officers for the Selznick companies. A. George Volck was elected vice president in charge of finance of both Selznick Pictures Corporation and Select Pictures Corporation and John S. Woody vice president in charge of sales of Select Pictures Corporation.

The following statement was issued this week from the Selznick home office in New York concerning the retirement of Lewis J. Selznick and the election of his sons and Messrs. Volck and Woody to the executive offices of the Selznick companies:

Lewis J. Selznick, who has retired as president of the Selznick & Select organizations

"A. George Volck entered the motion picture business some six months ago as assistant to Myron Selznick. Previous to that time he had been prominently identified with important financial and railroad interests. His success with the Selznick company has been quite remarkable, and his election is well deserved. He will be in charge of the finances of both companies.

"The election to the vice presidency of John S. Woody is one which will undoubtedly meet with high commendation throughout the trade. Mr. Woody is one of the best-liked personalities in the distribution end of the business. He has been popular with exhibitors since he first entered an exchange several years ago, and his rise has been watched by them with interest and approval. He became field sales manager of Select five years ago, resigning to become sales manager and then general manager of Realart Pictures Corporation. He returned to Select as general manager. As vice president, he will give up none of the personal contact that has been one of the most important factors in his success.

"The younger Selznicks have been trained for the posts which they are now called upon to fill for many years. Myron began his training in an exchange, being at first film cutter, film inspector, shipping clerk and salesman. He entered the home office in the purchasing department, finally becoming Select's purchasing agent. Switching to production, he was general manager of the Norma Talmadge productions while that celebrated star was making her Select successes. He later became production manager of the Olive Thomas unit, and finally production manager of Selznick Pictures Corporation. His most recent works have been 'Reported Missing,' the spectacular comedy melodrama; 'Love Is An Awful Thing' and 'One Week of Love,' co-starring Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle. He is now engaged in making 'Rupert of Hentzau' and 'The Common Law,' both of which will, from all indications, be among the biggest productions in many years. The casts which Mr. Selznick has assembled are alone an indication of his enlarged production policies and plans. Mr. Selznick's production plans following the completion this month of both these spectacles will be so arranged that he may at once take personal charge of Select.

"David O. Selznick's picture experience has been similar to that of his brother, except that where Myron went into purchasing, David studied publicity and advertising. He was associated with the production department under his brother for some time, but a few months ago a second production unit was started under David. He is now engaged on 'The Easiest Way,' starring Theda Bara. About a year ago he was given charge of Selznick News and has been responsible for the many innovations and the rapid rise of that reel."

Laemmle Lauds Hays Arbuckle Stand

Universal Chief Thinks Comedian Entitled to Same Chance Others Have Had

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, this week issued a statement in regard to the Arbuckle situation. He takes the ground that Will H. Hays is perfectly right and prompted by the most sensible and sympathetic of reasons in giving Fatty Arbuckle the same chance that others have had.

This is his statement:

"It is inconceivable that in a land whose cardinal principles are fair play and liberty there should be so many who are ready to condemn Fatty Arbuckle and drive him forever from the only business he knows. A court has found him not guilty of the charge on which he was arrested. Why shouldn't that alone be enough to settle the whole case?

"I am in the moving picture business, it is true, but, nevertheless, I have nothing whatever to gain by having Arbuckle restored to full citizenship and all that such restoration implies. On the contrary, I even have something to lose because Arbuckle's pictures will compete with comedies produced by my own company. In spite of this, I think that barring him from his right to return to the screen is the unfairest of unfair play.

"Why discriminate against Arbuckle? The American public forgot and forgave the charges that once were made against one of the world's greatest singers. It forgot and forgave charges brought against one of America's foremost comedians. It forgot and forgave charges against one of the greatest of sport promoters. They were acquitted and the public accepted the acquittal at full face value and took the singer, the comedian and the promoter back to its heart. Why not give Arbuckle an equal chance. He has brought joy to millions. Give him a fair chance to do it again.

"In the eyes of the law he has done nothing wrong. He is as innocent as you or I, and as innocent as those who rush into print to damn him forever.

"Another thing, the public can rest assured that Will Hays knows exactly what he is doing when he lifts the ban that he himself placed upon Arbuckle. He does not act hastily. He does not break faith with the people. He is the soul of honor. His heart is charity itself. He represents the people just as carefully as he represents the moving picture industry and he is entitled to be heard respectfully, at least until he has done something to lose his right to public confidence.

"What are we coming to, that we should jump on every man that is down and say to him, 'You're down and you're out, and you shall never rise again?' Where is our charity? Where is our fair play? Where is our ordinary, every day, common decency?"

Hughes Adds to Large Cast For Picture

Rupert Hughes is going after the largest cast record. "Souls for Sale," his story of motion picture life, will have thirty-three principals, to say nothing of a "motion picture crew" of eleven beautiful girls.

Cast Completed for Alice Brady's New Vehicle

Selection of the cast for Alice Brady's next Paramount picture, "The Snow Bride," a French-Canadian story by Sonva Levien and Julie Herne, has been completed. Those who will be with Miss Brady in this tale of love and intrigue are Maurice B. Flynn, Mario Majeroni, Nick Thompson, Jack Baston, Stephen Gratton and W. M. Cavanaugh. The company will leave soon for Montreal.

Warner Bros. Are Building Radio Station on Coast

A huge radio station is being built at the Warner Brothers' West Coast studios. The radio station will be established atop the new additions to the present studio at an approximate expenditure of $50,000.

In order to link up the entire country the Warner Brothers will erect two other stations. Balaban & Katz, of Chicago, will have one erected at their exchange, and the other will be installed on the roof of 1600 Broadway, New York, the Eastern offices of the organization.

The two-fold purpose of the idea is to broadcast general programs, live west coast news and advance information of the production schedule of eighteen pictures to be made by the Warners for next season. Prominent screen players will also speak from these stations.

Norman Kerry Signed by Universal Pictures

Norman Kerry has signed a five-year contract with Universal Pictures Corporation. Kerry will be featured in several productions, and it is then planned to present him in stellar roles. His work in the principal romantic role of "Merry-Go-Round," Universal's forthcoming special, is declared by Universal officials to be responsible for his engagement under the long-term contract. He is also slated for a principal role in Universal's prospective film version of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

"The Hostage" Is Title of Tom Mix's Next

"The Hostage" will be the title of the next Tom Mix vehicle, Fox Film Corporation announces this week.

It will be directed by Jack Ford, and Alma Bennett will play the feminine lead. In the cast will appear Virginia True Boardman, Edward Piel, Joe Girard, and Lon Poff.

Emory Johnson to Do Railroad Drama for F. B. O.

EMORY JOHNSON, producer of "The Third Alarm" and "In the Name of the Law," two specials released by the Film Booking Offices of America, has started work on "Westbound 99," which will be his third production for F. B. O. As in the case of his two previous successes the story was written by Mr. Johnson's mother, Emelie Johnson. Likewise "Westbound 99" will feature Ralph Lewis, star of the two preceding subjects.

"The Third Alarm" will open at the Astor theatre, New York, on January 8, for a month's run, prior to its first-run bookings.

In "Westbound 99" Mr. Ralph Lewis will don overalls and a black cap and become a locomotive engineer in what Mr. Johnson intends to make the biggest railroad drama ever filmed. Mr. Johnson will direct "Westbound 99" and his organization will be the same as in his past productions. In the cast will be seen Claire McDowell, Johnny Harron, Taylor Graves, Wedgewood Nowell, Red Kirby and Jane Morgan and Ella Hall as leading lady. Ross Fisher will be behind the camera and Charles M. Watt will assist Mr. Johnson in the direction.

"Thundering Dawn" New Title for Bavu

"Thundering Dawn" is to be the screen name of "Bavu" or "The Attic of Dr. Felix Bavu," the weird Russian play written and staged by Earl Carroll in New York last season, and which is being transformed into a photo-drama for Universal's Jewel release schedule. The picture is now well under way.

Universal will present it with an all-star cast. The featured role is taken by Wallace Beery. Stuart Paton is directing.

In addition to Beery, Forrest Stanley, Estelle Taylor, Joseph Swickard, Sylvia Breamer, Harry Carter, Nick de Ruiz, Jack Rollens, Nell Craig and Martha Mattox take principal parts.

Foster Moore Joins Staff of Al Lichtman

The latest addition to the rapidly expanding force of the Al Lichtman Corporation is Foster Moore, who has been affiliated with the Jans Film Service for the past four years as sales manager and director of publicity. His connection with Lichtman will be for the purpose of handling exploitation particularly in connection with first runs for Preferred Pictures throughout the country.

Moore was connected with various theatrical enterprises before his advent to the picture industry, acting for many years as press agent in a number of different undertakings, which equip him admirably for the post he will fill in the future.

Educational Exchanges Shifts Managers

M. N. Wolf, formerly connected with the Goldwyn Exchange in Los Angeles, has been appointed manager of the branch of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., in that city. Jules Wolf, who was in charge of this exchange, has assumed direction of Educational's branch at Denver, handling the business in the Denver and Salt Lake City territories.

"Three Who Paid" is the title of the Fox production starring William Farnum, from which the above scenes are taken.

Producers Busy for First National

Ten Independent Companies at Work on East and West Coast on New Features

TEN independent producers are busy on the East and West coasts making pictures for First National release.

Frank Lloyd has started directing the Schenck production "Within the Law," with Norma Talmadge starring, and with Margaret Leahy in an important role. Miss Talmadge has ready for First National release the adaptation of the stage play, "The Voice from the Minaret." This picture was directed by Frank Lloyd.

John Stahl has returned to the coast and is casting for another Louis Mayer production. Stahl's new picture, "Money, Love and the Woman," is from an original story. The cast of this picture will be announced shortly.

Maurice Tourneur is filming Captain Marriott's "The Isle of Dead Ships," making his headquarters at the Levee United Studios.

Constance Talmadge is busy getting her gowns ready for the production that will follow "East Is West." The story has been written by John Emerson and Anita Loos. No title has been announced as yet by First National.

Katherine MacDonald is making "Refuge" under the direction of Victor Scherzinger for the B. B. Schulberg company.

Buster Keaton's "The Balloonatic" having been finished, cut and delivered to First National, the smileless comedian is at work on another fun maker, said to be a five-reeler.

Edwin Carewe, making Edwin Carewe productions, is off for the west to begin filming the great Belasco play, "The Girl of the Golden West." Carewe had the scenario all ready when he left New York.

The Thomas Ince studios are busy on several productions, among which are "Bell Boy 13," "What a Wife Learned" and "Man of Action."

Arthur Trimble and Jane Murfin are working on another for First National. At present it is called "The Sign."

Olga Printzlau Signed By Schulberg

B. P. Schulberg has announced the signing of Olga Printzlau, William de Mille's former scenarist, to prepare the script of "Mothers-in-Law," which Gasnier will direct when "Poor Men's Wives," the production upon which he is now engaged, is completed.

"Mother-in-Laws" is a screen original by Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston, who were likewise responsible for the stories of "Rich Men's Wives," Schulberg's first special production for release through the Al Lichtman Corporation, and "Poor Men's Wives," its companion piece, in which Barbara La Marr, David Butler, Zasu Pitts and Richard Tucker will appear.

"Poor Men's Wives" will be released in February while "Mothers-in-Law" will appear later on in the year.

Cast for "The Common Law" Completed

The complete cast for Selznick's picturization of Robert W. Chambers' "The Common Law" has been assembled at the company's West Coast studios, where the subject has just entered production.

Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle and Elliott Dexter are to be co-starred in the production. Prominent in their support will be Hobart Bosworth, Bryant Washburn, Doris May, Miss Du Pont, Harry Myers, Phyllis Haver and Wally Van. George Archainbaud is directing.

"Prosperity Dinner" Facts Bared

Promoter Interviewed by Trade-Press Editors Issues a Detailed Statement

WITH a view to ascertaining all the facts connected with the "Welcome Prosperity Dinner," the editors of Motion Picture News, Moving Picture World, Exhibitor's Herald and Exhibitor's Trade Review interviewed David R. Hochreich, treasurer of the enterprise, this week and secured from him a full statement of particulars.

In submitting his statement, Mr. Hochreich admitted that on the stationery used for announcing the dinner the names of Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, P. A. Powers, Governor-elect Alfred E. Smith, David Belasco, William Randolph Hearst, D. W. Griffith and Senator-elect Royal S. Copeland had been used without the authority of the individual designated. He produced letters of acceptance from other prominent men listed on the committee. At the suggestion of the trade-paper editors, Mr. Hochreich then dictated the following statement:

"Please allow me to place on record the facts and conditions surrounding the 'Welcome Prosperity Dinner," which I originated and have sponsored.

"The dinner was my individual idea and I sought the support of the prominent business men within the picture industry and outside of the picture industry.

"I can see now that a grave mistake was made in giving premature publicity to the idea, especially insofar as the use of several names on the committees supposed to be in charge of the dinner. One of our early pieces of stationery through an error included several names which I had no authority to use and I wish now to tender an apology to those gentlemen and also to any others who may have been mislead by misuse of their names.

"It was perhaps unfortunate that the impression was allowed to be made that the dinner was chiefly sponsored by the motion picture industry.

"We are now going ahead with our plans for the dinner, which will be held at a later date and which will be more representative of other lines of business than the motion picture industry.

"Many leaders in other industries have warmly approved the idea of a dinner to boost prosperity because of the psychological effect and I feel that with the mistakes of the past rectified and the air cleared, that it will be possible to carry the affair through to a successful conclusion.

"The Prosperity League of America is now being incorporated and the dinner will be held under its auspices.

"In view of the above the dinner planned for January 11 at the Astor has been called off.

"December 27, 1922."

P. B. McNaughton of Shea Amusement Co. Dies

P. B. McNaughton, president of the Shea Amusement Company, is dead. Mr. McNaughton died at Dr. John Kelly's hospital, Baltimore, following a long illness.

Mr. McNaughton was reputed to be one of the richest men in Buffalo. He owned much real estate in the city, including the big Denton, Cottier & Daniels building, adjacent to Shea's theatre. About ten years ago he sold his interest in a number of propositions to become associated with Michael Shea in the operation of the Shea Court Street theatre. Soon after Shea's Hippodrome was built and later Shea's North Park, and it had been the wish of Mr. McNaughton to erect soon another large house in Main street, north of Chippewa. Mr. McNaughton's home was at Big Three on the lake shore near Hamburg. M. Shea will continue to direct the activities of Shea's, Inc., the new name of the company which recently was reorganized, so that Mr. Shea would be in sole charge of the operating end of the business and Mr. McNaughton in charge of the financial end.

Rosengartner Is Goldwyn Met. Sales Chief

S. Eckman, Jr., Goldwyn district manager with supervision over the territory embraced in the New York, Albany and New Haven exchanges, has named David Rosengartner as metropolitan sales manager.

Mr. Rosengartner has a wide acquaintance with film men throughout the metropolitan territory, and his appointment has been hailed as a judicious one. For ten years Mr. Rosengartner was supervisor for the Brooklyn districts of the Fox Film Corporation. He was one of several possible candidates considered by Mr. Eckman and was his first choice.

Annual Election Held by F.I.L.M. Club

At an enthusiastic meeting of the New York F. I. L. M. Club on Wednesday night, Dec. 13, the following officers were unanimously elected for 1923: President, Samuel Zieler, Commonwealth; vice president, William E. Raynor, Pathe; second vice president, Henry Siegel, Select; secretary, Jos. Ungar, Assn. First National; treasurer, Louis Rosenbluh, Fox; master of ceremonies, Harry Thomas, Arrow.

Tickets are already at a premium for the annual F. I. L. M. Club dinner and dance, which will be held on January 13 at the Majestic Hotel. The following are in charge of the arrangements: W. E. Raynor, Harry Thomas, Tom Murray, Samuel Zieler and J. Weinberg.

"The Power Of A Lie" Is Completed

"The Power of a Lie," Universal's picturization of Johann Bojer's prize winning novel, has been completed and has reached New York.

Universal screened it as an all-star picture, directed by George Archainbaud, a French director. In translating it to the screen he was aided by Charles Kenyon, noted American dramatist. Kenyon put it in continuity form.

The leading roles are portrayed by Mabel Julienne Scott, David Torrence, Maude George, June Elvidge and Earl Metcalf. Among the other players in the cast are Philip Smalley, Winston Miller, Ruby LaFayette and Stanton Heck.

"Custard Cup" Is Title of Mary Carr's New Film

"The Custard Cup" has finally been decided upon as the title for the new production featuring Mary Carr. Adapted from the widely-read book of the name the picture now bears, the production was previously announced under the title of "Paradise Road" and "Penzie."

Goldwyn Signs King Vidor on Long Term Contract

KING VIDOR has been placed under a long term contract by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation to direct special productions.

His first Goldwyn production, it is announced, will be a highly successful stage play which will soon get under way. In view of the technical resources which will be placed at his disposal by Goldwyn, Mr. Vidor has given Sol Lesser an option on his studio.

Vidor, although only twenty-eight years old, has won the reputation of being one of the most artistic and capable of directors. His motion picture career began when, as a boy of eighteen living in Galveston, Tex., he sold a scenario. He then directed and produced two reel scenarios in Texas for two years before going to Los Angeles in 1914. He first came into prominence in 1918 by his direction of "The Turn in the Road," the first picture with a big spiritual theme. Among his best known productions are "The Jack-Knife man," "The Sky Pilot," "Better Times" and "Love Never Dies." He has just completed a screen version of Hartley Manners' play, "Peg O' My Heart," with Laurette Taylor in the role she created on the stage.

Jackie Coogan Circus Gets $10,000 for Charity

The Jackie Coogan circus scenes used for Jackie's new production, "Toby Tyler," a First National attraction, were put to good use last week when a special "circus" was opened to the public under the seven tents used by Jackie on the United Artists' lot. Admittance price was a bundle of old clothes, a can or two of milk, a pair of old shoes, or a hat. All the articles received were turned into the Near East Relief Fund, and when the show was over and the count was made the Coogan Productions' officials estimated that they had gathered about $10,000 worth of goods for the Near East sufferers.

Circus folks wintering in Los Angeles lent a hand and pleased the big crowds that assembled. Jackie did tricks on a horse and worked with the clowns.

Special Trade Showing of "The Kingdom Within"

A special trade showing was held at the Strand theatre, New York, for "The Kingdom Within," the Victor Schertzinger special release by the W. W. Hodkinson organization. "The Kingdom Within" is from the pen of Kenneth B. Clarke, featuring Gaston Glass, Pauline Starke, Russell Simpson, Ernest Torrence, G. Walt Covington, Hallam Cooley, Gordon Russell and Marion Feducha.

A representative audience was in attendance, consisting of prominent exhibitors from this section, representatives from the trade press, fan magazines, producers and directors and members of the Hodkinson organization.

"Sure Fire Flint" for N. Y. Cameo

C. C. Burr will present Johnny Hines in "Sure Fire Flint" as the initial attraction for the New Year at the B. S. Moss New York Cameo theatre. The engagement will begin on Sunday, December 31st, and is scheduled for one week only.

Cosmopolitan Companies at Work

Four New Productions Are Now Under Way With Many Others Due to Follow

WITH the starting of work on Marion Davies' next super special, "Little Old New York," from the play of Rida Johnston Young, the Cosmopolitan Corporation now has four companies working on new productions.

"Little Old New York," directed by Sidney Olcott, is being made at Cosmopolitan's main studio. In addition to Miss Davies the company includes the following players: J. M. Kerrigan, Mahlon Hamilton, Courtney Foote, Harrison Ford, Norvel Keedwell, George Barroud, Sam Hardy, Montague Love, Riley Hatch, Charles Kennedy, Spencer Charters, Harry Watson, Charles Judels, Pauline Whitson, Mary Kennedy, Thomas Findlay and Marie R. Burke.

At Cosmopolitan's Jackson avenue studio Alan Crosland is making the smaller sets for "The Enemies of Women," the principal ones having been made at the main studio and abroad, the author, Vicente Blasco Ibanez, assisting Mr. Crosland at Monte Carlo. Lionel Barrymore is featured in "The Enemies of Women," and the cast includes Alma Rubens, Pedro de Cordoba, Gareth Hughes, Gladys Hulette, Wm. H. Thompson, Wm. Collier, Jr., Mario Majeroni, Paul Panzer and Betty Bouton.

At the Universal studio in Fort Lee, Director E. H. Griffith is making "The Go-Getter" from the magazine story by Peter D. Kyne. Seena Owen and T. Roy Barnes are featured and the cast includes William Norris, Tom Lewis, Frederick Santley, John Carr, William J. Sorelle, William Strauss, Ann Brady, Ed. Elkins, Florence Hadley and Jane Jennings.

At the Thomas Ince studio in Culver City, California, Frank Borzage is at work on "The Nth Commandment," from the magazine story by Fannie Hurst. Colleen Moore and James Morrison head this cast, which also includes Eddie Phillips, Charlotte Merriam and George Cooper.

In addition to these pictures now in course of making, "Adam and Eva" has already been completed, and Cosmopolitan expects to make the following specials in which Marion Davies will be starred: "La Belle Marseillaise" from the famous story of Pierre Berton; "Alice of Old Vincennes," by Maurice Thompson; "Yolanda," from the novel by Charles Major; "The Forest Lovers," from the story by Maurice Hewlett; "Hearts Courageous," from the story by Hallie Ermine Rives, and "Amy Robsart," from Sir Walter Scott's "Kenilworth."

Other Cosmopolitan pictures will be "The Enemies of Women," "Under the Red Robe," by Stanley Weyman; "A Gentleman of France," which is also by Stanley Weyman; "Helmet of Navarre," by Bertha Runkle; "The Grey Cloak," by Harold McGrath; "The Torrent," by Vicente Blasco Ibanez; "Woman Triumphant," also by Ibanez; "Hearts of Three," by Jack London; "White Shadows of the South Sea," by Frederick O'Brien.

Paramount Representative Here From Stockholm

Walter LeMat, of Stockholm, Sweden, associated with Carl York in the distribution of Paramount pictures in Denmark, Sweden and Norway, arrived in New York last week to confer with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation regarding distribution plans for the coming year.

Goldwyn Schedules New Releases

"The Strangers' Banquet" and "The Christian" First for Distribution

THE Goldwyn schedule for the new year includes what are said to be the biggest pictures yet made by that firm—and this statement is made by them after taking into consideration that the fall and early winter releases included such successes as the John Barrymore picture, "Sherlock Holmes," "The Sin Flood," "Brothers Under the Skin," "A Blind Bargain" and "Broken Chains."

The coming releases are headed by Marshall Neilan's first production in association with Goldwyn, "The Stranger's Banquet," from Donn Byrne's novel, to be released on December 31st, and Maurice Tourneur's production of Sir Hall Caine's novel, "The Christian," to be released on January 28th. Release dates have not been set for any of the other productions.

The casts for both "The Christian" and "The Strangers' Banquet" are strong in their array of screen talent. In "The Christian" are Richard Dix, Mae Busch, Phyllis Haver, Claude Gillingwater, Cyril Chadwick, Mahlon Hamilton, Beryl Mercer, Joseph Dowling and Gareth Hughes.

In "The Strangers' Banquet" are Claire Windsor, Rockliffe Fellowes, Hobart Bosworth, Eleanor Boardman, Nigel Barrie, Thomas Holding, Claude Gillingwater, Arthur Hoyt, Brinsley Shaw, Stuart Holmes, Ford Sterling, Eugenia Besserer, Lucille Dickson, Cyril Chadwick, Jean Hersholt, James Marcus, Edward McWade, Dagmar Godowsky, Lillian Langdon and Jack Curtis.

Following these come several other pictures, the release date and the order of release of which has not been decided upon. There is a Rupert Hughes picture, "Gimme!" with a cast embracing Helene Chadwick, Gaston Glass, Kate Lester, Henry B. Walthall and David Imboden. Mr. Hughes directed.

Carey Wilson's first picture for Goldwyn, "Lost and Found," a romance of the South Seas, formerly called "Passions of the Sea," is said by the producers to be an unusual picture. R. A. Walsh directed it. He took the entire cast to Tahiti, where the film was made on the island and on board a ship chartered for the occasion. In the cast are House Peters, Pauline Starke, Antonio Moreno, Rosemary Theby, George Seigmann, Mary Jane Irving, William V. Mong, Carl Harbough and others.

Hugo Ballin's production of "Vanity Fair," starring his wife, Mabel Ballin, is now nearing completion at the Goldwyn studios. In the cast, besides Mabel Ballin, are Hobart Bosworth, Earle Fox, Willard Louis, Eleanor Boardman, George Walsh, Harrison Ford, Robert Mack, William Humphrey and Tempe Piggott.

Rupert Hughes is now making the screen version of his Hollywood novel, "Souls for Sale," with a cast embracing Eleanor Boardman in the leading role, Frank Mayo, Richard Dix, Lew Cody, Barbara LaMarr and Mae Busch.

Ince Announces First '23 Fall Release

"Her Reputation," it is announced from the Thomas H. Ince studios in Culver City, will be the title of the first Thomas H. Ince release for the Fall of 1923. The picture is now in production under the working title of "News."

The cast is headed by May McAvoy and Lloyd Hughes. John Griffith Wray, of the Ince directorial staff, is directing. The story is by Bradley King, of the studio editorial staff.

Besides Miss McAvoy and Mr. Hughes, the cast includes James Corrigan, Casson Ferguson, Eric Mayne, Louise Lester, Brinsley Shaw, George Larkin, Eugenie Besserer, Jane Miller, Gus Leonard and "Charlie," a monkey.

The title of the latest Range Rider series western, with Leo Maloney, is "Under Suspicion." The above scenes illustrate three scenes from the Pathe release.

First National Salesmen Win Prize Money

The prize money is now being handed out to First National salesmen who won the district competition during the sales drive that began October 4 and ended November 25.

Jacob M. Jacobs, of Chicago, heads the list, with Charles Hamal, of Salt Lake, second; Lewis W. Carter, Atlanta, third; Fred Wilson, Detroit, fourth; Byron A. Stover, Butte, fifth; and John Golder, Washington, sixth. Jacobs ran nearly 168 per cent over his quota.

The money prizes given out according to districts, there being six districts, amount to in each district, $300 for first man, $200 for second man, $150 for third man and $100 for fourth.

The money getters were:

Eastern District: John Golder, Washington; Joseph S. Lieberman, Philadelphia; Eugene Markens, Buffalo, and Ralph W. Pinkham, Boston.

Central District: Fred Wilson, Detroit; Robert Blazer, Indianapolis; John Himmelein, Cleveland, and Herman S. Mandelbaum, Cleveland.

Mid-Western District: Jacob M. Jacobs, Chicago; John N. Howland, Chicago; Clyde A. Pratt, Des Moines, and William C. Cook, Chicago.

Western District: Charles J. Hamal, Salt Lake; Byron A. Stover, Butte; Charles F. Harris, Portland, and Carl H. Drane, Los Angeles.

Southern District: Lewis W. Carter, Atlanta; J. Bryan Craver, Charlotte; Samuel J. Stockard, New Orleans, and Edward D. Brewer, Oklahoma.

Among the Exchanges

"THE THIRD ALARM," declared by Manager Jack Sampson, of Film Booking Office exchange, to be an outstanding success, was screened for members of the Hamilton Club last week. Roderick Ross, chairman of the club's motion picture committee, arranged the screening with the cooperation of Mr. Sampson, and the audience consisted of nearly seven hundred members and friends, who were well pleased with the picture. President Writ Humphrey declared he noticed a lot weeping, while many of the women cheered during the fire scene in the last reel. With the tears and thrills it produced, there can be no doubt that the picture was a success at the club showing.

F. J. Young is now a member of Manager Steinson's staff and is selling short subjects for Vitagraph. Another addition to Vitagraph's sales staff is G. P. Smith, who has been connected with Pathe for some time past and is one of the best business getters in the Chicago territory. He will cover the West Side.

Samuel Lamosky ,of the Vitagraph office, is managing Larry Wagner, who does imitations of Larry Semon, Vitagraph's comedian, and has his man booked solid for appearances until January 15.

The big publicity and exploitation campaign to promote "Broken Chains," which opens at the Chicago on January 1, got under way the day after Christmas when an aeroplane circled over the loop district, dropping hundreds of announcement cards, two hundred passes to the Chicago and gold coins. Publicist Nealand, of the Goldwyn exchange, also started a twenty-four sheet billboard advertising campaign and store tie-ups during the week.

District Manager Hickey, of Goldwyn Pictures, has returned from Buffalo, his former home, where he spent the Christmas holidays. Another exchange man, who journeyed to the old home town for his Yuletide celebration, was Manager Eichenlaub, of United Artists, who spend the holiday with his family at Chillicothe, Ohio.

District Manager J. M. Duncan, of Vitagraph, held a series of exchange "pep" meetings this week. On Monday he addressed the executives and salesmen of the Chicago exchange, leaving that night for St. Louis, then holding meetings at Kansas City, Omaha and Minneapolis. The aggressive sales campaign to put over the twenty-four big specials, the first of which, "The Ninety and Nine," will be released in January, and the new no-deposit system recently announced by Vitagraph was taken up at the various meetings.

Around the Trade

AARON J. JONES, at this season for many years, has issued a forecast of business conditions in the amusement world and has proved remarkably accurate as a prognosticator. This year he says: "At last the sun of prosperity is peeping over the horizon of the period of discontent and chill for the theatrical industry in general. The patient has passed the crisis and is on the fair road to recovery. The past three years have been a veritable slough of despond, but the bright rays of approaching prosperity will dry up all signs of worry and dejection, and the year of 1923, without doubt, will be the greatest normal theatrical year since the balmy days before the nations of the world were steeped in the recent war.

"We were utterly spoiled by the abnormal desire of the public for entertainment in which to bury the grief of war, and under these conditions the industry in general produced some rather mediocre plays and pictures in their rush to supply the demand. We have only ourselves to blame for the slump that attended the industry following this time, but now producers are correcting their weaknesses, and proof of this is found in the large crowds attending the better motion picture theatres.

"1923 will be a year of values and the public will shop for entertainment with careful scrutiny, which means a normal attitude and hence a normal profit for the fellow who delivers one hundred per cent entertainment. Plays will be better, pictures will be better, actors will work regularly—at normal salaries, expenses will be down, and thus business on the whole will be vastly improved. The sun is peeping over the horizon, now, ye pensive showmen, get into the sunshine."

Frank B. Smith, of the James A. Hill Manufacturing Company, Minneapolis, stopped off in Chicago last week en route from New York to his headquarters. Mr. Smith's company manufactures film cases, and he states that business is rapidly getting back to normal with a splendid increasing demand for this product.

The expected falling off in the theatre business the week before Christmas was even more marked than usual in Chicago and vicinity, although Christmas day attendance picked up to a marked degree, especially at the larger houses. The return of general prosperity in the Chicago district, strange as it seems, appears to have been the cause of the slump. Usual patrons of the picture houses were plentifully supplied with money and, according to reports from retail merchants, the Christmas buying was the greatest ever recorded, therefore the people did not have time to attend the movies as usual. This condition, however, is a foundation for the prediction of good theatre attendance from now on.

"Tess of the Storm Country" got away to a good start on its Roosevelt run Monday and was given splendid reviews by all the movie critics of the Chicago daily press.

One thousand homeless men and boys, who otherwise might have gone hungry Christmas day, were guests at a splendid dinner and Christmas celebration at Hobo College, 915 West Washington Street, on Christmas day through the thoughtfulness of Lila Lee, our Chicago movie star, who wired her father, Charles Appel, owner of the North Side Turner Hall, to arrange a big holiday affair at her expense. Mr. Appel obtained Dr. Ben Reitman's aid in the management of the affair and, in addition to the big dinner, there was a tree with presents for all the guests.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" was advertised this way in Detroit, Mich., when it showed at the Orpheum

President L. M. Rubens, of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, made the following answer to newspaper reporters' questions as to how the organization stood on the action of Will Hays in the Fatty Arbuckle matter. "We believe that the public should be allowed to be the judge of what it wants. The court of justice acquitted Arbuckle in the case involving the death of Virginia Rappe and now he must face the high court of public opinion." Chief of Police Fitzmorris, ex-officio head of the censor board, said: "I think the public can be trusted to do its own censoring if any is needed." Individual opinion among the exhibitors on the propriety and profit of showing Arbuckle films was divided, but the majority seems to feel that they will be glad to show Arbuckle pictures on their screens, many commenting on the fact that his pictures in the past had been remarkably clean and free from anything which could call forth criticism from even the most ardent reformer.

Conferences have been under way between representatives of the Motion Picture Operators' Union and the Theatre Owners for a new wage and working agreement, as the present one expires on January 10. At the first meeting between the representatives of the two bodies the union officials made a demand for a 10 per cent wage increase and changes in working conditions, which would entail the hiring of additional operators in several theatres. This demand which will be considered at a general meeting of exhibitors next week, followed the proposal of the theatre owners, that wages be cut 25 per cent for 1923 and a later proposal that the present scale be continued in force, both of which were turned down flatly by the union officials. Among those present at the meeting were: Committee for the Operators' Union, Thomas Reynolds, Thomas Malloy, Hal Johnstone, James Sloneker, Frank Clifford, Louis Morris, David Day, Eugene Atkinson, Arthur Lyons, Benjamin Hannabert and Jack Wolfberg, and the committee for the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners included Samuel Abrahams, Norman E. Field, M. Katz, L. Siegel, M. Siegel, Sid Selig, Nathan Wolf, Vern Langdon and J. B. Dibelka.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

When Knighthood Was in Flower—

Holding on to a run with steady patronage. Best picture of the year. (West.)

Wonderful production. Played to full houses for three consecutive weeks. Could use another picture like that. (Middle West.)

Thirty Days—

Good light comedy. Reid in familiar role, well liked. He has large following here. (Middle West.)

A very good box office attraction. Wallie Reid always draws the crowds. (Middle West.)

To Have and to Hold—

Cold weather did not prevent this one from doing a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Pride of Palomar—

Fine feature with lots of action and sustained interest. Business good. (Middle West.)

The Ghost Breaker—

Better than some of Reid's recent features and comedy went over big. Did good business. (Middle West.)

The Young Rajah—

Business continued for ten days run with some slack days. Picture pleased those who had never been Valentino fans before. Established no records. (Middle West.)

Pink Gods—

Satisfactory and seemed to please generally. Business wasn't rushing but it averaged very well in spite of Christmas shopping. (Middle West.)

The Outcast—

Elsie Ferguson miscast as a street waif, but seemed to take fairly well. A few were pleased with it and the rest didn't complain. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Omar, the Tentmaker—

Did not come up to "The Masquerader." Holiday shopping probably effected business, however. Little enthusiasm. (Middle West.)

Wonderful picture from the artistic standpoint. Very well liked by patrons who care for art, but not such a big drawing card as it deserved to be. (Middle West.)

Brawn of the North—

It is too bad all actors cannot deliver the goods as well as Strongheart, the dog star. My patrons liked this better than "The Silent Call."

A remarkable production from every angle. Scenery beautiful. Plot, action and direction all fine. The dog is the big drawing card, however. Big business all week.

East Is West—

This has a real kick in it. Conny Talmadge still a favorite. Nice business. (Middle West.)

Dangerous Age—

One of the best pictures in a long time. Did better business than we have done for weeks. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Jilt—

It's a good box office attraction. Enough snap to appeal. Well done throughout. Fair business for the week before Christmas. (Middle West.)

An average program picture attracting average business and not enthusing the audience one bit. (East.)

One Wonderful Night—

Very good business. Not such a great picture, but drew well. (West.)

The Kentucky Derby—

Don't fail to book this one. It packs them in. The horse race scene as thrilling as the real thing, say local followers of Sport of Kings who journey every year to Louisville to see the Derby. (Middle West.)

FOX

A Self Made Man—

Fair all around. (Middle West.)

Moonshine Valley—

Just the thing for patrons of this theatre. A lot of bunk handed out a la William Farnum which went over in fine shape with the fans. (East.)

METRO

Sherlock Brown—

Not such a good offering. At least, it didn't please my patrons so well. (Middle West.)

Trifling Women—

Feature which pleased our audiences and did good business. (Middle West.)

Went over big with my patrons and they are not so easy to please. (West.)

Forget-Me-Not—

A superior offering that was well received and which recorded excellent totals at the box office for the week.

GOLDWYN

Sherlock Holmes—

Barrymore is fine in this exciting story, which went over big. (Middle West.)

Brothers Under the Skin—

Exploitation helped this one greatly and the attendance for the week was good. (Middle West.)

The Sin Flood—

A fine story well put over and which brought a full house at each showing for the seven days' run. Well advertised. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

The Ladder Jinx—

A nice program picturc. Satisfactory receipts.

UNITED ARTISTS

Tess o' the Storm Country—

Mary Pickford at her best. All who saw the old one came to see if she looked any different. Those who didn't see the first one came so they wouldn't miss anything, so I played to good houses for a three weeks' run. (West.)

Going strong on seventh week. (West.)

Douglas Fairbanks in Robinhood —

With Doug's usual popularity and such a great picture, the answer is S. R. O. (West.)

The Man Who Played God—

Fine picture; drew good business. Arliss a real artist. (Middle West.)

A Tailor-Made Man—

This picture was a big disappointment. The production had been thought to be big enough for a week's run but it was pulled off in the middle of the run when it did nothing more than average business, following a Sunday opening. It will take three or four of these good Ray pictures to restore the star to public confidence. (East.)

FILM BOOKING OFFICES

Good Men and True—

Harry Carey is a favorite here. The attendance for the week with this one was good. (Middle West.)

If I Were Queen—

Ethel Clayton's popularity would carry a mediocre picture, and she was well received in this one, which wasn't a masterpiece, but a pretty good offering. (West.)

The Kickback—

Not an acceptional Harry Carey. Business rather slow. Matinees had the fewest. (Middle West.)

Thelma—

Fine dramatization of the novel. Picture pleased generally and did fine business. (Middle West.)

Went beyond expectations. Mighty well liked by those who had read the book. They said the characterizations were fine. (West.)

No complaint to offer. Good picture. Good business. (West.)

AL LICHTMAN

Shadows—

All critics and capacity audiences at each performance agreed that this is a great picture. (Middle West.)

Rich Men's Wives—

Hit home in a good many places. Wasn't so popular with some, but did good business. (West.)

SELZNICK

One Week of Love—

Stars are popular here and business was good. (Middle West.)

A good drawing card. Big houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Great picture. Fine story value. Went over big with both Hammerstein and Tearle fans. (West.)

PATHE

Dr. Jack—

A sure fire box office attraction. Pack 'em in with it. (West.)

HODKINSON

Other Women's Clothes—

With help of style show did a fair business, in spite of holiday festivities.

ASSOCIATE EXHIBITORS

Till We Meet Again—

STATE RIGHTS

What's Wrong with the Women—

A very good picture. (Middle West.)

Buffalo Exploiteers Omitted from List Through Error

THROUGH a printer's error at the time of going to press, the names of the Buffalo, N. Y., exploiteers were omitted from the list headed "The Exploiteers and Their Bosses." The paragraph omitted read:

Buffalo, N. Y.—

Famous Players-Lasky—Harry Royster.

Film Booking Offices—Gilbert P. Josephson.

First National—H. L. Beecroft.

Goldywn—Irwin Zeltner.

Universal—T. C. Leonard.

This error is a regrettable one, since it was hoped to make this list absolutely complete and comprehensive, but in the press of work in getting out the large Holiday Number, it slipped through.

Thanks should be extended at this time, also, to the publicity men in the exploitation departments of the five companies represented, who co-operated in compiling this list and bringing it up to date.

Herbert J. Thatcher, Strand theatre, Salina, Kan.

Geo. Rotsky, Managing Director, Allen theatre, Montreal, Canada.

Phil. Gleichman, Managing Director, Broadway-Strand theatre, Detroit.

Appropriate Street Ballyhoo Used on "Wild Irish Rose"

Duluth, Minn.—W. N. Abrahamson, of the Zelda theatre, employed a street ballyhoo on "My Wild Irish Rose," which was appropriate and served its purpose well.

Abrahamson dressed a man as he thought an Irishman would dress and sent him into the streets of Duluth with a small pig on a bed of straw in a wheelbarrow. Attached to the wheelbarrow was a large placard reading, "The pig for sale to raise the kale to take my spalpeens to 'My Wild Irish Rose' at the Zelda theatre." The pig was auctioned at every prominent corner, and the following day the man went out again with the same wheelbarrow minus the pig and trailed by a half-dozen youngsters of various ages who carried banners reading, "The pig is sold, we've got the gold, and Here's my Spalpeens in a Row. to See a Knockout of a Show."

Mr. Abrahamson also worked a bridal idea. He had an elaborately decorated limousine with a bridal couple inside and several yards of tin cans tied behind, driving through the principal streets of Duluth. A huge banner on the back of the automobile announced "Just Married 'My Wild Irish Rose.' We're on Our Way to the Zelda."

He also arranged about fourteen windows in which were displayed a miniature stage with an automatic dancing doll dressed as Pauline Starke as she appears in "My Wild Irish Rose," with cut-outs of the other characters in the picture grouped about on the stage.

"Trifling Women" Is Tied Up with Apple Week

TOLEDO, Ohio.—Eddie Zorn, manager of the Temple theatre, and C. C. Deardourff, exploitation man for Metro, took advantage of National Apple Week for their publicity on "Trifling Women."

Zorn and Deardourff got a truck, decorated it with bunting, filled it with boxes of the most alluring apples they could find, and sent it all over Toledo with a big sign saying "National Apple Week. —The Fruit That Tempted Man. See 'Trifling Women,' Temple Theatre, Tomorrow."

Two boy scouts accompanied the truck, and in the most congested parts of the downtown district the boys tossed apples from the truck to the people on the sidewalks. They tossed some 1,500 apples during the stunt.

Kritic Kontest Boosts Run of "Oliver Twist" at Billings

Billings, Mont.—Al H. West, manager of the Babcock theatre, in his advance campaign on "Oliver Twist," put over a contest in which youngsters who have always imagined themselves the peer of any newspaper film critic, were invited to review the picture and an autographed book of "Oliver Twist" was the award for the best review. The Kritic Kontest was handled under the auspices of the schools with the co-operation of the Billings Gazette.

Lobby Cartoonist Novel Stunt on "Love Is An Awful Thing"

Fort Worth, Texas.—Public love to watch an artist draw cartoons, and Manager Harry Gould of the Hippodrome theatre, capitalized this fact in exploiting "Love Is an Awful Thing."

On Saturday, one day in advance of play date, a local artist was hired to stand in the lobby of the theatre and draw cartoons about the coming picture. His drawings were clever and large crowds were attracted to the front of the theatre. Each cartoon worked in the title of the picture forcibly.

All Around Campaign Put Over on "Days of Buffalo Bill"

Fort Collins, Colo.—That exploitation can be put over in a big way in a town of 10,000 inhabitants was demonstrated recently by the success of the drive put back of "In the Days of Buffalo Bill" at the Lyric theatre.

First, arrangements were made through the newspapers and the local dancing master to tie-up with the regular Saturday night dance for a Buffalo Bill ball. Announcements were made through specially written stories that "in celebration of the coming to the Lyric theatre the following week of Universal's great historical chapter-play 'In the Days of Buffalo Bill,' the Community Dance would include a mammoth Buffalo Bill costume ball and that all persons attending costumed as characters of "In the Days of Buffalo Bill" would be admitted free and would be entered in the competition for the prizes offered for the best impersonations of the famous men and women of Buffalo Bill's day.

While one paper carried the stories of the Buffalo Bill ball and told of its connection with the Universal chapter-play, the other paper was pounding away on the regular advance stories.

Monday before the opening the window displays were put in, and tie-ups with clothing stores, furniture houses and a novelty shop were effected. The novelty shop supplied a windowful of old muskets and a buffalo head as attractions.

On Tuesday Manager M. C. Gerhart sent invitations to prominent citizens, educators and members of the Woman's Club and other associations. The next day the papers carried the story with the list of persons invited.

Manager Ross D. Rogers of the Mission theatre, Amarillo, Texas, used this automobile, similar to that used in the picture, as a street ballyhoo on "Manslaughter"

Attractive use of hearts, with front of theatre enclosed with compo board, at the Astor theatre, St. Paul, on "Human Hearts"

Play Writing Contest Put Over As "Oliver Twist" Stunt

Louisville, Ky.—Manager George A. Sine, of the Mary Anderson theatre, gained unusual publicity for "Oliver Twist" when he offered a $50 prize for the best twenty-minute one-act play based upon any incident in Dickens' "Oliver Twist."

The Mary Anderson remained in the background, the contest being sponsored by the Louisville Theatre Guild and publicized by the two most powerful papers, the Times and the Courier-Journal.

The campaign to educate the public in "better plays and play writing" received direct support from the University of Louisville Players' Club through Director Boyd Martin, the organization agreeing to put on the one-act play as a prologue when "Oliver Twist" was shown at the Mary Anderson.

Stuart Walker, famous stock producer, and two local dramatic critics were the judges. At the time of writing more than thirty manuscripts had been received, with the end of the contest only a few days off. In the interim between the closing of the contest and the announcement of the judges' decision, interest is being kept alive by the two newspapers by a special twice-a-week column outlining dramatic points that have been suggested by the manuscripts and brief lessons on drama writing.

Capsules Provide Novel Ads for "East Is West"

MIDDLETOWN, Conn.—Dope capsules were distributed by Manager H. T. Browning of the Grand theatre as a novelty throwaway on "East Is West."

Patrons knew they contained "Dope" because it was so printed on the outside of the paper that showed against the gelatine covering of the capsule. The dope, however, was dope about the coming attraction at the Grand, for the paper rolled up inside the capsule contained a few boosts for Constance Talmadge's latest picture.

It was effective as a novelty and it meant getting the message on "East Is West" over to hundreds of people whose curiosity would make them open the capsules to see the "dope."

Teaser Card Used to Exploit "The Kentucky Derby"

Seattle, Wash.—Over three thousand cards, two and a half by five inches in size, bearing only fourteen words altogether, were used recently by Manager R. W. Case of the Columbia theatre to exploit "The Kentucky Derby."

The cards bore the words, "Are You Going to the Races?" in large letters in the upper center. In the lower left-hand corner were the words, "Get Tickets at 1414 Second Avenue" in smaller type. This is the address of the theatre. And in the lower right-hand corner the card read, "The Kentucky Derby."

The name of the theatre was mentioned in no place on the card. The name of the picture, the street address and the query, "Are You Going to the Races?" was enough to put the stunt over. The cards were printed the same on both sides, and were distributed into automobiles parked on downtown streets, where they did not fail to attract the attention of every pedestrian, as well as the owner of the car.

Three thousand letters, sent through the mail personally to members of Seattle horse and riding clubs emphasizing the racing scenes in the photoplay, also brought Mr. Case their share of attendance.

Players' Photos Lend Novel Angle to "Remembrance" Ad

WARREN, OHIO.—A page of co-operative advertising was used by the manager of the Duchess theatre to exploit the showing of "Remembrance."

He persuaded each merchant to include in his ad the picture of one of the leading actors in "Remembrance." The name was not given, however, and readers were requested to call at the place of business of the advertiser to get the name of the player whose face appeared in his ad. To prove that the person handing in the ad with the names of the players correctly filled in had visited each store advertising, it was required that the page be signed by each advertiser.

This stunt created a lot of talk and about 150 persons took the trouble to go to each advertiser, get the name and have him sign. The first prize was four pairs of tickets to "Remembrance," with nine other prizes of tickets.

The Daily Chronicle also offered prizes of ten pairs of tickets daily for the best answers to questions relative to the early history of Warren which it propounded.

SUMTER, S. C.—A stone castle front was built up by Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre for the showing of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

The front of the lobby was closed, except for entrance and exit openings, with a cloth covered frame painted and striped to give the stone masonry effect. Near the top was a small window with grating and a cut-out just behind the "bars." Massive doors with iron hinges and locks were painted in the center and a dummy soldier stood on guard. A clothier's dummy was used, dressed in a soldier's uniform and provided with a compoboard battle-axe painted black.

This display was placed Saturday night after the last show started and was seen by the last audience as it left the theatre.

"Brothers Under the Skin" Is Tied-Up with Recruiting

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—A tie-up with the navy recruiting squad was gotten on "Brothers Under the Skin" by the management of the Granada theatre and Goldwynner William A. Burke.

A special poster was prepared and used on every navy signboard in the city. The poster read:

"Nowhere are all men 'Brothers Under the Skin' as on a cruise in the U. S. Navy. Full particulars of a cruise in the navy, at U. S. Navy Recruiting Station, Claus Spreckles Bldg., 703 Market St., 'Brothers Under the Skin' now playing Granada theatre. Anniversary show."

Original Costumes Used in "Knighthood" Campaign

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The southeastern premiere of "When Knighthood Was in Flower" was well exploited by Paramount Exploiteer Weyland. His campaign included: A tie-up with the Times, before and during the engagement, display window tie-up of the Marion Davies costumes in Kafka's window on F street, and the initial two-day appearance of Victor Herbert as guest-conductor on Monday and Tuesday.

Exploits Laughs and Thrills on Novel "Molly O" Card

Kingport, Tenn.—The film strip mailing card used to exploit "Molly-O" was given a new angle by Manager H. Gillespie of the Rialto theatre. He used film strips to advertise the picture but gave his patrons a contrast to show the picture's varied lines of appeal.

Two frames were shown. One was a cut from a comedy scene and read: "This is one of the 276 irresistibly funny scenes in 'Molly-O.'" The other: "This is one of the 98 breath-taking punch scenes in 'Molly-O.'"

Manager Gillespie stated that he got his totals by using a pad and pencil when he previewed the picture and putting down a check for each laugh or thrill. He invited his patrons to check up on his check.

Horseshoe Ad Admits Children to See "Fighting Streak"

Brandon, Manitoba.—A Lucky Horseshoe, admitting children free on certain days to see "The Fighting Streak" at the Strand theatre, was made the centre of a co-operative ad published on that picture.

A full page advertisement appeared in one of the local papers, with large headings, announcing Lucky Horseshoe days on Thursday and Friday of that week. In the center of the page appeared a large advertisement of the picture, surrounded by ten two-column box ads of the different stores and firms parties to the tie-up, and displaying a large horseshoe within an inset of William Fox.

Any youngster who clipped any of the Lucky Horseshoe ads on the page, the announcement ran, could see the Tom Mix picture free with an adult.

Duluth Poets Compete in Verse Contest on "Omar"

Duluth, Minn.—No one realized just how many embryo poets Duluth held until the Garrick theatre, with the co-operation of the News-Tribune, staged a contest on "Omar the Tentmaker," in which Duluthians were invited to rival Omar Khayyam in writing quatrains.

The answers came in so fast that the News-Tribune was able to fill a column a day on this item, and it ran an entire week.

The awards were $20 to the writer of the best quatrain, a season pass for the second best and a bound copy of the "Rubaiyat" for the third best. In case of a tie the prize stipulated was to be awarded to each of those concerned.

"Human Hearts" Given Kindness Contest Tie-Up

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Manager T. C. Leonard of the New Olympic theatre, tied up on "Human Hearts" with the Buffalo Commercial on a contest which netted satisfactory space.

It was called a "Kindest Act" contest, and offered rewards to those readers of the paper who reported the kindest acts they had ever witnessed. The contest was tied up to the picture by reason of the "human hearted" action depicted in the film.

The newspaper devoted two columns a day to the contest, including an illustration from the picture, on each of ten days.

Street ballyhoo, with men costumed as blacksmith and convict, on "Human Hearts" at the Rivoli theatre, La Crosse, Wis., of which F. L. Koppelberger is manager

The Liberty theatre, Yakima, Wash., a Jensen and Von Herberg house, used this interesting front on "Grandma's Boy," including numerous cut-outs and real wistaria and honeysuckle

Newspaper Aids Story Contest on "Human Hearts"

Houston, Texas.—Manager C. A. McFarland, of the Queen theatre, obtained plentiful free space for the showing of "Human Hearts" through a contest on which he tied up with the Houston Chronicle, in which prizes were offered for the best stories embodying plenty of "human heart interest."

The theatre offered a season pass as first prize and the newspaper offered a year's subscription as second prize.

Old Time Circus Paste Wagons Exploit "Buffalo Bill"

Des Moines, Iowa.—Real old-time circus methods were revived by Roland G. McCurdy, Universal exploiteer, is putting over "In the Days of Buffalo Bill" at the Family theatre.

Fitting up two bally-hoo wagons like the old circus paste wagons, he sent them on a tour of the neighborhood streets. The wagons were labelled Paste Wagon No. 1 and No. 2.

They were loaded with heralds, feathers, souvenir hats, etc. A phonograph and amplifier were installed in these ballyhoos and sleighbells on the horses.

The wagons visited the newspapers during the rush hours and delivered advertising copy, hung one-sheets, sniped and distributed heralds. All schoolhouses were serenaded and the feathers and hats given to school children as school let out for the day.

Street corner markers prepared and used by the Tivoli theatre, San Francisco, on "East is West"

Three Hundred Stores Tie Up with "Lorna Doone"

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Something of an exploitation record was set here recently when more than 300 stores displayed "Lorna Doone" biscuits and advertising matter in connection with the showing of this attraction at the Grand Opera House and Regent theatre. The National Biscuit company established a precedent by participating actively in the campaign.

The company offered five dollars for the best dressed window display and also an award to the salesman responsible for the most and best window tie-ups made by retailers on his sales list. Even in nearby McKeesport and Homestead the movement took root, about 50 windows being reported in each city.

"Future of Columbus" Contest on "Man Who Saw Tomorrow"

Columbus, Ga.—Manager I. C. Holloway of the Rialto theatre stirred up considerable interest in "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" through a contest on "The Future of Columbus."

Through the Enquirer-Sun a contest was inaugurated with a prize of $10 to the person submitting the best 300-word article on "The Columbus of Tomorrow." People were instructed to take into consideration the geographical location and natural resources, water power, etc.

This proved a very timely subject, and naturally one of interest to the residents of the city. And the responses proved their interest, for the contest went over with a bang. All announcements of the contest were published in the newspaper and tied up with the show, by giving just a hint of the story and mentioning the meeting of Thomas Meighan with the man who unveils his future.

Perfumed Card Is Tie-Up Used for "Over the Hill"

Perth, Western Australia.—Jack Anderson, of the Theatre Royal, arranged a clever tie-up with a local drug company on "Over the Hill."

On a small piece of white cardboard was printed a bookmark with the compliments of the theatre and the announcement that the article, which exuded a sweet odor, was perfumed with the drug company's "Lily of the Valley" essence. The latter stood the expense of the printing.

Dark Theatre Utilized to Aid "Impossible Mrs. Bellew"

Columbia, S. C.—Manager C. W. Irvin, of the Imperial theatre, took advantage of the fact that the theatre across the street was closed in exploiting "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," and put over a stunt which other exhibitors can copy in any desirable location, or in their own lobby.

The theatre across the street from the Imperial being dark, Mr. Irvin mounted a 24-sheet in the lobby, made a sand beach in front of it and placed on the "beach" a big beach umbrella. This was put in a week in advance with the Imperial play dates displayed prominently.

Silver Cards Distributed For "Silver Wings" Showing

Oil City, Pa.—A successful bit of street exploitation was worked recently by the Lyric theatre in putting over "Silver Wings."

Several thousand cards in the shape of wings and printed on silver cardboard bearing the legend, "A Photoplay That Breathes Life—Interesting Life—at the Lyric Theatre," were printed.

These were distributed about the city by two women attired in emulation of Mary Carr, the mother in the picture.

Sewing machine tie-ups in retail stores were effected about town, and the women walked from one display to another distributing the cards on the streets.

Street ballyhoo used by the Clinton Square theatre, Albany, on "Notoriety." This was illuminated from the inside at night, bringing the color out brilliantly

Window tie-up arranged by the Olympia theatre, Pittsburgh, on "The Young Rajah," in which effective use is made of a large cut-out from the 24-sheet and of Beauty boxes with star portraits

Usherettes Display Kimonos As "East Is West" Is Shown

Butte, Mont.—Through a tie-up with a local store dealing in Oriental goods, Manager C. C. Pratt of the American theatre, during the run of "East Is West," was able to dress his usherettes in kimono costumes that not only made a distinct hit but also served as a style show for this kind of feminine apparel. For the ordinary pedestrian to whom a kimono is a strip of dress extending from shoulder to shank, the varying array was a revelation.

Legion Membership Drive Put Over on "Skin Deep"

Louisville, Ky.—Manager George A. Sine of the Mary Anderson theatre not only tied up with the American Legion on "Skin Deep," but turned the theatre over to the Jefferson Post and let them put on the show.

The Legionnaires were given control of the house one night for a rally and membership drive in conjunction with a showing of the picture.

The result was that after the film had been screened half a hundred new Post members were able to line up in front of the theatre with the older members to have their photograph taken.

Old Fashioned Photographs Exploit "Remembrance"

OMAHA, Neb.—The management of the Sun theatre, aided by Goldwynner Howard J. Phillips, used an old-fashioned photograph contest to good advantage in exploiting "Remembrance."

The contest called for the submission of old photographs of objects, persons or events in the history of Omaha. The Omaha Daily News tied up with the theatre. The best of the photographs submitted were printed in the News during the showing of the feature picture.

The prizes in the Oldtime Photo contest were in money, while 1,000 tickets to "Remembrance" were offered for the person who sent in the best short rhymed reminiscence of old times in Omaha. These were printed along with the photos in the other contest.

Greased Pig Chase Exploits "Human Hearts" Showing

PATERSON, N. J.—Widespread publicity was obtained for "Human Hearts" when that picture played at Fox's American theatre, through a greased pig race, staged just before a big interscholastic football game.

Jack Staub, Universal exploiteer, obtained permission to stage the pig chase a few minutes before the game, and while the stands were packed with Paterson football enthusiasts. A dozen or more boys participated in the chase, and their antics caused the stands to rock with laughter and shouts of encouragement.

In addition to the pig race, the grandstand and every post around the athletic field were sniped with "Human Hearts" cut out from the posters. Also, two sandwich men bearing big cut-out hearts, walked through the stands between the halves of the game, and 100 balloons were turned loose, each containing a pass to the picture.

Thirty-Year-Old Posters Are Used on "Old Homestead"

COLUMBUS, Ga.—Major I. C. Holloway, manager of the Rialto theatre, ran into a bit of luck when he started advertising "The Old Homestead."

A Columbus doctor came to the theatre with two of the original lithographs that were used to advertise "The Old Homestead" thirty years ago. Of course Mr. Halloway borrowed them and put them on display with a card telling all about it. And he made these lithographs the subjects of two special write-ups in the local papers.

Postcard Stunt Employed For "To Have and to Hold"

Columbus, Ga.—The campaign on "To Have and to Hold" was started by Manager I. C. Holloway of the Rialto theatre three weeks in advance with small teaser ads, which he followed with a postcard stunt.

Two cuts were made, postal card size, reading, "To Have and to Hold. It's Great . . . See It!" They were written out in long hand and one was signed by Mr. Holloway, the other being signed by a fictitious "Betty." The first was used in the newspapers; a number of postal cards were printed from the other and sent to Birmingham to be mailed.

Mile Long Parade at No Cost on "Lorna Doone"

Boston, Mass.—When "Lorna Doone" played at Gordon's Olympia theatre a street parade approximately a mile in length was obtained without cost through the national tie-up with the National Biscuit Company on Lorna Doone Sweetbread.

There were more than 200 delivery wagons in line when the morning shipments were dispatched from the company's factory. Each one of these wagons carried signs advertising the attraction at Gordon's Olympia. At an estimated length of ten yards for each wagon it gave the picture a street parade ballyhoo that covered a mile at the start and every part of the city before the finish.

The Liberty theatre, Yakima, Wash., of the Yakima Valley Theatres, Inc., chain, prepared this "Burning Sands" front, painted on asbestos to meet fire regulations

Special Morning Matinee Given on "Heroes of the Street"

New York, N. Y.—A special morning performance of "Heroes of the Street" at the New York Mark Strand theatre was attended by more than 2,000 children of members of the New York police department.

The youngsters at the Strand showing were particularly thrilled when Wesley Barry appeared in person to greet them.

A special permit was secured from the police, and a brass band composed of 100 boys marched from Columbus Circle to the Strand, headed by Barry, who was arrayed in the uniform of a juvenile policeman. Behind this procession came the Warner Brothers' float.

Special Lobby Effect Gotten For "Eternal Flame"

Maryville, Tenn.—Manager J. H. Everett of the Palace theatre prepared an attractive front and got a unique lighting effect in his lobby in connection with the showing of "The Eternal Flame."

He got Sunday showing by putting it in Saturday night before the opening Monday. The entire front of the lobby was closed with beaver board, only one opening being left for entrance and exit. This front was painted stone castle effect and an old-fashioned wrought iron lamp was hung over the door.

Unusual publicity was obtained in the local college by inviting the French class to attend in a body. This they did on the first afternoon, and then spread the news.

Manager Wadsworth of the Republic theatre, Great Falls, S. C., prepared this elaborate boat in his lobby for "A Sailor Made Man"

Chinese Coin Builds Interest in "East Is West"

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The management of the Grand and Liberty theatres used five thousand throwaways, illustrating a Chinese coin of antique origin, to exploit "East is West."

Feminine curiosity was the mark at which the exploiting managers aimed, for passes were offered to the first 25 women who could tell just what the illustration meant. The coin was known as "Cash," and the manager took a chance that the credit stores were sufficiently well patronized in Pittsburgh so that not many women would be familiar with the term.

Freckles Admit Children Free to "School Days" Showing

Seattle, Wash.—A special free matinee for every Seattle school child with one or more freckles was one of the ideas used to good advantage last week by JohnDanzattheColonial theatre for his showing of Wesley Barry in "School Days."

The stunt was put over with the assistance of the motion picture department of the Seattle Star. The Star awarded a free ticket to every child that presented himself at the newspaper office to exploit his crop of freckles. In addition to the free tickets, the contestant with the largest crop of rust-spots was awarded a year's pass to the playhouse.

Drinks Are Served in Lobby on "Ten Night in a Bar Room"

Atlanta, Ga.—For the run of "Ten Nights in a Barroom" Manager G. M. Phillips of the Strand tied up with a local bottler of Budwine and served drinks over a regular bar.

Signs such as "Vote for Joe Morgan, Sheriff," and others of similar variety were hung on the bar. In fact everything in the lobby was arranged to give an effect of a real, old-time barroom. The walls, painted on heavy props, showed signs of breaks, the painted mirror showed cracks, a number of old whiskey bottles were stacked around on the table back of the bar, etc.

Patrons leaving the theatre were informed by a large sign that "Drinks were on the house," so both the Strand and the local bottler profited, the bottler on the advertising and the Strand on the realism attained at a small cost which, of course, was advertising, too.

"Under Two Flags" Is Tied Up with Cigarette Campaign

Washington, D. C.—A tie-up with a national tobacco company for window displays on "Under Two Flags" was the means of obtaining a large number of windows during the run of the picture at the Rialto theatre, Washington, as well as for other runs throughout the territory. The tie-up was arranged by Miss Hattie K. Merrill, Universal's exploitation "man" in the Washington territory.

Due to the fact Priscilla Dean plays the role of "Cigarette" in "Under Two Flags," Miss Merrill sold the tobacco company the idea of using a three-sheet cut-out of Miss Dean to advertise a new brand of cigarettes. The stunt was used in Washington in about fifty tobacco and drug stores during the run.

Weather Insurance Policy Aids "Eternal Flame" Campaign

Lancaster, Pa.—Manager G. M. Krups, of the Hamilton theatre, got unusual publicity for "The Eternal Flame" by taking out an insurance policy to protect himself against rain or any other sort of Providence that might mitigate against a good attendance.

So at least ran the story, which, with a cut of the policy, was used under a three-column head in the Lancaster Examiner-News. The truth of the matter was that Manager Krups took out the policy as a publicity stunt.

"West vs. East"

Sanford Productions—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE cowboy star, Pete Morrison, has quite a departure from his usual material in "West vs. East," a picture which presents him as a cultured and polished westerner. The characterization is much better than the plot which, while it serves up considerable appeal in its lighter moments and carries a suitable background of exteriors and atmosphere, struggles through a story which reminds one at times of a serial.

Morrison is a rancher here who will forfeit his property unless he develops the mineral on his land within a specified time. Being ignorant of this condition, a wily lawyer is determined to get a share of the antcipated fortune. The latter has a woman accomplice who plans to intrigue the ranchman into marrying her daughter. But the hero is charmed by the governess instead.

The story builds a deal of complications which are easy to follow due to the familiar incident and action which accompany them. The governess loses her job with the result that the hero gives her a home with his sister. Coincidence figures when one of his sister's servants is discovered as an accomplice of the lawyer. The girl is kidnapped and held a prisoner because she has some claim to the property, but the rancher arrives in time to perform the timely rescue. And the property is saved.

The serial touch is exposed in the several conspiracies, the kidnapping and imprisonment of the heroine, the burning bridge which separates her from her rescuer—and the fight over the title to the property. It is exciting enough to please those who have not become surfeited with convenient melodrama. One thing it has in its favor—it presents a star who can be versatile in or out of the saddle.

This picture should go well in houses where Morrison has a following, since they will not mind the fact that some of the material is rather conventional and will enjoy seeing him demonstrate his versatility in a new sort of role and characterization.

The production, as a whole, is well made. Marcel Perez, who direced, has built up his suspense well in such scenes as the rescue of the heroine, the kidnapping and imprisonment scenes, and the like.

Directed by Marcel Perez.

The Story—Treats of young rancher who must develop mineral on his land by a specified time or forfeit his property. Has several difficulties before he accomplishes his effort, but manages to save his land in the end as well as winning the girl of his heart. Proves himself a true hero by rushing to her rescue.

Classification—Conventional melodrama based upon conflict over deed to property. A kidnaped heroine figures in giving substance to plot.

Production Headlights—Pete Morrison in a new type of role. The kidnapping and imprisonment of the heroine. The rescue scene. The suspense created in climax. The good production.

Exploitation Angles—Here is a title which can stand a teaser campaign. You can build a deal of interest around it in several ways. You might play up star as demonstrating his versatility in new type of role.

"Only a Shop Girl"

C. B. C.-State Right—6400 Feet

A CHARLES E. BLANEY stage success widely popular for many years; an all-star cast with such names as Wallace Beery, Mae Busch, Tully Marshall, James Morrison, Estelle Taylor, William Scott, Willard Louis, Claire Du Brey and Josephine Adair; and a rattling melodrama of realistic fire scenes, prison cells, love and intrigue all combine to make "Only a Shop Girl" a genuine, old-fashioned melodrama with practically every selling angle an exhibitor asks for. Certainly the list of names of the screen personalities is a complete answer to most every exhibitor's first question of: "Who is in it?" For the theatre that wants this type of picture—and there are many of them these days—this picture has every stamp of sure-fire box-office success. The action is rapid, the plot is logically unfolded with all necessary suspense and the box-office angle is taken advantage of in practically every situation. There are many opportunities here for telling exploitation. It is simply up to the exhibitor.

Adapted from Charles E. Blaney's play of the same name. Directed by Edward Le Saint. Produced by Harry Cohn.

The Story—Watkins, department store manager, goes about with Mame, a shopgirl. Her brother, Danny, is released from prison and rejoins his sweetheart, Josie, employed in the same store. Police attempt to "frame" Danny again, through Watkins' efforts. His wife learns of his affairs with Mame. Watkins selects Josie as his next victim, and when she returns to store at night, makes advances. Danny, Mrs. Watkins and Mame are hidden, watching. The light go out and Watkins is killed. Danny confesses to save Josie, but Mame is injured in a fire, and before dying admits her guilt, leaving Danny and Josie to their happiness.

Production Headlights—The work of the all-star cast. The fight in the dance hall. The murder of Watkins. The fire. The surprise ending.

Exploitation Angles—The title. The famous play on which it is based. The all-star cast.

Drawing Power—Properly exploited, it should go well almost anywhere.

"Three Who Paid"

Fox—4859 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is an "up and at 'em" western recording a deal of hectic acton of the old-fashioned variety. It's a made to order picture for the star who, while he has not had very good material of late, manages to come through this time with a fairly exciting picture. Dustin Farnum plays a he-man type of character and it is his job to polish off a few of his enemies—just as they were polished off in the early days of westerns. Oh, there is nothing new about the story. It's simply a tale of vengeance directed against the villains by the hero, interwoven with romance.

The hero's brother is deserted by his companions in the desert and left to die. This enrages the young man to such a degree that he forgets everything in his mission to avenge his brother's death. One of the three villains pays when confronted by the hero—pays via the suicide route, while another is shot by the hero in self defense. With two of the bad boys out of the way it is up to the author to grant the third one a different kind of payment. He is rescued by the hero from a fire in order that a confession will clear the latter from being charged as the murderer of the second man.

This violent action is not entirely wholesome so it is also up to the author to balance it with romance. And this part of the story is unconvincing. The heroine masquerades as a man while teaching school. But no one, not even the hero, suspects that she belongs to the feminine sex. This is astonishing because there are very few women capable of getting away with such a masquerade—and putting this over on the screen shows up the stupidity of the male characters. And surely Bessie Love is too dainty—too feminine to give anything resembling young manhood in her portrayal.

However, this romance will not destroy the interest in the hectic plot. The picture carries a first rate production and the atmosphere is appropriate. There are several long shots which are stimulating and the acting is competent enough. The picture will furnish a greater appeal to the boys than it will to the girls.

The Cast

By George Owen Baxter. Scenario by Joseph Franklin Poland. Directed by Colin Campbell. Photographed by Don Short. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Young man is determined to avenge his brother's death when latter is left to die in the desert. He starts out to make the three men pay. One of them kills himself, another is killed by the hero in self defense, while the third is punished in a fire from which he is rescued by the young man so that he will confess. Hero has romance with girl masquerading as a boy.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise playing up Dustin Farnum provided he has following in your town. Title might suggest a teaser campaign. Play up Bessie Love.

Drawing Power—Best suited for second class downtown houses and in factory districts.

"Dr. Jack"

Pathe—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HAROLD LLOYD has a message in "Dr. Jack," and he puts it over to the accompaniment of much common sense, a lot of horse sense, a plentiful supply of humor founded upon really comic stunts, and as neat a little romance as you will find upon the screen. He is a doctor who prescribes such real medicine as sunshine and air—he is a doctor who would order his patients to have a good time—to forget their ills and worries and keep their minds off themselves.

Well, any sufferer of most any trouble can witness "Dr. Jack" and be cured for an hour. He will at least forget his illness for a time. It is a deliberate attempt upon Lloyd's part to subordinate horse play for a demonstration of his serious side. Here is one creator who is not standing still. "A Sailor Made Man" proved it. So did "Grandma's Boy." And "Dr. Jack" presents not only a comic Mr. Lloyd but a serious Mr. Lloyd. He is ever in search of fresh treatment. If the ideas behind his stories are familiar yet the spectator will always respond to them because of the new tricks and stunts which are given a deal of thought and executed with precision.

An audience on Christmas Day at the New York Strand howled with delight over the merry pranks performed by the boy with the trick spectacles. He carried a little pill case but his medicine came from his mind. He is the screen Coue here—a doctor who cures a boy of the "tummyache" by telling his mother that the school has burned to the ground. The youngster nearly jumps out of bed. Does he get a spanking? Well, watch that scene; it is a nifty. An old man forgets his gout when the genial doctor hoves into sight, and when he meets the Sick-Little-Well Girl he promptly opens the windows and lifts the curtains in her home. She is at the mercy of a "kill or cure" physician who keeps her an invalid because her father is wealthy. This medic is in so strong that he dominates the house. So the smiling doctor impersonates an escaped lunatic and jumps around the rooms, frightening the occupants and creating much excitement. Here is zippy comedy which hits on high all the way. The grafting physician gives up the case, and the girl gives up her heart to the young dispenser of good cheer and sunshine. Some of the humor is real subtle while some of it is broad burlesque. But whatever it is, Harold Lloyd's "Dr. Jack" can be called one of the richest hits of the season. It is well produced, excellently titled and its message is sincere and genuine. The poker game will knock them dizzy and the lunatic scenes will convulse them. Get the picture as quick as you can—and smile as you take your shekels to the bank.

The Cast

Dr. Jackson, "Dr. Jack" for Short.....Harold Lloyd
The Sick-Little-Well-Girl.....Mildred Davis
Her Father.....John T. Prince
Dr. Ludwig von Saulsbourg.....Eric Mayne
The Lawyer.....C. Normand Hammond
His Mother.....Anna Townsend

Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Produced by Hal Roach.

The Story—Young doctor believes in giving out good cheer instead of medicine. He prescribes plenty of sunshine and tells his patients to forget their troubles. Has a romance with girl who is treated as an invalid by a doctor whose object is get rich at her father's expense. The hero comes to her home and frightens the entire household and the girl forgets her troubles. The grasping physician throws up the case.

Production Highlights—The new comedy tricks employed by star. The rich humor which accompanies nearly every scene. The poker game. The antics in the girl's home when the young doctor frightens them all.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise getting this quick and playing it up as one of Lloyd's best—a picture equal to "Grandma's Boy." Big enough to put over a special campaign and worthy of an elaborate prologue.

Drawing Power—Will go big everywhere. Harold Lloyd can pack any house.

"Back Home and Broke"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S a great fairy story that George Ade has written—a story which will be appreciated everywhere. And despite the BIG DREAM in it, there isn't a fellow who has left his own home town to make good in the outside world but what will stand up on his hind legs and give three cheers for George Ade and three more for Tom Meighan. After the first two reels which are rather dull, made so by introducing the characters and planting the incident, it picks up and releases a fine human note which gets right inside of you. There is its appeal.

And what is this idea? Simply the exploitation of the huge dream that every young fellow has who ever leaves home—to return to it rich and famous, to show the folks back home that he has put himself over. The humor is admirably commingled with the pathos and there is plenty of the latter element—while the fun is of a deft and subtle quality. The youth is accepted everywhere because his father is supposed to be one of the big "poobahs" of the town. But after he dies it is shown that he hasn't a cent to his name. The youth's false friends desert him; the whole town scorns him with the exception of a few—of course one of these is a GIRL.

So he goes west to develop one of his father's oil wells—a property exposed as valueless. He strikes a gusher and emerges immensely wealthy. Then he conceives the grand dream of coming back home, palming himself off as broke in order to test the real friends from the false. Those who continue to snub him incur his enmity. How does he strike? By having his college friend from another city act as emissary for him though the rich man carries a nom de plume. He will place banks, grocery stores, and parks in the town, buck his enemies through competition and reward his friends. A fine fancy, isn't it? We've all dreamed it. You identify yourself with the character. You don't stop to analyze the plot; you accept it as enjoyable. The climax is rich with surprise and humor when the youth discloses his real identity from the rear platform of a train because you are living the part played by Meighan. The story has been worked over carefully, which is noticeable in the excellent dovetailing of every scene. It is bright and must be called one of the most entertaining documents of the season.

"The Flaming Hour"

Universal—4508 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

FRANK MAYO has another interesting story even though its formula is a familiar one. We have all seen the honest employee who is in conflict with the crooks working to ruin the business.. Here the characterization is involved with a plot which is well developed—which carries a line of rousing action and considerable suspense. And the climax is truly spectacular as it shows the fireworks plant being destroyed. Hence the title.

Mayo gives a good account of himself in his role of production manager. The early scenes present him in constant battle with a group of unscrupulous employees. He has to fire a few of them. Yet the business is dropping off in sales and the ringleader is the sales manager who covers his tracks. The boss himself is an impulsive man who is ever quarreling with his staff. At a party he loses his head in a card game and fires the honest hero. Inasmuch as the daughter is in love with the production manager she leaves home and marries him. The next scene introduces the happy couple in a snug little bungalow, and the triangle figures when the crooked sales manager calls on the young wife during her husband's absence and times his exit just at the moment that the hero arrives home. He places a wrong conclusion on the incident with the result that the bride leaves him.

Completely discouraged the young man becomes a derelict but realizes his chance to redeem himself by getting at the bottom of the villainy which is threatening to wipe out the fireworks plant. So disguised by a beard and carrying himself like a cripple, he becomes the sweeper of the factory and discovers the plot which involves the substitution of material. The climax finds the owner and his daughter imprisoned in a vault by the crooks who are caught in their dirty work by the sweeper. The latter is a target for a bullet, but it penetrates one of the magazines. And so to the picturesque fire which destroys the plant. It is some conflagration.

There are no gaps in this story which contains a healthy punch and maintains the interest all the way. Helen Ferguson, Charles Clary, and Melbourne McDowell are others in a cast which renders good assistance to the star. An excellent program picture.

The Cast

Bruce Henderson.....Frank Mayo
Lucille Danby.....Helen Ferguson
John Danby.....Melbourne McDowell
Richard Mower.....Charles Clary
Jones.....Albert McQuarrie
Ben.....Tom Kennedy

By Lillian Chester. Scenario by George Randolph Chester. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Photographed by Bennie Kline. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Youthful executive in fireworks factory has argument with boss which results in his being fired. The boss' daughter elopes with him but leaves him later when he upbraids her for being seen with rival. There is deep-dyed villainy taking place in factory and after the hero pulls himself together he gets a job at the plant to clean up the crookedness. He exposes the crooks but the conflict between them destroys the factory. He becomes reconciled to his wife and her father is happy again.

Classification—Melodrama involving crooks employed in factory who are determined to ruin the business. Calls for much action and suspense.

Production Highlights—The realistic detail. The picturesque climax which shows fireworks going up in flames. The good work of Mayo.

Exploitation Angles—Would suggest playing this up as thrilling melodrama, calling attention to the fact that the action is real. Play up Mayo as a star who always gives his best and who is fortunate in being given good material.

Drawing Power—Every second class downtown house will like it. Good for any program house.

Buffalo Brevities

The Criterion has closed. This house was leased from Moe Mark, Walter Hays and Eugene Falk by Max Spiegel, who recently failed in New York. The Shubert attraction, "Success," suddenly closed in the middle of the week, many of the company finding themselves stranded. Harry Marsey, of Niagara Pictures Corporation, and Sol Myers, manager, had also been showing pictures on Sunday. The house will undoubtedly remain closed for some time unless the owners of the building decide to operate it themselves with pictures.

A suit of ejectment has been begun before Justice Hinkley by the Golde Clothes Company, which seeks to have the Loew State management restore to it the Main street lobby of the big new theatre, formerly occupied by the Golde firm, and which they claim to hold by lease until February 21, 1926. The appellate division last June reversed orders of the city and supreme courts ordering the Golde company to vacate. Attorney for the Golde company has moved judgment in favor of his client on the grounds that the answer does not make denial of the facts presented by the Golde company.

The Allendale, one of the houses owned by the General Theatres Corporation, has been leased by the Buffalo Players, Inc., for use as a "little theatre," where local amateur plays will be presented.

Representative Clarence MacGregor has written J. H. Michael, manager of the Regent theatre and chairman of the executive committee of the New York State Motion Picture Theatre Owners, Inc., that he has introduced a bill calling for the cancellation of the war tax on tickets up to 25 cents and calling on the exhibitors to get behind a movement to develop sentiment in favor of the bill. Unless this sentiment is developed Representative McGregor declares that there is no use pushing the measure.

Manager Fred M. Shafer of the Lafayette Square theatre has signed up Houdini, in person and in his picture, "The Man From Beyond" as his two attractions for the week of January 15.

Shea's Hippodrome will show all the biggest new Paramount pictures for the new year, according to an announcement by Vincent McFaul, manager of the Hippodrome. The "Hip" will also show "Dr. Jack" the week of January 7.

Manager Howard Smith of the Palace is adding vaudeville to his picture bill this week. It is a radical change in policy.

Most of Paramount's "39" will go to Shea's Hippodrome, Manager Allan S. Moritz having closed bookings on all the bigger productions for the new year. "When Knighthood Was in Flower" is included in the bookings.

Among the former Nu-Art employes who have been retained by the Bond Photoplays Corporation are: Art Young, booker; George W. Ferguson and J. L. Cook, salesmen, and C. Ross, bookkeeper. H. Webster, who has been booker for Grand and North for a long time, is about to go on the road for the new company. Sydney Samson announces the signing of "Notoriety," for showing at the Lafayette Square and "Shadows" at the Hippodrome. Fred M. Zimmerman is sending in a lot of contracts on the new company's big productions.

Bill Gentille, formerly with Select, is now covering the Southern Tier for the New Graphic Exchange. Manager Jack Berkowitz is now signing up contracts on the Mutual-Chaplin reissues.

Universal office employes welcomed Jim Savage, assistant manager, back on the job last week. Jim was confined to his home on account of illness. He is now fully recovered and as full of pep as ever. The recent resignation of Jim Fater and Charlie Faust has resulted in a rearrangement of other salesmen in the territory. Jess Kaufmann has been assigned to the Syracuse district, Bob Wagner to Utica, Charles Goodwin to Rochester, and "Izzy" Cobe to the Southern Tier.

Chester A. Saunders, local United Artists' manager, received a visit last week end from T. Y. Henry, assistant general sales manager, who was in town for a few days with Mrs. Henry. The couple made a quick jump to Omaha for the Christmas holidays.

Around Kansas City's Exchanges

D. M. MAJOR, former city salesman and assistant manager of the Kansas City Vitagraph office, has resigned and will join the Crescent Film Exchange Monday in Kansas City as representative. Mr. Major, who has been with Vitagraph for five years, is one of the best known film salesmen in Missouri.

Quite a number of changes have been made in the personnel of Kansas City exchanges. Robert Carnie, who has been selling Educational pictures, now is traveling in Kansas for First National, while M. J. Meyer, formerly with Richards and Flynn, has joined the Vitagraph forces. Joe Bloustine, who has been selling First National product, has been placed in charge of the contract department of the Kansas City office. James Foland, formerly Kansas City manager for Associated Exhibitors, has accepted a position as city salesman for the Kansas City Universal office.

Herbert Weil, sent out by the home office of F. B. O., made his debut as an exploitation man in Missouri last week. He is busy preparing for the picture, "Third Alarm."

Will Hays is scheduled as the principal speaker at the National Convention of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity in Kansas City, December 26 to December 30. Mr. Hays will address jointly the visiting fraternity men and the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce Wednesday noon at the Hotel Baltimore.

Kansas City Items

L. A. Wallace has purchased the Bancroft Theatre, Kansas City, from W. L. "Dusty" has been connected with the Gillham for nine years, formerly having been an "ace" on the pitching staff of the Kansas City American Association baseball club.

The Empress Theatre, Kansas City, which has housed a stock company for many months, has been leased by Richards & Flynn, state rights, for the presentation of "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" A symphony orchestra and an extensive advertising campaign have started the picture off on an indefinite run.

The playroom of the Royal Theatre, Kansas City, was decorated and arranged for the entertainment of children attending the show Christmas week. Each child was given toys and candy. The Pantages Theatre, a combination motion picture and vaudeville house, has announced that each boy and girl attending Christmas week was given a novelty prize and a box of candy, while a large walking and talking doll was given away to one of the children.

While no direct editorial attack has been made, Kansas exhibitors believe that much publicity regarding the enforcement of Sunday closing laws in Kansas City, Kansas, played up on the front page of the Kansas City (Mo.) Journal, is for the mere purpose of stirring up agitation in the matter. At least that is the belief of Kansas exhibitors.

Considerable space has been given to rumored reports that Charles B. Griffith, attorney-general-elect of Kansas, intends to enforce Kansas blue laws to the letter. The stories, played up under black face headlines as news stories, also delve into the history of Kansas blue laws and point to the fact that Kansas City, Kansas, theatre owners assert that closed houses on Sunday will mean $10,000 weekly to Kansas City, Mo., theatre owners. The facts in the case are these:

Kansas exhibitors never were on more harmonious terms with ministerial and educational organizations than at present; Kansas City, Kansas, recently acquired a daily newspaper of its own, which handles exclusively all theatrical advertising in Kansas City, Kansas. All of which may or may not account for the aroused interest of the Journal in Kansas blue laws.

Omaha Bulletin

The semi-annual district convention of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation held in Hotel Fontenelle on December 8 and 9, was a fine demonstration of salesmanship "pep." Representing the New York offices of the company were P. W. Branch, special sales representative; John D. Clark, general sales manager of territory west of the Mississippi, and Mel E. Shauer, manager of the accessory department. Phil H. Reisman, Minneapolis, and R. C. LiBeau, Kansas City, district managers, addressed the delegates.

The message put over by Messrs. Brinch and Clark referred to Paramount's forthcoming releases known as the "Super 39," to be released between February 1 and August 1, 1923.

The following branch office managers attended the convention: R. D. Thomson, Omaha; A. W. Nichols, Des Moines; R. L. McManus, St. Louis; Ben Blotcky, Kansas City; A. B. Leak, Sioux Falls; Fred Streif, Minneapolis. Exploitation men present: Oscar Kantner, St. Louis; John J. Friedl, Kansas City; John E. Kennebeck, Des Moines. A banquet was given on Friday night, December 8, at Hotel Fontenelle. On Saturday of the convention the Omaha Daily News issued a special edition in honor of the delegates.

Western Penn. Notes

C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres, has just been promoted to have supervision also over the same company's theatres in Reading. He is now directing the destinies of ten theatres—six in Harrisburg and four in Reading.

The appointment was made with the announcement of the Wilmer & Vincent company's intention to produce five plays in the coming year for the dramatic stage. This company now controls forty-six theatres, including thirty-one motion picture houses, six vaudeville houses and nine devoted to the legitimate stage. These are located chiefly in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, but include houses in Georgia and Virginia.

Three Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg—the Colonial, Victoria and Majestic—admitted all children, who presented toys in good condition, to the matinee performances on December 16. In this way several thousand toys were obtained that were turned over to the Harrisburg Toy Mission, which distributed them to the poor children of the city on Christmas.

William G. Swope and Miss Elinor K. Foose, both of Harrisburg, are the couple who were recently selected from among eight couples that applied, in answer to an advertisement, to be married in the Victoria theatre, that city, in connection with the exploitation of the film play, "Deserted at the Altar," which had a week's run there. They marched down the main aisle of the theatre and were married in front of an altar on the stage. The theatre management presented them with a purse and a number of other valuable gifts.

In Omaha's Branch Offices

AN end-of-the-year event in Omaha's motion picture business was the transfer of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., from temporary quarters in the Film Building, with the Fontenelle Film Company, to new and permanent quarters at 1511 Chicago Street. The new location is in the same block with the Film Building, and has all modern conveniences. Commodious office space is provided for E. L. Alperson, branch manager, and T. W. Dickson, cashier. Mr. Alperson is, by the way, the youngest branch manager in the service of First National.

Members of Mr. Alperson's organization are: Robert Gorham and Jake Laserowitz, bookers; Ray Coffin, exploitation representative; James Ambrose and "Nickie" Goldhammer, salesmen. Jimmie Winn, assistant branch manager, has been with the local First National staff for two years.

L. R. Pierce, one of the go-getters of Omaha's movie colony, who has been in the service of the local Universal organization as special representative for "Foolish Wives," and manager of short subjects department, has been appointed manager of Jewels. He has just made a trip through South Dakota and Northern Iowa.

Max C. Brodsky is working in Southern Iowa territory for the Fox Film Corporation, and C. W. Potter, formerly with Universal, is making has presence felt in Central Iowa for the Omaha Fox branch.

During the showing of "Omar the Tentmaker" Manager Harry Watts, of the Strand Theatre, negotiated a tie-up with the local navy recruiting station for the display of one-sheets, showing a beautiful Persian garden scene. The suggestion was that the Persia of Omar is the Persia of to-day, and is one of the many interesting countries visited by those who enlist.

Louis Pruch is head of the layout department of the Horne Exploitation Service, and E. M. Gibson, formerly of Denver, has joined the sales staff of Mr. Horne's organization.

Bob Greenblat, formerly sales manager for the local Select branch, is now head of the Universal Short Subject Department.

Samuel Vorzimer, branch manager for United Artists, gave the members of the Advertising-Selling League of Omaha a pre-release showing of "One Exciting Night" at the Brandeis Theatre here last Monday night.

With the Seattle Exchanges

CONTRACTS for the exhibition of "Suzanna" were recently signed by John Hamrick, president of the Blue Mouse Circuit, and Charles W. Hardin, manager of the local United Artists' Exchange, who is handling the picture in the Northwest territory. The picture was booked by Mr. Hamrick for showings in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, at a date not yet definitely decided upon.

Louis Rosenberg, sales manager for the De Luxe Feature Film Company, Inc., returned to the city from a short trip into eastern Washington and Montana, and left three days later for Portland and other Oregon cities. While in Butte, Mr. Rosenberg closed contracts with the Silver Bow Amusement Company for first-run rights on "Shadows," "The World's a Stage," and "Thorns and Orange Blossoms." The pictures will be shown in the Montana city at the Rialto and American theatres. While in Oregon, Mr. Rosenberg was going to help in the publicity and exploitation of "Shadows," which was scheduled to open at Jensen-Von Herberg's Rivoli Theatre on December 30.

L. K. Brin, president of the L. K. Brin exchanges, left the local exchange recently for Denver, where he will assist for a few days in the showing of the new Warner Brothers' pictures to Colorado exhibitors. Dates for the personal appearances of Wesley Barry, who will be in the local territory for five weeks in February and March, will probably be arranged by Mr. Brain with Denver and Colorado exhibitors, in conjunction with the booking of "Rags to Riches" and "Little Heroes of the Street."

George P. Endert and his staff of Paramount Exchange men recently returned from California, where they attended the convention of Western exchange representatives.

Robert Bender, publicity and exploitation manager for the Seattle and Portland Universal exchanges, has been working especially hard the past week arranging for the world premier of "The Flirt," which was scheduled for Manager R. W. Case's Columbia Theatre Christmas week. Local exchange men, newspaper men and several prominent city officials were guests of the Universal Exchange, and Manager Case last week at a special preview given at the Columbia Theatre.

"Omar the Tentmaker" was given a special preview by the Seattle First National Exchange at 11 P. M. one evening last week at the Strand Theatre. The picture will be shown at Manager H. B. Wright's house, according to present reports, although the exact playing dates have not yet been announced.

Several of the latest Educational "Graphics" have been booked by the Jensen-Von Herberg Circuit, and have been shown at the Liberty and Strand theatres here.

Selznick's latest production, "One Week of Love," First National's Buster Keaton comedy, "The Frozen North," and Goldwyn's baby star, Betty Ann Hisle, in person, constitute the triple headline bill offered by Manager H. B. Wright, at the Strand Theatre Christmas week. This program is sufficient evidence that every exchange gets a chance to get before the public at the Jensen-Von Herberg house.

Seattle Slants

"Tess of the Storm Country" played a three weeks' engagement at the Blue Mouse theatre here recently and broke all house attendance records during the first week of its showing. A total of 126 shows were given during the three weeks' run, at a straight admission price of 50 cents at all times. Loges were 75 cents and children 20 cents. "Tess" was the first picture to play three weeks at the Blue Mouse since the "Connecticut Yankee" engagement in January, 1922. Previous house attendance records set by "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" were entirely smashed.

B. Fox, publicity and exploitation manager for John Danz's circuit of Seattle houses, recently evolved the slogan "Painless Prices" as a selling point for the Colonial theatre advertising, and has been using it in all newspapers and window card ads. The Colonial recently reduced its admission price to 10 cents at any time, and the "Painless Prices" line in every ad is a reminder of the lower admission fee.

George Ol'sene has just been engaged by Manager Leroy V. Johnson as organist at the Liberty theatre, after several seasons at the keyboard of organs in several California cities. Mr. Ol'sene alternates with Ernest P. Russell, also a new member of the Liberty musical staff.

The first snow of the season fell in this city the week of December 3 and in conjunction with a decided drop in the temperature, resulted in a slight decrease in business among the motion picture houses. After several disagreeable days, however, the extreme bad weather abated and theatre attendance returned practically to normal.

Mrs. I. A. Winkler, one of the two women exhibitors in this city, who owns and operates the Yesler theatre, one of the neighborhood houses, recently announced her consolidation with W. T. McLaren, owner and manager of the Home theatre, another theatre in one of the residential districts. Mrs. Winkler recently broke all her attendance records at the Yesler during a three-day engagement of "School Days."

"Shadows," the second of the Al Lichtman productions to be shown in Seattle, was booked for the Coliseum theatre for the week of January 20 by Manager Frank Steffy. Goldwyn's production of "The Christian" is another feature announced by Mr. Steffy for early showing at the Coliseum.

John Hamrick, president of the Blue Mouse circuit, has left the city for Astoria again, where he will get work started on the new Blue Mouse theatre, to replace the house burned to the ground in the recent $20,000,000 fire that destroyed the business district of the city. In the meantime, Mr. Hamrick has leased the second floor of the Lovell Garage, the only building left standing after the blaze, and has constructed a temporary theatre

House, Effingham, Ill., were seen at First National.

Joe Hewitt of the Opera House, Robinson, Ill., was host to Barney Rosenthal, resident manager for Universal in St. Louis, a few days ago. About eighteen years ago, when the General Film Corporation was operating, they worked together in the Chicago exchange. Later they drifted apart, Hewitt eventually becoming an exhibitor. They hadn't met for ten years until Barney visited Robinson to call on his old pal and witness the showing of "The Storm" in his theatre.

An official War Department picture, showing the American Expeditionary Forces in action, was booked for showing at the Pershing Theatre December 20, 21 and 23 for the benefit of needy veterans. Fred W. Stockton Post, American Legion, were sponsors for the show.

The Opera House, Newton, Ill., has been reopened to play road shows. J. Shepp, a local banker, has leased the house.

Visitors from out-of-town points were: Elmer Brient, Illinois and Grand Theatre. Centralia, Ill.; James Lowry, Highland, Ill.; John Pratt, Fulton, Mo.; James Luttrell, Majestic, Jacksonville, Ill.; A. C. Norwein, Bonne Terre Amusement Company, Bon Terre, Mo., and John Reese, Wellsville, Mo. Reese is a member of the Missouri legislature and came in to fix his programs in advance so he will not have to worry about these details in the state capital.

Elmer Brient, who recently took charge of the Illinois and Grand theatres, Centralia, Ill., controlled by the Hall Amusement Company, was in town during the week arranging his winter programs. Brient formerly was manager for Associated Exhibitors and prior to that Robertson-Cole in St. Louis.

F. L. Cornwell, owner of the Del Monte theatre, is said to be threatened with a nervous breakdown because of overwork. His physician has advised a rest. He has certainly been making things hum at the big Delmar boulevard house since taking it over.

Mr. Exhibitor: Don't take it for granted that every chap with an inspector's badge is an inspector. Not always.

Several days ago a party asked the Frank Adams Stamp and Seal Company in St. Louis to make him two badges. Badge No. 1 was to read: "Inspector of Buildings, City of St. Louis" and No. 2; "Asst. U. R. Co. No. 122, Foreman." When he called for his badges the police were there to greet him. He told the Central District captain that the badges were intended to obtain free movie shows and free rides on street cars.

Mrs. Sidney Drew in "Predestination" is appearing at the Orpheum theatre this week.

Fred G. Sliter, of the home office organization of Associated First National, called on Manager Harry Weiss last week.

Dale Henshaw, Second National Pictures, was another caller of last week. He consulted the managers of several independent exchanges.

Washington Snapshots

When Sidney Cohen of the M. P. T. O. A. was in Washington recently, in addition to calling and lodging complaints against the "Music Trust" with Attorney-General Daugherty and the Federal Trade Commission, he visited Capitol Hill and saw Chairman Florian Lampert of the House Patent and Copyright Committee, who assured him that a hearing on the music royalty clause of the patent law and proposed amendments would be granted in January if that were convenient. Representative Lampert is understood to feel that the present custom of "Tin Pan Alley" is unjust in the matter of assessments against theatre owners.

The Citizens Association of Georgetown, the oldest section of Washington, last week passed a resolution authorizing the appointment of a committee to induce "some motion picture theatre interest to establish a 'movie palace' in Georgetown."

Dr. Oscar A. M. McKimmie, father of Wyatt C. McKimmie, who lost his life in the Knickerbocker accident, on January 28 last, asked the Probate Court for letters of administration on his son's estate this week. This means another suit for damages against the Knickerbocker corporation.

Edwin S. Hege, new president of the Kalorama Citizens Association, when installed this week, brought up the matter of inadequate congressional appropriations and insufficient personnel for the building inspector's office of the District (city) government. President Harding is to be told personally of the stand of the association and the need as shown in the Knickerbocker disaster.

Local theatres had a very festive appearance Saturday afternoon and evening as the evergreens and other shrubs greeted the patrons. The pre-holiday week is always considered the dullest slack week in the year, and yet no very perceptible falling off was noticeable in the evenings. No doubt the last minute gift buyers decided to rest at the movies, as is their wont on other Saturday evenings. The Columbia announces the second week of the Laurette Taylor "Peg o' My Heart" following, commencing Sunday, December 24. Loew's Palace has a splendid blending of wreaths, small evergreen trees and hedge shrubbery. The Rialto has wreaths, boxed hedges and streamers, all giving a hospitable, cozy and homey effect to the patron. Comedy held the boards at the Rialto the past week in "Brothers Under the Skin," while the more serious picture, "My Friend the Devil," was the Fox picture at the Metropolitan. Starting Sunday the pendulum swings "The Hottentot" and a subsidiary comedy to the Metropolitan, while a semi-serio-tragic piece, "Heroes of the Street," with Wesley Barry, Freckles, is the Rialto holiday bill.

Crandall neighborhood theatre Christmas parties were made interesting to the children patrons by the distribution of two tons of candy, 8,000 horns and 3,000 ticktacks for the boys, with other toys for the feminine contingent.

A feature of the Saturday evening performance at the Rialto, Tom Moore's theatre, was the presentation to Director Wild of a beautiful gold chimes clock that strikes every quarter hour. This clock, the gift of the famous Rialto Symphony orchestra, visibly affected the popular George.

At the December board meeting of the Crandall corporation A. E. Beitzel presented his resignation as vice-president, which position he has held continuously since the incorporation, and was elected secretary-treasurer. Captain C. C. Calhoun was made vice-president. Since the resignation of Colonel Barry Bulkeley there had been a vacancy in the secretaryship. Directors at the meeting were Harry M. Crandall, William Henry White, Howe Totten, Augustus Gumpert, Captain C. C. Calhoun, A. E. Beitzel, Joseph P. Morgan, Fritz D. Hoffman and Nelson Bell.

Florida Flashes

J. E. Sparks, of Jacksonville, head of the Lynch Enterprises in Florida, was a visitor in Tampa last week. Mr. Sparks was accompanied by Jesse Clark, who is manager of their Palace Theatre in Jacksonville.

Ground was broken last week for the new theatre which is to be built by the Milane Amusement Co. in Sanford. The occasion was observed with fitting ceremonies. The 154th Infantry Florida National Guard Band entertained with several numbers, and speeches were made by several of the prominent men of the city.

C. D. Cooley, manager of the Strand Theatre, of Tampa, made all arrangements to give the poor children of the city a real treat on Christmas morning. He booked some special children films, arranged for a big tree and was going to give every child who attended a present. He found that the Salvation Army and the Children's Home were both preparing for about the same stunt, with the exception of the pictures, so he decided to call off his show and to make a good contribution to their funds. In addition to the personal contribution, he had announcements made in his theatres and collections taken up amongst the audiences, which was the means of turning in a very tidy sum to the Empty Stocking Fund.

Paul Gilmore has completed a tour of the state in the interest of an advertising film he is going to make. The title of the picture, he announces, will be "The Salesman." It will be an industrial picture, with scenes of the industries and beauty spots of the different cities who contribute to the making of the film.

Detroit Close-Ups

The individual members of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan are whole-heartedly backing their organization in its fight of what is claimed are unfair selling methods by producers

A list of the resolutions was published in the News of December 16, 1922.

To date one hundred and eleven exhibitors are reported to have put themselves on record, pledging that no United Artists Pictures will be shown in their houses until such alleged practices are discontinued by this particular distributing company. The trouble started with the sale of Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" to the Shadukiam Grotto, a fraternal organization. This organization is now showing "Down to the Sea in Ships" after the conclusion of the six weeks' run of "Robin Hood."

The Kunsky Corporation, which controls three out of five of Detroit's first-run houses, has nothing to say on the subject. This corporation is not a member of the M. P. T. O. and, at present, has no United Artists bookings.

Eastern New York Briefs

The Barcli, in Schenectady, has cut its admission prices and is now charging 15, 22 and 25 cents instead of 20 and 30 cents, as before. The move was brought about as an effort on the part of J. J. Walker, owner of the house, to offset the drawing power of the new State, a Strand house, which outshines all other theatres in Schnectady, both in size and magnificence. The Barcli has already dispensed with its orchestra of five pieces, and from now on, an organ will provide the music. A policy of split weeks, two features to the week, instead of a double feature running throughout the week, will also prevail from now on.

The State, in Schnectady, has issued booklets of ten admission tickets at a price slightly below the regular cost. Many of these were given as gifts on Christmas Day.

Paul Alberts, of the Albany, in Schnectady, paid a visit to New York last week.

The new State theatre, in Schenectady, announces split weeks, no prologues and no printed programs.

F. S. Hopkins, sales manager in the Universal exchange at Albany, spent the holidays in Buffalo.

Elmer Crowninshield opened up a new house in Watervliet the past week. The theatre will be known as the Hudson. "Turn to the Right" was the opening feature.

According to all reports, there is a change slated for the Palace, in Troy, in the very near future. The house is owned by Battaglia brothers, and was opened just a year ago. It has a seating capacity of 900 persons and cost about $130,000.

Junior movies are again to prevail in Albany under the auspices of the Mothers' Club.

C. R. Halligan, manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, had the handsomest exchange in the city during Holiday Week. In one of the windows there was a Christmas tree surrounded by photographs of Universal stars.

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

Lillian Hackett to Play Opposite Conley

LILLIAN HACKETT, well known comedienne, has been signed by Jack White to play opposite Lige Conley in forthcoming Educational - Mermaid Comedies. Miss Hackett has appeared in several of the Lyons and Moran Comedies and with the Hallroom Boys and also with the Fox Sunshine Company. Her first appearance as Lige Conley's screen sweetheart will be in "Hold Tight," now nearing completion.

Boy Star Is Ready for Next Picture

Buddy Messenger, Century Comedy's new boy star, is getting ready for his next picture after finishing "Boyhood Days," which was directed by Harry Edwards.

It is understood that Edwards, who is in San Francisco on business, will direct the boy star again in a comedy of the slums. Until his director returns, Buddy is appearing in "The Abysmal Brute," a Jack London story, for Universal.

Edith Grant will play the role of the big sister of the mischievous youngster to be depicted by Messenger. Miss Grant is a newcomer to Century.

Fox News Foreign Expansion Policy

In addition to its present foreign editions, Fox News has just added Cuba to the list. The following foreign editions now appear in Fox News: Japan, Middle East, Canada, Cuba, Australia, South America. Plans also are under way to extend this list even further.

Following its policy of having its foreign representatives become thoroughly familiar with the American idea of pictures and calling foreign representatives to home office at frequent intervals, John T. Parkerson, manager of Fox News' Paris office, accompanied by staff cameraman, L. Maes, has been studying conditions at the home office for the past two months.

One of Parkerson's most able cameramen, Frederici Gino, of Rome, Italy, was able to put over one of the biggest beats of the year in securing the only pictures ever taken of his Holiness Pope Pius XI saying mass inside the Vatican.

The Truth About Gorham

Two Reelers Lead Pathe's List

"Dig Up" and "Under Suspicion" Head Releases for January 7

TWO standard two-reel features are prominent in Pathe's list of nine releases announced for January 7. They are the comedy, "Dig Up," starring Snub Pollard, with Marie Mosquini, and "Under Suspicion," of the Range Rider Series, presenting Leo Maloney with a strong cast. The list includes Pathe News Nos. 4 and 5, and "Topics of the Day" No. 1.

In the Pollard two-reeler the title, "Dig Up," refers to collecting the rent in a tough neighborhood, where "Butch" McKill maims or murders collectors on sight. The newspapers are full of it, and "Butch's" sitting-room walls are decorated with accounts of his bloody deeds. The hero—"an average young man"—who is in love with the landlord's daughter, volunteers as a collector. "Butch" gloats over what he will do to the new collector, and a lot of it happens.

Leo Maloney, in "Under Suspicion," is a Texas Ranger disguised as a ranch hand seeking to solve the mystery of "dope" smuggling activity. Just as the hero discovers the contraband cached under the floor of the bunk house, and realizes that even the rancher's accused of being the smuggler, one smugglers make haste to carry their stuff to safer quarters. In the thick of the ensuing fight the hero—being without his badge—is accused of being the smuggler, one of the gang posing as a Ranger. There is a getaway, a running fight, the arrival of the Ranger chief and his men—and final triumph for the hero and his love affair.

The Paul Parrott one-reel comedy of this program is called "Watch Your Wife." As the hero does his sleuthing at night time equipped with much apparatus, including camera and flash-light powder, the astonishment he produces in a set of respectable tenants is only equaled by the comic disasters he brings upon himself.

In the Aesop's Film Fable, called "The Frog and the Catfish," a spirited animated cartoon plot is enacted beneath the waves, in which the frog becomes a great hero.

Pathe Review No. 1 presents another effective "living painting" called "The Sea Rovers." Hy Mayer Capitol Travelaughs show apparent miracles of humor performed with "Faces."

Universal Completes New Serial

"The Social Buccaneer" with Jack Mulhall as Star is January Release

ANOTHER of those fact-thrill combinations in the chapter play line for which Robert F. Hill is noted as a director has been finished at Universal City.

Jack Mulhall is the star of "The Social Buccaneer," a romantic serial based on the novel of the same name by Frederic Isham, laid chiefly in New York and an imaginary kingdom in central Europe. The original novel has been very popular and the screen adaptation, broadening and lengthening the plot to the proportions of a twenty-reel story, promises to be one of the most successful continued features of the day. Hill previously directed such moneymakers as "Tarzan," "Robinson Crusoe" and "The Radio King."

The serial scenario department at Universal City, under Robert Dillon, famous for its historical chapter plays and educational subjects, prepared the screen story. Anthony Goldeway and Frank Howard Clark wrote the continuity.

Margaret Livingston appears opposite Mulhall, while Robert Anderson, well remembered for his work in "The Heart of Humanity" and other big productions, has the role of the hero's chum. Sidney Bracy, Fontaine LaRue, Percy Pembroke, Tote DuCrow, Wade Boteler, Lucille Ricksen and other players of feature class handle supporting roles.

"The Social Buccaneer" is said by Universal officials to be one of the big best class chapter plays ever made. It is said to be well in keeping with the society atmosphere of Isham's story, which deals with the struggles of a young New York clubman to aid the Princess of a little European kingdom threatened by financial ruin and usurpers' plots.

It will be released late in January.

"Hurry Up" on Program of N. Y. Rivoli

"Hurry Up," an Educational Cameo Comedy with Jimmie Adams and Virginia Vance, is on the program at the Rivoli theatre, New York, for Christmas week.

Baby Peggy Queen at Xmas Benefit

BABY PEGGY was queen of a gorgeous Christmas benefit given by two of the largest amalgamated clube in California, namely the Council and the Community clubs which was held December 15th at the Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles. Fred Niblo and his wife, Enid Bennett, opened the show as king and queen, and after the opening the honors went to Baby Peggy and Jackie Coogan as king as king and queen.

Another appearance of Baby Peggy was at the Children's Hospital on December 12th where the little Century starlet gladdened the hearts of many kiddies. In addition she took prominent part in the Los Angeles Examiner Chrismas Fund benefit and the Business Women's benefit. Several other dates are pending for Peggy.

New Effects in Bray Comedies—Hodkinson

It is said that some highly ingenious effects never before seen on the screen are introduced in the new Bray Comedies, released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. All the Bray Comedies are played by a combination of living actors and drawings. In addition to the four living characters, or five, if you count Trilby, the studio cat, which has an important part, there are no fewer than three thousand animations of the creatures of the art department in a single reel. The new apparatus by which the effects are produced is a carefully guarded secret of Bray Productions. Its possibilities in wierd and startling effects are said to be limitless.

Bruce Editing Scenic Shots of Northwest

Robert C. Bruce, creator of Wilderness Tales for Educational, is busy cutting and editing the thousands of feet of film taken during his recent sojourn in the wilderness country of the Pacific Northwest and along the less inhabited portions of the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Bruce covered over nine thousand miles in securing the material for this series of subjects. The series will comprise sea and shore views and scenic dramas taken in the heart of the Oregon and Washington mountains and lake country.

Al St. John Comedy Given New Title

"YOUNG AND DUMB" has been selected to replace "The Bridegroom" as the title of the forthcoming Al St. John special two-reel fun-maker, according to announcement by Fox Film Corporation. The comedy promises to be one of the best bits of humor the versatile comedian has ever injected into his long series of successes.

San Francisco Theatres Feature Educationals

Managers of San Francisco's leading theatres were quick to grasp the exploitation possibilities of National Educational Week and featured the educational portions of their programs.

The San Francisco branch of Educational Film Exchanges cooperated with the theatres in arranging suitable programs for the week, with the result that a number of theatres, including six of the most representative first-run houses in the city, established a National Education Week link-up.

The California theatre, the Tivoli, Strand, Granada, Imperial and Warfield, all downtown houses, booked Educational short subjects for this week, the California and Granada featuring the comedy and educational subjects on their twenty-four sheets and in their marquee

Vitagraph Releases a Novelty Short

"Dwellers of the Deep," the Urban Popular Classic released by Vitagraph, shows the rare specimens that inhabit the Aquarium, once Castle Garden, at the Battery in New York City. The short feature shows the strange life of the deep, from the sea lions to the globe fish.

For the first time in the history of the New York Zoological Society a baby sea lion has been successfully photographed in motion pictures. This baby lived only 24 hours and because sea lions must learn to swim and this one never had a chance he was named "Volstead the Dry." Children will find this Urban of particular joy, for it will bring to thousands to whom the sea is unknown a glimpse of the strange world.

Asia's "Hermit Kingdom" in Pathe News

EVENTS in Korea, Asia's "Hermit Kingdom," are reported on the motion picture screen for the first time in Pathe News No. 102, now current. Heretofore cameramen have not been welcomed in that country, but the knowledge that the Koreans were making significant advances in mental and physical education along modern civilized lines tempted a Pathe News man to make a fresh attempt, by way of Japan, and it succeeded.

All-Comedy Approved in Ohio House

Frank Murphy, manager of the Murphy Theatre, Wilmington, Ohio, recently staged a novel all-comedy bill, consisting of four excellent comedies. The subjects chosen for the program of the three-day run were "The Electric House," with Buster Keaton; "The Steeplechaser," a Mermaid Comedy, with Lige Conley and Jimmie Adams; "The Agent," with Larry Semon, and Lloyd Hamilton in "The Speeder," the first of his new Educational-Hamilton Comedies.

Mr. Murphy was delighted with the success of his novel bill and was the recipient of many congratulations from the patrons of his beautiful theatre for giving them the opportunity of seeing such fine comedies.

Canada Booking Short Subject Programs

Eager to duplicate the success of the Cum-Bac Theatre, of Toronto, which broke house records during a three-day run of an All Educational Short Subject program, other theatres in Canada are rapidly booking Short Subject programs, according to word from the Educational office.

The Regent Theatre, Bridgeburg, is installing the All-Short Subject Program as a weekly feature, and has booked fifteen such programs from the Toronto Educational Exchange.

Special Short Subject programs have also been booked to the Wonderland Theatre, Acton, and the Rex Theatre, Georgetown.

Big New York Circuits Book Lichtman Output

THE next group of seven pictures to be made by Preferred and released through the Al Lichtman Corporation has been booked by the Keith, Moss and Proctor circuits in Greater New York. The contract becomes effective with "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," the third releases and includes the following: "The Hero," "Are You a Failure?" "Poor Men's Wives," "The Girl Who Come Back," April Showers" and "Mothers-in-Law."

The contract was closed with B. S. Moss by Al Lichtman and Sam Zierler, who handles the distribution of the Al Lichtman product in New York. "Rich Men's Wives," the first release, and "Shadows," the second, have both been booked by the Metropolitan Loew circuit. "Shadows" starts its run at the State in New York and the Metropolitan in Brooklyn jointly on New Year's Day and then plays over the circuit generally on the following week.

"Only a Shopgirl" Goes Big Pre-Xmas Week

The Lande Film Distributing Company booked the C. B. C. release, "Only A Shopgirl," with the Allen theatre, Akron, Ohio, for the week starting December 17, the pre-Christmas week and considered the most unfavorable week of the year in point of attendance at the motion picture houses. The C. B. C. home office in New York quotes the following wire from the Allen on the business done:

"'Only A Shopgirl' opened up today to big business. Turned them away in spite of big snowstorm. Wonderful business.

Six for First National Release

"The Dangerous Age" Starts Schedule on Way for the New Year

FIRST NATIONAL will have six releases for January. John Stahl's "The Dangerous Age" will start the new year, having had extra exploitation throughout the country to give it a fine send off for exhibitors. Its pre-lease in Paterson, N. J., showed big entertainment value it is claimed. The Louis Mayer company, for which Stahl produced this picture, backing "The Dangerous Age" to the limit following the splendid reports of the critics.

Tom Ince will offer Douglas MacLean in "Bell Boy 13," a story of fast automobiles, fire engines, bell boys, an actress and a fortune. William Seiter directed. In the cast with MacLean are Margaret Loomis, John Steppling, Jean Walsh and Eugene Burr.

"Fury" will be Inspiration Pictures contribution to the January release list. Richard Barthelmess stars in this story of the sea and old Limehouse, London. Dorothy Gish plays opposite Barthelmess. Others in the cast are Tyrone Powers, Pat Hartigan, Barry Macollum, Harry Blakemore, Adolph Milar, Ivan Linow, Emily Fitzroy, Jesse May Arnold, Lucia Backus Segar, and Patterson Dial. The story is by Edmund Goulding. Henry King directed.

The next is B. B. Schulberg's picture with Katherine MacDonald in "Money, Money, Money," adapted by Hope Loring from Larry Evans' story. Tom Forman directed. In the cast are Charles Clary, Carr Stockdale, Frances Raymond, Paul Willis, Herschel Mayall, Brenda Fowler, Margaret Loomis, and Jack Dougherty.

Joseph Schenck has in this list Norma Talmadge in "The Voice from the Minaret," adapted by Frances Marion from the novel by Robert Hichens. Frank Lloyd directed. Marie Lohr starred in the stage version of this book in London and New York. Eugene O'Brien is Miss Talmadge's leading man. Others in the cast are Edwin Stevens, Winter Hall, Carl Gerard, Claire Du Brey, Lillian Lawrence and Albert Presco.

Buster Keaton contributes "The Balloonatic." Eddie Cline directed and Cline and Keaton between them wrote the scenario and have put into the picture some dizzy stunts. Mack Sennett has a share in this aerial comedy for he loaned Phyllis Haver for the production.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" Praised

Reviewers of New York Trade Papers Commend Metro-SL Special Production

THE reviewers whose function it is to inform the motion picture exhibitors of the quality of new productions have unanimously declared "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the Metro-SL Special production, not only a sure-fire box-office weapon, but one of unusually big calibre.

"Here is the comment of "Reeland Reviews":

"Here is a picture that is sure to please any type of audience; a splendid love story, comedy that fits in as if it belonged, thrills and some great acting, all of it kept human by the right kind of direction. You cannot go wrong on this one."

The Moving Picture World observed:

"Based on a widely read novel of rural life which in certain parts of the country, particularly New England, is considered a classic, interpreted by an unusual cast consisting entirely of players whose names have box-office value, telling a story which combines quaint rural character studies, comedy, heart interest and melodramatic thrills, and possessed of numerous exploitation angles, the Metro production, 'Quincy Adams Sawyer,' should prove an unusually big box-office attraction."

The Exhibitor's Herald critic said:

"'Quincy Adams Sawyer' excels in technique, settings, direction, photography and thrills over anything yet turned out from the Metro studios. Of the cast and the portrayals of the roles by the great galaxy of stars there can be but one verdict: Nothing better has ever been brought into one picture."

Laurence Reid, in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, remarked:

"The picture will surely find a place in the category of better things."

The Exhibitor's Trade Review said:

"There is also sufficient humor to please, and as a whole the picture holds every needed requirement that goes to make a thoroughly good box-office attraction."

The cast of this Metro-SL Special production includes John Bowers, Blanche Sweet, Lon Chaney, Barbara La Marr, Elmo Lincoln, Louise Fazenda, Joseph Dowling, Claire McDowell, Edward Connelly, June Elvidge, Victor Potel, Gale Henry, Hank Mann, Kate Lester, Billy Franey, Taylor Graves and Harry Depp.

First of F.B.O.-Witwer Series Due Soon

EARLY announcement will be made by J. I. Schnitzer, vice president of Film Booking Offices of American, of the release date of the first of the "Fighting Blood" productions which are now in production at the R.-C. studios in California. Five of these two-reelers have already been completed and rapid progress is being made on the sixth. There will be twelve in the entire series, each picture being adapted from a story by H. C. Witwer which appeared originally in Collier's Weekly.

George O'Hara, who has appeared in several Sennett special productions, will be seen in the leading role in the entire "Fighting Blood" series. The leading lady is Clara Horton. The supporting cast includes Arthur Ranking, M. E. Ryan, William Courtright, Albert Cooke, Kit Guard and Mabel Van Buren. Mal St. Clair, who formerly directed the Carter De Haven comedies, will direct the entire series of "Fighting Blood."

Jack Pickford Back in "Garrison's Finish"

Critics everywhere proclaim "Garrison's Finish" one of the best all-around motion pictures of several seasons, according to United Artists, and all seem to agree that the lively and romantic Jack Pickford shines his brightest in the role afforded him, that of a jockey around whom rotates a most exciting story. It is a race horse story, and the big racing scenes were actually taken at the Kentucky Derby in Louisville.

Metro Will Distribute Barker Productions

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION announces that in addition to distributing the Fred Niblo productions presented by Louis B. Mayer, it will serve as the releasing agency for Reginald Barker's production, another important unit of the Mayer forces.

The first Fred Niblo production is the James Forbes stage success, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," with a cast including Myrtle Stedman, Huntley Gordon, Marguerite de la Motte, Cullen Landis, Carmel Myers, Ward Crane and Helen Ferguson.

The first Reginald Barker offering under these auspices is "Hearts Aflame," a dramatic story based upon the Harold Titus novel, "Timber." The cast includes Frank Keenan, Anna Q. Nilsson, Craig Ward, Richard Headrick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Stanton Heck, Martha Mattox, Walt Whitman, Joan Standing, Ralph Clonanger, Lee Shumway, John Dill, Gordon Magee and Irene Hunt.

Entertain Workers for "Better Films"

Harry Crandall, of Washington, and Jules Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, entertained the leading women workers responsible for the first series of "Better Films," known as the American Home Life Series, in their respective cities over the week-end. Gertrude B. Lane, editor of the Woman's Home Companion, accompanied by Anna Steese Richardson of that magazine and Albert St. Peter of Aralma Films, producers of the pictures, spent Saturday as the guests of the Crandall theatres management. Harry Crandall and Mrs. Locher, his community worker, gave a showing of the first two pictures of the series and listened with interest to talks by Miss Lane and Mrs. Richardson.

In Philadelphia an elaborate program for the entertainment and encouragement of his well known women guests was arranged by Frank W. Buehler for Jules Mastbaum. They were taken on a tour covering visits to several of the leading theatres, including the Stanley, Stanton, Aldine, Arcadia, Palace and the recently opened Karlton. They were also shown the Stanley School for Authors at the University of Pennsylvania, where Professor Westcott teaches 163 prospective dramatists, and were the guests of Mr. Mastbaum at a dinner party, including among the diners, Frank W. Buehler and Mrs. Buehler and Abe Einstein and Mrs. Einstein.

"Covered Wagon" Is Commended

Jesse Lasky and Other Production Chiefs Laud Film as Cruze's Best

"THE COVERED WAGON" is creating unusual enthusiasm among the executives of the Paramount producing staff on the West Coast. The earlier comments based on the daily runs of the subject in the editing room are of a most laudatory character. It is classed as the best work ever done by James Cruze in his directorial career.

Among those most enthusiastic over Mr. Cruze's work is Jesse L. Lasky. "Perfect realism," said Mr. Lasky; "a strong love theme, bigness, impressiveness, thrills that are utterly unlike the ordinary sort; a background of real newness to the screen, where the camera has never before been ground; all these facts coupled with the splendid cast of virtually 3,000 men and women, certainly indicate a picture that is worthy of any director's enthusiasm. And James Cruze is enthusiastic. He has believed in the picture from the start and with each day of shooting, sometimes under conditions almost unbelievably difficult, his enthusiasm has grown. Nor is he alone, for every last person in the drama of the old time Western days shares his convictions.

"The great wagon train leaving Westport Landing, the fording of the Kaw River by entire train, the attack by Indians, the prairie fire, the scenes at Fort Bridger, the parting of the trains—one for Oregon, the other for California; the great buffalo hunt—all these are scenes of astonishing magnitude, and are skillfully interwoven with the more intimate and no less thrilling incidents in the drama itself.

"I believe that exhibitors and the American public will agree with me, when they see 'The Covered Wagon,' that this picture marks the greatest and most thoroughly satisfactory undertaking of any film producing organization anywhere."

"Shadows" In Exceptional Class

National Board of Review Vote Favors Inclusion of Lichtman Product

THE National Board of Review has submitted to the Al Lichtman Corporation an analysis of the replies to questionnaires submitted at the recent Town Hall showing of the picture, which was held under the auspices of the Exceptional Photoplays Committee of the board. The consensus of opinion places the picture in the class of exceptional photoplays.

In answer to the question: "Is 'Shadows' an exceptional picture?" there were 157 replies in the affirmative, 66 said no and 35 gave indirect answers. Many of those stating yes said "decidedly so" and were most emphatic in their praise of it as an exceptional picture. A few of those stating "no" were equally as emphatic in their denouncement, but the majority qualified their "no" by such statements as "good," "above the average" and "should be on selected list."

The indirect answers brought out such expressions as "fine of its kind," "most convincing," "one of the few pictures without objections," "higher class than most."

Tom Forman's direction came in for considerable praise. The ending of the Chinaman drawing away from the pier in his scow was praised by many for its poetic thought and imaginative fitness. Of the 258 replies, 129 made specific mention of the fine acting of Lon Chaney as Yen Sin. The general moral standard of the story came in for special mention. Eighty-three distinct references were made of the high moral standard while five took the opposite stand and thought the standard was low. Aside from comment on the work of Chaney, 59 replies mentioned the acting and thought it was good.

Pathe Bookings Show Big Jump

Fifth Week of Eschmann Sales Contest Brings Changes in Standing

AT the close of the fifth week of the Eschmann Sales Contest Pathe notes still further remarkable gains in standard features bookings. The increase shown in the case of 26 of these 5 and 6-reel photoplays, some of which have been continuously before the public for more than three years, inspired the compilation of a chart showing the relative increase of feature business in different sections of the country attributable to the influence of the contest in "pepping up" the field forces.

The chart shows Portland, Ore., leading with its quota practically achieved. Next, in the order named, come Salt Lake City, Omaha, Milwaukee, Spokane, Seattle, Denver, Washington, Des Moines and Albany—making up the first ten.

The production whose bookings exceed those of any other item, Pathe states, is "Dr. Jack," Harold Lloyd's new feature comedy, which is under contracts completed or in negotiation with practically all of the important circuits.

The contest standing of the different branches at the close of the fifth week showed Portland and Los Angeles holding their positions of first and second.

Burr Announces Sales of Late Features

ACCORDING to announcements from C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., independent exchangemen are rapidly buying up "The Last Hour" and "Fires of Youth," the two latest features to be completed by Mastodon Films this year.

Arrangements were completed last week whereby the rights to "The Last Hour" were acquired by Bob Lynch of the Metro Pictures Exchange in Philadelphia and Sam Moscow of Boston. William W. Aechtler of Boston, secured the rights to "Fires of Youth." Two Johnny Hines features, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" and "Sure Fire Flint" were bought by William B. Hurlbut of the Michigan Favorite Film Company of Michigan.

Lester F. Scott Jr., general sales representative of Mastodon Films, Inc., arrived in New York from the South last week with several contracts for the Burr features.

Big Comedy-Drama For Walter Hiers

People who expected that Walter Hiers would be handed a very light comedy drama for his first starring vehicle for Paramount will be most agreeably surprised when they have the opportunity of seeing "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime." For three things stand out prominently in that photoplay, says a statement from Paramount.

First, there is all the comedy that the admirers of Hiers expected and a little more added just for good measure.

Second, there are innumerable thrills in the picture, something that was perhaps not expected—a bull fight that will furnish more than one gasp and a near assassination of Walter when he takes part in a revolution.

Finally, one of the strongest casts assembled for some time aids Walter in putting across both the thrills and the laughs. Included in this cast are Jacqueline Logan, who is featured in support; George Fawcett, Robert McKim, Patricia Palmer, Joseph Swickard, Clarence Burton, Guy Oliver, Lucien Littlefield, George Field, Edward Patrick and others.

Much Exploitation for "Only a Shopgirl"

Every possible exploitation angle for "Only a Shopgirl" has been taken advantage of, according to C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. Joe Brandt and his exploitation staff have used suggestions made them from all parts of America and have incorporated all of their own expert ideas, which are offered wherever the picture is to be shown.

"As a result of this I doubt if any picture has a greater number or variety of exploitation angles than 'Only a Shopgirl'—angles that have actually been tried out," says Jack Cohn of C. B. C.

Warners Are Hosts at Coast Dinner

THE WARNER BROTHERS, Sam, Jack, Abe and Harry M. Warner, who arrived in Los Angeles last week, celebrated the completion of six pictures by giving a dinner to a large number of prominent men and women in the industry at the Ambassador Hotel on December 20. The six productions include "Rags to Riches," "Heroes of the Street," "Little Church Around the Corner," "The Beautiful and Damned," "A Dangerous Adventure" and "Brass."

Among those present at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Williams, Marie Prevost, Monte Blue, Miss DuPont, Irene Rich, Helen Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. Julien Josephson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beaumont, Mr. and Mrs. William Seiter, Harry Meyers, Claire Windsor, Mr. and Mrs. William Beaudine, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rapf, Chester Franklin, Marguerite Clayton, Pauline Starke, Millard Webb, Walter Long, Jack White, Cyril Chadwick, Gertrude Bennett, Louise Fazenda, Peggy Brown, Kenneth Harlan, Madge Cummings and Alice Grey Terry.

A. E. Feature Goes Big Pre-Xmas Week

Manager Harris selected "Conquering the Woman," the current Associated Exhibitors-Florence Vidor release, as the attraction for the week before Christmas in his million-dollar Grand Theatre, in Pittsburgh, Pa. Despite the inevitably large number of residents who had failed to do their shopping early and and hadn't time for "the movies," reports in the newspapers and to Associated indicate that the feature did a big business and made a hit with all who saw it.

Selznick Plans Big Production

Will Make "The Common Law" Rival "Rupert of Hentzau" in Magnitude

MYRON SELZNICK is planning another production to rival in magnitude both as to stars and elaborateness the screen version of Sir Anthony Hope's famous novel, "Rupert of Hentzau."

The new new production which is being made ready for filming is a screen version from Robert W. Chambers' noted book, "The Common Law," and Mr. Selznick has already lined up four big favorites for the cast. They are: Corinne Griffith, who will play the part of Valerie West; Conway Tearle, who will portray the role of Louis Neville, Elliott Dexter, who has been assigned to the part of Jose Querida, and Phyllis Haver, who will be seen as Rita Tevis. Several other stars are being signed up for the production and will be announced within a few days.

George Archainbaud, who directer "One Week of Love," "Evidence" "Under Oath" and many other well known productions for Selznick, will be the megaphone on the "Common Law." Edward J. Montagne, star writer of the Selznick forces, who adapted "Rupert of Heutzau" to the screen, has also done the scenario for the "Common Law."

It will be remembered that Selznick many years ago made the original screen version of the "Common Law" with Clara Kimball Young and Conway Tearle as the featured players. This was the picture in which Conway Tearle sprang into screen fame, and he will be seen again in his old role. The new version of the Robert Chambers' story will of course be done on a far more elaborate scale than its predecessor, and many big sets are now under way at the United Studios, as Mr. Selznick hopes to make this one of the outstanding productions of the year.

Goodman Completes Production

Equity Will Release Picture Under the Title, "Has The World Gone Mad"

DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN this week completed the filming of his second production for Equity Pictures, to be distributed by them on the independent market. Production was carried on under the working title of "Something for Nothing," but the picture will be issued as "Has the World Gone Mad?" This title was selected by a committee of Equity officials, state right buyers, and exhibitors, after weeks of deliberation.

In "Has the World Gone Mad?" Mr. Goodman presents a society drama, enacted by an all-star cast. The story was written by Mr. Goodman, who started his motion picture career as a screen writer. Direction was by J. Searle Dawley. Every name in the cast is familiar to exhibitors and public. Robert Edeson, star of stage and screen, plays one of the leading male roles; Hedda Hopper, who played in "What's Wrong With the Women?" is in the role of the wife, and Elinor Fair has the ingenue role. Vincent Coleman, among the most popular juveniles, is opposite Miss Fair. The cast is completed by Charles Richman, a star in his own right, and Mary Alden, one of the most famous portrayers of mother roles.

"Has the World Gone Mad?" is Mr. Goodman's second productioin for Equity. His first was "What's Wrong With the Women?" a powerful society drama which was a sensation on the state right market during the past season.

"Has the World Gone Mad?" will now be edited and titled by Mr. Goodman. It will be offered on the independent market by Louis Baum, general manager of Equity, in a short time.

Ship Hulks Salvaged for Picture

Tourneur Making Extensive Preparations for "Isle of Dead Ships"

MAURICE TOURNEUR is making extensive preparations for the filming of Crittenden Marriott s famous sea story, "The Isle of Dead Ships," a First National release. He is salvaging the hulks of ships from their graveyard outside of San Francisco Bay and moving them down the coast to the spot selected for the big action of the picture.

According to ancient superstition that there was a place in the sea where derelict ships came together and upheld by seaweed and kelp this isle of dead ships floated on forever. Tourneur secured his "location" after a conference with Admiral E. W. Eberle, Commanding Officer of the Pacific fleet who knows, naturally, every inch of the west coast. The admiral was also of help to the director as he described graphically the octopus-like work of the kelp on old hulks. The kelp beds that Tourneur will use are off San Juan Capistrano, California. The Admiral also told him of the hulks in the San Francisco graveyard and Tourneur is having some of these moved to his Sargossa Sea.

Those of the cast of "The Isle of Dead Ships," announced so far are Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson and Frank Campeau. "The Isle of Dead Ships" is a Mike Levea production.

Metro Presidents Honor Guests at Dinner

TWO Metro presidents were guests of honor at a dinner given recently at the Hotel Ambassador, in Los Angeles, by Louis B. Mayer, who has arranged with this company to distribute his presentations of Fred Niblo productions and Reginald Barker's productions.

They were Marcus Loew, the president of Metro Pictures Corporation, and Richard A. Rowland, the company's first president.

Mr. Niblo acted as toastmaster, and called the following speakers: District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine, Robert Lieber, Harry O. Schwalbe, Jesse Lasky, Al Lichtman, Marco Hellman, Marcus Loew, Richard A. Rowland and Louis B. Mayer.

Portola Re-Opens with "Dr. Jack" Featured

According to newspaper reviews, first run theatre statements and Pathe reports of circuit bookings, "Dr. Jack" continues as the outstanding coast to coast current picture success. The important West Coast film event of last week was the reopening of the newly remodeled and redecorated Portola theatre in San Francisco, starting its extended run of the new Harold Lloyd five-reel comedy.

Branch Manager Baratte's telegram from Salt Lake City reads: "'Dr. Jack' being held over second week. Pantages starting Wednesday. First time in history of Salt Lake this was ever attempted."

Milwaukee branch report from Manager W. A. Aschmann reports of the Strand theatre's two weeks run: "This engagement has proved not only that 'Dr. Jack' is a bigger box office attraction than 'Grandma's Boy,' but is by far a better audience picture."

"Fires of Youth" in Preview Form

"Fires of Youth," the C. C. Burr picture featuring James Kirkwood, Doris Kenyon and Mary Carr, will be in preview form within the next several days, according to reports from the offices of the Mastodon Film Company.

It is now in the process of titling and editing.

PACKED 'EM IN AT STRAND, NEWARK

The unanimous praise accorded "A Front Page Story" by all the critics of the trade papers, as well as screenings before exhibitors in the key cities where prints have been received, have resulted in scores of telegrams to Vitagraph asking an early release date on this Jess Robbins comedy-drama.

Jess Robbins created a new style of screen comedy when he began to produce features under the Vitagraph banner. They are distinctly different from any other type of screen entertainment, and in "A Front Page Story" he has excelled his others, according to the critics. It is a story of a small town and a small town newspaper and chuckles and laughter begin in the first hundred feet and never end until the last flash.

The unusual demand for prints has speeded up the laboratory in Brooklyn, where the force is working day and night rushing extra prints for the exchanges.

Vice Suppression Head Approves Picture

Unqualified approval of "Breaking Home Ties," the Associated Exhibitors feature, presented by E. S. Manheimer, was given this week by John S. Sumner, secretary and active head of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice. As it is Mr. Sumner's duty to seek out faults in books and pictures and endeavor to secure their elimination he can hardly be suspected of a predisposition in favor of any given offering.

After viewing "Breaking Home Ties" Mr. Sumner said: "I consider this an excellent picture in every way. It tells an appealing story, is splendidly acted and directed, and is well done generally. I did not discover an objectionable feature in it from the point of morals or taste, and it seems to be well adapted to gatherings of every age."

Roumanian Life Is Pictured for First Time

For what is said to be the first time in the history of motion pictures, the colorful life of Southeastern Roumania—the home of the Tartar and gypsy—has been filmed in "The Law of the Lawless," Dorothy Dalton's latest Paramount picture.

Gypsy stories have been filmed in the past but never in the colorful setting of Dobrudja, the little-known and romantic Roumanian province which numbers many native gypsy tribes among its inhabitants.

Konrad Bercovici, the Roumanian author, has written the original story of "The Law of the Lawless" for the screen from his own personal experience in his native land.

Press Praises Barry Picture

Freckled Youngster Lauded For His Work in "Heroes Of The Street"

IN REVIEWING the latest Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Heroes of the Street," a Harry Rapf production featuring Wesley Barry, at the Strand theatre, New York, during the week of December 17, the trade paper and newspaper critics are unanimous in the opinion that the attraction is an audience picture that adds lustre and fame to the freckled youngster.

According to the critics this latest Warner special represents the best picture in which the juvenile star has appeared, and furnishes excellent entertainment.

Moving Picture World said: "If you cashed in on 'Go and Get It,' 'Penrod,' 'School Days' and 'Rags to Riches,' you'll mop up with 'Heroes of the Street,' for this latest Warner Brothers special represents the best picture in which that juvenile star has appeared. And it looks like a far better box-office bet than any of the productions mentioned above."

Exhibitor's Herald said: "This Harry Rapf production, starring Wesley Barry, furnishes excellent and charming entertainment. It should be popular because of its varied appeal."

New York Evening Journal: "'Heroes of the Street' should add great lustre to Wesley Barry's reputation. This picture, at the Strand theatre, gives the young star the best opportunity of his career, and he realizes upon that opportunity in every way."

Harrison's Reports: "A good melodrama; it not only arouses and retains the interest from beginning to the end, but also thrills. The picture should have universal appeal."

Daily News: "We like young Mr. Barry on the screen. Hence we enjoyed his comedy bits. They (the audience) roared at the comedy."

Tribune: "'Heroes of the Street' ought to be interesting. The Strand theatre echoed with the laughter of the spectators."

New York American: "Wesley Barry admirable in 'Heroes of the Street.' For a solid hour his work is so admirable and the picture itself touches such high spots that you swell with enthusiasm."

Telegraph: "'Heroes of the Street,' adapted from the play by Lem Parker, has lots of fun, a good story, numerous Christmas scenes and, most important of all, Wesley Barry himself.

Telegram: "Wesley Barry is bigger and better in 'Heroes of the Street.'"

Mail: "The picture is good entertainment with a mixture of fun, pathos, heart interest and thrills that will hold the interest."

Burr Plans Extensive Campaign

National Advertising Methods Outlined by President of Mastodon Films

PLANS made public last week by C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., outline an extensive advertising campaign to be carried in mediums of national circulation on behalf of the productions sponsored by that organization.

Advertising to appear early in the new year that will have a reader value of over 11,400,000 has been contracted for. It is proposed in this way to reach personally the prospective patrons of thousands of motion picture theatres all over the country and thus aid the exhibitor very materially in getting extra business for his house.

With the enlargement of the advertising and publicity departments of Mastodon Films, Inc., Mr. Burr announces that exceedingly wide circulation will be given to special articles, stories, photographs and news notes regarding the many features and short subjects made by the organization as well as the stars and players who appear in them. In addition to this special attention will be paid to aiding individual exhibitors by supplying them with whatever material they may need for special campaigns and assisting them in every possible way to gain more patrons for their theatres.

An additional press sheet will soon be ready on "Secrets of Paris," the screen adaptation of Eugene Sue's famous novel, while special material is now being prepared on other forthcoming releases such as Johnny Hines' newest comedy de luxe, "Luck"; the Edward Sloman production, "The Last Hour," featuring Milton Sills and Carmel Myers, as well as a feature now being completed by Edgar Lewis.

"Service to the exhibitor," said Mr. Burr, "will be our middle name and we are going to give the theatre owner every possible aid in putting our productions over."

"If Winter Comes" Due Shortly on B'way

"If Winter Comes," A. S. M. Hutchinson's dramatic creation, will come soon to life on the screen of a Broadway picture palace, according to word from Fox Film Corporation. Definite announcement of the date of the premier presentation of the picture will be made within the next few weeks.

The final scenes of "If Winter Comes," which has been nearly a year in the making, have just been taken, it is announced. That the visual interpretation of Hutchinson's novel will be a faithful version of the book, is indicated by the fact that the major portion of the photodrama was photographed in England, in locations which closely correspond with the description of the author.

Dayton Gives Approval to "Grandma's Boy"

Dayton, Ohio, has just joined the long list of cities and towns in which the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors super-attraction, "Grandma's Boy," has played havoc with existing records, according to the newspapers of that city. I. Libson selected Lloyd's first five-part comedy as the feature for the reopening of his Strand as a first run house, and held it over for a second week. Near the close of the first week the Dayton Journal said:

"A scream a minute has been the rule at the Strand this week, with the formal opening of this popular playhouse as the home of first run feature plays. Harold Lloyd in 'Grandma's Boy' has been the attraction all week, and this prince of entertainers has kept up his record for presentation of only the highest form of amusement. 'Grandma's Boy' is the best the film industry affords."

"One Stolen Night" Is New Sheik Story

"One Stolen Night," which is now being titled and edited at the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn, is a "different" desert story. The luxurious background of the Sahara in scenes and in locations is there and some of the most thrilling Bedouin horseback riding ever photographed, but the theme of the tale differs from the usual "sheik" yarn. "One Stolen Night" is a healthy, wholesome story of a girl who is venturesome but not adventurous. The romance of the sand wastes draws her into its vast panorama but from the moment she escapes from her guardians on the night before her marriage the story is unique in its appeal.

"One Stolen Night" provides a novel and exotic background for Alice Calhoun, who is starred in it. Vitagraph has staged the picture lavishly and the contrasts of life in the East are singularly fascinating, so true are the types.

N. Y. Crippled Children See Fox Special

One thousand crippled children saw the performance of "The Town That Forgot God," the Fox special, at the Astor theatre, New York, on December 21, as the guests of the officers of the Seaside Home for Crippled Children.

City buses brought them to the theatre from public schools in every borough of Greater New York under the escort of their teachers and principals. To avoid any possible confusion incident to their transportation through congested traffic a special detail of police were assigned to the committee on arrangements, of which Miss Evelyn Goldsmith was chairman. As a further safeguard each youngster wore an arm band bearing the color and number of his school.

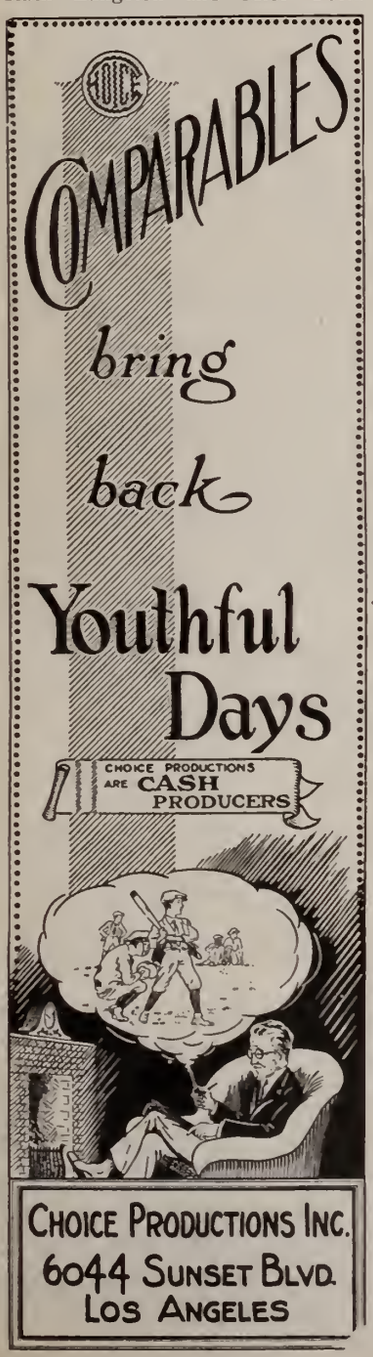
One thousand Christmas presents, the gift of the officers of the organization, were distributed during the intermission.

"Radio to Broadcast Hottentot Song"

THE latest song hit to be broadcasted by radio is "The Happy Hottentot," dedicated to Douglas McLean and Madge Bellamy who play the leading roles on Thomas Ince's new racing comedy feature, "The Hottentot," a First National release. Harry Von Tilser, who has countless ballads and song successes to his credit, wrote the music and William Jerome, the words.

Title Is Announced for Fire Picture

Phil Goldstein announces the definite release title on the second Richard Talmadge special to be "Thru the Flames." This is a fire picture and will be released in six reels. The cast includes Richard Talmadge, Charlotte Pierce, Fred Kohler, George Sherwood, Ruth Langston and Miss York.



"Thelma" Booked for First-Runs

Engagement by Capitol, Detroit, is First of Bookings by Leading Houses

AMONG the big first run bookings on Chester Bennett's "Thelma," starring Jane Novak, which are reported from the Film Booking Offices of America Home Office, is the Capitol Theatre, Detroit.

This is only one of the many exhibitor responses which have reached the F. B. O. Home Office. From every exchange it is reported that the advent of Jane Novak in an elaborate society production is arousing the keen appreciation of all picture fans. Miss Novak has heretofore appeared almost exclusively in Northwest dramas in all of which she appeared in "outdoor" costumes. After her career as leading lady in many big productions, notable among which was "The River's End," Miss Novak started her starring career under the Chester Bennett banner. Her first two pictures for F. B. O. were "The Snow Shoe Trail" and "Colleen of the Pines," two Northwest dramas which gave her parts such as she had always had. Believing, however, in the histrionic ability of Miss Novak, Mr. Bennett began his search for an elaborate society drama which would permit the star greater emotional possibilities. And as a result he acquired the rights to Marie Corelli's novel, "Thelma."

To make the production outstanding in every respect, Mr. Bennett gathered one of the most notable casts to be seen on the screen in several years. It includes such favorites as Barbara Tennant and June Elvidge. Vernon Steel is in the leading masculine role. Wedgewood Nowell is an important character. Playing the part of the father is Bert Sprotte, and Jack Rollens plays "Sigurd," the dwarf. The cast is completed by Peter Burke and Harry Clark. Little Virginia Novak, daughter of the star, is also in the picture.

N.Y. Books Hodkinson Releases

Exclusive Broadway Houses Will Show Special and Feature Attractions

AS evidence of the value contained in the Hodkinson releases it is of interest to note that several of Broadway's largest and most exclusive motion picture theatres had added several of Hodkinson special releases and feature attractions to their program.

The most notable announcement is to the effect that "The Kingdom Within," the Victor Schertzinger production, has been booked over the entire Loew Circuit in New York and vicinity. It is scheduled to play the Loew State Theatre, New York, on January 29.

"The Headless Horseman" or "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," the adaptation of Washington Irving's widely read story featuring Will Rogers as Ichabod Crane, was the attraction at the Capitol Theatre, New York, for Christmas Week.

Another large theatre circuit to take advantage of the Hodkinson attractions is the Fox Theatre Circuit, which has booked "Bulldog Drummond" to play in the Fox houses in New York and New Jersey.

Not losing sight of the value of the Hodkinson short subjects, the announcement further states that the Rialto Theatre, New York, recently showed the first of the All Star Comedies produced by C. C. Burr and featuring Charles Murray, Mary Anderson and Raymond McKee. Owing to the exceptional interest contained in Movie Chats No. 46, the one-reel novelty produced by Charles Urban, the Rialto Theatre signed contracts for the appearance of this one-reeler in that theatre for one week.

Furthermore, the announcement states that the Rivoli Theatre has booked the Bray Romances and Bray Comedies.

Bowes Returns From Coast Trip

Goldwyn Vice-President Enthusiastic Over Additions to Organization

EDWARD BOWES, vice president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, who has been at the Goldwyn Studios in Culver City for the past ten weeks, has returned to New York.

President F. J. Godsol, who is still at the studios, and Mr. Bowes, in conjunction with Abraham Lehr, vice president in charge of production, were instrumental in making important additions to the Goldwyn producing organization that is following a policy of securing the biggest people attainable to produce super-specials.

Eric von Stroheim, the famous director of "Foolish Wives" and "Blind Husbands" was placed under contract, and Frank Norris' "McTeague," one of the classics of American literature, was chosen for his first picture. June Mathis, who wrote the screen version of "The Four Horsemen," was made editorial director, and Katherine Hilliker and H. H. Caldwell were engaged as her assistants.

Mr. Bowes expressed unbounded enthusiasm over the new Goldwyn pictures which are nearing completion or in the titling and editing stage. He is confident that the coming releases during the winter and the spring months will be tremendous box office attractions.

Century to Add Three New Producing Units

Plans to add three more producing units to the three now making comedies for Century Film Corporation will be completed upon the return of Julius and Abe Stern, heads of Century, to Hollywood.

The Raymaker, Goulding and Edwards units will be supplemented by three new directors of long experience in making comedies. At present the Stern brothers are in New York, on the lookout for new first class material.

Special announcements will be made at an early date both as regards the new additions to the producing staff, and the rights to certain screen material to be used for the series both of Baby Peggy and of Buddy Messenger.

Exploitation Aid Sheet on "Only a Shopgirl"

A novel exchange and exhibitor help has been made up by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation in connection with its release on "Only a Shopgirl."

The company has taken the various exploitation aids which they have prepared for this feature, and has had them all photographed on a single sheet and sent out to every territorial holder of "Only a Shopgirl."

In this way the buyers do not have to go through the press book with their exhibitors to show them the exploitation aids that are ready for their use, but bring out this one photograph of them all and the exchange man and the exhibitor sees at a glance just what he has and which of them are best suited for his use.

Exchanges are sending them out broadcast throughout their territory to exhibitors.

"Lion's Mouse" Ready for Showing

These days the Producers Security people are looking quite happy. "Lion's Mouse," another special melodrama, has been received, titled and illustrated.

This is the production for which Wyndham Standing and Marguerite Marsh were engaged as the leads and sent to England for exteriors. No announcement has been made as to the medium of release.

Fifty Interior Sets For Niblo Production

From twenty to thirty sets constitute the average amount of interiors for a De Luxe screen production, but the Fred Niblo production of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," requires fifty sets to keep pace with the extravagant phases of the story, thus promising the production unusual pictorial variety.

In addition to his work on the stages, Mr. Niblo is filming exterior scenes for the picture in Santa Barbara, Del Monte and Pasadena.

"The Famous Mrs. Fair," picturized from the James Forbes stage success which had a long Broadway run with Henry Miller and Blanche Bates co-starring, is a Fred Niblo production to be presented by Louis B. Mayer and distributed through Metro. In the cast are Myrtle Stedman, Huntley Gordon, Marguerite de la Motte, Cullen Landis, Carmel Myers, Ward Crane and Helen Ferguson. The cameraman is Charles J. Van Enger. Frances Marion made the screen adaptation.

Corinne Griffith Wires Approval of Plan

Following upon the heels of the announcement of the formation of the Corinne Griffith Productions which are to be released during the new year under the Hodkinson banner, a congratulatory telegram has been received by W. W. Hodkinson from Miss Griffith which expresses pleasure that the Hodkinson Corporation has been selected as the distributors for her product and further states that she feels the association will be a most happy one.

Miss Griffith is now busily engaged on the Coast, finishing up her work preparatory to coming East where she will immediately start work on her own productions under the direction of Edward Small and Charles R. Rogers.

It is understood that the film dramas in which Miss Griffith will appear and which fit the dramatic abilities of the star will constitute some of the best read novels adapted to the films.

Jackie Coogan Revels in Circus Ring

Jackie Coogan is hard at work on his new picture, "Toby Tyler," a circus story, and if Jackie pleases his screen followers half as much as he is pleasing himself working under the big tents on the United Studio lot in Hollywood, another big winner will be chalked up alongside of "Oliver Twist," just recently released by First National.

"Toby Tyler" is an original story by James Otis and was adapted for the screen by Eddie Kline, who is directing it. Toby begins by selling lemonade and peanuts, but at the end of ten days he is the star of the sawdust ring.

In the cast with Jackie will be, among others, Barbara Tenny and Russell Simpson.

Fox Announces Six Specials

Big Super-Special Productions Head List for January and February

SIX recently announced super-special productions head the January and early February release program of Fox Film Corporation. Four star series features, two Sunshine Comedies, two Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons and the regular bi-weekly issues of Fox News complete the list.

The specials, which are the second group of giant productions to be prepared by the Fox company for distribution during the current season will be released during the first two months of the new year, while the other pictures will all be released during January.

These specials are "The Village Blacksmith," Lupino Lane in "A Friendly Husband," "The Custard Cup," with Mary Carr, "The Face on the Barroom Floor," "The Net" and "Does It Pay?" with Hope Hampton.

"The Village Blacksmith," directed by Jack Ford, is based on the immortal poem of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, and has already enjoyed a month's run on Broadway, New York.

Lupino Lane in "A Friendly Husband" appears in his first five-reel comedy and offers the public a new treat in screen comics. Jack Blystone directed.

"The Custard Cup," featuring Mary Carr, is a screen adaptation of widely read novel of that name. It was directed by Herbert Brenon and boasts an excellent cast. A. Marion Burton is credited with the scenario.

"The Face on the Barroom Floor," also directed by Jack Ford, is a melodrama of unusual entertainment value with a cast of actors numbering such names as Henry B. Walthall, Ruth Clifford, Alma Bennett, Walter Emerson and Frederick Sullivan.

"The Net," with J. Gordon Edwards directing, is from the famous stage play by Maravene Thompson. The adaptation has been done by Olga Linek Scholl. In the cast are Barbara Castleton, Albert Roscoe and Raymond Bloomer.

"Does It Pay?" featuring Hope Hampton, is the sixth of the new series of specials, It was directed by Charles Horan and has an all star cast in Robert T. Haines. Mary Thurman, Florence Short and Peggy Shaw.

The William Farnum vehicle for January is "Brass Commandments" and will be released on the 21st. The story is by Charles Alden Seltzer and the scenario by Charles Kenyon. Supporting Farnum is a cast with Wanda Hawley, Tom Santschi, and Claire Adams.

"The Footlight Ranger," starring the robust Charles Jones, is a story by Dorothy Yost. Fritzi Brunette, the winsome feminine lead, plays opposite the Fox star. The feature will be released January 7th.

Dustin Farnum will be seen during the first month of 1923 in "Three Who Paid." Playing with Farnum are Bessie Love, Frank Campeau, William Conklin and Robert Agnew.

The Sunshine Comedies are "Rides and Slides," Jan. 7th and "The Wise Cracker," Jan. 21.

Laurette Taylor Highly Praised

New York Critics Laud Actress for Screen Work in "Peg O' My Heart"

PRELIMINARY warning of the first-water success Laurette Taylor is to score as soon as "Peg o' My Heart" is screened before the general public is found in New York newspaper comments this week by critics present at the private showing of the Metro picture at the Hotel Astor December 10.

Helen Pollock, in the Morning Telegraph, holds that no one else on the screen, with the possible exception of Pola Negri, is as excellent as the stage and cinema star of "Peg o' My Heart."

Mr. Kaufman wrote in the Globe:

"This showing—and it was before the severest of judges—brought about an enthusiasm that is rare even at this sort of thing. The story is simple, of course, but that will endear it to the millions."

Parts of Miss Pollock's estimate of Laurette Taylor's ability and the picture's appeal follow:

"No praise is too high for this Peg o' the screen. She is an artist par excellence.

"Although with her debut as Peg her motion picture offers ought certainly to be renewed, for there are few, if any, artists of the cinema who can compare with her, with the possible exception of Pola Negri.

"Laurette Taylor and 'Peg o' My Heart' are a combination which should be mightily potent in any motion picture house lucky enough to secure them. To begin with, it may be asserted the screen lost a great star when Miss Taylor decided to stick to the legitimate stage.

"Miss Taylor leads in intelligence, in pantomimic ability, in human understanding, in caprice and pathos, and one is driven to use again that word so much overworked by the critics in just praise of this actress—magnetism. Certainly no one in the films could have encompassed Peg.

"To the field of motion picture artists many are called, but few are chosen, and to mix the literary metaphor, Miss Taylor seems likely to join the small and select group whose names, like Abou Ben's, lead all the rest."

"Ninety and Nine" Gets Many Bookings

Bookings on "The Ninety and Nine," Vitagraph's special, picturized from the play of Ramsay Morris, are being reported at the general offices in such gratifying numbers that it is predicted that the picture will top any of the recent specials offered to the trade. Exhibitors for whom it has been screened are confident they have a box office attraction, a picture that the public will like from every angle.

From the exhibitor's standpoint "The Ninety and Nine" will offer unlimited opportunities. It has exceptional exploitation features. The story is thoroughly modern in atmosphere and the train racing through miles of burning forest is one of the most thrilling scenes ever attempted in any motion picture production. The hero, played by Warner Baxter, drives a locomotive through crashing timbers and the direction is so vivid that the audience is led right up to the blazing right of way.

Colleen Moore plays the lead and the critics have credited her with giving one of the finest performances of her career. Besides Warner Baxter others in the cast are Lloyd Whitlock, Gertrude Astor, Robert Dudley, Arthur Jasmine and Ernest Butterworth, Jr.

"Strong Heart" Duplicating Early Success

"Strongheart," in his latest picture, "Brawn of the North," is more than duplicating the success of "The Silent Call" in the matter of getting the crowds, according to word from First National's home office.

George Fowler, proprietor of the Lux theatre, Banff, has this to record of the new Lawrence Trimble and Jane Murfin production:

"Broke all summer and winter records with showing of Strongheart in "Brawn of the North." Patrons demanded return showing, which I am booking. Passed record for 'The Kid,' 'Three Musketeers,' 'Snow Blind,' 'Valley of Silent Men,' etc. Opportunity to show such a picture makes theatre owner's life worth living. Believe you have the world beaten."

The records for the past five years at the American theatre, Butte, Mont., were broken during the showing of the Strongheart picture. The American has a seating capacity of 900 and the Sunday showing drew 5,400 persons.

"The Tents of Allah" Shown Privately

Officials of Associated Exhibitors had their first view a few days ago of "The Tents of Allah," the second of the Edward A. MacManus productions for that organization. Monte Blue and Mary Alden, with the rest of the cast, come very nearly forming an all-star aggregation, for the list of leading players includes also Mary Thurman, Frank Currier, Macey Harlam, Charles Lane, Sallie Crute and Martin Faust.

Chicago Critic Praises "Trifling Women"

Chicago, like New York, has found that Rex Ingram's production "Trifling Women" excels even his biggest earlier successes, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "The Prisoner of Zenda," according to Metro.

After the recent presentation of this Metro picture at the Chicago theatre, Observer, the motion picture critic of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, said:

"The name of Rex Ingram is becoming a fetish, standing for the unusual in photoplays and brilliantly handled productions. There appears to be no limit to the genius of this man who gave us 'The Four Horsemen' and 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' and in 'Trifling Women' he has given another splendid photoplay which in many ways surpasses both of the others."

"Trifling Women" was written, adapted and directed by Rex Ingram.

Set Represents Heaven for Baby Peggy

Billy Franey, who has attracted attention for his favorable work in "Quincy Adams Sawyer," has been added to the Baby Peggy Company, now at work on the picture in which she is being directed by Raymaker.

A set represents Heaven. The gates whch open into the Milky Way are guarded by the giant Jack Earle, who plays the part of St. Peter.

Herman C. Raymaker is directing Baby Peggy.

Pictures Stand on Own Merits

"No Strings On Any Item of Product" Announced by Elmer Pearson of Pathe

IN an official statement for the information of all exhibitors, Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., clearly defines the Pathe policy governing bookings of all its product. The main point emphasized in Mr. Pearson's statement is that there are no strings on any item of Pathe product binding it to any other item in booking arrangements.

"Each and every picture on our lists, irrespective of type and including all of the items of each weekly release program," the statement says, "stands on its own feet. Each of them is issued on its individual merits, is required to establish its individual reputation and box office value, and may be booked on that basis without restriction or proviso respecting any other item. We say to the exhibitor: 'As you like it'—book one or more or all, according to your conviction regarding their value to you in each instance.

"We can assure the exhibitor that the rental price demanded for a costly product that has fully established its box office value is placed to the credit of that particular picture exclusively; no standard item of comparatively new and untried production receives any advantage or support from it. Under no circumstances, nor in any way affecting the exhibitor, is the one linked up with the other.

"Another point upon which we are anxious that no doubt should exist is this: The fact that an exhibitor is a regular user of Pathe News or Pathe Review gives him no price advantage in booking other product over the exhibitor who has not yet become a regular Pathe News or Pathe Review subscriber. This rule holds good all through the Pathe lists."

Mae Marsh Scores in Philly

Stanley Company Books "Till We Meet Again" in Second Down Town House

The Associated Exhibitors feature, "Till We Meet Again," with Mae Marsh, played the Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia, last week, and is said to have scored such a hit that before the run was fairly started the Stanley Amusement Company booked it for another week's showing in the Capitol, another of its downtown houses. This second engagement will be played at an early date.

The Karlton is known as the "elite" picture theatre of Philadelphia, while the Capitol, in the heart of the shopping district, attracts the crowds from the leading hotels. To select a feature to run in one of these houses so soon after its showing in the other as almost to form a consecutive two weeks' run is so unusual as to be almost unprecedented.

"Immensely entertaining" was the Public Ledger's description of "Till We Meet Again" after the opening of the run at the Karlton. This paper, as all the others, acclaimed with enthusiasm Mae Marsh's return in a feature well worthy of her talents.

"It is agreeable to welcome an old, yet still young, friend," said the Public Ledger.

"It has been a long while since Mae Marsh was seen on a local screen. Her present vehicle, a vigorous and exciting melodrama, full to the brim with action, was written and directed by William Christy Cabanne. So speedy is the tempo, so varied the incidents and locales and so capable are Miss Marsh and her supporting company that one finds the picture immensely entertaining. Special attention should be paid to the excellent portrayal given by Walter Miller as head of the crooks' band."

Another markedly successful week's run of "Till We Meet Again" was that in E. J. Davis's American Theatre, Salt Lake City, where crowds are said to have packed the house daily.

Broadway to Be Shown "Secrets of Paris"

Closely following the announcement by C. C. Burr that Johnny Hines in "Sure Fire Flint," would be presented at the Cameo theatre, beginning December 31, comes word that the same producer is completing arrangements whereby "Secrets of Paris," another of his feature productions, will be shown on Broadway within a short time.

"Secrets of Paris," a screen version of Eugene Sue's widely read novel, "The Mysteries of Paris," was produced by Whitman Bennett and directed by Kenneth Webb.

Numbered among the players are Lew Cody, Gladys Hulette, Montague Love, Dolores Cassinelli, J. Barney Sherry, Walter James, William Collier, Jr., Rose Coghlan, Effie Shannon, Harry Sothern, Bradley Barker and Jane Thomas.

Lichtman Closes Big Foreign Deal

Al Lichtman announced this week the consummation of a deal which will take care of the distribution of his entire output for the first year in Australia and New Zealand. Under the terms of a contract made with Millard Johnson, American representative of Australasian Films, Ltd., his company will handle all Lichtman releases in 1923, including all those now announced: "Shadows," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "The Hero," "Are You a Failure?," "Poor Men's Wives," "The Girl Who Came Back," "April Showers," "Mothers-in-Law," "The Broken Wing" and "The Parasite."

Belated Prints Rushed by Aeroplane

Educational has established what is perhaps a record for delivery of a short length subject. The Sunday program for the Met Theatre, Lawton, Oklahoma, went astray on shipment from Educational's Dallas branch. The nearest prints were in the Oklahoma City exchange, and the manager of that branch was appealed to by long-distance phone. The distance was too far to cover by train or auto, as it was then 5:30 and the show was scheduled to start at 8 p. m. A commercial aviator was called into service. The film was delivered to him at 6:30 p. m., and he covered the sixty-odd miles overland in less than an hour. The Met Theatre was able to open its show on schedule.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

East and West with Fox

Production of "The Eleventh Hour" began this week under the direction of Bernard Durning. The complete cast includes Shirley Mason, Buck Jones, June Elvidge, Richard Tucker, Allen Hale, Edward Martindale, Harvey Clark and Fred Kelsey.

The next story for Tom Mix will be "A Modern Monte Cristo," an original by Bernard McConville. Joseph Franz is directing and the cast also includes Claire Adams, Donald McDonald, Edward Piel, George Siegman, Hector Sarno, Minna Ferry Redmond, Thomas Guise, Ethel Wales and Billie Bennett.

"Red Darkness," by George F. Wortz, continuity by Joseph Franklin Poland, is the next for John Gilbert, with Jerome Storm directing.

A Los Angeles newspaper reports that Al St. John is to be featured in five reel comedies. This could not be verified at the studio.

Around Metro Studios

Hunt Stromberg has begun production of "The Two Twins," starring Bull Montana and directed by Albert Austin. Chuck Reisner is the second twin.

Clara Kimball Young's next subject will be "Cordelia the Magnificent," by Leroy Scott.

Viola Dana is now working in "Her Fatal Millions." She completes her program series with this subject and hereafter will appear in all-star specials.

Rex Ingram, with Alice Terry and Ramon Navarro, will arrive the 15th of January to produce "Scaramouche."

Huntley Gordon, a newcomer in the motion picture ranks, has been signed for a leading part in "Your Friend and Mine," which S-L (Sawyer-Lubin) Pictures is producing for Metro.

As the forerunner of increased productional activity for the coming year, Hunt Stromberg, producing the Bull Montana comedies for Metro release, announces the acquisition of Phil Gersdorf, exploitation expert, as head of a newly organized News and Service Department. Gersdorf arrived in Los Angeles from the East this week, making several stopovers in the key cities en route to the coast to acquire first-hand exhibitor information prior to assuming active work with Stromberg.

The girl with the transcontinental and terpsichorean education — Kathryn McGuire—has been engaged to enact a part in support of Clara Kimball Young in "The Woman of Bronze." This is a Harry Garson production to be released by Metro.

With Paramount Units

William de Mille has begun "Grumpy," with a cast including Theodore Roberts, Conrad Nagel, May McAvoy, Bernice Frank, Charles Ogle, Robert Belder, Fred Huntley and Bertram Johns.

Alfred E. Green has begun work at the Paramount Long Island studio on "The Ne'er-Do-Well," Rex Beach's famous novel, which will serve as a starring picture for Thomas Meighan. Supporting Mr. Meighan will be Lila Lee in the leading feminine role; Gertrude Astor, John Miltern, Jules Cowles, Sid Smith, Cyril Ring, Laurance Wheat and George O'Brien. All of the exterior scenes for the picture will be made in Panama, December 28 being the date of the company's sailing for the Canal Zone.

Allan Dwan and his Paramount company have returned to New York from Miami, Fla., where they have been for three weeks filming exterior scenes for "The Glimpses of the Moon," adapted for the screen by E. Lloyd Sheldon from Edith Wharton's novel of the same name. Among the principal players who have returned to the company's Eastern studio are Bebe Daniels, Nita Naldi, David Powell, Rubye de Remer, Maurice Costello and Charles Gerrard.

With a few final racing scenes fraught with thrills and near accidents, Director Paul Powell has brought to a close the current Agnes Ayres starring picture for Paramount, "Racing Hearts." The cast includes Richard Dix. Theodore Roberts, Robert Cain, Warren Rogers and others.

At Universal City

About 35 scratch prints of as many subjects were destroyed by fire last Saturday evening. The negatives were uninjured. The building was damaged to the extent of about $1,000; the value of the prints was about $100,000; and the labor performed in editing them amounted to $200,000, according to the publicity department's estimate.

Jack Conway will direct "Trimmed in Scarlet," by William Hurlburt.

Herbert Blache is beginning "Nobody's Bride," which stars Herbert Rawlinson, with Alice Lake and Edna Murphy as leads.

Wallace Worsley this week made the first scenes for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" in the Court of Miracles setting. This underworld meeting place opening scene required 500 extras. Notre Dame cathedral is nearing completion and the Parisian street scene sets are being built.

Jean Perkins fell from a speeding train near Riverside last Saturday when he failed to grasp a rope ladder dropped from an airplane for a scene for "Around the World in 18 Days" serial. Perkins alighted in a swamp and his hip bone and two ribs are broken.

Raymond Hatton has been engaged at Universal City to portray the important role of Gringoire, the poet, in the Universal-super-Jewel film play of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

On the Goldwyn Lot

Jack Mower, King Baggott, James Kirkwood and Frederick Kovert have been nominated by fans in a voting contest to name who shall play Ben Hur.

The title of the R. A. Walsh production, "Passions of the Sea," has been changed to "Lost and Found."

Following her excellent work in "The Christian" and "The Stranger's Banquet," Goldwyn gave Aileen Pringle an excellent role in the next Rupert Hughes picture, "Souls For Sale," and then signed her up on a long-term contract.

Hugo Ballin has completed his screen version of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," starring Mabel Ballin, for Goldwyn release. The last "shot" was made on Monday and by Thursday the picture had been entirely assembled, as the first cutting was carried on with the production. Mr. and Mrs. Ballin are spending Christmas at Santa Barbara.

Eric von Stroheim is still in San Francisco writing the continuity for his first Goldwyn production, a screening of Frank Norris' novel, "McTeague."

Marshall Neilan is completing preparations for two productions to be made in association with Goldwyn, "Red Lights" and "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

R-C Production Notes

Mal St. Clair is now directing the fifth Fighting Blood story, titled "Some Punches and Judy."

"Westbound 99" is the title chosen for the third Emory Johnson special which will feature Ralph Lewis as a locomotive engineer. The supporting cast will include John Harron, Ella Hall, Claire McDowell, Eddie Gribbon, William Scott, Richard Morris, and Little Georgie Stone.

Emil Offeman, general manager of the R-C Studios in Los Angeles, has made several additions to the cast of "The Greater Glory," which will be Ethel Clayton's third starring picture for the Film Booking Offices of America. The recent additions include Carrie Ward Clark, Clarissa Selwyn, Fred Esmelton and Albert Lee. Malcolm McGregor will play the leading masculine role opposite Miss Clayton. The balance of the cast includes Albert Hart, Richard Headrick, Anderson Smith, Wilfred Lucus and Victory Bateman. James W. Horne has been especially engaged to direct.

Here and There

Edwin Carewe has arrived on the Coast to produce "The Girl of the Golden West" for First National.

Director W. S. Van Dyke and Carmel Myers have gone to Chicago to take part in the making of a film there.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, is on the Coast negotiating with Ben Wilson, Eddie Lyons, and others for next year's production.

Mack Sennett will begin the first Phyllis Haver subject, "The Extra Girl," about the tenth. It is an original by Bernard McConville, with Dick Jones directing.

Maurice Tourneur has added Anna Q. Nilsson, Milton Sills, Frank Campeau, Walter Long, Burt Woodruff, Aggie Herring and Herschel Mayall to the cast of "The Isle of Dead Ships.'"

The complete cast for Selznick's "The Common Law," under the direction of Archainbaud, includes Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle, Elliott Dexter, Doris May, Harry Myers, Hobart Bosworth, Phyllis Haver, Wally Van, Bryant Washburn and Miss Dupont.

Bennie Ziedman has "The Spider and the Rose" complete except for editing.

J. G. Backman, treasurer of the Preferred and Lichtman Corporations, is on the Coast making up a production program with Schulberg. The plans provide for 18 specials to be made in the next two years at a cost of $7,500,000. Gasnier, Ferman and Schertzinger are the directors who will make the series.

An original story is being written for the next Katherine MacDonald subject, which will be her last under present contracts.

Schulberg has purchased an original story titled "Frivolity," or "When a Woman's Forty," by Royal A. Baker, film censor of Detroit, and it is being put into continuity for early production.

Another important addition to the cast of the Distinctive Pictures Corporation all-star production of "Backbone" is announced this week in the name of Frank Evans, who will have the role of Doc Roper.

Two new comedians have been added to the company of funmakers in the Hallroom Boys Comedies, comes word from Producer Harry Cohn from the West Coast production center. They are Bud Jamieson and Bill Franey.

The Motion Picture Theatre of the Future and Its Equipment

Interesting Predictions by S. L. Rothafel of Capitol Theatre, N. Y.

By S. L. Rothafel, Capitol Theatre, N. Y. City*

I AM not going to read from a paper, because I like to do things extemporaneously. Before going into the general talk, I think it would be in order to tell you that about ten years ago, after I really became interested in the work which has culminated in the largest theatre in the world, I had a distinct vision, and I believe it has been a matter of accord that the speaker prophesied the Capitol theatre ten years before its inception. I merely make this statement to you, to give you some idea that it was not altogether a dream. It became a reality.

Remarkable Prophecy

I am here this morning to make another prophecy, a prophecy more remarkable even than the one ten years ago. I have seen the motion picture theatre grow from my start in a little room back of the bar room in a small mining town of 7,000, where I had to borrow twenty-five undertakers chairs. I believe that several people in the room saw the start, and I have seen it grow slowly but surely to the magnificent palace in New York and many other splendid theatres throughout the country. To tell you again the old bromide that the motion picture is in its infancy would be superfluous. I tell you gentlemen, the motion picture is going to grow, and with it the theatre will grow to a point beyond the realization of any one here. I prophesy that the motion picture theatre will parallel, in both its artistic endeavor and in its magnitude, the entertainment value and educational value of grand opera or any other artistic entertainment the world has ever known. I prophesy that the Government, as well as different states and municipalities, will endow a big motion picture theatre. I prophesy that the motion picture theatre will be a great force for education, both in the elementary education of the school child as well as the recreation and education of the grown-up. I prophesy that the motion picture theatre is going to make this nation the most cultured nation in the world. I prophesy that the motion picture theatre is going to create and develop a musical taste that will be marvelous. It is going to create for us American folk-songs; it is going to create many new and wonderful composers; it is going to develop a new form of entertainment.

* Paper before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

THE writer of the article herewith presented, Mr. Rothafel, is of the opinion that the motion picture theatre of the future will be comparable to the greatest opera houses of the world. The future of the motion picture holds out great promise of rivalling or running in parallel form to grand opera. Towards this end an equipment far in excess of that which is now used will be necessary. Great improvements in projection and lighting are to be expected. New developments in apparatus will provide flexibility and ease in controlling the lighting effects. It is probable that some type of "color organ" will be used. The contour of the theatre will also undergo a change to accommodate new developments in the accoustical equipment.

All these developments naturally will need new and different equipment. We will begin with the theatre. The motion picture theatre of today, as it is built, is entirely inadequate. It is merely a development of the old fashioned theatre with its boxes, its balconies, its lower floor and its stage. The new motion picture theatre will be built along highly scientific lines. In my opinion, it will be built more like the shape of an egg, with a huge stage, without any overhanging balconies, as much as possible without an amphitheatre effect, and on one floor. I believe that the theatre will be of tremendous size, with probably 5,000 or more seats. It will not necessarily be located in the advantageous positions that have heretofore been the rule, but will be located in spots where the real estate value will not be quite so high, and where greater development in space and more attention to its construction can be carried out.

Importance of Lighting

One of the greatest and most important adjuncts to the motion picture theatre, which is related to the motion picture presentation, is the lighting. Toward this end we are perhaps to make our greatest strides in the next five years. I prophesy to you that the motion picture theatre of tomorrow will be lighted and controlled in an entirely different manner from the motion picture theatre of today. I prophesy that the lighting of the future motion picture theatre will be almost entirely by the projected rays upon a highly sensitized surface in different parts of the theatre. Color will play a most important part, and will be under the control of one operator, who will have a central station somewhere in the auditorium, preferably in the orchestra. This operator will be a highly developed and trained individual, who will know dramatic psychology and music; and that man will play upon a keyboard very similar to a piano, in which will be a development of the four primary colors, red, blue, yellow and green. These colors will be so divided on this keyboard that every note struck in the presentation by the orchestra, or any other desired effect, will be created by a single note along the octave of the piano—color piano we will call it—and the octaves represented by different shades of each respective color, or such mixtures of color as may be necessary to obtain the desired effect. For instance, the very last note on the piano may be very dark, deep blue, almost black, and running up to lighter shades of blue, until a light steel blue is reached. There have been very remarkable developments along this line.

Audience Psychology

It will readily be seen what an important part this will have in the development of the motion picture theatre. I might digress for just a moment. Audience psychology of today is a remarkable study and we have had a great opportunity to study it from every angle. I say this to you; that grand opera will never be popular, that is, universally popular among the masses of this country; because they are living too rapidly; they think too rapidly; they are restless and nervous. They want everything quickly, and they want it in good taste. They have got to get a thrill out of everything, and the color, plus the new theatre, the new ideas in presentation, a huge magnificent orchestra, augmented by wonderful organs and other equipment, and wonderful projection, will help to satisfy this desire.

Color, therefore, will play a most wonderful part. We have even now in New York taken the ordinary switchboard, such as you know it, and with it we try to play with color as far as our capacity will permit. We are handicapped now simply by a primary system and the ordinary switches to make them, but by careful development and careful training we have been able to get some very remarkable effects. We have used that in conjunction with projection. We have attempted projection on scrim, with a tableau background, during Armistis week, in connection with one of

Mr. Kelley's pictures, "Where Poppies Bloom" and were successful. It was a new thought, a new idea, and was received with a great deal of favor. We were further encouraged to try a new thing in scrim work in another presentation with the aid of projection, which puzzled many people, and which was all done by means of color.

We can create mood by color and we can raise the dramatic climax by color, as we so often do in the theatre and at home. For instance, we try to depict in color the dramatic effect of the overture to Tannhauser. We paint pictures. In other words, we paint our scenery with color, and then as the strains of that overture rise and come to a climax, the lights gradually rise with it, until the last chords are struck, and the brilliancy of the entire ensemble is heightened to such an extent that we have seen audiences fairly rise out of their seats at the combination of light, music and the picture.

Advancement in Projection

Now we come to the projection. There has not been as much advance in projection in the past five years as I should like to see, although there has been some advancement, and we believe that we have done our share towards bringing it to the industry. We are now using what is known as the high intensity lamp. We were compelled to use it because of the tremendous physical disadvantage of the long throw and the obscured atmosphere. We tried everything until we secured the high intensity lamp. We found that we could not use the arc exactly as it was, but after much experiment and trial, we secured a satisfactory form of filter. We then came upon a new shutter that was developed by Mr. Runcie, which did away with the opaque plate entirely, and once more we use color. But at no time during the travel of the picture before the aperture does the light ever leave the screen. The result is very satisfactory, and is a decided step forward.

I had the great pleasure of watching a machine a few weeks ago that had a new idea in film movement. I believe it is a decided step forward, but I think that the projected picture of tomorrow will be entirely different from that of today. I think it will be so controlled by automatic devices that it will require highly trained men. I believe the manipulation of these machines will be entirely automatic, and will be so developed that it will be synchronized by either sound waves, or original photography, so that it will develop and change its own speed according to the respective action. I think it will be so highly sensitized that the slightest action will be developed and projected automatically.

Highest Form of Entertainment

Now, when this is done, we will begin to get the motion picture of the morrow where we will present motion pictures in a way that will be comparable to any form of entertainment or art before the world. The motion picture is not an art, and I doubt very much, gentlemen, if it ever can be, but the motion picture development, wedded to light, color and music, will be a new art, and I hope that I may live to see its culmination. We are working very hard, gradually, slowly. We have seen many wonderful things; we are dreaming of very wonderful things. We have every reason to tell you what we have told you this morning, and believe that everything we have said will be practically demonstrated within the course of the next ten years. We believe that the motion picture theatres are going to charge not one dollar which we are now getting, but will charge as high as five dollars to witness a motion picture presentation. You will see the prejudices against the motion picture entirely eliminated. Censorship will be eliminated. The real backbone of the motion picture is going to be that step forward that I have spoken to you about. There will be many auxiliary branches, the development of the commercial branch, the development of the educational branch, the development, as I saw in an article yesterday morning, of the motion picture by radio. That is not at all impossible, and I firmly believe it is coming. Then there will be the development of the motion picture in medical science, the development of the motion picture in the science of teaching almost any study. I want to tell you that whatever we have done in the past to bring the picture to its present state has only been a stepping stone and the foundation to something finer and bigger in the future.

I thank you.

Discussion of the Paper

The following is a part of the discussion that took place concerning Mr. Rothafel's paper:

MR. CAMPE: I should like to ask Mr. Rothafel if he has done any experimental work using various gradations of the same color, that is, by changing the intensity in such a way as to utilize all the different tones of that color.

MR. ROTHAFEL: I will answer that by saying that we have. May I illustrate to you just what we have done? For instance, we have here a series of four strips of different kinds of blue because there happened to be that many octaves on the piano. We simply called the first octave a certain kind of blue. We had different densities up to that one octave. Each note represented a little lighter gradation, you might call it, running up the scale, so that when we struck a certain note in that octave there was always the same color. Then we had, as I spoke about, the three primary colors, and these were mixed automatically. If I wanted purple, I simply threw the red and the blue together and struck whatever note I wanted and got the exact density of purple that I wanted, except that it would be by the mixture of the two colors. We tried that in connection with the Swanee River, and it almost made one feel the Swanee River.

Utilization of the Senses

Now, there is another thing I forgot to speak about, the utilization of the senses. We are using two now, the eye and the ear. We have gone even further. We are using the sense of scent. We are trying to get to a point where we can create almost a perfect elusion, without destroying the greatest charm of the motion picture, by letting your imagination work. But we grasp you in such a spell—we try to at least—that you forget everything else, judging from the different comments that come to us voluntarily, and they invariably say this: "We have been rested," which is, after all, the real function of entertainment. Now, if we were wrong and if we did not function properly, we never would rest.

That is a great study, and it applies—you may think I am digressing—but I mean it a new form of entertainment

On Wednesday Evening, Dec. 27, there will be presented at the SELWYN THEATRE, Broadway and 42nd St., New York, an absolutely new form of entertainment.

This will be the world premiere of binocularly stereoscopic cinematography, presenting for the first time in history a medium by which Nature may be seen in natural, solid form, instead of "flat" pictures on a screen.

Every seat in the Selwyn Theatre is being equipped with an electrical instrument—THE TELEVIEW—through which you will see living people re-created on a phantom stage, out over the heads of the audience.

The initial TELEVIEW offering will be a fanciful comedy, "M. A. R. S.," with Grant Mitchell and Margaret Irving, and a program of innovations made possible only by means of this marvelous invention.

Alimar, Live Oak, Fla., Opens

The Alimar theatre, Live Oak, Fla., is an excellent type of a modern house in a small town as shown by views on page 96. Though the town has a population of only 3,000 yet much support is drawn from nearby towns and country by giving big productions. Manager Lon Burton reports a fine business since opening. The Alimar has a capacity of 1,000, is of brick and concrete construction, has an ample stage and dressing rooms, handsome lobby. A unique feature is the drop curtain which is a splendid painting of the famous Swanee River, as it looks a mile from Live Oak, of which everyone there is very proud. Rich hangings set off the scene nicely. —Hutson.

"Roseland" Opens in Omaha, Nebr.

"The Roseland," a new $250,000 motion picture theatre was christened recently. This cinema temple is located in the South Side of Nebraska's metropolis and no doubt will enjoy a large patronage. Samuel and Louis Epstein are the lessees. They already operate the Besse and the Magic, also in the South Side district.

The new theatre has 1,200 seats, 900 being on the first floor. The equipment includes a fine organ. The management intends to show pictures only, at least for a while.

Pacific Coast House Most Complete of Those in Small Towns

ONE of the most up-to-date and complete houses in any small town of the Pacific coast was opened recently with the dedication of the $175,000 Whiteside theatre, at Corvallis, Oregon, by George and Samuel Whiteside, owners and managers.

The house seats about eight hundred persons, including main floor and balcony. Loges are in the rear of the main floor and the first four rows of the balcony. The color scheme of the house is gray and old rose.

The outside is finished in plain brick, with a large marquis and spotlights on the front. The ticket booth is equipped with a three-unit automatic ticket machine.

The foyer is decorated and carpeted in old rose and black. Openings from the foyer to the auditorium are glass enclosed with drapes on both sides. At one end of the foyer is a check room and at the other end a drinking fountain. Stairs at both sides lead to the mezzanine floor.

On the mezzanine floor are the writing room, general men's and women's rest rooms and the ladies' room. The general rest room is fitted with rose-colored cretonne drapes, with an overdrape of rose velour. Blue and gold reed furniture is used.

The stage is equipped with full stage settings. The main drape curtain is made of rose-tinted taupe. This will absorb any color thrown upon it from the foot and side lights, and will carry out any color scheme that the electricians wish to portray. The auditorium and loges are fitted with specially constructed Heywood-Wakefield opera chairs. At each side of the stage is an electric flower garden, equipped with four circuits of electricity controlled by dimmers from the projection room. All house lights and the curtains are controlled from a central board in the room.

Equipment in the projection booth at the rear of the balcony includes two type "S" Simplex projectors with Broukert Dissolving Stereopticon and Spotlight, and also a specially constructed film cabinet and re-wind table with a Transverter and Cutler Hammer Dimmers.

The total cost of the building and furnishing of the theatre was practically $175,000, including a Wurlitzer organ. The architect was H. Ryan of Seattle. The house was equipped, lighted, furnished and decorated by B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle.

Community Theatre for Caldwell, N. J.

In order to properly insure the character of and retain local control of amusement and entertainment for the commnnity, it has been proposed that an organization be effected for the purpose of erecting and operating a theatre and amusement centre for Caldwell, N. J., which will be of considerable value in the future. A meeting for the discussion of this project was arranged where a definite plan of action was to be fully discussed in order that the best solution possible may be arrived at.

Metropolitan Theatre Co. Opens New Metropolitan in Baltimore

THE Metropolitan theatre, Baltimore's newest neighborhood house, opened last Saturday under the supervision of the Metropolitan Theatre Company, officers of which are Frederick W. Schanze, president; August Malthan, vice-president; John Ament, secretary, and J. Alan Fledderman, treasurer. Dr. Schanze is managing director, and the bookings will be looked after by Bernard Depkin, Jr., who also is director of the Boulevard theatre.

The Metropolitan was designed by Otto Simonson & Company, architects, and was built by the Consolidated Engineering Company. It is in Colonial style, and the structure cost a total of $325,000. Two entrances have been provided, with a marquee for each, and the remainder of the first floor has been taken up with store-fronts. Bowling alleys are in the basement, and on the upper floors are billiard rooms and meeting rooms for lodge purposes.

Terra cotta, granite and red brick have been used for the façade. Lobbies and foyers are finished with a wainscoting of green Italian marble and have floors of terazza. Indirect lighting is used throughout. Mulberry, ivory, gray and gold are used in the interior decorations, and the chairs are of ebony tone, with mulberry colored upholstery. A mezzanine promenade has been furnished with wicker furniture, and the decorations and draperies match the floor covering, which is of heavy taupe velvet.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,450, a balcony providing seats for 550 of this number.

Present plans call for the showing of first-run pictures at the Metropolitan, runs to continue for one week. Walter Lee will direct the orchestra, and Mrs. Josephine Abbott Schanze and George Finster have been engaged as organ soloists.

Employees of the Standard Film Laboratories, Hollywood, Cal. John W. Nickolans, vice-pres. and superintendent is seated in the center of the second row from the bottom. Mr. Nickolans is wearing a large black bow tie but no coat

Do your patrons get their money's worth?

ARE you sending your patrons home with the feeling that their evening has been well and profitably spent? Are they happy and smiling—or do you send them away with eye-strain?

Selecting the program is only part of the job of displaying pictures. Putting it on the screen is the other equally important part and depends on the light and light control.

Poor projection of an interesting picture annoys an audience—good projection of a less interesting picture will hold them. How much more important than elaborate decorations is proper light for projection? A well displayed picture will make them forget the surroundings, but no decorations will compensate for eye-strain caused by poor lighting.

The most intense light that can be selected is that of the direct current arc. And the most improved type of apparatus to convert the usual alternating current into direct is the Wagner White-Light Converter. It gives a brilliant white light which is also steady, easily controlled and perfectly dissolving at change over.

How the Wagner White-Light Converter performs this is described interestingly in a book entitled "Light For Motion Picture Projection" which you can get simply by filling in the coupon and forwarding it to us. Light is the important accessory in your business even though it is a minor item in the total expense of the theatre. The many advantages and conveniences connected with the Converter are explained in plain language with just enough of the technical to answer any questions that arise. Shall we send you a copy?

Wagner White-Light Converter, Type S. C. includes converter, transformer element and starting switch. Ballast resistance, polarity switch and ammeter are included as part of the equipment and furnished in separate units.

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

Grauman's Projection Dept.

Mechanics and art join hands to make a perfect screen display of motion pictures and that is why Sid Grauman pays so much detailed attention to the projection rooms in his theatres. Grauman long ago realized that good pictures, if poorly projected, will not be a popular success and this understanding of the screen art is responsible for the minute care with which the projection rooms of Grauman's theatres are equipped.

The very best of projection equipment has been provided for the new Grauman-Egyptian theatre at Hollywood which opened October 18 with Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood." Mr. Grauman spared no expense in fitting up the mechanical booth with the very latest designs of moving picture machinery. More than $5,000 has been spent on the equipment alone, while the effect of environment on the projectionist has been given rein to in the decorative features. Carrying out the Egyptian motif of the theatre, the projection room has been finished in a three tone color scheme. The border of the side walls is studded withh hieroglyphics similar to the ones that once made picture paintings on the border of the Sahara, while the ceiling is toned to the night blue of the sky. With indirect lighting, the booth presents not only an attractive interior, but one also calculated to inspire the projectionist to artistic work.

Mechanical Equipment

The mechanical equipment is of the latest designs now used. It includes two Powers' Six B projectors with Powers' high intensity arc lights, and one Powers' triple dissolver, with which some of the latest coloring effects will be presented in Grauman's Egyptian; three spot lamps casting vari-colored hues, a Westinghouse generator with a capacity of 125 amperes.

This equipment is operated by the projectionist by means of automatic electrical controls arranged in three stations, from any one of which the projectionist will have complete control of the entire equipment.

The comfort of the projection room has been further enhanced by placing the rheostats in a specially made cabinet. Like the main booth, this is ventilated by a fresh air system that insures a constant circulation. Because the rheostats generate an intense heat, the customary plan of installing them in the projection room was abandoned in Grauman's Egyptian and a separate compartment provided and in this cabinet has been placed the Enterprise automatic re-wind.

Adjoining the main booth, entry to which is obtained from the roof, thereby adding to the daylight freshness of the projection room, a film vault has been built. Constructed on the order of a bank safe, with a steel door, this vault is absolutely fireproof, and will insure the safety of the films while they are not being used.

Storage of Film

All attraction to be shown at Grauman's Egyptian will be stored in this vault both befor and during their exhibition runs. Every known safety method of handling the film has been installed in this compartment and any untoward accident to the films has been rendered practically impossible by the precautions taken.

As the French say, the projection room of the Hollywood film temple is the dernier cri in the art of screen projection.

Dear Editors:—You will find the enclosed 25c. for a membership button as I am anxious to join the League and help keep the good work going. I have been reading the Forum for some time and I believe I have the object of the League in my head by this time. I am quite willing to do my share in taking care of films. I always inspect my film before I run it and make out a cue sheet for my change-over signal. There are usually plenty of other signals but if I went by them I would have quite a time. I also am inclosing some strips as evidence of some misframe king's work. Such splices and out of frame to route!

Yours respectfully,
W. G. VANOSDOLL,
Keokuk, Iowa.

Dear Sir:

The National Anti-Misframe League is doing its share on improving projection. I have been studying the Forum for some time and get some valuable pointers from it. I desire to become a member and am enclosing stamps to cover cost of button.

Good luck to the League and a standard of better pictures.

Respectfully,
William Holbrook,

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

New applicants when sending in blanks for membership in the N. A. M. L. please enclose twenty-five cents for a membership button

The house is owned and managed by Messrs. Rosenzweig and Katz, who also own and operate the City Line, Ozone Park and the Florence Theatre, shown on right, which also recently opened in New York. The lobby displays were installed by the Libman-Spanjer Corp., New York City.

Theatre Managers Know

That the curtain and draperies of the house exercise a mighty influence on box office receipts.

Harmony of design, consideration of colors, and appropriate materials decide whether a house is elegant or tawdry.

Our long experience and individual study of each theatre enable us to make draperies pay for themselves plus a profit.

Architects, owners and managers are invited to get our ideas—and we manufacture especially good equipment, too.

The Series Arc M-G Set That Produces Perfect Arcs

TransVerteR (Double Arc Type) is a series arc motor generator, having automatic voltage regulation.

No more amperes used than actually required for the light or dark pictures.

Only such voltage is generated as is used in the arc itself (no ballast being used).

TransVerteR produces better results and uses less current than any other device.

TransVerteR is ball bearing; gives better light and better pictures. It is easy to operate, thoroughly reliable, and is an important factor in drawing full houses, by reason of superior projection.

applies directly to the color principle of which you spoke. If a mistake is made and the wrong color used, the layman may not be able to say directly, "You are wrong," but instinctively he will feel that it is wrong. That is the peculiar psychology of the audience. They may not be able to put their finger on it and say, "that is wrong," but they will feel it is wrong, and therefore we have had trouble. It is far from being developed, but it is going to be developed along the line of the gradation of color and the inter-change of different colors, making any combination that is desired.

MR. CAMPE: Do you make use of gradations in intensity? In other words when you work up to the climax, do you throw on a stronger light?

MR. ROTHAFEL: Yes, in the same way that you can have gradations of sound on the piano, you can have gradations of light. That will not be done by pressure, but automatically. It will be on exactly the same principle of the pipe organ, except that instead of striking a note you will strike color.

DR. MEES: I should like to point out to those who wish to make experiments in this color work, that you can get all the possible combinations of color by the use of the three primaries. If you are designing any organs for that purpose, or if you are doing any experimental work, you can just as well start with the three primaries. There is no need of using any more than three colors, provided you use the right colors to start with. If you do not use the right primaries you will have to have a larger number, but if you choose the right ones, you will need only three.

MR. ROTHAFEL: I never knew that I was going to meet Dr. Mees here, but Dr. Mees has been unanimously appointed a committee of one to consult with us before we go ahead in the further development of this thing, because we have the greatest respect and admiration for Dr. Mees and his opinion.

DR. MEES: I did not want to appear to dictate to those who have been carrying on experiments. I only want to suggest to any others who want to make experiments to start with the three primary colors.

MR. ROTHAPEL: You are perfectly right.

Norwich Palace Theatre Company Formed

Organization of The Norwich Palace Theatre Company, planned to be one of the most modern playhouses in southern New England, given over to both motion pictures and vaudeville, was perfected last week at Norwich, Conn.

Plans and specifications of a modern fireproof theatre have been completed by Cudworth & Thompson, Norwich, architects. Bids on construction and furnishings will be asked within a short time. Construction of the proposed theatre will be of reinforced concrete and steel, with entrance on Rose Place. The house will be built to have a seating capacity of about 1,500. A pipe organ will be installed and the house equipped for handling any dramatic, musical or motion picture program.

Mr. Theatre Owner—Face The Facts

Statistics show that 90% of the Film Fires originate in the projector.

The owner carries Grave Responsibility for the Safety of his patrons against Fire and Panic and is forced to face serious loss even though covered by insurance.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters Says "Protectall" Affords Protection Against Film Fire

Insurance is only a partial cure of the results of fire at heavy cost

"Protectall" Prevents Fire and the Investment is Small

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And yet this prevention costs many times less than the partial cure.

New Classic for Washington, D. C.

D. G. Joseph is erecting the new Classic theatre at 61st and Dix streets, N.E., Washington. The foundations of this two story theatre, store and professional men's office building are complete and the 500 seat house is to open by June 1, 1923. Julius Wenig is the architect. The lobby entrance will be in the center of the building, a drug store occupying the Dix street corner. Representing a $50,000 investment the house will have a spacious stage, and dressing rooms, will run fifty feet on Dix, and 109 feet on 61st. The building is of tapestry brick construction—concrete and steel in the theatre portion and strictly fireproof throughout.

Isis Theatre, Augusta, Ga., Being Remodelled

D. A. Bisagno, local oil man, announces plans for the rebuilding and remodeling of the Isis which will be one of the show spots of the town. The old front of the theatre will be discarded and an entirely new marble front will be erected. The entire interior will be remodeled to give greater seating capacity and the interior decorations will be in keeping with the balance of the house.

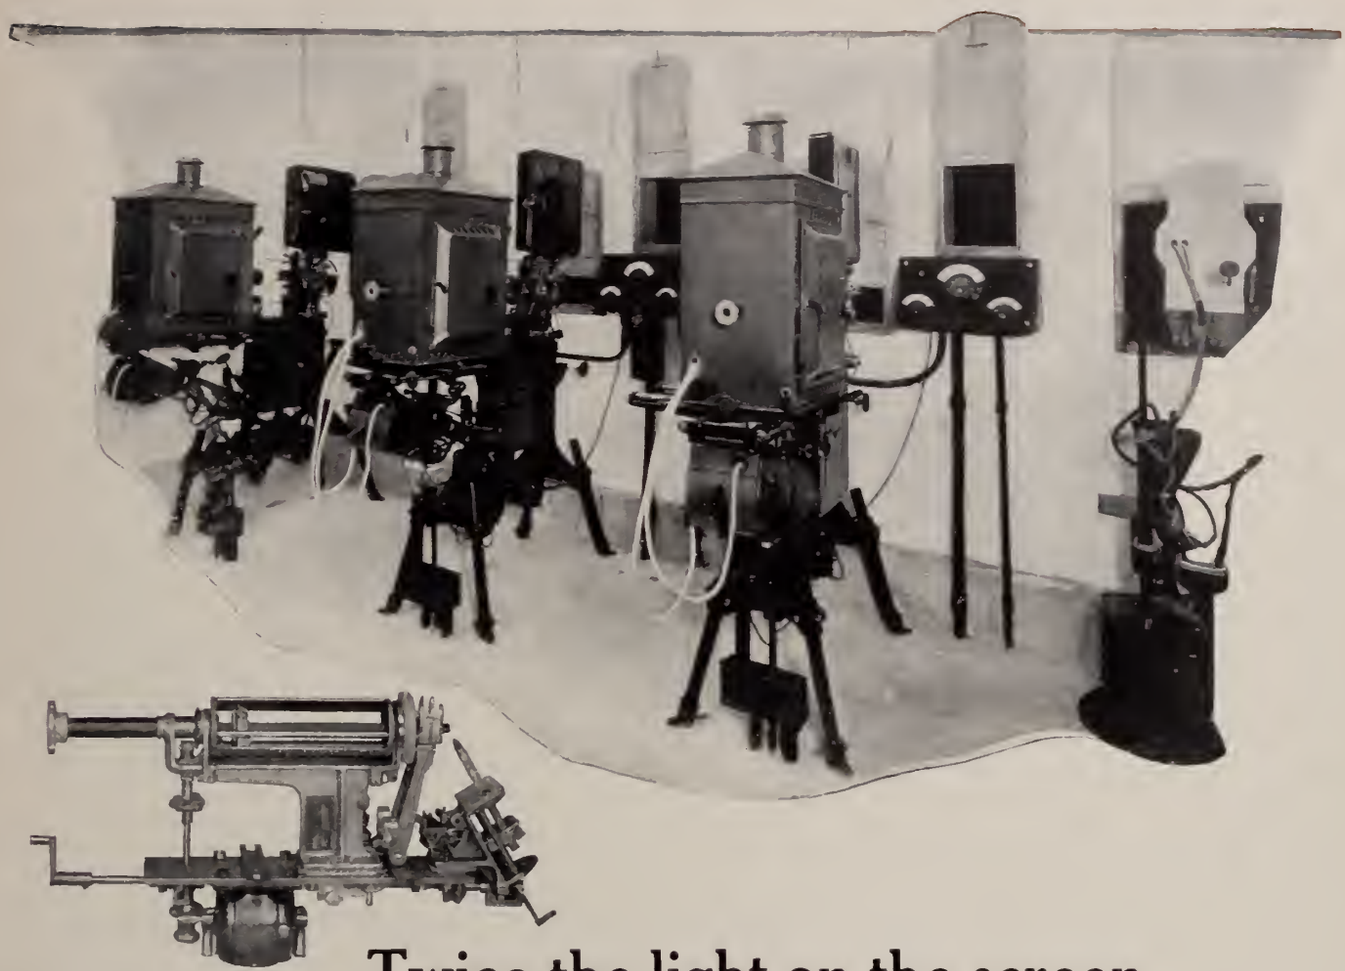
EXTENDS HOLIDAY GREETINGS

THE WILLIAMS PRINTING COMPANY, NEW YORK



Twice the light on the screen with the same current consumption

The G-E High Intensity Projection Arc gives twice the illumination on the screen that can be obtained by use of the older styles of low intensity lamps, with no increase in current consumption. Also the quality of the light is almost the same as daylight lessening eye-strain and giving, in the case of colored films, full color values. After the arc is struck, operation is automatic, there being only two hand adjustments (for regulating size of spot). The focus is fixed; no adjustments are necessary during operation.

All these features are embodied in this lamp which is offered to motion picture exhibitors only after two and a half years of successful operation in actual service. You get the finest films for your theatre—show them to best advantage.

MARION DAVIES

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

MARION DAVIES

When Knighthood Was in Flower, a Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies, stands as the supreme motion picture achievement of all time. Produced at a greater outlay than any other film, with the finest cast ever assembled and the most marvelously beautiful settings ever conceived, every dollar spent upon it is apparent on the screen. Coming at a time when great things were needed, it represents one of the outstanding epochs in picture-making. William Brandt summed up its importance, when, addressing the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, he declared:

"The industry needed something to buoy it up —some big thing that would restore confidence. Right at this crucial moment comes William Randolph Hearst with a great picture, When Knighthood Was in Flower, one of the few really wonderful pictures ever made. Its effect has been magically beneficial. The entire industry owes a vote of thanks to Mr. Hearst."

Beginning its pre-release engagement at the Criterion Theatre in New York on Sept. 14, and at the Scala Theatre in London with the Prince of Wales in attendance, "Knighthood" is still the sensation of Broadway, reflecting its glory along the famous street and actually bringing prosperity to other pictures because of its unprecedented success.

Not since "The Birth of a Nation" has a photoplay attracted such attention nor scored such a success. Never has there been such unanimous praise from the critics. Never such glowing approbation to a star's work as has been heaped upon Marion Davies in the role of Mary Tudor. From city to city as other pre-releases followed, the peans of praise continue—praise for the cast, for Joseph Urban's exquisite settings, for Robert G. Vignola's direction, for the delightful love story of Charles Major, for its historical accuracy, for the sumptuousness of it all. There has not been one dissenting voice. All have acclaimed

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER has stirred the critics of the daily newspapers in leading cities to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Here are a few excerpts culled from scores of glowing tributes to this wonder picture:

"When Knighthood Was in Flower is dazzling to the eye, splendidly impressive and apparently true to the time and places of its settings. Marion Davies really outdoes herself, while Lyn Harding is a joy. Such a King! Such a King!"—J. O. Speering, N. Y. Times.

"It seems to us that this picture is every bit as important to see as any play on Broadway. It marks a high point in the art of entertainment and in the art of the American motion picture studio. We whole-heartedly commend it to every man, woman and child to whom romance and beauty are not mere words in dictionaries."—N. Y. Daily News.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower is one of the greatest film epics ever made in America; in fact, the picture merits visit after visit to grasp all its glories."—Robert G. Welsh, N. Y. Evening Telegram.

"The most amazingly beautiful motion picture ever screened. Moves swiftly, never wearying, and leaving at the last a regret that it is over."—N. Y. Mail.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower is everything that a spectacular photoplay should be. It is beautiful, exciting, vivid and authentic. It is a great picture."—R. E. Sherwood, Life.

"If the motion picture public fails to appreciate When Knighthood Was in Flower, then its plea for better films is all a sham."
—Boston Post.

"For gorgeousness and sheer beauty, there probably has never been another photoplay that can equal this one."—Boston Globe.

"A gorgeous spectacle not to be missed."
—Boston Traveler.

"Neither time, thought nor expense has been spared to make When Knighthood Was in Flower what it is—a truly gorgeous spectacle."—Mae Tinne, Chicago Tribune.

"One of the most glittering and magnificent screen plays ever produced. When Knighthood Was in Flower does not disappoint, but sends its audience from the theatre thrilled and enchanted."—Detroit Free Press.

"It is the richest, most entertaining and by far the most spectacular photoplay that we have ever seen."—Detroit Times.

"Marion Davies is a star of the first magnitude, and When Knighthood Was in Flower is one of the half dozen finest pictures ever screened."—Milwaukee Journal.

"Even better than we were led to expect."
—Washington Star.

"Marvelously beautiful.'
—Washington Herald.

"One of the most beautiful specimens of the film producers' arts that the world has ever seen."—London Daily Telegraph.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower is indisputably the most brilliant photoplay of a season strikingly illumined by brilliant photoplays."—Guy Price, Los Angeles Eve. Herald.

The New York Mail declares When Knighthood Was in Flower

SETS A NEW STANDARD IN MAGNIFICENCE

"MARION DAVIES gives a performance of the modern, stubborn, adorable Mary that is not only the best thing she has ever done, but one of the finest performances ever given by any actress."—Louella O. Parsons, Morning Telegraph.

"MARION DAVIES as the merry little sister of bluff King Hal shows new artistic skill. She mingles comedy and pathos something of the quality of Mary Pickford."—N. Y. Evening Telegram.

"THIS picture is all that has been claimed for it, and Marion Davies acts as well as she looks in the role of the spirited young queen. The people simply burst into applause again and again."—Harriette Underhill, N. Y. Tribune.

"MISS DAVIES is wonderfully clever. She is one of the most beautiful girls I have ever seen on the screen. What else has she appeared in? I would like to see them all."—Edward Albert, Prince of Wales.

"THE scene showing Marion Davies in an attitude of prayer as her beloved goes to the axe, is one of the finest moments which we have seen in the cinema, and the underplaying, rather than the overplaying of Princess Mary's bedroom scene, is something to be thought about."—Quinn Martin, N. Y. World.

MARION DAVIES

WHEN Knighthood Was in Flower, which has justly earned the reputation of "the most beautiful picture ever made," is also the most costly. It was filmed in 160 working days at an expense of $1,221,491.20. This represents $47,634.32 a day or $954.29 an hour for an eight-hour working day.

More than three thousand actors, including fifty-five principals, appeared in one scene. For this the largest indoor set ever filmed was constructed. It covered 28,000 square feet of floor space and contained 32 separate buildings.

No picture has ever had such a great cast of splendid actors recruited from both stage and screen. Lyn Harding, who plays the role of King Henry VIII, was brought over from England especially for this picture.

Every object used in the magnificent court scenes is a genuine antique or an exact duplicate of one. Both Europe and America were scoured for art objects which would give the exact atmosphere of Tudor times.

The great hall of Hampton Court palace is reproduced exactly as it was in the time of King Henry VIII.

Genuine gothic tapestries valued at $230,000 were used.

Antique jewelry and silverware used are worth $1,000,000.

Three thousand costumes of the Tudor period represent an expenditure of $100,000.

The wedding dress alone worn by Miss Davies when, as Princess Mary Tudor, she became the bride of old King Louis XII of France, cost $1,500 and is so heavily laden with gems it weighs twenty-five pounds.

Twenty expert swordsmen engaged in the thrilling duel scenes.

One of the most spectacular feats ever filmed is where Princess Mary and Charles Brandon on horseback jump off a bridge thirty feet high and into the river to escape the king's pursuers.

Thirty-three cavalry horses are used in this scene.

Director Robert G. Vignola and Assistant Director Phil Carle were aided by fifteen assistants, so stupendous were the demands of the production. In all the big sets a complete telephone system was installed through which the directing was done.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

NEVER have the trade papers been so unanimous in their endorsement of a picture as they have been of "Knighthood." Here is some of the comment:

"What a picture! What a production! What a cast! Everybody. In this industry. From executives. To errand boys. Should see it. And feel proud. That they are in the picture business. Lord knows. You don't get that chance. Too often."—Danny in The Film Daily.

"Cosmopolitan's stupendous picture When Knighthood Was in Flower has made screen history. It is not only Cosmopolitan's greatest achievement, it is one of the greatest achievements of the silver sheet. It stands as a monument for the industry. None have excelled it in its appeal to the eye, the heart and the imagination. Very few have equalled it."—William A. Johnson in The Motion Picture News.

"It is safe to say that never has a picture been produced of greater beauty. It will cause you to believe the advance statements of its huge costs, for it all shows in the film."—Moving Picture World.

"It is a picture of tremendous beauty. For sheer pictorial appeal, it sets an enviable standard. It is enacted by as competent and satisfying a cast as could be wished for. It is, on the whole, the sort of production that reflects glory upon everyone who has had a hand in achieving the final result."—Martin J. Quigley in The Exhibitors' Herald.

"Let us give our homage to When Knighthood Was in Flower. William Randolph Hearst has made a great picture—a picture that the entire motion picture industry can be proud to claim. If there were more like it, we should not now be fighting a set of paid reformers and a lot of fanatic legislators."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower far exceeds anything that was anticipated. It easily bears out all the things that have been said for it. The production is gorgeous, the direction excellent, the acting masterful, and it is real entertainment. Furthermore, the picture looks like the money that is claimed to have been spent on it. Put your order in and get ready to have it work for you."—Film Daily.

"Save for the war period, when pictures did rise to their great opportunities, we have had no great pictures, great in concept, since 'Intolerance'"

William A. Johnston in an editorial in the Motion Picture News

Paramount has just completed a drama which is certainly great in concept. No period of American history offers greater material for the motion picture than the period of 1849, and to make this epoch live again, in all its romance, its daring and its achievement, has been the aim behind the making of "The Covered Wagon".

Those who were charged with the responsibility of making the picture have had a full realization of their opportunity to record indelibly a phase of American life which is fast becoming extinct. It is doubtful if such a picture as "The Covered Wagon" could be adequately made a few years from now.

There is scarcely a family in America which cannot point with pride to some grandfather or great-grandfather who participated in one of the greatest migrations known to history. The human incidents occurring by the minute in a group of two or three thousand people who made up the famous wagon trains, beset by dangers on all sides, are the elements which will make "The Covered Wagon" a picture great in entertainment value as well as great in concept—

And greatest in box-office appeal!

A fortune has been spent in making this picture. Three thousand people lived in the desert, eighty miles from a railroad, for over three months. A thousand Indians were transported from reservations hundreds of miles away. Three hundred wagons were built.

"The Covered Wagon" has been produced with all the facilities that the great Paramount organization can command. It was directed by James Cruze. Jack Cunningham made the adaption from the novel by Emerson Hough.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

My Dear Mr. Hammons: 15 December, 1922.

I have just had the pleasure of using your film "Via Radio" to illustrate a part of a lecture which I recently gave in this city.

The film is a highly creditable supplement to the popular literature on this subject, and with the great interest now exhibited by the public in radio this film should prove very appealing to them.

While it is accurate from a scientific point of view, it tells its story in a way that makes it readily understood by all who see it.

Very truly yours,

My dear Mr. Hammons:

Permit me to congratulate you upon your film, "Via Radio," which I have had the pleasure of reviewing.

There is no more fascinating subject than radio. At the same time, radio is an intricate subject to explain to the layman. Nevertheless, I was pleasantly surprised to note how clearly and entertainingly the various phases of radio have been explained in your film, "Via Radio," so that anyone could obtain a broad knowledge of the subject. Of the many popular science pictures I have seen, this is certainly the most interesting and entertaining picture. It holds the interest from start to finish.

Indeed, it seems to end too soon!

Again congratulating you upon producing such an excellent single-reel picture, I am

Yours very faithfully,

E. W. HAMMONS, President

"The Man Who Waited" is a reliable, rattling good western with an abundance of action, mystery, suspense and romance which stamps it far out of the ordinary. Its hero is a youth whose one aim is to find and punish the man who wronged his father. But even after he penetrates the villain's disguise, he finds it a job to capture the rogue; and between chasing the villain, keeping secret the location of his mine and winning the heart of a girl, who proves to be the daughter of the bad man, the hero is on the jump every minute of the feature's five reels.

Edward I. Luddy, who wrote and directed "The Man Who Waited," started off the excitement by staging a rousing good fight at the beginning and kept the picture geared up to a high dramatic speed. The surprise climax comes after a thrilling race from the isolated gold mine to the desert town to file a claim. The villains are in the lead and the hero springs some spectacular riding to beat them to it.

Frank Braidwood, in the title role, has a decidedly attractive personality and can ride a horse like a demon. You can guarantee genuine thrills whenever he springs into the saddle. Inez MacDonald is pretty and everything expected of a dashing, spirited Western heroine. Jay Morley is a thorough bad man.

Play up "The Man Who Waited" as a Western thriller and ballyhoo it to the limit. Make a play on the title in your advertising and exploitation. Send out a man in a Western outfit with a bag on which is lettered: "I'm a stranger in town and missed 'The Man Who Waited' at the depot. Will someone direct me to the ..... theatre?" Bill the feature as "A Drama of Stolen Gold and Stolen Hearts" or "A Thrilling Tale of Fortunes Made, Lost and Regained."

Use the following copy in your newspaper advertisements; go and see a son track down his father's enemies and frustrate their dastardly plot against himself. The terrific explosion of a gold mine—hundreds of miners trapped. A wild race on horseback over hills and plains, a spectacular fall and the rescue by an intelligent horse. It's a western drama of thrills and action—"The Man Who Waited."

Newspaper reviews, trade paper opinions, exhibitor comment, news articles from exchange cities, theatre lists showing an amazing array of bookings in large and small communities. These, and similar reports, have been published week by week. They give impressive support to the fact that "The Isle of Doubt" is a decided success.

Wyndham Standing and Dorothy Mackaill are splendid. The former did great work in "Earthbound," "The Iron Trail" and with Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through" Miss Mackaill was once a famous Ziegfeld beauty. She has a good screen opportunity in "A Woman's Woman." No better name could be suggested for a character part than George Fawcett, who, says Film Daily, is "always reliable and entertaining."

The production has drama, comedy, action and all the necessary ingredients for popularity. The Exhibitors Herald puts it clearly in saying, "'The Isle of Doubt' is a picture of qualities which make it worth while entertainment." The Moving Picture World backed up this assertion by declaring, "the production reveals an unmistakable knowledge of what proves interesting on the screen."

The story has a new twist. When a wife attempts to deceive her husband and plots to eventually marry another man, the husband calmly proceeds to test the worth of his rival. Should the scamp prove his manhood, he would have a chance of securing the girl.

"The Isle of Doubt" made good at the Marcus Loew theatres in Greater New York; the Modern and Beacon in Boston; Heilig, Portland, Ore.; Gifts, Cincinnati; Regent, Kansas City; Majestic, Des Moines; Royal, Toledo; Savoy, Buffalo; Dixie, Galveston; Rivoli, Denver; Lyric, Tulsa; Hippodrome, San Francisco and literally hundreds of other theatres.

Jack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish!"

Both star and title will pull for the box-office because both artist and story are known everywhere pictures are shown, and by all classes of theatre patrons.

And in addition there are exceptional all-star supporting players cast especially for this Jack Pickford feature.

A beautiful love story so beautifully told that it will catch and hold any type of audience.

A villain whose undoing is wrought so skilfully that the spectator is kept guessing right up to the very last.

Thrills! Romance! Action! Adventure!

DISTINCTIVE PERFORMANCE

If you could gain the whole world by digging a twenty-mile ditch in the sand, would you do it? You would!

A great man once got the earth's biggest ditch in the sand—the Suez Canal—by a bloodless fight with his enemies. He had courage and power. Those same qualities enabled Distinctive Productions to make one of the world's master films, based on the life of this man and bearing his name as a title:

Disraeli

There is more satisfaction and real fun in working than ordinary men realize. There was more satisfaction and fun in the film story which proves this point than screen fans usually get. The picture was Distinctive's

The Ruling Passion

If you work hard you'll be happy. If you can, in addition, put your heart in your work you'll be much happier. You then will get as much solid pleasure in life as screen patrons got from the Distinctive film based on this idea. The film was

The Man Who Played God

The qualities depicted in these films are the qualities which typify the company responsible for them. Distinctive has had courage and power to plan distinctive pictures for the pictures' sake . . . Distinctive believes in working long and hard to get results . . . Distinctive knows that the pictures which make the public happy are the ones which entertain through heart interest . . . Distinctive has put its heart in the task of pleasing the public by its product.

DISTINCTIVE PROMISE

Distinctive pictures corporation promises that its future productions will possess all the qualities of its past ones.

It further promises that its executives will never be content to put out a picture merely "just as good" as the previous one. It will have to be better to please them. They have put their minds and hearts to the accomplishment of this task. The first new Distinctive picture will be

Backbone

Here is a story of never-dying love, of criminal plotting, heroic counter-plotting and powerful conflicts. Clarence Budington Kelland wrote it for the Saturday Evening Post. Every motion picture producer in the country was in on the bidding for it. Distinctive got it! Edith Roberts and Alfred Lunt head a distinctive cast, with Edward Sloman directing. Backbone will be ready soon. Next will come based on Harold MacGrath's novel of the South Seas. A wonderful girl, her soul chilled to terror by heartless environment, struggles to escape. A boy, tormented by his New England conscience, seeks to bury himself in the life which appalled the girl. They meet, and solve each other's problem. How? This picture will reveal to you a new and strange story. Harmon Weight will direct it.

The Ragged Edge

Just the Beginning

These two great stories are the forerunners of others. Distinctive will put into the filming of them all those qualities which go to the production of great pictures.

"The TOWN THAT

Heralded as a Masterpiece

Evening Mail:—

"There are two outstanding features in the new William Fox picture at the Astor Theatre. One is a superlative performance of a small boy and the other is a marvelous storm and flood effect...It is a masterpiece of realism, so vivid that one expects the theatre to be swept away in the path of the raging torrent. It is a tremendous thing—that storm—with an entire town, built for the purpose, completely destroyed by the flood...This picture is done with real power. One's tear ducts must be particularly dry to resist the appeal of some of the scenes in it."

Morning World:

"We have been proceeding on the theory for some months that we were storm-proof, as far as motion pictures were concerned... But at the Astor Theatre last night for the first time since we got up and yelled for some one to rescue Lillian Gish in 'Way Down East', we were face to face with a cinema storm so terrifying, so catastrophic, so beastly real that we shivered in our boots, and actually forgot that such a thing as a motion picture camera ever had been invented. If there ever was a scene of fury pictured on a cinema screen, here it is. It is the storm of storms. It will get you, too."

by New York's Leading Critics

Tribune:—

"If we were William Fox and owned a deluge such as he is presenting at the Astor Theatre in a picture called 'The Town That Forgot God', we surely should use it in every picture screened for the next ten years. Such a flood has no place on the shelf, no matter how old it gets...We thought there was a marvelous storm in 'The Old Homestead', and again we thrilled at the storm in 'One Exciting Night', and again in 'The Sin Flood', but all these put together would just about equal the deluge in 'The Town That Forgot God.'"

Evening World:

"In presenting 'The Town That Forgot God' at the Astor Theatre, William Fox has given Broadway one of the most powerful photodramas yet seen. Viewed from every angle the film is practically faultless. The play finds a fitting climax in one of the most spectacular flood scenes yet filmed...In 'The Town That Forgot God', William Fox has lived up to his reputation for the spectacular and heart-touching melodrama. It is well worth a trip to the Astor."

The KINGDOM WITHIN

Will Stir the Hearts of the World

M. P. NEWS: It's a good audience picture, finely staged, and carrying a plot which holds the interest all the way. The acting is splendid as contributed by Russell Simpson, Pauline Starke and Ernest Torrence.
Good for any type of audience and should draw most everywhere.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: "The Kingdom Within" should be well received in places where sentimentality is enjoyed.
The story is melodramatic and works up to a good climax.

EXHIBITORS HERALD: Excellent direction of capable players in a dramatic and all absorbing story stamp this feature as one of more than ordinary entertainment qualities. Swift-moving, unfaltering in interest, with its genuine appeal to the emotions it is rare entertainment of a substantial variety founded on a beautiful thought.
Thoroughly convincing dramatic production. Type of picture that is not readily forgotten. It is the type of picture that should make friends for the cinema among the more fastidious of a community.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: A powerful drama of life in the timberlands; the direction throughout is excellent and so is the acting of the featured players as well as that of the supporting cast.

"The Kingdom Within", a title, by the way' that is replete with meaning, should prove absorbing to any audience.

FILM DAILY: Effective dramatic moments and a satisfying dramatic entertainment generally.
For those who like a rather strong dramatic entertainment and favor a theme which makes faith all powerful, the picture should prove wholly satisfying.

M. P. JOURNAL, N. Y.: Excellent drama, based on a strong story, together with a well chosen and capable cast, including Pauline Starke, Gaston Glass, and Ernest Torrence. First runs indicate tremendous box-office possibilities, if exhibitor will advertise his booking. Picture may be included among the best of winter season, and is a big program special. Sure money winner.

M. P. WORLD: Intensely dramatic is the story of "The Kingdom Within," the Victor Schertzinger production which is being distributed by Hodkinson. It is a production which tells a gripping story and holds the interest throughout.
It is a picture which is quite different from the usual run and because of this and its strongly dramatic story, wealth of spiritual insight and acting of a fine cast, should prove welcome in the majority of theatres.

The Modern Version of

...would get out of the territory ... who say ... does not resemble a game?

OUR tip to the trade in general is to watch Charles C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., and of Affiliated Distributors, Inc. His second Johnny Hines picture, "Sure-Fire Flint," is a big box office winner. And the showing of his Whitman Bennett all-star feature, "Secrets of Paris" makes our view of that production absolutely absurd. Eddie Fay, back in Providence, mopped up with the picture and we heard this week that other first run exhibitors were equally as successful in their engagements. The all-star cast is drawing them to the box office and the picture is seemingly entertaining the public; for reports on hand indicate bigger second-day business, and, after all, that is the real answer to a picture's value to the public as an entertainment vehicle.

BILL KRAFT'S stunt in Passaic, N. J., on "I Am The Law," which the New York Apollo Exchange is distributing in the metropolitan district, was one of the best of the year, for the New Jersey papers were not ... to fall. Every New York newspaper ... it on the first page, "fell" for ...

Carter DeHaven Comedies

PRESENTED BY P. A. POWERS

Every new release adds hundreds of exhibitors to the already large list of shrewd showmen who recognize the Carter De Haven Comedies as the super de luxe comedy material of the entire motion picture industry. These marvelous laugh- and money-getters are sweeping their way into the finest theatres in the land.

Grab This Latest Laughing Fest

It's a howling hurricane of hilarity—a towering typhoon of rib-tickling gags—a lilting landslide of honest-to-God LAUGHS. It's cram-jam packed to over-flowing with the sort of comedy surprises that start a laugh way down in the pit of your stomach and roll it out in a pealing sunburst of gloom-shattering shrieks.

Its atmosphere of "class" adds immeasurably to the power of its claim for a place on the program of the finest theatres in the world, and its general appeal makes it just as gigantic a bet on Main Street as it is on Broadway.

FAIRE BINNEY

After "My Old Kentucky Home," "Queen of the Moulin Rouge," "His Wife's Husband" and other Pyramid pictures that have their popularity by showing their drawing power at the box-office, it is saying a good deal for a picture to announce that exhibitors, the public and the critics like it better than any Pyramid Production released to date, and that exhibitors have proved their liking for it by booking it more rapidly than any previous Pyramid Production.

Moving Picture World: "What Fools Men Are" offers something that is worth the attention of every up-to-the-minute exhibitor. Faire Binney gives a remarkably clever performance of a girl with a jazz soul. Many opportunities for pointed exploitation and the public is sure to be interested.

Trade Review: A well told story, with new twists that sharpen the interest. It's another triangle story that proves at the same time to be a splendid drama. Will appeal to the married patrons and also the young girls of any community.

New York Tribune: In our opinion Faire Binney has become the most ravishing of all the baby vamps. She certainly is a little beauty, filled with personality and temperament, and she makes "What Fools Men Are" a mighty interesting picture.

Film Daily: Here is a first rate box-office attraction if properly handled by the exhibitor. There are a lot of picture goers who will come out strong for a picture like this. It should prove quite popular and be a good one for the box-office. Has fine exploitation possibilities and contains a definite audience appeal.

New York Journal: The cross-play of emotions in this quadrangular love problem are developed very well and there are two or three big scenes with strong dramatic values.

Motion Picture Journal: "What Fools Men Are" should prove a first rate box-office attraction.

New York Telegraph: In this picture Faire Binney is thoroughly adorable. Her eyes shatter every business-suited heart in sight, including that of her sister's husband.

New York American: "What Fools Men Are" shows the flapper craze at its height. It is interesting, emotional and intriguing and makes a vivid picture.

New York Telegram: "What Fools Men Are" is one of the best pictures of the current season and one that both the flapper and conservative should see.

A TASTE OF THE PLOT

After 20 years of married life, John Emerson wakes up to the fact that romance has fled. His wife treats him more like a son than a lover. He attempts to recall their sweetheart days but his wife tells him they are too old for such silly nonsense. Leaving for New York on business he meets a young and charming woman. The chance acquaintance develops into a warm friendship. John finds his departed youth again. He spends his time with the girl at the race track and at the cabarets and finally in an unguarded moment he finds the girl in his arms. He writes to his wife that he will not return. That evening he calls on the girl and finds her in the arms of another man, her fiance. She shatters his dream with the statement: "Surely you were not in earnest. Why, you are old enough to be my father." John wakes to his mistake and sees the wrong he has done his wife. Then comes a race in a motor to catch the train bearing his letter home. He reaches home without being able to get the letter. His wife has read it but pretends to be ignorant of its contents. Her eyes are opened, however, and when she finds John is truly penitent, a new romance comes.

POINTS OF APPEAL

Here is a picture with universal appeal. As the Motion Picture News says:

"It is good for any house, anywhere."

The Exhibitors Herald says:

"This will likely be one of the big box office attractions of the year. No phase of box office appeal has been overlooked."

And the Los Angeles Times says:

"If the public doesn't take to this like a duck to water, I shall cease worrying about pictures and begin worrying about audiences."

There is romance and a domestic problem that strikes home to everyone.

There is unusual suspense and many thrills, including some of the finest race track scenes ever screened and a race of automobile with a fast express, including the smashing of the auto by the train at a crossing.

There is an all star cast with the most finished acting on the part of Lewis S. Stone and Cleo Madison.

Wonderful photography, with unusually artistic and attractive interiors and exteriors. Direction as nearly perfect as it is humanly possible. John M. Stahl has put all the human touches that go to make this a great picture.

CHARACTER OF STORY

A society drama that is different from anything ever before presented. A domestic problem that treats of the dangerous age, which with men is about 40, when their wives have put aside romance to become mothers and housewives and are no longer sweethearts and companions to their husbands.

EXPLOITATION

Here also is a title to conjure with. You can stir up public interest to a white hot pitch on the question of what is the dangerous age—for men—for women. There are scores of sure fire exploitation angles. Ask your First National exchange for a press sheet, which will tell you how to put it over big at little cost.

"John has left me for a younger woman!"

"You put away romance with your baby's first shoes!"

Big Booking Bulletin No. 2

The Chicago Herald and Examiner Says:

"'The Hottentot' caused an uproar. The audience laughed so much they just couldn't stop. The first scenes set them chuckling, and from then on to the end there was a most hilarious time. They laughed until they almost became hysterical and their sides must have been sore. Certainly diverting and refreshing, with mirth and thrills."

Buy Right

WE have been asked to venture our opinion upon the proposition of having an exhibitors' National Organization—the M. P. T. O. A.—go into the distributing business.

It is difficult to give a definite opinion, because no definite proposition seems to exist.

It appeared at the last National Convention of the M. P. T. O. A. that the organization had no constitution. One, we believe, was written during the Convention. But it has not been published. So we do not know what provision is made as to the League's rights and purposes in this important connection.

* * *

The National Organization is an association of state units, each undoubtedly with rights and purposes of its own.

So it does not appear that the National Organization is—as yet at least—prepared to enter, as a whole, the distributing business.

An incorporated body, therefore, even though headed by the officers of the League, is not the Exhibitors' League.

The proposition then becomes a straight commercial one—namely an attempt to interest exhibitors as stockholders in a cooperative distributing organization.

As such the idea is by no means new. A previous venture along these lines and organized by a former League President was a failure, entailing a loss to the stockholders. The First National Exhibitors Circuit later organized by powerful exhibitors in strategic points proved a success.

The matter is simply one, then, of an exhibitor buying stock in a commercial enterprise; and that is his own business strictly, not ours. We have only to remark what he already knows that the success of any enterprise depends always and mostly upon the acumen, experience and interests of the men who run it.

As to the idea in general of exhibitors entering the distributing business as a way out of their present difficulties our mind goes back to a convention of the New York State League held at Albany a year or so ago.

Heated speeches were made from the floor; and details were given of exorbitant rentals and distributor oppression.

But silence came, we clearly recall, and no argument was forthcoming when an exhibitor arose and said that he had no trouble because he "bought right"; and he stated emphatically that if every exhibitor would use the good buying sense of any retailer he would not find it necessary to put his head in another noose in order to untie one already around his neck.

We are not trying to preach down your troubles. We know they exist pretty nearly as well as you do.

But you've got to look at things—if they are to be corrected properly—from the broad viewpoint of the entire industry.

Production is wrong today because distribution is wrong; and distribution is wrong—to a great degree—because exhibition is certainly not all it should be.

We need basic improvements—like percentage booking, a credit system, neutral distribution, advertising, to correct things all along the line. You can only better yourself permanently as the other fellow—the producer and distributor—betters himself. That's gospel truth.

And these improvements are bound to come. We are on the eve of them now.

In the meantime stick to the knitting you know about—and know it better!

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

IN a previous issue of the NEWS it was mentioned in this department that the Chicago & Alton Railroad was establishing screen entertainment for its travelers who journeyed on through trains in the night. One of their passengers was seated in the parlor car the night of December 12th when the porter announced "Movin' pictuahs in the dining cah. Passengahs invited."

Time and distance were forgotten while Harold Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy" was shown on the screen at one end of the car, while the projecting machine was on a table at the other end. Tables had been removed, shades pulled, and chairs arranged at the sides of the car, making a miniature picture theatre traveling at express train speed.

Contrary to what was anticipated, there was no objectionable vibration. Electric current for the projector was obtained from the generator and storage battery of the car, the same used in lighting the train. The experiment was successful and motion pictures are planned as regular features to relieve the tedium of the long hours of traveling.

IT looks like a pretty nifty cast which George Archainbaud has lined up for the Selznick picture. "The Common Law," —a cast that includes Elliot Dexter, Corinne Griffith, Bryant Washburn, Miss DuPont, Hobart Bosworth, Phyllis Haver and Harry Myers.

WERE you among the fortunates who saw the stage production of "Grumpy"? Cyril Maude, the English actor, played the title role. As a screen production it should give Theodore Roberts the chance of a lifetime to show his skill at characterization. William De Mille, who is making the production for Paramount, has engaged May McAvoy to appear in the leading feminine role.

OLD LADY RUMOR has it that Ann Pennington (you remember Ann as a Lasky star a few short years ago) is leaving for the Coast to make a picture. The diminutive comedienne, it is understood, will have a test made as soon as she reaches Los Angeles, since the production depends entirely how she screens at the present time. The intervening seasons have been very kind to Ann Pennington if one may judge from the piquancy and charm of her personality as she graced a few of our musical shows.

MRS. EDWARD B. McLEAN, a member of Washington society, gave a private screening recently of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" in her home for Vice-President Coolidge, members of the President's Cabinet, the Senate and House of Representatives and the diplomatic corps. Among those present were: Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State, and Mrs. Hughes, Secretary of the Interior Fall and Mrs. Fall, President Lasker of the Shipping Board, Sir Eric Geddes, the British Ambassador, and Lady Geddes, Jules Jusserand, the French Ambassador, and Mme. Jusserand, Attorney General Daugherty, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, General Pershing, Secretary of the Navy Denby, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, Congressman Longworth and Mrs. Longworth, Senator Ernst of Kentucky and Senator Elkins of West Virginia.

A RECENT arrival in New York is J. Epstein, the French director, who will be found at the Hotel Astor with a print of his production, "Pasteur," the film depicting the life and deeds of the great scientist, Louis Pasteur, whose centenary is soon to be celebrated.

HAL ROACH is in New York on a short visit—his first for more than a year. With "Dr. Jack" already on the road to success and Harold Lloyd busy on a new comedy to succeed "Safety Last," completed several weeks ago, Mr. Roach felt that the trip was coming to him.

Although his visit is mainly of a social nature, Mr. Roach said that he would, of course, discuss the matter of future productions with officials of Pathe, which distributes his company's product. The producer intimated that he was also interested in discovering whether the metropolis held any particularly promising young leading woman suitable for work in any of his comedy units.

Mr. Roach must have felt highly gratified over the reception of "Dr. Jack" at the Strand. It had 'em laughing for sixty minutes.

BENJAMIN DE CASSERES, the demon free lance, who doubles in brass writing titles and supervising scripts for Paramount productions at the Long Island City studio, has made a few dozen New Year wishes. In one of them he hopes to see a picture wherein Nita Naldi and Pola Negri try to vamp Rodolph Valentino for ten reels.

YOU wouldn't think to look at Buck Jones as he jumps into that lil' ol' saddle that he once kicked up considerable dust in Mack Sennett's Keystone comedies. Sure as shootin'.

ALL the circuses wintering in Southern California are cooperating with Jackie Coogan toward providing the genuine atmosphere of the big tops for his next picture, "Toby Tyler." Jackie's circus was presented to the Los Angeles public recently to supply the needs of the Near East Emergency Relief Fund which pleads for the outraged and perishing children of Armenia. Seven tents covered the lot of the "Toby Tyler Shows," and the performers were members of the Al G. Barnes Shows and the Sells-Floto organization. There were Martha Florine, equestrienne with Barnes, Tom Atkinson and his dog and pony show from Sells-Floto, Mike Braham with his high school horses from Barnes, Mike and his bucking mule from Ringlings, and several freaks from the side shows of the combined circuses. The menagerie was present too. The ringmaster was the director, Eddie Kline.

"Toby Tyler" tells the story of a small boy's adventures during ten weeks while he was with a circus after running away from home. It looks like a winner. Circus stories never fail.

GEORGE HERNANDEZ, who has endeared himself to picturegoers through his comedy characterizations, has heard the last call of "Camera." The veteran actor of screen and stage died last Sunday night in Glendale, a suburb of Los Angeles. He was fifty-nine years old. He had been an actor nearly forty years. He is survived by his widow, Anna Dodge, an actress. Mr. Hernandez has appeared under the banners of Selig, Metro, Universal, Paramount, Thomas H. Ince, Triangle, and Benjamin B. Hampton.

ANOTHER arrival on the Coast is William V. D. Kelley, technical advisor of Prizma, who will begin work on plans for his company's new print laboratory to be established in Hollywood this month. It is designed to supply negative and the first color positive print only. Quantity release prints for producers using the Prizma color title prints will be made for the time being at the fully equipped Jersey City laboratory.

THE National Board of Review, in its bulletin of the last week of December, selects "Milady," issued by American Releasing, and "The World's Applause," issued by Paramount, as worthy of the asterisk denoting particularly fine pictures.

FLORA FINCH, whose screen experience goes back to the days of John Bunny, and who was reported last week as being seriously wounded at the Jamaica Hospital, is in an even graver situation according to the latest bulletins issued by the hospital authorities. Mrs. Finch is flat on her back in a plaster cast and it will probably be several weeks or more before she will be able to leave the hospital in a convalescent condition. An x-ray examination taken at the hospital revealed the fact that the actress had sustained a badly fractured thigh bone. Mrs. Finch was working in "Luck," the Johnny Hines picture, when she suffered her injury. It is hoped by her friends in and out of the industry that she makes a speedy recovery.

NONE of them are related to one another. Who? Theodore Roberts and Edith Roberts; Douglas Fairbanks and William Fairbanks; Bill Hart and Neal Hart; Bill Farnum, brother Dustin and Franklyn Farnum; Norma Talmadge, sister Constance and Richard Talmadge; Tom Mix and Buck Mix; Macklyn Arbuckle and "Fatty" Arbuckle; Lila Lee and Rowland Lee; Alice Brady and Edward Brady; Stuart Holmes and Helen Holmes; Hoot Gibson and Helen Gibson; Mae Murray and Charles Murray.

HUGO BALLIN is making "Vanity Fair" as Thackeray wrote it, without addition, subtraction or moderation other than eliminating several characters. Characters? There are seventy-three introduced in the novel, which if they found their way to the screen would necessitate using nine reels of sub-titles. So many will be marked absent.

BETTY COMPSON, who recently completed "The White Flower" at the Lasky studio, arrived in New York last Saturday to spend New Year's, do a little shopping and see a few shows. She will return to Hollywood, January 11, to start her next picture.

ALLAN DWAN and his "Glimpses of the Moon" company have returned to New York from Miami, Fla. Among the players who glimpsed the moon through the branches of the sheltering palms are Bebe Daniels, David Powell, Charles Gerrard, Nita Naldi, Rubye de Remer, and Maurice Costello.

THE Federal Trade Commission has made reply to Sydney S. Cohen, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in reply to his application, in behalf of the Exhibitor organization against the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers on account of alleged violation of the law against unfair methods of competition by the imposition of a tax or royalty on motion picture theatres for the right to play copyrighted music of its members. The Commission states that they have considered the matter thoroughly and examined the decisions of the Courts applicable thereto, with the result that it has been concluded that the case is not one calling for the exercise of the Commission's corrective power.

"The chief reason for this conclusion may be stated as the fact that the making of a claim for royalties, apparently in good faith, cannot be said to constitute 'an unfair method of competition in commerce'; it cannot be said to be unfair in the sense in which the word is used in the Commission's Organic Act, but is merely an assertion of a supposed legal right which is fully determinable by the Courts; and it is not a 'method of competition' because the parties to the controversy are not in any way competing with each other."

This places the question of the music tax once and for all outside of the Federal Trade Commission. It is now a matter to be settled by the Attorney-General's office or by the continuation of the suits which are at the present time pending and the carrying of them through to the higher Courts where a definite and final decision can be made.

This, of course, is going to cost the theatre interests of the country a great deal of money for lawyers' fees and other general expense.

LEWIS STONE, who knows how to add the lifelike touch to his characters, has arrived in New York to assume the principal male role in "You Can't Fool Your Wife," George Melford's next production.

ADVANCE information on Famous Players-Lasky's "The Covered Wagon" merits the prediction that something well up on the list of great pictures will soon be forthcoming.

The picture has cost some eight hundred thousand dollars and Famous claims that this immense sum has been well spent. Reproducing in detail as it does a great epic in American history, the days of '49, there is every opportunity for a story of even greater appeal than that of "The Birth of a Nation." The life of this period was such as to provide from actual experiences, material for such a picture. Over the great plains, and across the desert that lies between the Father of Waters and California, journeyed men and women from every land, of every type and of every known nationality, all flung together into a heterogenous mass of humanity that held little respect for the laws of either God or man. Here they laughed and loved, worked and struggled, fought and died, their very names lost and forgotten, but of one thing we are sure. They lived.

To present a true picture of those eventful days, Famous Players-Lasky has gone the limit in the matter of cast, costuming and properties. "The Covered Wagon" is to turn the calendar back seventy-five years. And what opportunities it presents for the live wire exploitation man.

It is said that Claude Saunders, Paramount's exploitation department chief is laying awake nights planning the big stunts that will be used to aid each exhibitor playing the picture.

JOHN EMERSON and Anita Loos are on the Coast, where they intend to remain for a while writing and supervising stories for Constance of the Talmadges. The first essay will be a romantic comedy with a historic background and was originally written during their visit in Europe last spring. The Emerson-Loos combination is responsible for most of the star's comedies during the last three years, including "The Virtuous Vamp," "In Search of a Sinner," "Woman's Place," and "Polly of the Follies."

The Past Year's Best Performances

By LAURENCE REID

WITH the year 1922 making film history with its exceptional pictures it is indeed fitting to pay tribute to those players whose performances enriched the screen and brought value to the photoplays in which they appeared. It is not our purpose to state that one player's interpretation surpassed another, for this would bring up the argument that many of the conspicuously fine performances were possibly due to better stories and characters—and better direction. The player who establishes his personality or talent in a mediocre picture is entitled to more praise than one who has everything done for him in the way of appropriate story, proper casting and worthy production. Yet a fine picture makes artists of them all.

Let us go back to the beginning of the old year and see what the pictures present. January, 1921, gave us Will Rogers, who furnished a delightful bit of gentle burlesque in "Doubling for Romeo," while a month later found his quaint humor giving expression in "One Glorious Day." The comedian did not flash his art again in a feature length picture until he played the role of Ichabod Crane in "The Headless Horseman," a film which did not give him real opportunity to display his mirth-provoking talent, though it did provide him with a chance to show his skill at characterization.

January also brought us the unique performance of Eric von Stroheim in "Foolish Wives." Here is an actor gifted in lending the continental flavor to his roles. In this same picture Dale Fuller showed a distinct forte for emotional acting in the part of the wronged servant.

"His Nibs" was a January release. It brought us the inimitable Chic Sales, who has no peer in the delineation of the country yokel.

"The Little Minister" gave us Alice Calhoun, who showed picture patrons that she is endowed with histrionic gifts. She was an ideal Babbie. Her talent came forward again many months later in a study of a street waif, "Little Wildcat."

Memories of "Miss Lulu Bett" bring Lois Wilson to the foreground. In the title role she rendered a magnificent portrayal of the colorless girl whose spinster complex nearly made her lose the big thrill of romance.

We cannot mention "Orphans of the Storm" without acquainting you again with the sterling performances of Lillian Gish, who demonstrated that she has no superior when it comes to tugging at the emotions. Her eloquent hands and face indicate that she knows the art of pantomime. Monte Blue and Joseph Schildkraut also contributed cameo touches in the Griffith opus. And Dorothy Gish balanced her sister's emotional stress with her sparkling humor.

Wesley Barry was "Penrod" to the life in the picture of that name.

Lionel Barrymore brought a real study of character to "Boomerang Bill," and duplicated his work in "The Face in the Fog," which followed many months later.

"Turn to the Right" was excellently acted by a well-balanced cast, with George Cooper coming through with a picturesque sketch of a crook. Harry Myers also stood out conspicuously in the Ingram feature—in the same type of role.

$307,000 Is Collected by M. P. Commission

SINCE August 1, 1921, when the New York state Motion Picture Commission started to function, it has collected $307,000 for censoring pictures.

During the same length of time, the Commission has spent approximately $116,000, according to Chairman George H. Cobb. There have been made about 5,000 eliminations and less than 100 pictures have been condemned in their entirety.

No one can deny that Pauline Frederick is not blessed with genuine emotional ability. "Two Kinds of Women" doesn't linger in the memory so much, but the star made it appear really worth while. She shone again in "The Glory of Clementina."

Hobart Bosworth? This actor never fails in his rugged characterizations. Which means that "White Hands" was finely played. Ethel Clayton caught the true spirit of the role which she interpreted in "Her Own Money." Miss Clayton is always sincere and dependable. Ann Forrest didn't fail us in "Love's Boomerang." Her acting carries a vital quality. "A Prodigal Judge" gave us Macklyn Arbuckle in one of his finest performances. Dorothy Dalton brought her spirited personality to the sea story, "Moran of the Lady Letty."

Elsie Ferguson contributed real acting values to "Peter Ibbetson," and followed up a few months after with a perfect cameo in "Outcast." "Saturday Night" gave us Leatrice Joy, who has since flashed her art in "Manslaughter" and "Minnie." The De Mille picture also introduced Theodore Roberts, who is a genius at characterization. We defy you to forget his work in "The Old Homestead" and "If You Believe It, It's So."

George Fawcett is another who enriches the screen with his picturesque portrayals. He also was one of the all-star cast of "Peter Ibbetson," and also brought rich reality to "The Old Homestead" and "Ebb Tide." He might have stepped from the pages of Stevenson in the last mentioned offering. Lewis Stone did not fail us in "The Rosary," and his art was demonstrated again in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Trifling Women."

Raymond Hatton doesn't have many chances to display his ability on account of his stature, but his work in "His Back Against the Wall" is unforgettable.

What of Colleen Moore, who is rapidly becoming one of our most gifted actresses? Can you forget her in "Come on Over?" "The Wall Flower" and "Broken Chains"? Bill Hart has played the burly westerner for so long that he has made it mellow. Bill didn't have many chances in 1921, but he made "Travelin' On" vivid with his personality. Vera Gordon duplicated her work in "Humoresque" when she graced "The Good Provider" and "Your Best Friend." Norma Talmadge came through, as usual, in "Smilin' Through" and "The Eternal Flame." May MacAvoy lent a wistful charm to "Through a Glass Window," while a small bit in "Kick In" was magnificently done. Thomas Meighan humanized "The Bachelor Daddy," "Our Leading Citizen" and "Back Home and Broke." Glenn Hunter admirably limned a youthful character sketch in "The Cradle Buster."

Richard Barthelmess carried on his good work in "Sonny" and "The Bond Boy." George Arliss did not fail us with his studies in "The Ruling Passion" and "The Man Who Played God." James Kirkwood, one of the best actors of the silent drama, caught the real spiritual value of "The Sin Flood." Harold Lloyd showed his finest pantomime in "Grandma's Boy," and his latest, "Dr. Jack," carries him to greater heights. Edward Horton has indicated in "Too Much Business" and "A Front Page Story" that he knows comedy expression. Victor Seastrom, a Swedish actor, flashed some real acting in "A Stroke of Midnight." Wallace Reid endowed "The Dictator" and "Clarence" with a fine sense of characterization. Mary Carr carried on her mother love in noble fashion in "Silver Wings."

Rodolph Valentino revealed himself a genuine artist in "Blood and Sand." George Beban never fails. That's why "The Sign of the Rose" stays in the memory. John Barrymore brought his finished art to "Sherlock Holmes." Marie Day gave a vital performance of the spiteful spinster who sees the light in "Timothy's Quest." Jackie Coogan, who has been called by some the best actor on the screen, made "Trouble" a fine picture and "Oliver Twist" a masterpiece of its kind And there is House Peters, who helped make "The Storm" so memorable. Constance Talmadge gave us a delightful sketch of Ming Toy in "East Is West," and Warner Oland, in the same picture, contributed an admirable study as the wily Oriental, Charlie Yung.

Rosa Rosanova made "Hungry Hearts" a real heart document. Can you forget Fritzi Ridgway in "The Old Homestead"? A genuine etching. Lyn Harding and William Norris furnished picturesque expressions in "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Claude Gillingwater seemingly stepped right out of life in "Remembrance." And Blanche Sweet might have stepped forth from an old miniature in "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Lon Chaney is always dependable—an actor of real expression. His character work in "Shadows" and "Oliver Twist" was truly marvelous. George Nichols gave us a superb study of an indulgent father in "The Flirt." Laurette Taylor humanized "Peg o' My Heart"—one of the greatest performances in the history of the screen. Douglas Fairbanks vivified Robin Hood in his big spectacle, but the acting honors belong to Wallace Beery as King Richard. Did you ever see Beery give a poor performance? Neither did we. Ernest Torrence has forged to the front as an actor of parts. His work in "Broken Chains" and "The Kingdom Within" reminded us that his vital acting in "Tol'able David" was no flash in the pan. Frank Keenan, an actor of the old school, was splendid in "Lorna Doone." Mary Alden's work in "The Bond Boy" and "That Woman" establishes her as one of our best character actresses. Mary Pickford was—well, just Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country," a most appealing study.

These are the outstanding performances as we see them for the year of 1922. Who can deny that screen pantomime has not become a real expression?

Motion Picture Censorship Doomed in N. Y.

Governor Smith Recommends Repeal of State Law in Message to Legislature

MOTION picture censorship in New York state will soon become a thing of the past. Within the next few days a bill will be introduced to repeal the present law, which created the Motion Picture Censorship Commission in 1921. In his message to the Legislature on Wednesday, January 3, Governor Smith left no doubts along this line.

"We have abundant law in the state to jail the man who outrages public decency. If we have not, enact it. I believe that the enactment of a statute providing for censorship of the moving pictures was a step away from that Liberty which the constitution guaranteed, and it should be repealed."

There is no doubt but that Governor Smith will get his way in this important matter. The Senate is this year Democratic, with James J. Walker, who battled for years to prevent censorship of motion pictures in this state, at its head.

Senator Walker in an address before the City Club of Cleveland last week had the following to say, in part, regarding censorship:

"Those who favor censorship would change our historic Bill of Rights to a Bill of Don'ts. If they had had censorship in Shakespeare's day the censors probably would have found enough things on which to bar his plays and the most treasured possessions of the English language probably would have been lost to the world.

"Censorship is un-American. It violates the constitution of the United States. It is a violation of the freedom of the press. It hampers progress; it cripples art.

"In New York state Governor Smith was elected by an overwhelming majority on a platform which contained a plank for the abolition of movie censorship in New York."

Back in 1921 the bill which created the Motion Picture Commission and brought censorship into the Empire State was jammed through by Clayton R. Lusk, majority leader of the Senate, and his associates during the closing hours of the session, following one of the greatest fights of the year, staged in the Senate by Mr. Walker, and in the Assembly by Charles Donohue. The Commission was organized and came into existence on August 1, 1921, when three commissioners appointed by Governor Miller took office at salaries of $7,500 a year. Since that time several deputies have been named, and with offices in Albany and New York the Commission has run up a large expense.

Just who will introduce the bill which will call for the repeal of the present censorship law in this state is not known as yet. In the Senate it will probably be Mr. Walker, with Mr. Donohue introducing a companion bill in the Assembly.

In his annual message to the Legislature Wednesday, Governor Smith had this to say concerning motion picture censorship:

"Recent legislation in our own state has aimed at serious restriction of personal liberty.

"For several years we have been drifting away from the fundamental idea of the Declaration of Independence and the Document that was intended to give it force and vigor, the Constitution of the United States. Throughout the Declaration there are related the abuses to which the American people were subjected by tyrannical government. The imposition of taxes without consent of the people, interference with trade and commerce, and with the personal liberty of the citizens were set forth as the principal reasons for a declaration of a fundamental principle of government that has burned its way through the literature of the world right up to our own time. Inquisitions, spy systems, rules and regulations for personal conduct not prompted by the Ten Commandments are an unnecessary interference with the freedom of a people.

"Throughout the Constitution of the United States there was sounded the note set forth in the preamble, which said that the purpose of the document was 'to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.' In our own state the opening sentence of our Constitution is the expression of our gratitude to Almighty God for our freedom, and in order to secure its blessings we establish a Constitution.

"Censorship is not in keeping with our ideas of liberty, and of freedom of worship or freedom of speech. The people of the state themselves have declared that every citizen may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right, and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge liberty of speech, or of the press. This fundamental principle has equal application to all methods of expression.

"The spoken drama has always had its place as an influence to educate. In many countries it is sustained as a national enterprise. In early days it was used to give expression to biblical history. Nobody will dispute that the invention of moving pictures opened the way for a new avenue of great education as well as of amusement. We have looked too lightly on guarantees of freedom of speech and of the press, when we select from among our citizens three people who, before the fact, have the power to declare what is and what is not a violation of the statutes enacted for the protection of the morality of our people.

"Carrying this policy to its logical conclusion, everything written or spoken or taught, might be subject to a censorship by public authority. We have abundant law in the state to jail the man who outrages public decency. If we have not, enact it. And we have jails enough to hold him after his conviction. I believe that the enactment of a statute providing for censorship of the moving pictures was a step away from that liberty which the Constitution guaranteed, and it should be repealed.

"Interference with personal liberty, censorship of thought, word, act or teaching, abridgement in any way of the freedom of speech and of the press by the government itself, unquestionably encourages, if in fact it does not promote, intolerance and bigotry in the minds of the few directed against the many. I recommend to your earnest consideration the immediate repeal of the statutes spoken of in this section of my message."

Late News Notes from the West Coast by Wire

TAMAR LANE, director of publicity for Selznick on the West Coast, claims that the story was incorrect which was published in the Los Angeles Sunday Times this week to the effect that all members of the cast of "Rupert of Hentzau" went on strike Thursday morning, last week, and did not work until 3 o'clock that afternoon because they had not received their weekly salary checks for the previous week, due Tuesday. A damage suit against the Los Angeles Times is declared probable, as the strike story named several players who have completed their parts and were off the payroll several weeks previous.

William Duncan and wife, Edith Johnson, left for New York last Saturday. Duncan's Vitagraph contract expires shortly and it is understood he is negotiating with others for two serials per year. Ed Moriarty, Duncan's representative, preceded the star to New York.

Dr. A. H. Giannini of the East River National Bank and Commercial Trust Company of New York has spent the past week in Los Angeles on business with several members of the film industry.

Irving Lesser left for New York on Wednesday.

Fred Niblo and his wife, Enid Bennett, are spending the holidays in Mexico City. Upon his return, he will edit "The Famous Mrs. Fair."

Edwin Stevens, sixty years of age, died at his Hollywood home on Tuesday as a result of pneumonia. He was formerly leading man for Ethel Barrymore and Henrietta Crossman and created the name role in "The Devil." He was in pictures for four years. He leaves a wife and two daughters, all of Hollywood.

Missouri Faces Bitter Censorship Fight

Missouri is facing the most bitter fight for state censorship of motion pictures in the history of the industry.

The local film colony is justly alarmed at the menacing aspects of the situation, and a special meeting of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade was held on Friday, December 29, to discuss the outlook. At that gathering it was decided that each exchange man should acquaint his home office officials with the situation here, while wires will also be sent to Will Hays and his organization. All exhibitors will also be requested to do their bit in helping to overcome the propaganda of the reformers.

As usual, the "blue-nosed" ones are taking every advantage of facts and half-truths to win their way.

People who are not well informed are being told that if the state had censorship of motion pictures "Fatty" Arbuckle could be barred from the screen.

From every angle it looks like a bitter fight. The only hope for the industry is for every branch to stand united, shoulder to shoulder, and not to overlook anything that can be done to checkmate the moves of the reformers.

N. Carolina M.P.T.O. in Constructive Session

Harmonious Meeting of Exhibitors Discusses Vital Problems Affecting Industry

"CONSTRUCTION versus destruction" was the keynote of the mid-winter meeting of the North Carolina M. P. T. O., held in the O. Henry Hotel, Greensboro, N. C., on December 27th and 28th, and it resulted in the most constructive, harmonious and pleasant convention ever held in the State, not to mention the largest attendance in several years at any convention of this organization.

They did not condemn Hays for freeing Arbuckle; they did not urge exhibitors of the state not to show the Arbuckle pictures; they did not urge cancellation of the First National Franchise; neither did they harangue the tactics of United Artists nor the practices of Famous Players; all of which all conventions formerly did with redounding glory.

More than fifty members of the organization were in attendance. The entire convention was highly constructive, devoted strictly to business and entirely devoid of arguments or wrangling; serious minded exhibitors dropped their individual enterprises for a couple of days to discuss and deal with many vital problems affecting the industry in a manner that called forth the plaudits of press and public of the whole state, every daily newspaper in North Carolina carrying long wire reports of the laudable movements launched and the constructive resolutions passed.

Outstanding among the actions of the convention was the passing of a resolution and the appointment of an active committee to arrange for the building of a suitable auditorium as a gift from the theatre owners for either the Jackson Training School in Carrabus county or the Orthopedic Hospital at Gastonia, both state-sustained institutions. Plans will be drawn and report made by the committee at the next meeting relative to every theatre giving a day's gross receipts to the cause, programs to be donated by the exchanges. The committee was composed of the following theatre owners:

Secretary Varner presented a very flattering report of the past six months' activities of the state organization, showing a nice balance in the bank with which to start the year's legislative work in Raleigh. He also reported the largest paid up membership in the history of the organization.

A special legislative committee was appointed to keep in close touch with affairs during the coming session of the General Assembly in Raleigh, consisting of the following theatre owners: Sam T. White, Greenville; Jas. A. Estridge, Gastonia; E. F. Dardine and G. M. Tyler, Charlotte; H. B. Varner, Lexington. This committee was given full power to employ active representatives or otherwise expend the funds of the association to combat censorship legislation or any other matters affecting the theatre owners of the State which may come up during the session of the legislature, which opens in January. They will effect a permanent working organization within the next few days.

Resolutions were passed strongly condemning the iniquitous "graft and robbery" of the music tax and "the burdensome and unjust increase" in the State privilege tax; commending the efforts of the National M. P. T. O. in behalf of a fair, equitable uniform contract and especially commending their work to abolish the music tax inquisition. Another resolution commended highly the better films movement and pledged the support of the organization "to the end that better programs may be secured and objectionable pictures relegated to the scrap heap by cooperation with the public rather than through the impossible scheme of political censorship."

Another resolution was passed expressing the sympathy of the membership to Colonel C. L. Welch, of Salisbury, in the sudden death of his son, which occurred on Christmas Day. Colonel Welch is one of the oldest members of the State organization.

In the absence of President Percy W. Wells, who was detained at home on account of illness in his family, Vice President E. F. Dardine, of Charlotte, presided over the convention. The following were registered on the convention books for the sessions of the convention:

Senator A. F. Sams, Auditorium, Winston-Salem; A. F. Moses, Broadway, Winston-Salem; Harry Summerville, Imperial, Greensboro; E. F. Dardine, Strand, Charlotte; George Roberts, Gem, Siler City; C. A. Turnage, Strand, Washington; W. H. Hendrix, Central, Greensboro; B. B. LeFaux, Columbia, Albermarle; R. D. Craver, Broadway, Charlotte; Ralph DeBruler, Broadway, Charlotte; W. E. Stewart, Pastime, Concord; C. M. Isenhaur, Piedmont, Concord; E. C. Pearce, Amuzu, Winston-Salem; H. B. Varner, Lyric, Lexington; U. K. Rice, Pilot, Winston-Salem; J. L. Clayton, Boulevard, Leaksville; Sam Richardson, Milton Hall, Erlanger; P. L. McCabe, Colonial, Tarboro; C. J. McLane, Winston-Salem; Sam T. White, White's, Greenville; A. B. Huff, Broadway, High Point; P. R. Parrish, Orpheum, High Point; J. E. Simpson, Ideal, Gastonia; Jas. A. Estridge, Gastonian, Gastonia; M. W. Jordan, Piedmont, Madison; S. A. Lambert, Charlotte; C. L. Welch, Victory, Salisbury; G. C. Gammon, Boulevard, Leaksville; J. W. Prevo, Lee, Thomasville; A. A. Neese, Beatrice, Haw River; C. E. Buckner, National, Greensboro.

DURING the past year a total of 327 motion picture companies were incorporated in New York state, according to official figures given out by the secretary of state. These companies represented a capitalization which totalled $19,412,900. During the month of December 38 companies were formed, and received charters, these being capitalized for $1,630,800.

During the year 1921, New York state witnessed the incorporation of 455 motion picture companies, having a combined capitalization which amounted to $28,373,400.

Troy Houses Relieved of Paying Firemen

The ordinance which will relieve the motion picture theatre owners of Troy, N. Y., of an excessive burden in the way of salaries paid to firemen stationed in the theatres, has been unanimously approved by the public works committee of the common council of that city. The measure became effective January 1.

The ordinance provides that paid firemen will take the place of the firemen who have been stationed at the theatres, under salaries paid by the theatre owners. The expense will be met by an annual tax on the theatres, rated according to their seating capacity.

The new ordinance will not only prove a relief to the theatre owners, but it will also regulate fire protection in the theatres and put the work directly under the city fire department. The tax on the theatres will be turned over to the firemen's pension fund.

Pictures Along Health Lines Needed

The use of motion picture films in the work done along health lines in New York state is increasing daily, and the demand for this class of films is beyond the supply of the State Health Department, according to Gilbert Tucker, Jr., director of the visual instruction division. The department has twenty-six health films, and these are in constant use by medical associations and civic associations throughout the state.

"If we had four times as many films," said Mr. Tucker, "we would not have a supply sufficient to meet the demand. The call for the old slides has been reduced to almost nothing. By means of the moving pictures we have been able to reach thousands, while through literature we would only reach a few."

Ohio Exhibitors to Meet January 16, 17

The second annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio will be held January 16 and 17 at the Chittenden Hotel, Columbus, Ohio. Following the business sessions of two days there will be a banquet at which Will Hays, Governor Vic Donahey, Dr. Francis Holley and others of national prominence have been invited to make addresses.

As the legislature will be in session during the progress of the meeting it is planned for the entire convention to call upon the members of that body. Among the important details of the convention will be the submission of legislative plans for the approval of exhibitors.

Sydney Cohen, M. J. O'Toole and other national officers, as well as exhibitor leaders from all over the country promise messages of importance.

Winning the Public Back to Pictures

By A. N. Smallwood
Secretary-treasurer of Pyramid Pictures, Incorporated

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Following is an article written by A. N. Smallwood, secretary-treasurer of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., in which observations are made and questions are asked relative to that all-important question of today, "How to bring the public back to regular attendance at the picture theatres."

A discussion in which exhibitor, producer and distributor exchange views on this subject can not fail to be of benefit to the entire industry. The pages of MOTION PICTURE NEWS are open to all for an expression of views on the problem.

WHEN motion picture box offices were attracting their maximum millions of patrons daily, the popular short-story magazines and dime novels lost millions of subscribers. Why is it, then, that these magazines are now gaining in circulation and why are more and more of these popular short-story magazines being successfully launched today?

Ten years ago many people did not consider their day's routine complete unless they "took in a movie." Why, then, are these same people attending motion picture shows only once a week or perhaps less frequently?

It was not so long ago that the motion picture was blessed because it brought inexpensive diversion to the masses. Is it possible that the motion picture has ceased to be "the poor man's entertainment"?

Have the comparatively few idealistic "high brows" who succeeded in their agitation to "elevate the movies" by the injection of symphony concerts, uniformed attendants, expensive prologues and sociological propaganda been a factor in promoting or retarding the popularity of pictures?

Have the small-town exhibitors and the neighborhood houses, in attempting to follow the precedents established by the bigger theatres who adopted these innovations and forthwith increased the price of admission, increased or driven away patronage?

Is the competition between producers for stars, stories and directors, resulting in higher production costs and bigger rentals, which, it was believed, had been partially eliminated a few years ago, again becoming the vogue with the increasing number of big "million-dollar" spectacles?

Does the 90 per cent. of our public—do the masses, and the exhibitors demand a continuous supply of these "million-dollar productions" with their tremendous rentals and increased prices of admission?

Are the exhibitors forced to play these Big Pictures for more days than they SHOULD at higher rentals which necessitates charging patrons more than they can afford to spend for picture amusement OFTENER THAN ONCE A WEEK?

After all, motion pictures attained their popularity and enjoyed their greatest prosperity when they appealed, primarily to the "common peepul"—to the 90 per cent.—who paid their dimes for an hour's entertainment and were satisfied that they were getting their money's worth.

Wouldn't the exhibitor look with favor upon a general rule of booking the really big pictures on a percentage basis, letting the Big Picture and its alleged drawing power commensurately compensate both the exhibitor and the producer, without obligation on the part of the exhibitor to make guarantees to the producer? Under such circumstances, higher admission prices would soon tell their own story.

On the other hand, would the exhibitor make more money by buying a good commercial product which he could resell to his audiences at lower admission prices, and profit more in the long run?

This last thought is, to my mind, worthy of very serious consideration. Whether or not, more money is to be made with the "million-dollar pictures" than with the "good commercial product" is a question. But on one point theatre owners will agree with me, and that is they made more money a few years ago before pictures were, so to speak, "elevated" as a result of the agitation of the upper crust—the 10%.

I believe the industry has devoted itself too much to converting this minority into motion picture theatre patrons. We have discovered that the 10% can make a good deal more noise than the 90%. The 10% are discriminating amusement buyers. They see only a few pictures. They are usually very sparing in their praise even for a "Birth of a Nation," but they become vociferously active in denouncing and criticising everything that does not come up to their arbitrary standards.

The 90% are just plain, every-day people, most of whom are earning around $40.00 a week, and who comprise the mass, yet who are looked upon by the upper crust as "morons." The masses have not much money to spend, for the most part, and get the greatest enjoyment out of a story that is not too difficult for them to follow. They want a kick in their entertainment; and with all due respect to those who seek to elevate the films, they want a thrill, a laugh—and a tear; and if you give them what they want at a price they can afford to pay many of them will come back to the movies and "buy our goods" every day as they used to do, instead of only occasionally as they are now doing.

As I said in the beginning, I bave only been in the show business for 15 years and am therefore not qualified to answer the question I have raised, but it does seem to me there is plenty of room for thought in all of the above.

Arbuckle's Attorney Ready to Assist Him

IN the comeback which is being planned by Fatty Arbuckle he is to have the earnest assistance of Gavin McNab, who three times defended the film comedian against the charge of manslaughter growing out of the death of Virginia Rappe. This is the word that comes from San Francisco.

McNab announced that he is the legal advisor of a group of San Franciscans who are about to organize a company for the production of Arbuckle pictures. He declared, moreover, that he stood ready to protect them and Arbuckle against any overt act or display of enmity which might result from the announced opposition to the return of the comedian to the screen.

"I am merely the attorney for the gentlemen who propose to back Arbuckle," said McNab. "I am not authorized to make public their identity until the incorporation is completed. But I have assured them, and Arbuckle as well, that they can count upon me to prosecute any person or persons in any part of the United States who shall commit any illegal act against Arbuckle's pictures when shown. His pictures have always been clean and always will be."

Exhibitors Will Protest Daylight Saving

Exhibitors of Baltimore will fire the first gun in their campaign against the possibility of a return to daylight saving in Maryland next summer when they hold a public mass meeting in the Garden theatre January 7. The meeting has been arranged by the Exhibitors' League, and the public has been invited.

Arrangements have been made to distribute cards to those attending the meeting in order that a straw ballot may be obtained to determine the attitude of the public on the question. Baltimore had daylight saving last summer, and exhibitors of the city declare that their consequent losses totaled many thousand dollars.

Valentino Warns Against Alleged Imposter

A letter over the signature of Rudolph Valentino warns against an alleged imposter whom it is claimed is posing as a brother of the star.

The letter follows:

"I am informed that one, Antonio Muzii of 500 W. 112th St., N. Y. C., has been representing and holding himself out to be my brother. I write this letter to inform you that the said Muzii is in no way related to me.

"You are requested to take no advertising given you by anyone in which the said Antonio Muzii is exploited under the name 'Valentino.'

"(Signed) Rudolph Valentino."

Owner of "Snooky" Wins Injunction Suit

Justice Gavagan, in the Supreme Court, New York, has just granted a temporary injunction to John Rounan, owner of "Snooky, the Humanzee," the monkey screen actor, against Clarence L. Chester, C. L. Chester Corporation and the Chester Pictures Corporation.

The injunction restrains the defendants from distributing or offering for sale any film featuring Snooky or using the name "Snooky" or "Snooky, the Humanzee," or offering any film in opposition to Mr. Rounan's "A Jungle Romeo," a comedy featuring Snooky.

Virginia Exhibitors Will Ballot on Arbuckle

The Virginia exhibitors are to ballot, through their state organization, to determine the general opinion as to whether the Arbuckle pictures shall be shown or not. After the decision is announced, if favorable, the exhibitors antagonistic to Arbuckle will not have to book his pictures. If unfavorable, exhibitors not caring to be bound by the decision may show the films if they so desire.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" Directed by Elmer Clifton Has Rare Sea Views

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has secured "Down to the Sea in Ships" for distribution. This screen production was made by the Whaling Film Corporation, organized and financed by a group of leading business men of New Bedford, Mass. The picture was designed to perpetuate through the medium of the motion picture screen the wealth of tradition that surrounds the whaling industry of that New England city.

Elmer Clifton

Elmer Clifton, who was formerly associated with D. W. Griffith, was engaged to direct the production. The technical staff which assisted Mr. Clifton in the filming of the story comprised Leigh R. Smith as assistant director, Alex G. Penrod as chief cameraman, Paul Allen, Maurice E. Kains and Albert Doubrava. Besides these staff members, Mr. Clifton was accorded the cooperation of practically the entire population of the town of New Bedford, who took part in certain of the scenes; and the Dartmouth Historical Society, which did much to preserve the historical and individual accuracy of the story and the settings. The whaling ship on which the sea sequences were filmed was in charge of James A. Tilton, dean of the New Bedford whaling fleet, with a crew of officers and twenty-one men.

The cast, in addition to the extras, presents in the important roles William Walcott, William Cavanaugh, Leigh R. Smith, Marguerite Courtot, Raymond McKee, Juliette Courtot, Clarice Vance, Curtis Pierce, Ada Laycock, Clara Bow, James Turfler, Patrick Hartigan, Captain James A. Tilton and J. Thornton Baston.

A feature of the Whaling Film Corporation's production is the realism of the action and locales depicted in the course of the picture. The story built around the adventures of a young college man, whose right to the hand of the girl he loves depends upon his ability to harpoon a whale, brings the audience through one of the most exciting screen plots presented on the screen for some time. The highlights of the production are actual storm scenes filmed on the tempestous high seas, a mutiny aboard the whaler, the chase after a real school of whales in the Atlantic, the harpooning of a ninety-ton whale, and the subsequent attack of the enraged sea mammal upon the frail whaling boat with its cargo of human freight, helpless before the onslaught of their infuriated captive. In the reviews of the picture by the trade press critics, the scenes depicting the capture of the whale, his attack upon the lifeboat and subsequent dash for life and freedom are described as some of the most thrilling moments ever presented on the screen.

Hope Hampton Heads Cast In "Does It Pay"

The cast for "Does It Pay?" a new William Fox special, is headed by Hope Hampton, and includes Robert T. Haines, Mary Thurman, Peggy Shaw and Florence Short. The screen version is by Howard Irving Young.

Scenes from "The Strangers' Banquet," Marshall Neilan production, distributed by Goldwyn.

Henry Hull and Mary Thurman in scenes from "Through the Skylight," a Producers Security release.

"The Blood Ship" to be Bosworth Vehicle

Norman Springer's "The Blood Ship," first published as a serial magazine story, but since issued in book form, will be Hobart Bosworth's next starring vehicle, according to an announcement by Morris R. Schlank, president of the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc.

"The Blood Ship" will be the second of a series which Bosworth will make for independent release through Anchor, the initial production through this channel being "The Law of the Sea," recently completed.

Bosworth will make five pictures for Anchor, according to Mr. Schlank, the third possibly "Scottish Chiefs," the screen rights to which Bosworth has recently secured.

Florence Vidor Engaged for "Main Street"

Florence Vidor has been engaged by the Warner Brothers to play the feminine lead in the screen version of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Main Street," which is being directed at the coast studios by Harry Beaumont under the supervision of S. L. and Jack Warner. A number of other prominent screen players have been added to the cast. These include Noah Beery, Louise Fazenda, Robert Gordon and Josephine Crowell.

"Brass Commandments" Is Completed

"Brass Commandments," William Farnum's latest picture, with Wanda Hawley, Tom Sanstchi and Claire Adams in the cast, has been completed at William Fox's Western studio.

"The Strangers' Banquet" at N. Y. Capitol

MARSHALL NEILAN'S first production in association with Goldwyn, a screen version of Donn Byrne's novel, "The Strangers' Banquet," is the attraction at the Capitol theatre, New York, for the week beginning Sunday, December 31.

Mr. Neilan and his lieutenant, Frank Urson, made the adaptation of the novel as well as producing the photoplay.

The cast contains forty well known players, the principal members of which are Claire Windsor, Eleanor Boardman, Rockliffe Fellowes, Hobart Bosworth, Ailee Pringle, Thomas Holding, Claude Gillingwater, Nigel Barrie, Ford Sterling, Lucille Ricksen, Dagmar Godowsky, Arthur Hoyt, Brinsley Shaw, Stuart Holmes, Edward McWade, James Marcus, Jack Curtis, Virginia Ruggles, Jean Hersholt, Cyril Chadwick and Philo McCullough.

"Birth of a Nation" Not Booking in Mass.

Through a typographical error announcement was made in an advertisement published in the motion picture trade journals that the D. W. Griffith feature, "The Birth of A Nation" may now be booked in the state of Massachusetts through United Artists Corporation exchanges.

This picture is not being offered by United Artists to exhibitors in Massachusetts but can be booked by theatre owners in following states:

New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana, New Jersey, Maryland, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Tennessee, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky.

Scenes from "Bell Boy 13," in which Thomas H. Ince presents Douglas MacLean.

Universal Releases 5 for January

Adaptations of Stories by Well-Known Authors to Introduce 1923 Schedule

UNIVERSAL will release five features during the month of January, in addition to the previously announced release of "The Flirt." In the order of release the five features will be, "The Flaming Hour," "Kindled Courage," "The Scarlet Car," "The Ghost Patrol" and "The Power of a Lie."

The January 1st release, "The Flaming Hour," is a spectacular picture which gives Frank Mayo, its star, the opportunity for a complex role—part of the time a prosperous business man and the other part an outcast. He is supported by Helen Ferguson and Charles Clary. The story of "The Flaming Hour" was written by Mrs. George Randolph Chester, wife of the famous novelist. Her husband, who is one of Universal's scenario experts, put it into picture form.

Hoot Gibson's first 1923 film to be released January 8, is "Kindled Courage," a humorous story by Leet Renick Brown. It was directed by William Worthington, with supporting cast consisting of Beatrice Burnham, Harold Goodwin and others.

On January 15 the Universal will release "The Scarlet Car," a screen adaptation of one of Richard Harding Davis' "Scarlet Car" stories. Herbert Rawlinson is the star, and is supported by Claire Adams, Edward Cecil, Norris Johnson, Tom McGuire, Marc Robbins and Tom O'Brien. The story is a combination of machine politics, reform movements and stirring romance and adventure. Stuart Paton directed the production. George Randolph Chester adapted the story for the screen.

"The Ghost Patrol" is Universal's release for January 22. There are four featured players in "The Ghost Patrol," namely, Ralph Graves, Bessie Love, George Nichols and George B. Williams. Among the supporting cast are Max Davidson, Wade Boteler, Dan Crimmins, Lydia Titus, Gordon Sackville, Danny Hoy, Melbourne McDowell and others.

The story is by Sinclair Lewis, the author of "Main Street" and "Babbitt." The story concerns an old policeman retired because of supposed inefficiency, who continues to "walk his beat" in secret, and how he wins back his rightful place and a promotion because of his good work.

"The Power of a Lie," Universal's last January release, is a screen adaptation of Johann Bojer's novel of that name. The Norwegian author won the French grand literary prize with this story several years ago, when it was crowned by the French Academy.

Universal has made it into a powerful picture with Mabel Julienne Scott, Maude George, June Elvidge, Earl Metcalfe and David Torrence in the featured roles. Others in the cast are Phillip Smalley, Ruby Lafayette, Stanton Heck, Winston Miller and others.

The story was scenarized by Charles Kenyon. George Archainbaud was especially engaged by Universal to direct the Bojer picture. It will be released January 29th.

J. Searle Dawley Company to Star Mary Carr

J. SEARLE DAWLEY enters the ranks of motion picture producers as the head of his own company. The organization of which Mr. Searley will act as president is to be known as the J. Searle Dawley Productions Corporation.

According to the announcement just made, Mary Carr will be starred under the auspices of the new producing company.

Mr. Dawley has been connected with the industry for fifteen years, and durthat time has served in a directorial capacity for many of the screen's leading stars.

Universal Starts Big Spectacle

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" Will Require Six Months for Production

WORK has begun at Universal City on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," a picturization of Victor Hugo's novel. Wallace Worsley, the special director engaged by Carl Laemmle to handle the making of the Hugo picture, has assembled the cast, and has given the final seal of approval for the gigantic sets now being constructed.

Signalizing the beginning of work on the picture, the entire Universal studio plant celebrated the laying of the corner stone of the big structure which is to be a full size replica of the famous Notre Dame Cathedral. of Paris.

Other sets being constructed include a reproduction of the famous Court of Miracles. that strange quarter of old Paris where the mendicants, cripples and fakirs congregated in the fifteenth century, the Place de la Greve, where criminals were tortured and punished, the Palace of Justice, court rooms, mansions, and many Parisian streets. In connection with the Cathedral there will be an immense interior vista of the church's aisles and pillars.

Finding players to interpret the colorful roles painted by Victor Hugo to describe the fifteenth century characters was difficult. However, the following stars and players already have been selected; Lon Chaney, Norman Kerry, Patsy Ruth Miller, Brandon Hurst, Ernest Torrence, Kate Lester, Alexander Frances, Harry van Meter, Tully Marshall, Raymond Hatton and Eulele Jensen.

Kerry plays the role of Phoebus, the young hero of the novel. Chaney will play Quasimodo, the weird little hunchback bell ringer of Notre Dame. The part of Esmeralda will be played by Miss Miller. Hurst as Jehan. Torrence as Clopin, the leader of the thieves, Miss Lester as Madame de Gaundelanier, Frances as Dom Claude, Van Meter as Monsieur de Neufchatel, Tully Marshall as Louis XI, Raymond Hatton as Gringoire, the poet, and Miss Jensen as Marie, complete the cast so far as selected.

The task of adapting the Victor Hugo novel for the screen was entrusted to two of Universal's most expert scenarists, Perley Poore Sheehan and Edward T. Lowe, Jr.

Burton King Special Title Changed

The Burton King special which will be released under the brand of Arrowplays De Luxe, which was produced under the working title of "Shylock of Wall Street," has been changed to "None So Blind."

It is from an original story by Loota Morgan, and was produced under the personal direction of Burton King. In the cast are Zena Keefe, Edward Earle, Anders Randolf. Dore Davidson, Maurice Costello and Gene Burnell.

Grant Carpenter Added to Warner Scenario Staff

Grant Carpenter, well known scenarist, has been added to the staff of Warner Brothers' scenario department. Mr. Carpenter has written an unusual number of screen plays, both originals and adaptations, one of the many being "Lessons in Love." Carpenter has been placed under a six months' contract.

Two other prominent scenarios on the Warner staff are Olga Printzlau and Julien Josephson.

Schenck Buys New Stories for Talmadge Sisters

Joseph Schenck purchased three new picture stories while abroad and now has enough screen material to keep the Talmadge sisters busy for some time to come.

When she has finished "Within the Law," Norma Talmadge will have ready for her, another Robert Hichens story, "The Garden of Allah," "The Dust of Desire," and "Ashes of Vengence." The last two were purchased by Mr. Schenck while abroad. Which will follow "Within the Law" has not been decided as yet.

Until Mr. Schenck's return the intention was to have Constance Talmadge make a picture from an original story by Anita Loos and John Emerson, but this plan has been changed since Mr. Schenck was able to get the rights to the screen version of "Madame Pompadour," a French comedy drama. Constance will do the Emerson-Loss story after she finishes "Madame Pompadour."

William DeMille Starts Work on "Grumpy"

William DeMille, who recently returned to the West Coast after several weeks spent in New York in conference with his scenario writer, Clara Beranger, has started at the Lasky studio his Paramount production of "Grumpy," which Mrs. Beranger adapted from the stage play by Horace Hodges and T. Wigney Percyval. The cast includes Theodore Roberts, May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel as featured players and also Casson Ferguson, Charles Ogle, Bertram John, Bernice Frank and Fred Huntley.

Alice Lake Signed by Universal for Lead Role

ALICE LAKE has been signed by Universal to play opposite Herbert Rawlinson in his newest vehicle, "Nobody's Bride," which is just entering production.

Edna Murphy, seen opposite Rawlinson in many of his previous vehicles, will handle the other of two strong feminine roles in the story. With Harry Van Meter for a principal character, this completes the list of names selected so far.

Herbert Blache, a well-known French director, will direct the filming.

Meighan Company Sails for Panama

A company of twenty-one Paramount players and technical men headed by Thomas Meighan, sailed on the S.S. "Santa Luisa" last Thursday for Panama, where exterior scenes will be filmed for "The Ne'er-Do-Well," a new Paramount picture to be made from Rex Beach's famous novel. Scenes will be taken in Panama City, Colon and at various points along the canal.

The party included Mr. and Mrs. Meighan, Director Alfred E. Green and wife, Lila Lee and her father and mother, Gertrude Aster, Sid Smith, John Miltern, Laurance Wheat, Jules Cowles and George O'Brien. Mr. Green's technical staff consisted of Ernest Hallor and William Miller, cameramen; Don O'Brien, assistant director; E. Pfitzmier, Herman Doering, Ed Ellis, George Chennell and George Hinners.

"Environment," personally produced and directed by Irving Cummings, is a Principal Pictures Corp. production, starring Alice Lake and Milton Sills.

Striking scenes from "Kick In" a Paramount picture made from the famous story by Willard Mack, which proved a tremendous stage success.

F. B. O. Buys Four New Stories

Material for Production Includes "The Valley of the Giants" by R. W. Richie

UNDER the direction of John Brownell, who several months ago joined the Film Booking Offices of America, the newly-formed Eastern scenario department of that company has already made several purchases of important stories which will be utilized for productions at the R-C studios in Los Angeles.

Among the most important stories which will be transferred to the screen and released by F. B. O. Mr. Brownell announces "Valley of the Giants," a novel by Robert Wills Richie, which appeared serially in the Country Gentleman. The locale is the redwood forests of California and the story is described as one of virility and dramatic strength. "Valley of the Giants" will be produced as an F. B. O. special during the coming year.

"Judith of Bohemia," another recently acquired F. B. O. story, is a present-day drama laid in the Bohemian quarter of London. It appeared recently as a novelette in Munsey's Magazine. The authors are Corelie Stanton and Heath Hosken. "Jerry Comes Home," a three-act play by Roy Briant, is a story of small town newspaper life which will be adapted for the screen by Film Booking Offices of America.

A fourth story recently acquired is "Born of the Cyclone," adapted by G. Marion Burton from the play by Charles B. Stillson and Charles Berham. The new F. B. O. star, now known as Derelys Perdue, but whose professional name is as yet undecided, will be featured in this production. The story is one of gypsy life, with the large part of the action laid in the Northwest.

Mr. Brownell has enlarged the Eastern branch of the F. B. O. scenario department to include two experienced readers, who are devoting their entire time to finding suitable material for future F. B. O. productions.

"The Ingrate" Is Neilan's Next for Goldwyn

Marshall Neilan's second production in association with Goldwyn will be "The Ingrate," written by Mr. Neilan and adapted to the screen by Carey Wilson.

The players thus far cast for "The Ingrate" are Hobart Bosworth and Claire Windsor, Bessie Love, Raymond Griffith, George Cooper and Tom Gallery.

The story of "The Ingrate" is said to be a eulogy of the physician's work and his service to humanity.

James R. Grainger to Tour Goldwyn Exchanges

JAMES R. GRAINGER, vice president and general sales manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, left New York January 2, for an extended tour of the country, during which he will visit each of the twenty-seven Goldwyn exchanges.

Cities to be visited by Mr. Grainger include: Atlanta, Ga.; Boston, Mass.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Cincinnati, O.; Cleveland, O.; Dallas, Tex.; Denver, Colo.; Detroit, Mich.; Kansas City, Mo.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; San Francisco, Cal.; St. Louis, Mo.; Seattle, Wash.; Washington, D. C.; New Orleans, La.; Omaha, Neb.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Indianapolis, Ind.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Portland, Ore.; New Haven, Conn., and Albany, N. Y.

Shorter Length Features Desired

News Survey Shows Desirability of Room for Short Subjects Says Christie

By Charles H. Christie,
General Manager Christie Film Company

ONE outstanding observation comes to mind in checking the results of the Motion Picture News Survey, and that is the relation of the length of pictures to the short subjects presented on theatre programs.

How can we reconcile the fact that more than 72% of the theatre managers of the United States indicate a preference for two reel comedies, and at the same time the average number of reels shown on the theatre programs is only eight?

This would seem to indicate beyond argument the desirability of five or six reel features, allowing a place for the two-reeler and the news reel or other worth-while short subjects. Taking the "average motion picture theatre" of the United States, it is found that this typical theatre presents eight reels as an entire show. Then how can the exhibitor take advantage of his preference for a well-rounded bill if the feature picture he runs is eight reels or more?

Although the News survey did not definitely ask the question as to what length of feature pictures are desired, the other figures seem to point clearly to the need for shorter features than the "specials" ordinarily presented today.

We and the other makers of comedies and short subjects are doing everything in our power to gradually build up the quality of the offerings in two reels or less. The exhibitor demands this type of entertainment, but he is in many cases powerless to take advantage of a "complete bill" without cutting a few reels out of his features. He does not like to do this because he realizes that this cutting could best be done at the source of production.,

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, I believe, is paving the way for shorter features, trimming practically all of their program pictures down to the meat, and they are to be congratulated for thus making it easier for the exhibitor to run a complete show of films.

I should like to hear a definite consensus of opinion from exhibitors on this most important question. Many have already begged for shorter features, and I believe the Motion Picture News could ascertain more completely the desires of theatre men in this regard.

MacLean to Star in Adaptation of "The Aviator"

Douglas MacLean will be the star of a screen adaptation of James Montgomery's stage comedy, "The Aviator." This will be MacLean's first stellar vehicle to be released through Associated Exhibitors. Word has been received at Associated Exhibitors' home-office from General Manager Bogart of the Douglas MacLean Productions on the Coast that production work on the subject is about to start.

"The Aviator" after its original stage presentation was adapted into musical comedy form and staged under the title "Going Up." Both stage versions had successful careers. "The Aviator," following its opening at Atlantic City, in August 1910, went on the road and played for seven weeks in Chicago. It opened at the Astor, New York, December 8th, 1910.

"Going Up" made its debut at the Liberty, New York, December 25th, 1917, continuing there for the season of 1917-18. It also was given a year's run in London. Frank Craven played in the lead role of Robert Street in the original company presenting "Going Up." This part Douglas MacLean will enact in the screen version.

Cast Is Completed for "Backbone"

Edith Roberts and Alfred Lunt head the "Backbone" cast of Distinctive Pictures Corporation. They play Yvonne and John Thorne. The redoubtable Colonel Tip has been given to Major James Doyle. William B. Mack, as Bracken, and Frank Evans, as Doc Roper, are the trouble-makers of the story. The role of Yvonne's grandfather, Andre, is taken by L. E. LaCroix, Charles Fang is Ken, the Chinaman; Frank Hagney is the Indian, and Marion Abbott, of "Tol'able David" fame, takes the part of the faithful Mrs. Whidden.

In the French episode of "Backbone," George MacQuarrie is the Constable of France, William Walcott is Robert, the girl's father. J. W. Johnson is the Captain of the Guard, Hugh Huntley is the King, and Adolph Miller is the jailer.

United Artists' Executive Sails for Orient

H. Wayne Pierson, assistant general manager of the foreign department, United Artists Corporation, will sail from Seattle on board the steamship President Jackson, January 14th, for the Orient on a tour of inspection of the foreign offices. His first stop will be at Tokio. His itinerary will include Russia, Japan, China, the Straits Settlements, Philippine Island, India, South Africa, Egypt and Australia.

The foreign business of United Artists Corporation is said to have developed so rapidly that additional facilities for distribution of the product must be devised and Mr. Pierson will arrange with Far East representatives of the organization for new subordinate offices and the extension of the sales force.

Lichtman Representatives to Aid Exhibitors

As part of a special service to exhibitors, Al Lichtman is developing a special sales force which will spend most of its time in the field, except for conferences at the home office from time to time.

Already five experienced film men have been taken on with a prospect of increasing that number as the need develops. They are Leon D. Netter, Edward Grossman, Foster Moore, Joseph Klein and V. P. Whitaker, all of them for many years connected with companies in the sales end of the business.

It is Lichtman's intention to send his special representatives all over the country where they may be needed in a special capacity. At the moment, Netter is in the Blank territory; Grossman in the Skouras territory; Moore in the Friedman territory; Klein in the Charnas territory while Whitaker's first stop will be Washington. Later he will go to Atlanta and New Orleans.

Two Arrow Productions Are Completed

Announcement is made by Arrow Film Corporation this week of the completion of the production work on two of the Arrowplays De Luxe specials to be released in the near future.

The two productions are the Blazed Trail production, "Lost in a Big City," from the scenario by L. Case Russell, starring John Lowell, and the Martin J. Heyl production of Hal Reid's old stage play, "The Little Red Schoolhouse, or in Convict Stripes." All the actual shooting of the productions has been completed, and both pictures are now in process of editing and titling, and it is expected that they will be ready for screening within the next few weeks.

These are the second two of the first sequence of eight Arrowplays De Luxe recently announced. Others in this group are the Burton King production, "The Streets of New York," "Man and Wife," "None So Blind" (formerly "Shylock of Wall Street"), "The Broken Violin," "Night Life in Hollywood" and "Jacqueline of the Blazing North."

Goodman Is Editing Latest Special for Equity

Daniel Carson Goodman, author and producer of "Has the World Gone Mad?" which will be released by Equity Pictures on the independent market, is now cutting and editing this production. Actual filming was complete last week under the direction of J. Searle Dawley. Mr. Goodman expects to complete this work within a few weeks' time and have this latest production available to state right buyers at an early date.

"One Stolen Night," includes the above scenes laid in the Orient and is a Vitagraph production, starring Alice Calhoun.

Carewe Decries False Advertising

Declares Famous Plays and Books Do Not Necessarily Make Great Pictures

"ADVERTISING value may be an important factor in the screen adaptation of plays and books that have been a success, but unless the pictures themselves carry a good story the result will be unsatisfactory from both an entertainment and a financial standpoint." So declares Director Edwin Carewe.

Continuing, Mr. Carewe says:

"To draw any other conclusion is to argue that the motion picture-going public is too ignorant to tell whether a story is good or not. Any opinion that the public can be fooled on this point is a fallacy that has been exposed too often. It doesn't require a Lincoln to prove that.

"Notable plays and books have been and are being adapted to the screen with general satisfaction, but the mere fact that the motion picture rights of a book or play are being held at from $50,000 to $100,000 is not a token of success in film form. If the screen story is there the price may be justified. If it is not there any price is too high.

"It is because of story misfits that have found their way to the screen that the writer of original scenarios is coming into his own. Exorbitant and fictitious values placed upon the motion picture rights of spoken or printed successes, many of which are not adaptable to screen requirements, have given him his opportunity.

"Personally I look for the development of a new school of writers whose study will concentrate upon the needs of building up story value to be absorbed by the eye rather than the ear. I look for this school to progress in accordance with its ability to take advantage of its opportunities and, reversely, by the degree in which the holders of the rights to plays and books insist upon arbitrary and artificial values that are based upon advertising possibilities rather than upon the screen merit of the work.

"Plays that have been a success because of sparkling dialogue or brilliant repartee are automatically unfitted for visual interpretation; but it is surprising how many of these have found their way into filmdom.

"Reversely, 'The Miracle Man' was not an outstanding success as either a play or book; but as a picture it was recognized as one of the finest productions of the day. Heart interest, aroused by faith in God and faith in fellowmen, was the theme that made it a picture of absorbing interest. This theme, with its hundreds of tangents, has been the underlying motive for a majority of big screen successes.

"This one example illustrates the point that stories must be judged on their possibilities for screen production, rather than because of any illustrious stage or book sponsorship, if we are to play fair with exhibitors and the public. We cannot clog either with useless expense for fictitious items. The story is the thing.

"I have been trying to work along these lines during the past year in the production of 'I Am the Law' and a more recent picture tentatively titled 'Mighty Lak' a Rose,' the last named by Curtis Benton. Neither of these has had the support of a Broadway producer or of a publishing house.

"Both were produced because, in my opinion, they were real screen stories.

"That, I am positive, will be the test for the future selection of screen material, whether it be an original or the best stage play or book of the year.

Bern Joins Universal as Scenario Editor

Paul Bern, formerly scenario editor of the Goldwyn studios, and before that associated with every branch of the motion picture industry and with principal activities of the stage, has been engaged at Universal City as an associate scenario editor. He will supervise scenario writing of a unit in the department of expert screen writers of which Raymond D. Schrock is the editor.

"Mr. Bern's well-known tendency toward novelty in story ideas and his lack of restraint by old-fashioned technique makes him a valuable acquisition to the staff," said Irving G. Thalberg, director general at Universal City, in announcing the engagement of the new associate editor. "Ultra conservatism is not desirable in the production of good pictures today."

As an actor, stage manager and producer, Bern studied the theatrical field before he entered pictures. In the film industry he sought experience as an exchange manager, laboratory superintendent, publicity writer, independent scenario writer and director before he became a scenario editor.

Delmonte, St. Louis, Books 17 Goldwyn Releases

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation announces the closing of a deal with the Delmonte theatre, St. Louis, Mo., seating 3,000, whereby all of the seventeen remaining Goldwyn pictures for the season have been purchased for that house. They will be played within a period of twenty-one weeks starting with "Hungry Hearts," the week of December 31.

Support Named for Dana in "Her Fatal Millions"

Metro Pictures Corporation announces the following supporting cast for Viola Dana's new vehicle, "Her Fatal Millions," by William Dudley Pelley: Huntly Gordon, Allen Forrest, Peggy Brown, Edward Connelly, Kate Price and Joy Winthrop.

"Her Fatal Millions" is being staged by William Beaudine. Arthur Statter made the adaptation. The photographer is John Arnold.

Warner Announces Twelve Production Titles

AN announcement of significance to the independent field was made this week by Harry M. Warner, of Warner Brothers, who revealed the names of twelve of the eighteen popular novels and stage plays scheduled for production next season.

The twelve novels and stage plays include Sinclair Lewis' "Babbitt;" Grace H. Flandrau's novel, "Being Respectable;" Clyde Fitch's famous stage play, "Beau Brummell;" Charles Dickens' masterpiece, "David Copperfield; a story by Elinor Glyn, called "How to Educate a Wife;" "Lovers' Lane," by Clyde Fitch; "Shadowed Lives," by Justin Adams; "The Age of Innocence," a novel by Edith Wharton, "Broadway After Dark;" the well known melodrama by Owen Davis, "George Washington, Jr." and "Little Johnny Jones," both George M. Cohan stage productions, and "Cornered," the Broadway success of last season with Madge Kennedy, written by Dodson Mitchell and Zelda Sears.

Hyatt Daab Made F. B. O. Coast Studio Publicist

Hyatt Daab, for three years connected with the advertising and publicity department of the Film Booking Offices of America, formerly Robertson-Cole, left December 30th for Los Angeles, where he will be in charge of the R-C studio publicity department.

Previous to joining F. B. O., which at that time was Robertson-Cole, he was for six years chief sporting writer on the Evening Telegram, conducting a column under his own name. His departure from the home office was marked by an impromptu farewell party, during which the new studio publicity director was presented with a brief-case by his associates in the advertising department.

Ben H. Grimm, who has been connected with F. B. O. for the past three months, will occupy the position left vacant by Mr. Daab in the advertising and publicity department.

Pola Negri to Star in New Version of "The Cheat"

Pola Negri is to be starred in a new Paramount production of "The Cheat," which will be directed by George Fitzmaurice. Jack Holt will be featured with the star, and Charles de Roche will head the supporting cast. The picture will be started at the Lasky studio about January 22.

"The Cheat," written by Hector Turnbull, was produced originally nearly eight years ago by Cecil B. DeMille. Some time afterward it was produced upon the stage by William A. Brady, with Mary Nash and Jose Ruben in the leading roles, the stage version being written by Willard Mack. Two years ago Mr. Turnbull's story was produced in grand opera at the Opera Comique in Paris as the posthumous work of Camille Erlanger—the first and only screen story ever to be produced in grand opera.

Ouida Bergere is adapting the Turnbull photodrama. It is being entirely rewritten and modernized. Mr. de Roche will be seen in the heavy role, which, in the original version, was played by Sessue Hayakawa. The part has been altered to a Latin type for Mr. de Roche.

Cast Named for "You Can't Fool Your Wife"

George Melford has completed the selection of the cast for his newest production, "You Can't Fool Your Wife," a modern story written for the screen by Waldemar Young, which will be started soon at the Paramount Long Island studio. The principal roles will be in the hands of Leatrice Joy, Nita Naldi, Lewis Stone, Pauline Garon, Rose Tapley and William Burress.

Replica of Mayflower Is Christened

The Mayflower, built by the craftsmen of the Charles Ray Productions Studio, an exact replica of the boat that carried the Puritans to America in 1620, was christened at the Ray studio on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Priscilla Alden Evans, a direct descendant of John Alden and Priscilla Mullens.

The christening was in the presence of more than two hundred, many of whom were descendants of Mayflower passengers, members of the Alden Kindred of America, Sons of the Revolution and Daughters of the Revolution.

Preceding the christening Mayor George Cryer made a short talk and introduced Charles Ray, Mrs. Ray, Frederick Sullivan, his director; Richard Willis, who has been Ray's business associate for the past seven years; Albert A. Kidder, Jr., production manager; Enid Bennett, who will play the role of Priscilla, and other members of the cast now selected, together with many motion picture celebrities who were present.

Universal Starts Work on "His Good Name"

"His Good Name" is the title of one of the new all-star productions being initiated at Universal City. William Slavers McNutt wrote the story and Collier's published it recently. "His Good Name" is in the hands of Director Harry A. Pollard.

A cast of unusual promise is indicated in the first selections, which include Rockcliffe Fellowes, Fritzi Ridgeway, Hayden Stevenson, Buddy Messenger and Frederick Stanton. As the title indicates, "His Good Name" is a story of honor and the valuation placed upon it by a man.

Schulberg Engages Colleen Moore for Lead Role

B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, this week signed Colleen Moore to play one of the featured roles in "April Showers." This will be made as a Tom Forman Production, and will be placed in production as soon as Forman completes "The Girl Who Came Back." Kenneth Harlan, who was recently placed under contract by Schulberg, will play opposite Miss Moore.

Burr Price Selected as Publicity Chief

ARTHUR S. FRIEND, president of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, announces the appointment of Burr Price as Director of Advertising and Publicity. Mr. Price is best known for his work as liaison press officer for the Belgian royal party, when King Albert toured the United States in October and November, 1918. His selection for this position came as the result of his services as Director of the Press Bureau of the Belgian Ministry of Economic Affairs in Brussels.

Mr. Price is also well known as the wartime editor of the European edition of the New York Herald, as correspondent at the American front for the New York edition and as the correspondent for both papers at the Paris Peace Conference. He ended a ten-year service with the Herald to go to Belgium.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

With Paramount Units

Jesse L. Lasky announces that "The Cheat," originally made by DeMille, is to be remade by George Fitzmaurice, starring Pola Negri, with Jack Holt and Charles de Roche in the supporting cast. Production will start on the 22d. Fitzmaurice is now making the Venetian scenes for "Bella Donna."

Walter Hiers will leave Saturday for Syracuse, N. Y., after completing "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime." There, on the 12th, he will be married to Adah McWilliams, former Los Angeles girl and daughter of Charles McWilliams, general manager of the Nettleton shoe stores throughout the country. They will honeymoon in New York the 13th, 14th and 15th, returning to the coast by way of the South.

In production are: "Grumpy," William de Mille; "Prodigal Daughters," Gloria Swanson-Sam Wood; "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Mary Miles Minter-Charles Maigne.

A Tartar village has been built at the Lasky ranch for "The Law of the Lawless," starring Dorothy Dalton under the direction of Victor Fleming.

Joseph Henaberry has completed "The Tiger's Claw," starring Jack Holt.

Henry Kolker, who has been in Canada for a week selecting locations for Alice Brady's next Paramount picture "The Snow Bride," which he will direct, has returned to the Paramount Eastern studios. Several interior scenes will be made first and then the company will travel to the snowy mountains of Canada for the exteriors. The story is an original for the screen by Sonya Levien and Julie Herne.

On the Goldwyn Lot

King Vidor has been placed under a long-term contract to direct special productions. The first is now being selected.

Marshall Neilan will next film an original story by himself, titled "The Ingrate," continuity by Carey Wilson. Hobart Bosworth, Claire Windsor, Raymond Griffith, Bessie Love, Tom Gallery and George Cooper are in the Neilan cast.

Roy Klaffki, for three years superintendent of photography at Metro, has signed a contract for a similar position at Goldwyn.

Hugo Ballin has completed work on "Vanity Fair" and the picture starring Mabel Ballin is now in the process of editing and titling.

Eric von Stroheim is still in San Francisco preparing the continuity for his first Goldwyn production, a screen version of Frank Norris' "McTeague."

Christie Comedy Bits

Al Christie and troupe have returned from Honolulu, where they filmed "A Hula Honeymoon," the first of a series featuring Henry Murdock. Babe London, heavyweight girl, and Earl Rodney are principals in this comedy.

The Neal Burns comedy titled "Be Yourself," laid in a shirtwaist factory, has been finished.

Scott Sidney is directing Dorothy Devorr in "Babies Welcome."

East and West with Fox

Jerome Storm is casting "Red Darkness," starring John Gilbert.

Stories are being selected for William Russell, Dustin Farnum and William Farnum.

In production are: "The Eleventh Hour," all-star, direction of Bernard Durning; "Modern Monte Cristo," Tom Mix, Joseph Franz directing.

Century Cut-Backs

"Too Many Lovers," Baby Peggy's current Century comedy, has been completed by Director Herman C. Raymaker. This is the comedy in which all of the boys used by Neilan for his "Penrod" play a prominent part.

R-C Production Notes

Additions to Ethel Clayton's "The Greater Glory" include Carrie Clark Ward, Clarissa Selwyn, Fred Esmelton and Albert Lee. Direction is by James W. Horne and Malcolm McGregor is the male lead. It is being finished this week.

Harry Carey's next will be "A Man of the Desert," for which continuity is now being prepared.

The DeHavens next will be "No Trespassing," by Monte Brice and George Bartlett.

The next of the Fighting Blood series will be "The Call of the Wild," Mal St. Clair directing; principals, George O'Hara, Clara Horton and boxers.

At Universal City

The cast for "Trimmed in Scarlet," the William Hurlburt play, includes Kathlyn Williams, David Torrance, Lucille Ricksen, Roy Stewart, Phillips Smalley and Robert Agnew. Direction will be by Jack Conway.

Henry Lehrman has been engaged to direct Hoot Gibson in "The Poor Worm," now being cast.

Robert Hill has made the last scenes for "Around the World" serial starring William Desmond.

In production are: "The Chicken that Came Home to Roost," Gladys Walton-King Baggot; "Nobody's Bride," Herbert Rawlinson; "Drifting," Priscilla Dean-Tod Browning; "Jewell," Lois Weber; "The Abysmal Brute," Hobart Henley; "His Good Name," Harry Pollard.

Norman Kerry has been placed under a five year contract.

Paul Bern, former editor at Goldwyn, has been engaged as associate scenario editor. Raymond L. Schrock continues as editor.

With Roach Comedians

Hal Roach is in New York concluding negotiations with Will Rogers to make a series of comedies for Pathe.

The next Harold Lloyd subject will be laid in South America and a mammouth street set is now being built. Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor will direct. Jobyna Ralston, the leading woman, is 17 years of age and has been seen in a number of Paul Parrott comedies.

The Paul Parrott company directed by J. A. Howe is in Big Bear Valley making a snow comedy.

Snub Pollard is working in four comedies at one time under the direction of Charles Parrott and Hugh Fay. Delays by weather made it impossible to finish subjects when started, which is the cause of the mixup.

The Bob McGowan kid comedy title "The Big Show" is finished and has been previewed at the Venice theatre this week.

Harley M. Walker has been assigned to titling the Cannibal Island feature now being completed by Roach.

Roach's "Call of the Wild" company under the direction of Fred Jackman is still at work in Yellowstone National Park.

Here and There

Maurice Tourneur is finishing "The Isle of Dead Ships" this week. His next will be "The Lullaby," an original by Lillian Ducey, for which the continuity is being written by Will M. Ritchey.

Edwin Carewe has taken space at the United Studios and is casting for "Girl of the Golden West."

Sacramento Picture corporation is beginning "Married Folks," under the direction of Lambert Hillyer, with an all-star cast headed by Mildred Davis, former leading woman for Harold Lloyd.

Halperin Productions are beginning "Tea With a Kick," an all-star subject, on the 14th.

B. P. Fineman Productions have taken space at the Fine Arts studios and will begin work within two weeks.

Clifton Eliot Productions, Charles Seeling Productions and Doubleday Productions will begin work at the Fine Arts studios within two weeks.

Gaston Glass has been placed under a three year contract by B. P. Schulberg.

Victor Schertzinger has completed "Refuse," starring Katherine MacDonald.

A print of Gasnier's "Poor Men's Wives" was shipped to New York on Wednesday.

Tom Forman will finish "The Girl Who Came Back" this week.

Gasnier is leaving for New York on a business trip.

Jess Robbins will commence his fourth Vitagraph subject on the 14th.

Johnny Hines has finished "Luck" for C. C. Burr. This is his third starring vehicle for Mastodon. "Luck" is now being titled and edited.

The Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., with headquarters in Hollywood has added two features to its list of releases. These films will be known as "Gold Seal" productions. "The Wheel of Fortune," starring Grace Darmond, is the title of one, while Hobart Bosworth in "The Law of the Sea," is the other. Clarence Barger, former Goldwyn director, wrote the continuity for "The Law of the Sea."

Miss Mary Alden completed work the week before last on the Daniel Carson Goodman production "Has the World Gone Mad?" and began work Monday on Burton King's new picture at his studio on the Jersey shore opposite 96th Street.

Miss Betty Blythe is now at work on her third Whitman Bennett starring vehicle, "The Garden of Desire."

Frank Ormstrom has been signed as art director for Norma Talmadge, in "Within the Law" and for Constance Talmadge in "Madame Pompadour," both First National releases.

Around Metro Studios

Sawyer-Lubin has completed "Your Friend and Mine."

Louis Burston has engaged Rowland V. Lee to direct his next subject for Metro, titled "Desire." The partial cast includes John Bowers, Marguerite de la Motte, David Butler, Estelle Taylor and Lucille Hutton.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

With the Exchanges

MANAGER I. MAYNARD SCHWARTZ, of Educational, was proud over the showing being made by Educational comedies this week, as they were appearing in every large theatre in Chicago. The Chicago theatre had "Blazes" on its program and other de luxe houses were showing "Choose Your Weapons."

Jack Barry has been appointed sales manager of American Releasings Chicago exchange, succeeding Charles Cassanave, who recently resigned.

Manager C. E. Bond, of First National, who has been indisposed for some days, was back at his desk and opened up the new year with his usual pep and efficiency. Mr. Bond, by the way, has made a splendid record since he has taken over the management of the exchange, and is determined to make 1923 even a bigger year for First National than 1922. Country Sales Manager Brumberg started his salesmen out in the territory again this week after having them all in for the period between Christmas and New Years, during which time they had an opportunity to visit with their families and also absorb new sales ideas and pep.

Ralph Kiessling, special representative of De Mille, is in the City doing some preliminary exploitation work for "Adam's Rib," the Paramount feature, which is billed for early release.

I. Ettelson has returned to Chicago from Washington, D. C., where he has been located for the last five months, to become country sales manager of F. B. O. Mr. Ettelson has a very wide circle of friends, who will be glad to know that he is again located in the Windy City.

Clyde Eckhardt, of Fox Film Corporation, was in Chicago this week for a conference with Exchange Managers Meyers, of Chicago, Edwards of Kansas City and Tarbell of Minneapolis. Plans for putting the big new Fox specials on the market were taken up at the meeting.

L. V. Keitnaur has reported to Manager Meyers of Fox Film Corporation for assignment to work and will cover the Southern Wisconsin territory. Mr. Keitnaur has been connected with the Fox organization at Oklahoma City for the past three years.

Roy Alexander, now manager of Universal's Kansas City exchange, was back in the old home town for the holidays. Roy likes Kansas City but Chicago still looks very good to him.

Cleve Adams, personal representative of A. A. Schmidt, was another Christmas visitor and left for the Southwest on New Year's day.

F. L. McNamee, who has been manager of Universal's Salt Lake exchange for some time past, is coming back east and his new assignment will be announced within a few days. He is succeeded by Robert Epperson.

C. C. Pettijohn, counsel for the Hays organization, was in Chicago last week, and while here, addressed the meeting of the Film Board of Trade. While Mr. Pettijohn did not disclose the matters taken up at the meeting, he complimented President Edwin Silverman and the Chicago exchange managers on the good work done by their organization during the past year, and the harmonious relations maintained with exhibitors. He was particularly pleased over the work of the Board of Arbitration in settling matters in controversy between exchanges and exhibitors to the satisfaction of both parties, and said that the number of disputes in this territory were much smaller than in other film centers, which testified to the business-like methods of both exchanges and exhibitors. Mr. Pettijohn has been making a tour of the central west investigating the probability of censorship legislation at the coming sessions of state legislators and finds that bills already have been prepared in several states, but as a result of his observations he is convinced that there is no demand on the part of the public for censorship, but the movement is sponsored by professional reformers and paid legislative agents, so that the proper presentation of the matter by motion picture interests, it is his belief, that the threatened legislation can be headed off. Mr. Pettijohn, as usual, was reticent about breaking into print, but commended the statement of L. M. Rubens, president of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, in regard to the return of Arbuckle to the screen, and said it was his belief that the matter was one which should be left to the public.

Si Griever, of Griever Productions, has taken over the distribution of the pictures formerly handled by the Clyde E. Eliott Attractions, including the Betty Blythe Series. Griever Productions has also secured Principal Pictures, Sol Lessor's new company, first two releases, "Environment," featuring Alice Lake and Milton Sills, and "The World's A Stage," an Elinor Glyn story, starring Dorothy Phillips.

William Schwartz, of Educational Films, has become engaged to Miss Bessie Farroll, a charming Chicago girl, and expects to become a benedict at an early date. Brother I. Maynard Schwartz, is still a matrimonial eligible, although his friends are urging him to follow his brother's example and plan a matrimonial career which he has been side-stepping these many years.

Publicity Manager Dan Roche, of Paramount, is doing some special exploitation work for "The Covered Wagon," the big feature which will be released shortly, and incidentally learning how it feels to travel as our forefathers did by ox team. He is personally accompanying an ox team from Sherlock, S. C. to New York City, making several stops en route. It is reported that Dan is making the long trip on horseback, but this cannot be verified. Bill Danziger is in charge of the publicity department during the absence of Mr. Roche.

Effective ad copy used by the "Rialto," Newark, N. J., heralding the attraction "From Rags to Riches"

Fox anniversary week, which starts on January 28th, will break all records, according to Manager Meyers, who states that a greater number of pictures already have been set in for that date, than in any other week in the history of the company, and that many more will be contracted for during now and the time the week starts.

Famous Players-Lasky will move their offices to their new exchange building at 13th and Wabash this week.

Among the Trade

SAM LEVINE has been appointed manager of the Le Claire Theatre, Moline, Illinois, which is scheduled to open some time in February. This project, which is backed by the Le Claire Theatre Company, of which F. L. and B. S. Cornwell, of the Delmonte Theatre, St. Louis, are reported heavily interested, includes a hotel and five stores. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1830.

F. L. Flader, who is connected with Universal Pictures Corporation's theatre interests, has been in the city doing some special work for the Randolph Theatre.

Theatre managers throughout Chicago started the new year with a smile, and a broad one, for 1923 started with a rush of business, rarely, if ever, equalled in moving picture history. Crowds extending a half block were held out for hours at the Chicago, McVicker's and Roosevelt theatres in the loop and great business was the report coming in from all houses, whether outlying or in the downtown district. Saturday, Sunday and Monday were red letter days for the theatres and the attendance was a good omen for 1923.

Watterson R. Rothacker paged Santa Claus to the tune of $15,000 of Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. stock which was distributed as Christmas presents among members of the Chicago organization. Santa brought along a bag of gold pieces for the more recent members of the organization. Workers also received the usual increase in insurance carried for them by the firm.

Walter Hiers, one of the younger Paramount stars, is scheduled to stop over in Chicago for a personal appearance at McVicker's Theatre on January 10th. He is on his way to Syracuse, N. Y., where he is to marry Miss Ada McWilliams. Following the wedding, the young couple will go honeymooning to West Indies, the trip being a wedding gift from Jesse Lasky.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

To Have and to Hold—

Comment was all for this picture. Some seemed to have stayed away because it was a costume picture, but those who went were enough to keep the manager smiling. Much better business than week preceding. (Middle West.)

Did a big week; patrons pleased. (West.)

When Knighthood Was in Flower—

Best picture for long run we have ever played. (West.)

Still getting them on this one. Patrons pleased with improvement in Marion Davies and many have seen it twice. (West.)

The Outcast—

Drew good houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Good picture and business up to usual standards. (Middle West.)

The Impossible Mrs. Bellew—

The "impossible" seemed to draw. Also Miss Swanson seems to be good for the box office. This feature is one that just fits her and won much favorable comment. Crowds were better than was expected for the holidays. (Middle West.)

Attracted overflow of audiences both afternoon and evening, due, undoubtedly to Christmas holidays and otherwise strong bill. (East.)

This one played to crowded houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

A Daughter of Luxury—

The Pride of Palomar—

Branded as a Hearst Jap propaganda picture by several of the local newspapers, this picture attracted only fair business, due, perhaps, to holiday shopping activities of patrons.

Ebb Tide—

Picture pleased moderately well. Business not what we expected at this time of the year. (Middle West.)

A good box office attraction. Played to good houses for a week. (Middle West.)

Good picture; drew well. (West.)

Clarence—

During holiday showing this picture held a good average. Business generally was better than had been expected and this feature drew well and gave general satisfaction. (Middle West.)

The Heart Specialist—

It was the opinion of the manager that something was very much the matter with this picture. But the women seemed to be attracted. Business all right. (Middle West.)

Burning Sands—

Too improbable to be convincing, even with the splendid cast chosen for it. Beautiful scenes, audience credulity cannot be overstrained. Mediocre business.

Back Home and Broke—

One of the real pictures of the year. Played an extra day by popular demand. Satisfactory receipts. (Middle West.)

Meighan great favorite here. Did big business and picture pleased. (West.)

Kick In—

Too much melodrama. People like thrills, but they must be delicately worked up. This didn't make much of an appeal to our patrons. (Middle West.)

Singed Wings—

Just the thing for modern day audiences and well liked and patronized by attendants at this house. Business capacity. (East.)

One of Bebe Daniels' best. Everybody likes it. Good attendance considering season. (Middle West.)

One of the best and most unusual pictures that popular Bebe Daniels has ever had here. Went over big and to excellent business. (East.)

The Cowboy and the Lady—

They come to see anything at Christmas time; business therefore, good.

On the High Seas—

Played during Christmas week and did a lively business. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Omar, the Tentmaker—

Cannot complain on business. Not up to expectations as a picture. (West.)

Well done in spots. People complained it was slow. (West.)

The Light in the Dark—

Picture fairly well liked. Not much business. (Middle West.)

By playing up Lon Chaney and the new color process incorporated, this one was put over to the tune of the S. R. O. sign for a week. (East.)

Domestic Relations—

Picture only fair, with mediocre business. (East.)

Rose of the Sea—

Picture and business both poor. (East.)

Oliver Twist—

Very good picture and business big. (East.)

Cleaned up on this one. Popular star and favorite story both up to patrons' expectations. (West.)

Skin Deep—

Business was not expected to be good during the pre-holiday rush, but this picture did well. Was much better than expected. Created comment, for and against, with considerable enthusiasm from those who were for it as something unusual. (Middle West.)

Lorna Doone—

The attendance for the week with this one was good. (Middle West.)

Great picture. Drew well and pleased the audience. (Middle West.)

The Deuce of Spades—

Men seemed to like this picture, a western, although some, who were attracted to it as a Ray feature, were disappointed. Business satisfactory. (Middle West.)

Minnie—

Good picture, star popular here. Went over in fine style. (Middle West.)

METRO

Forget-Me-Not—

Bad picture and business under par. (East.)

June Madness—

Viola Dana not much of a drawing card here, but business held to average, because of strong bill surrounding feature. (East.)

Enter Madame—

Has the attributes of a real picture. Was well received. Attendance up to expectations. (Middle West.)

Trifling Women—

Good picture and business satisfactory. (East.)

The Forgotten Law—

Average picture and box office value. (Middle West.)

Quincy Adams Sawyer—

Not nearly as good as it might have been. Fairly well liked and less than average business. (East.)

Peg o' My Heart—

Fine picture; well done from all angles. One of the most popular pictures we have shown this year. Business fine. (Middle West.)

Sure-fire. People all liked it; house jammed for week. (West.)

GOLDWYN

The Glorious Fool—

This picture got some pre-showing notices as hero is local boy. Business maintained a good average. (Middle West.)

Brothers Under the Skin—

Fair picture and business normal. (East.)

Excellent comedy. Fairly good drawing power. (Middle West.)

The Blind Bargain—

Mediocre picture and business good. (East.)

The Sin Flood—

Average crowds saw this one for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Remembrance—

Lack of proper exploitation failed to bring in more than an average business on this very entertaining picture.

HODKINSON

The Headless Horseman—

Fine picture; drew well. (Middle West.)

Affinities—

A very well liked little picture. Comment was that it was very clean and more of the type would be welcomed here. Good business. (East.)

Heart's Haven—

A truly wonderful picture. It holds the audience from the start. It appeals especially to the women. Nice receipts. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

The Way of a Maid—

Star Elaine Hammerstein seems to be something of a favorite at this house. Business pretty good. (Middle West.)

Big Houses Say

John Smith—
Picture and business both bad. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

The Kentucky Derby—
Good racing picture that got as much business as could be expected the week before Christmas. (Middle West.)

The Altar Stairs—
Picture is all right, but business for the week was all wrong. Probably because of its being the week before Christmas. (Middle West.)

Under Two Flags—
Shows Miss Dean in an interestingly famous role. Drew excellently. (Middle West.)

All Night—
The house was open, but few folks seemed to realize it. (East.)

Nothing out of the ordinary. Valentino of course is an advantage. Otherwise, it has little real appeal. Fair attendance, but not up to expectations. (Middle West.)

One Wonderful Night—
Business only fair. Competition too strong at other houses nearby. (East.)

Ridin' Wild—

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Till We Meet Again—
Picture only fair and business fair. (Middle West.)

Conquering the Woman—
Considering the fact that it was the week before Christmas, this one did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

FILM BOOKING OFFICES

In the Name of the Law—
Should be booked for the aid it is to the morals of a community. It teaches a needed lesson. Drew very well. (Middle West.)

Our Mutual Friend—
Management thought the fact that this was a Charles Dickens story might bring them in because of the holidays, but it did a beautiful flop, box office figures falling off way below average. (East.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood—
One of the big pictures of the year. Never have played to better business. (West.)

No bull dog ever held on more persistently than this one. Fine picture for a run. (West.)

As great as the advance notices claim. Patrons brought back friends to see it. Very good attendance. (Middle West.)

Tess of the Storm Country—
When everything else fails, Mary Pickford brings home the bacon. Did a big week and it looks like another. (West.)

America's favorite has lost nothing since she appeared in this story before. Those who had not seen the first version came, and those who had, wanted to see if she was any different. All said the only difference was that she was better. (West.)

Good for a run any time, anywhere. (Middle West.)

One Exciting Night—
Best we can say for it is "exciting," although a lot of people claimed it was as good as other Griffith productions. Anyway, we did business with it and patrons seemed satisfied. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

Fortune's Mask—
A nice little picture. Pleased my patrons. (Middle West.)

Divorce Coupons—
Average program picture. Did fair week and people did not kick. (West.)

WARNER BROTHERS

Heroes of the Street—
Not quite up to expectations. Wesley Barry has done better work. Attendance slightly off. (Middle West.)

We filled the house to the roof all week. Great shows, especially as we had Wesley Barry here in person. (Middle West.)

AL LICHTMAN

Shadows—
One of the best bits of work from every viewpoint that we have had. There is not a kick coming on this picture. Wonderfully well liked. (East.)

A truly wonderful picture. Great story. Excellent cast; photography all it should be. Patrons more than liked it. (Middle West.)

FOX

Do or Dare—
Business pretty fair. During week's run there were some days that did good business. (Middle West.)

The Village Blacksmith—
A masterpiece. A wonderful attraction for anywhere. Absolutely knocker-proof. It packs 'em in. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Barb Wire—
Business just fair. First time that Hoxie was shown at this house. (Middle West.)

Deserted at the Altar—
Picture and business both poor. (East.)

Mother Eternal—
A pleasing picture. Good attendance everything considered. (Middle West.)

Exhibitors Use the Booking Guide—

Read This!

HENRY H. FRANCISCO, manager of the Terrace theatre, Kendall, Wis., writes as follows concerning the value and usefulness of MOTION PICTURE NEWS BOOKING GUIDE:

"Beg to say I use both NEWS and GUIDE, the NEWS for booking current pictures and the GUIDE when something a little older will do just as well if it's THERE.

"You just bet your whole printing equipment that they both help any exhibitor who doesn't let the exchanges do his booking for him.

Forget-Me-Not" Day Set Asided By Maryland Governor

Baltimore, Md.—"Forget-Me-Not" day, set aside by the governor, was tied up with the showing of the picture of the same name at the New theatre.

The United Railways, operating the street car lines in the city, transported to the theatre without charge hundreds of children, guests of the Baltimore News, which aided in putting over the picture. A circular was distributed, linking the Forget-Me-Not day celebration—proclaimed by the Governor—with the name of the picture; quarter page ads appeared in the leading dailies; an automobile fleet toured the city, and special programs, showing scenes from the photoplay, were published.

Specially printed invitations were sent to selected individuals for the premiere presentation in Baltimore of "Forget-Me-Not." Newspaper reviewers and leading civic figures witnessed this initial showing, and their endorsement sent the photoplay off to a good start.

The Baltimore News acted as host to the children who saw the picture at matinees. The United Railways, which carried the youngsters to and from the theatre, placed on their cars large streamers reading, "We are on our way to the New theatre to see 'Forget-Me-Not' as guests of the Baltimore News and the United Railways." Children from the orphan asylums and schools saw the picture gratis.

Silhouette Contest Put Over as "Shadows" Tie-Up

BOSTON, Mass.—A "Shadows" contest was put over to good effect in conjunction with the Boston Telegram for the showing of "Shadows" at the Modern and Beacon theatres.

The tie-up, which was arranged by Phil Kahn, exploitation representative of the American Feature Film Company, called for the publication of two silhouette figures of prominent film stars each day. The contest began one week before the showing and continued during the week. Cash awards were given those who guessed the greatest number of names from the silhouettes.

The first prize was $25, the second, $10, the third, fourth and fifth, $5 each, and the next fifty, two tickets each for the Modern and Beacon.

"Clarence" Club Leads Boys to Aid Exploitation Campaign

Macon, Ga.—Manager E. C. Kingman, of the Rialto theatre, in exploiting "Clarence," formed a "Clarence" club, and the publicity which he received more than compensated him for the effort involved.

Two weeks before the opening he ran an ad containing a coupon to be filled in by any young man answering to the name of Clarence and whose age was between 12 and 20. Quite a number bit, and a few days later he had them meet him at the theatre, where he elucidated the big idea. At this meeting the "Clarence Club" was organized with the avowed purpose of studying bugs, saxophones and mules.

The paper got a story of this and published it under two-column head. Thereafter every day the paper carried a story of the meetings of the "Clarence Club," their startling discoveries as to the relation between bugs and saxophones, how saxophones came to be invented, etc.

But the "Clarences" did help out. The telephone directory was divided among them and they called every residence in town, saying that the speaker's name was Clarence and that he was going to play the saxophone at the Rialto Thursday, Friday and Saturday. A local musician, dressed as the character, was secured for the saxophone solos.

"Prince and Pauper" Exploite By Vaudeville House

Minneapolis, Minn.—When Manager J. J. Cluxton of Pantages theatre played "The Prince and the Pauper," he decided to put special advertising and exploitation back of it, so he bought larger newspaper space and gave three-quarters top to the picture. The customary two sevens was increased to three tens in all newspapers of the Twin Cities for four days.

The press book recommended bookstore tie-ups. The subject was adroitly pursued and three bookstores responded with window displays and newspaper advertisiug.

Another press book suggestion garnered a front page story in the Minneapolis News. A special pre-view for all the teachers of the Twin Cities had been arranged with the co-operation of Joseph M. Fieldman, American releasing branch manager in Miuneapolis. The showing was rewarded by enthusiastic endorsements of the educators.

It is pertinent to remark that the old adage: "The Lord helps those who help themselves." proved true to Mr. Cluxton, for an impetus to the carefully planned campaign came unexpectedly in the form of that episode of the series of reminiscences of Chauncey M. Depew having to do with his dinner with Mark Twain and the then Prince of Wales, the story occupying a top half page of the Minneapolis Journal on the day of the opening.

Series of Teaser Slides Start "Trouble" Campaign

Columbus, Ga.—Manager I. C. Holloway, of the Rialto theatre, started his campaign on "Trouble" with a series of teaser slides calculated to start them speculating a bit. For three days he ran this one:

"Every blooming one of you is going to get into 'Trouble' pretty soon if you listen to us."

This was followed for three days by a slide reading: "The 'Trouble' with us is we haven't got enough pictures just like it."

Then he put on this slide: "That 'Trouble' stuff was all bunk, Caroline and James. What we want to tell you is that Jackie Coogan does the best acting he ever did in 'Trouble.'"

This slide was followed immediately by a stock slide and trailer.

A number of local merchants co-operated on a full page in the morning paper headed, "When in 'Trouble' these firms will help you out." The tie-up lines were, "Drive Away Your 'Trouble,' Rent a New Ford"—"Eliminate Tire 'Trouble'"—"Save 'Trouble' by Calling a Taxi"—"Give the Laugh to Battery 'Trouble,'" etc.

Fire Department Furnishes Ballyhoo on "Nero"

GALVESTON, Texas. — Through a tie-up effected with the Galveston Fire department, the management of the Dixie theatre obtained an excellent ballyhoo on "Nero."

As the burning of Rome is one of the big scenes in this photoplay, the management of the Dixie theatre induced the fire department to name a "Fireman's Day" during the showing of "Nero." As a result, the local firemen were invited to see the picture as guests of the theatre. They arrived in six fire trucks which carried banners on each truck announcing the name of the theatre and the photoplay.

The local newspapers also co-operated liyerally by playing up "Fireman's Day," in conjunction with the Dixie theatre.

Real Lariat Spells Title of "Cowboy and the Lady"

CHICKASHA, Okla.—Manager Clayton Tunstill of the Rialto theatre made use of the twenty-four sheet poster paper to furnish him a cut-out for his lobby display. The display when built showed Tom Moore dressed in his cowboy outfit and mounted on a small pony throwing a lariat which spelled out the title of the picture.

The cut-out of Moore stood on one side of a lobby and on the other side a cut-out of Mary Miles Minter with the title of the picture—"The Cowboy and the Lady"—formed by the lariat rope between the two cutouts.

Rival Star Contest Staged on "Trifling Women"

MACON, GA.—Manager E. C. Kingman, of the Rialto theatre, used a novel contest in advance of "Trifling Women." Six three and one month's passes were given to the three persons writing the best essay giving their reasons for preferring either Valentino or Novarro, the latter being the hero of "Trifling Women."

Also, immediately after the placing of 24-sheets, window cards and specially built outside stands, a private screening was held to which the Debutantes' Club was invited. After the screening of the picture, refreshments were served on the mezzanine, making of this a social event. Representatives from both papers attended, and the affair was given prominence, both as a social item and news story, always making mention of the picture.

Teaser Slides Aid Campaign on "Clarence" at Columbus

Columbus, Ga.—Manager I. C. Holloway of the Rialto theatre made excellent use of teaser copy on slides in his advance exploitation on "Clarence."

Ten days in advance, Mr. Holloway started to tease the title over a series of slides. After a few days of straight teasers he started a slide reading, "If Clarence is in the house he is wanted at home." This never failed to get a laugh and impressed the title on the minds of the audience. But lest some one by that name should take it seriously this slide was followed immediately by the regular illustrated slide on this picture.

The lobby display was simple but effective. All lobby lights except chandelier in the center were put on a flasher circuit and strong spot lights were focussed on title and name of star in cut-out letters across the front. This is the first time the Rialto's lobby lights had been "flashed" and the novelty of it got attention.

PLUNDER

Produced and Directed by George B. Seitz

"'Plunder' is endowed with action, speed, cast, production. It moves with characteristic skill, gradually gaining in tempo until the end of each episode leaves curiosity at the boiling point with a desire to go in quest of one's breath. Granting that Pearl White carries honors as the star, the supporting cast deserves due credit for splendid work, and the cameraman for unusual effects."—M. P. News.

"The stunts come thick and fast and the action is speedy in the extreme....Each episode closes with an exciting moment. It affords plenty of thrills and then some. A good deal of money seems to have been spent on the production and there are some good interiors. Altogether a good serial."—Film Daily.

"'Plunder' is the best set and photographed serial we have ever seen. It has been made with the care of a special production and Miss White has never been more effectively lighted or given a better vehicle....Most real and exciting. The workmanship of the picture as well as the nerve and vivacity of Pearl White make it well worth seeing."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

Kids, animals, birds, in a riot of comicality

"An abundance of fun."—Trade Review.

"The second 'Our Gang' comedy is one of the best seen in a long time. Dressed up ducks, hens, goats, an almost human mule, and a dog combined with an irresistible gang of small dirty kids of a variety of ages and colors make up two reels of sheer fun. . . . Should prove a most pleasing addition to any bill."—Film Daily.

" 'One Terrible Day.' We bought these comedies without seeing any of them as Pathe has always shot square with us. Having seen the first of the series we will say an exhibitor is not shooting square with himself if he passes them up. Our patrons are still laughing at 'One Terrible Day.' "—*J. L. Elaborate Fashion Show Staged on "Rich Men's Wives"

Portland, Ore.—When Manager Paul E. Noble, of the Liberty theatre, played "Rich Men's Wives," he staged one of the most elaborate and artistic fashion promenades on record, which cost the theatre only a comparatively small sum.

First, Mr. Noble interested four leading Portland merchants in his idea. Phil Harris & Company agreed to display the latest gowns on living models; the Hudson's Bay Company agreed to supply $50,000 worth of striking fur garments; the C. H. Baker Company the latest in milady's footwear, and the Wonder Millinery Company the last word in millinery.

Each of the four firms bore its pro rata of the expense of printing and distributing 40,000 four-page booklets telling of the style show and film presentation. Booklets were passed out at theatres, mailed and distributed in bundles at the stores interested in the event.

A neatly prepared full-page newspaper ad printed in two papers the day prior to the opening of the show was the only space display on the event.

For the stage display Manager Noble had painted a special drop designed after the November "Vogue" magazine cover. On the stage behind the drop were dressing rooms at either side so each of the twelve girls entered the spotlight, which was focused on the drop at the left, slowly moved up stage, turned twice and returned to the drop and exited at the right to the tunes of a specially written ballad prepared by Manager Noble and Organist Henri Keates.

Newspaper Holds Contest on "Nanook of the North"

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—"Nanook of the North" is receiving valuable newspaper publicity throughout Wisconsin as the result of the enterprise of the Milwaukee Journal.

With an offer of $1,500 in prizes to readers for the best essay on Eskimo life it is stimulating attendance at all Wisconsin theatres playing "Nanook," where everybody knows authentic information about Eskimo life is to be obtained, for use in writing prize essays.

This offer was printed on Sunday, December 10, in connection with a "Nanook" story and a page display of stills of the film's characters and dramatic scenes. The rules governing the competition specify one grand prize of $350, a first prize of $100, second prize $50, third $25, and twenty-eight prizes of $5 each.

Novel Exploitation Is Given "The Electric House"

San Francisco, Cal.—An excellent example of the exploitation possibilities that sometimes lie in short subjects was given when "The Electric House" played the Warfield theatre. Despite the fact that the subject was treated farcically, members of the electrical profession expressed themselves as keenly interested in the mechanics of the picture.

A special screening was arranged for members of the Pioneer Electric Society, presided over by John E. Britten, president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. In return for this courtesy the society appointed Mr. Hartley, manager of the California Co-operative Electric campaign, as its representative to visit different retail shops and arrange window displays.

Eleven windows in all were obtained through the society's efforts. The prize display was a window of dishwashers, semaphores, electric trains and electric appliances in a window of the theatre building, with the sign, "If you think your home is modern, see 'The Electric House' at the Warfield." It gave people something to talk about, and the theatre manager was invited to attend a luncheon of 200 electricians and contractors in which he outlined the value of retail windows and incidentally spoke a lot about "The Electric House."

Elaborate Street Ballyhoo Is Used on "Oliver Twist"

Boston, Mass.—History was mixed up a bit in the exploitation campaign for "Oliver Twist" at Tremont Temple, but the desired result was brought about.

Two stagecoaches were used. One carried Nancy, Sykes, little Oliver and the other characters from the Dickens novel, and the other carried four characters in modern, up-to-date dress. Both advertised the showing at the Tremont Temple, but the sign on the second read: "How 'Oliver Twist' would be enacted by characters today."

Alongside this procession rode a character of two centuries later, Paul Revere, of Concord fame. The wornout old horse he carried was almost two centuries after that. He was labeled "Man o' War." The sign read "Paul Revere and Man o' War on their way to see Jackie Coogan in 'Oliver Twist.'"

Two men, typical of the old town criers, dressed in eighteenth century costumes, with high hats and frocked coats, paraded the streets with large books, the titles of which read, "Jackie Coogan and Oliver Twist." The books were 32 by 20 inches. From time to time these men would stop, draw a crowd like the old criers and then begin reading from the book some of the special points about the picture.

The Dickens Society of Boston was interested and gave its endorsement. A special print was rushed to the mayor's house and a private showing given for His Honor and family.

Flivver with Signs Exploits "Around the World" Serial

Chicago, Ill.—A sales and exploitation stunt on "Around the World in 18 Days," which is adaptable to theatre use was staged in Chicago and vicinity by William H. Tracy, a salesman of Universal's Chicago exchange.

When assigned to the job of selling the chapter play, Tracy took his flivver, splashed it with mud, equipped it with old tires, and tied an army tent, a muddy shovel, cooking utensils and a tow-rope on the running boards, and secured two suit-cases beside the hood. He hung an old switch lantern in front of the radiator and lettered the suitcases and the sides of the car in white paint, with the words, Around the World in 18 Days, thereby giving the idea he was a transcontinental tourist.

He drove this car around the Loop section of Chicago. At every crossing hundreds stopped to gaze at the car. At Market and Madison he left the car for a few moments and 500 persons gathered. At State and Madison, Chicago's busiest corner, Tracy attracted so much attention the police drove him away.

Tracy then took his car on an around-the-city tour. He would pass out cards indicating he was making the tour for the Universal Pictures Corporation. Following his successful exploitation in each locality, he would drive his car up to the nearest moving picture theatre and proceed to sell the chapter play.

Teaser Postal Cards Create Talk on "Broadway Rose"

MACON, GA.—Manager E. C. Kingman of the Rialto theatre had only three days in which to put over "Broadway Rose," but he made good use of the time.

On Saturday before the opening Monday, Mr. Kingham mailed 500 hand written postal cards to a selected list of young and middle aged married men. These cards caused lots of talk and created somewhat of a sensation in certain circles. The message they carried was:

"Meet me at the corner of Cotton and Cherry streets Monday night at 8 o'clock. (Signed) Broadway Rose."

Naturally all who received them were curious and didn't stop until they found out what it meant.

Atmospheric Prologue Staged on "Lorna Doone"

NEW YORK, N. Y.—An interesting prologue which effectively established the locale and atmosphere of the picture was staged recently by the New York Mark Strand theatre, of which Joseph Plunkett is managing director, in presenting "Lorna Doone."

The prologue showed a typical Devonshire scene, with the tenor, Fenwick Newell, in characteristic costume singing the song, and as he finished, a girl in the "Lorna Doone" costume walked across the stage behind the scene, and as the lights faded out and went into the title the music of the song was repeated, and after that every time that Lorna Doone walked into a scene, the orchestra used the "Lorna Doone" music.

Perilous Experience Contest Exploits "The Sin Flood"

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—The manager of the Capitol theatre arranged with the Charleston Gazette to run a contest for "The Sin Flood," which obtained valuable publicity for that attraction. The first prize was $5 in gold, the second, a two months' pass to the Capitol, other prizes being two tickets each to the picture.

The prizes were offered for the best 100-word essays on the most perilous situation ever faced by the writers. When the first answers came in the Gazette was forced to raise the word limit to 250 to give the writers opportunity to make their essays full and clear. More than a hundred replies were received each day.

The winning essays were published in the Gazette daily for a week and stimulated the attendance at the picture.

Oriental Prologue Is Staged For "East Is West"

Cumberland, Md.—Manager Robert Slote of Crandall's Strand theatre staged an "East Is West" prologue in which the stage was set in reproduction of a temple room. On the center of the stage was a small altar topped by a figure of Buddha with two jars containing joss sticks and two Oriental candlesticks. In front of the bronze figure an incense burner was placed and this diffused sandelwood incense. Local mechants contributed Chinese screens, two vases and silk draperies and cushions to dress the show.

The curtains rose on a Ming Toy figure kneeling before the altar chanting the prayer from the little opera "Saruyana." This was followed by the singing of the Chinese lullaby in the play. As the number ended the colored lights flooding the stage were gradually lowered until there was complete darkness. Instantly the screen was lowered and the first few feet of the picture flashed before the audience, completing the artistic prologue.

Two of the 24-sheet cut-outs on "The Eternal Flame" were used to good advantage, with a smaller one over the box-office, at the Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.

'Sherlock Holmes'' Showing Is Put Over Effectively

Columbia, S. C.—Manager C. W. Irvin of the Imperial theatre believes in getting them to talk and his method of doing this on "Sherlock Holmes" did the work and certainly created much good will.

His plan was a special showing, but getting them there was where he used his head. His invitation worked on their vanity and accomplished many desirable results.

The invitation read: "The Imperial theatre cordially invites you as one of one hundred and forty prominent Columbians to be a guest at a private screening of "Sherlock Holmes" starring John Barrymore, America's foremost actor of screen and stage, Monday morning, December 18, at 9:20 o'clock."

Manager Irvin says: "This invitation flattered them, and although it was extremely cold and pouring rain, and the show was held at 9:20, 76 of this number were present. They all waited in the lobby till the show was ready to start, to see 'who the other prominent were,' and to be seen by them. The ladies showed their invitations to their friends, to let them know that they were of the "selected few." After the show they went out and told others that they were invied to a private showing of "Sherlock Holmes" as one of 140 etc., and that this was a wonderful picture.

Clarences and Claras Given Passes to "Clarence"

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Manager L. R. Towns of the Strand theatre went the Clarence Club idea one better in a stunt which he put across on "Clarence." At any rate it was just as good as organizing a Clarence Club and probably a lot less work. Here is what he did:

Several days in advance he got one of the newspapers to give him a series of stories inviting all the boys named Clarence to be the guests of the newspaper at the picture. And if Clarence's girl was named Clara he got two tickets instead of one, provided of course Clara accompanied Clarence to the show. It was made plain that Clarence could not double-cross her and take some one else on the ticket he was given for Clara. It all aroused interest and seven Clara-Clarence combinations were dug up besides the twenty or more Clarences who "stagged."

Unique Prologue Devised for "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

New York, N. Y.—A really unusual prologue was devised for "Quincy Adams Sawyer" when that picture opened at the Capitol theatre by S. L. Rothafel, managing director.

Taking the twenty-four sheet issued by Metro as the dominant theme of his prologue, Rothafel enlarged this to several times its original size. Illuminated with special lighting effects, each character on the twenty-four sheet appeared ready to step from the poster and on to the Capitol stage.

A soloist, garbed as an old bill poster, with a brush and paste pot in hand, sang a specially written ditty, dealing in turn with each of the leading characters in the film version of "Quincy Adams Sawyer." As the refrain touched each poster character, it suddenly came to life and walked across the stage.

This prologue is the first of its kind to be devised by Mr. Rothafel, and arrangements are being made by Sawyer and Lubin whereby other first run theatres throughout the country will be enabled to take advantage of it.

Trailer Run in Store Window Boosts "The Masquerader"

TACOMA, WASH.—An unusually effective window tie-up was obtained by Manager Ed J. Myrick, of the Rialto theatre, on "The Masquerader."

Mr. Myrick obtained a portable projector and a small screen, made up a special reel of trailers on "The Masquerader," some news pictures and some Topics from the Press, built some special cuts on the feature and got the People's Store ad manager to give him a corner window and a display of "The Masquerader" books and others which have been picturized and were soon to be shown at the Rialto.

From ten in the morning until after nine-thirty in the evening Ben Cohn, whom Mr. Myrick specially engaged to handle the stunt, showed his special pictures in the window.

Grandfathers Admitted Free to "Remembrance" Showing

Joplin, Mo.—Manager Ben Levy, of the Hippodrome theatre, arranged with the Joplin News-Herald to give a free theatre party for the grandfathers of Joplin as an exploitation stunt for the showing of "Remembrance."

The News-Herald made a big feature of the party, inviting all men who were grandfathers—or in the grandfather class, having reached the age of sixty—to attend the Hippodrome party, from 3 to 7 p.m., and to bring along his favorite grandchild, provided he or she was not more than 14 years old. The story was given a double column head on the first page, and a different story was used in four or five issues, with another big story describing the party.

Two hundred persons attended as guests of the News-Herald and created a lot of talk in addition to the free publicity in the paper.

Prescription Blanks Used in "Dr. Jack" Campaign

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The Mission theatre, in exploiting "Dr. Jack," utilized a fake prescription blank to good effect. The blank was printed in the regulation size and style and was imprinted at the top with Dr. Jack's name, telephone number and address, being that of the Mission theatre.

The prescription read: "Take one hour of solid laughter. Shake well while laughing. Dr. Jack, Sunshine Specialist. Prescriptions filled by Harold Lloyd."

Another feature of the campaign was a huge cut-out from the 24-sheet, used in prominent locations all over the city, with a strip reading: "Harold Lloyd advises you to consult Dr. Jack for the pepful 5-reel treatment at the Mission theatre."

Automobile Parade Arranged on "Brothers Under the Skin"

Kansas City, Mo.—Frank L. Newman, of the Royal theatre, and William H. Branch, Goldwynner, arranged an automobile parade through the business district for "Brothers Under the Skin."

Mr. Branch arranged with the Maxwell Sales Company to supply ten motor cars and drivers for nothing other than the publicity they would get for it. Four other cars were engaged and the string of fourteen was sent through the business district of the city at noon on Saturday preceding the first showing. The Chief of Police not only granted a permit for the parade, but assigned two motorcycle policemen to head it. They were followed by a big motor truck with a banner clear along each side proclaiming: "We stand for husbands' rights. Association of 'Brothers Under the Skin.'" In the truck was a twelve-piece band. Each of the fourteen automobiles carried a banner on each side, giving one of the by-laws, or principles, of the association. The banners on the last car gave the name of the theatre and the show date.

A local chapter of the Association of Brothers Under the Skin was arranged for, a lawyer drawing up the papers. The newspapers got wise to that stunt but gave it space nevertheless.

Dancing School Pupils Present "Broadway Rose" Prologue

Norfolk, Va.—When "Broadway Rose" showed at the Granby theatre, a local society dancing teacher co-operated by furnishing four pupils to dance each day in costume. Another successful stunt was the placing of a shadow box in a vacant store window, with a young girl impersonating Miss Murray; and wide attention was attracted by the announcement that 10,000 "Broadway Roses" would be given away during the picture's run, one rose to each woman or girl attending any performance.

The dancing school tie-up was an unusual novelty, and furnished interesting entertainment as well as a highly profitable tie-up. Two girls danced in the afternoon and two others at night. In all there were twenty solo dancers during the week. On Saturday the entire twenty staged an ensemble number, and prizes were distributed for their work.

Next to the theatre is a vacant store, and it was in the window of this that the shadow box was placed. Three days before the photoplay was scheduled for presentation a young girl, dressed like "Broadway Rose," impersonated the star. A curtain was fixed so that it could be drawn in front of the spectators, enabling the model to take rest periods.

Flood Scenes Used in Lobby as "Sin Flood" Attractor

Erie, Pa.—When "The Sin Flood" was being exploited for its showing at the Lyric theatre, the manager of the theatre and William N. Robson, Goldwynner, decided it would be a good stunt to place a three-sheet board in the lobby, posting on it photographs of big flood scenes experienced in the western part of Pennsylvania, such as had been used at the showing of the film at the Blackstone theatre, Pittsburgh.

Robson remembered that his family had driven into Erie the night of the big flood there in July, 1915. He telephoned his daughter to go up to the old home and look through their collection of prints and negatives. She found about a dozen pictures of the flood and sent prints on to her father. These were mounted and placed in the lobby of the Lyric, tying up with the coming of "The Sin Flood." They attracted more attention than any single exploitation feature at the Rialto in months.

"Human Hearts" Card Carries Human Interest Note

DES MOINES, Iowa.—A little novelty which successfully injected human interest into the exploitation campaign on "Human Hearts" consisted of a small pink card, with type matter in dark blue, and enclosed in an envelope such as are used for pay envelopes. The outside of the envelope bore this lettering: "Dare You to Give This to the Lady Unopened." These were distributed to men at various social occasions.

The wording on the card inside was: "I have been somewhat neglectful of late —It's about time I took you somewhere. Let's go to see 'Human Hearts.' It will do your heart good to see it."

Keith Komedy Karnival Cashes in on K. K. K. Publicity

New York, N. Y.—Novel advantage was taken of the widespread publicity which the Ku Klux Klan is receiving at the present by C. B. McDonald, who has the supervision of a number of the Moss theatres, when he arranged a Keith Komedy Karnival, and had the Keith vaudevillo bookers procure him a vaudeville show with comedy acts predominating. Mr. McDonald then booked three two-reel comedies, instead of the usual feature attraction. The comedies selected were Charlie Chaplin in "The Cure," Buster Keaton in "The Boat" and Larry Semon in "The Rent-collector."

Three weeks in advance of play date, two hundred half sheets were put out on the main highways of New York, which read "The K.K.K. is coming to B. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre, week commencing Mon. Dec. 18th." As the Ku Klux Klan is receiving much front page space these days, Mr. McDonald conceived the idea of using K.K.K. as a teaser, to boost his Keith Komedy Karnival. Two slides were also made up with the same legend and used three weeks prior to play date. Stickers were used with this mysterious slogan on newspapers sold on the stands in the vicinity of Times Square.

One week before playdate, three one-sheets were put out, with a bold blocked heading reading Keith Komedy Karnival, and followed with a full announcement of the programme, both vaudeville and the three star screen comedians.

Screen Titles Aid in Putting Over "Dr. Jack" Overture

Brooklyn, N. Y.—In building his presentation for "Dr. Jack" during New Year's week, Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, injected unusual novelty in his program through a novel arrangement of the overture.

The overture, because of its elaborate nature, was not presented on the program as just a preliminary piece of music, but was made the second incident on the program. Named "Home, Sweet Home the World Over," the overture was rendered with the use of screen titles flashed on a screen covered with the Strand's regular tableau curtain.

It consisted of a series of versions of our old fireside song, "Home, Sweet Home," each version being attributed to some race as the way the song might have sounded had it been composed by a member. The titles were first flashed on the screen and immediately followed by the version they designated would follow. Thus, "As We Know and Love It," was the first title, and it was followed by the real American song; next came "Spanish Style," and the orchestra swung into an imaginary Spanish version; then Russian, Italian, Scotch, Irish, Chinese; then as Irving Berlin might have written it, and last "Our Own Fireside Version."

Chaplin Endorsement Utilized to Exploit "Remembrance"

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Charlie Chaplin was used to exploit "Remembrance" at the Isis theatre by John Wilstach, Goldwynner, at Detroit. Mr. Chaplin had said about this photoplay, after seeing it run off privately at the studios: "'Remembrance' is the most human picture ever put upon the screen." His words had been used in the newspaper advertisements of the story, but Wilstach decided to make a different use of them.

He got hold of some 24-sheet posters of a Chaplin picture, cut out the picture of Chaplin, mounted it on beaverboard and then had an artist draw a line from Chaplin's mouth down to and around the words of praise he had uttered about the picture which were printed across his coat. This cut-out figure was placed in front of the Isis theatre. As it was life-size it attracted much attention.

Several men were sent about the business streets carrying umbrellas on which was painted the following: "Old Pop Grout. 'Remembrance.' Isis—Sunday."

Huge Anchor Lobby Attractor for "On the High Seas"

SUMTER, S. C.—An attractive and inexpensive lobby was prepared by Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre for "On the High Seas" recently.

Mr. White built a large anchor, eight feet high by six feet wide, out of compo board. This was painted black and suspended from the center of the lobby arch. The title of the picture was lettered on the stem in white. A large rope was tied at the top of the anchor, coiled around the stem and piled in a coil on the floor. Two other coils of rope were placed, one on each side of the lobby.

Six auto tire casings were borrowed from a dealer, wrapped with white muslin and changed into very respectable life savers. These were displayed about the lobby and helped to create the sea atmosphere.

Appropriate Catch-Line Used As "Skin-Deep" Tie-Up

LAKEWOOD, N. J.—Both timely and appropriate was the catch-line used in drugstore tie-ups on "Skin Deep" when the photoplay was exploited by the Rialto theatre. The sign that became a byword in all drug stores read:

"Don't be afraid of Chapped Hands or Chapped Cheeks. They're only Skin Deep."

The advice was timely and will become more opportune as December changes into January.

Washing Machine Display for "Brothers Under the Skin"

SAVANNAH, GA.—Acting upon the suggestion of the Goldwyn exploitation department, Manager J. G. Evins, of the Lucas theatre, arranged a tie-up on an electric washing machine with an electrical supply shop. They placed a machine in their lobby, filled it and had it running, and placed a card on it reading, "A machine like this was almost the cause of a divorce in 'Brothers Under the Skin,' the wonderful comedy drama now playing at the Lucas theatre." Mr. Evins don't know how much good the tie-up did him, but the electric shop sold three washing machines.

Triple Tie-Up Made by Theatre in "East Is West" Campaign

Bartlesville, Okla.—The manager of the Odeon theatre made a triple tie-up on "East Is West" recently in carrying out his exploitation campaign on that picture.

He sold the Rexall Drug Store on the idea that a picture of the Orient would be good advertising aid in selling the talcum powders, basket work and joss from the east, in which the store specialized.

Then he went to the Boston store and convinced the management that a tie-up with its line of Japanese silks would be a good window display argument. Two portraits of Constance Talmadge in her Ming Toy kimono were potent aids in selling the store on the co-operative plan.

For the final put out the manager did an about turn and visited a men's haberdashery store. The picture of Edward Burns, leading man, in evening dress, clinched the argument. A window was arranged of Tuxedo accessories with the evening coat itself as a centerpiece. The display didn't say that it was the same coat Burns wore in making the picture, but there was enough similarity in the cut of the coat in the window and that in the cut-out to make the inference plausible.

Lobby display on "The Sin Flood" at the Hippodrome theatre, Reading, Pa. The striking effect at the top was obtained by cutting out in outline the top half of the letters in each word, then mounting them in front of a background, several inches apart

Cutout letters and natural foliage combined to produce this pleasing front on "Broad Daylight" at the Columbia theatre, Seattle. Manager R. W. Case placed an expensive Mah Jongg set in the display case in the centre, which attracted no little attention

Stunt Pays for Heralds Used on "Valley of Silent Men"

Longmont, Col.—E. C. Marquand, of the Isis theatre, sold the blank space on the stock Paramount herald for "The Valley of Silent Men" to the local bookstore, which paid for the cost of the heralds, printing and distribution.

The bookstore had a big stock of James Oliver Curwood's novel, and was glad of the opportunity of tying up with his latest screen story. The Paramount herald carried a book design which hooked the picture up with Curwood's fame as a story-teller.

Drinks Served in Lobby Boost "Ten Nights in a Barroom"

Huntsville, Ala.—Manager C. A. Cruts, of the Lyric theatre, introduced an appropriate stunt into his campaign on "Ten Nights in a Barroom" when he got the co-operation of the Chero Cola Bottling Company in putting in a barroom display and serving Chero Cola free to patrons.

An old bar was secured and installed in the lobby. All necessary barroom paraphernalia was also displayed, including cards, signs, whiskey glasses, old whiskey bottles filled with colored water and a layout of free lunch.

The Chero Cola Company had a man in attendance, dressed as a bartender, serving a bottle of Chero Cola to each person.

Doubles Contest Brings Wide Publicity to "Sonny"

NASHVILLE, TENN. — Manager Dewey Mouson, of the Knickerbocker theatre, seized upon the fact that Richard Barthelmess has a dual identity role in "Sonny" to stage a "Who's Your Double?" contest to exploit the picture.

Those finding doubles were given passes to the picture while a committee of three judges, with Richard Barthelmess as "honorary judge," passed upon eligibles. Any doubt as to the existence of close likenesses was dissipated when the Banner, in its issue the following Sunday, came out with a two-page spread of prominent doubles and gave the picture an immense amount of advertising.

Cards on Sticks Carry Ad For Showing of "Remembrance"

Indianapolis, Ind.—The management of Bair's Southside theatre used a card on "Remembrance" which attracted a great deal of attention in the neighborhood.

One thousand of the cards were used. They were printed in black type on white cardboard, about five by eight inches and were nailed to a stick. At midnight the manager of the theatre and H. T. Snowden, Goldwynner at the Indianapolis exchange, went out and stuck the sticks containing the cards into the ground near the sidewalk in front of residences in the neighborhood.

When the occupants of the house left it next morning, or even upon looking out, they saw the card proclaiming, "Good morning! Pardon the intrusion, but this is just a remembrance that 'Remembrance,' Rupert Hughes' appealing drama of mother, father and children, will open a two-day engagement at Bair's Southside theatre tonight."

Free Children's Matinees Aid "Heroes of the Street"

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The special exploitation used for "Heroes of the Street" by Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, was the always efficacious orphans', cripples' and poor children's matinee.

Mr. Hyman gave Tuesday, the day after Christmas, from ten a. m. to 12:30 to the Brooklyn Daily Eagle for a benefit Christmas performance. He gave Friday of the same week to the New York Evening World at the same times for the same purposes, thus pulling the same stunt with two papers, doubling his publicity and tripling his prestige as a showman and the prestige of the Strand. The matinees were called: "Eagle Theatre Party" and "Evening World Theatre Party" respectively, thus giving the papers a greater proprietary interest in the affairs. The newspapers were permitted to have their own tickets printed and to distribute same as they saw fit.

Another bit of sagacity on the part of Mr. Hyman was to give the regular week's show, with the exception of the feature picture. In this case he just changed the star's vehicle, that is, playing Wesley Barry in "Heroes of the Street" at regular performances, he exhibited Wesley Barry's "Penrod" for the matinees for the benefit.

Mr. Johnston — you are WRONG!

In your January 6th issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS you said—

And, in the writer's opinion, the broad trouble is this: pictures, the mass of them, are not telling the public anything, certainly nothing new, stirring, awakening and certainty not with the scope and vivid appeal of which pictures alone are capable.

The world today is rocking with the great currents and cross-currents of a new era. From the great problems of every home there are truths to tell, situations to be dramatized, thought to be crystallized; and it is the duty and the privilege of the motion picture to rise to these vast opportunities.

W. A. Johnston

In answer to your editorial we say this:

DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN

is the pioneer in the making of pictures that tell the public something—pictures that drive home, with 100 per cent. drama and 100 per cent. ENTERTAINMENT, gigantic, vital, moving and sweeping phases of modern life—pictures whose appeal is based on their poignantly vital relation to every man, woman and child who goes into a motion picture theatre. Daniel Carson Goodman smashingly tells the truths that are to be told; he masterfully dramatizes the situations that are to be dramatized; he powerfully crystallizes the thought that is the moving force behind his plots—and the latest and greatest proof that he does all of this is his biggest photodrama to date,

Western New York Briefs

The Strand, Buffalo's first motion picture theatre, built about 10 years ago by the late Mitchell H. Mark, will pass into history, February 2, when it will close its doors, having been unable to get an extension of its lease for sufficient time to warrant continuation. The Bank of Buffalo will use the auditorium of the house and a store will be built in place of the lobby. Harold Edel was the first manager of the Strand. He died a year after being promoted to the management of the New York Strand. He was followed by Earl L. Crabb, now owner of the System in Syracuse, who in turn was succeeded by E. O. Weinberg, new managing director of the new State theatre in Schenectady. The present manager is Eugene A. Pfeil. The Strand was the first motion picture theatre in Buffalo to use an organ and orchestra. It has been a financial success up until a few years ago when the coming of larger theatres and stiffer competition cut into the profits. Moe Mark, Walter Hays and Eugene Falk, all of whom are interested in the Strand, also own the building housing the Criterion. This property is one of the most valuable in the city. In a few years a new house may be built here by the Strand interests.

Justice Hinkley has reserved decision in the suit of the Allendale Theatre company against Levin Michaels, the former seeking to restrain the latter from carrying on an action to remove the company from the building. Mr. Michaels owns the building at 207 Allen Street. Mr. Michaels' counsel alleged that the company failed to pay rent on time and to comply with certain building and fire prevention ordinances as required in its lease. The theatre company's attorney declared the suit was brought because the owner had been offered a larger figure by a prospective lessee. He denied that the rent was unpaid. The Buffalo papers have already announced that the Allendale has been leased for a year by the Buffalo Players, Inc., an organization recently formed to foster the Little Theatre movement here.

In a week or two there will be a change of policy at the new Strand and Cataract theatres in Niagara Falls, N. Y., where Charlie Hayman plans to show pictures only at the Cataract and vaudeville and big features at the Strand.

So successful has been the two day film shows given in Batavia, N. Y., by Mr. Houghton, owner of the little Hippodrome and Keith's theatre of Buffalo, that he plans to install a week run policy in the opera house and if this is also successful, he may build a new house in the spring.

Around the Buffalo Branches

ALLAN S. Moritz, manager of the Paramount exchange, was the guest of honor at a Christmas party given by employes in the Franklin Street exchange. Allan got a clock, which inspired F. Ray Powers to poetry. The engagement of Earl R. Brink, booker, to Gladys M. Robinson, secretary to Mr. Moritz, was also announced. It was a big day!

Pete Dana has been named to succeed J. T. Daly as office manager for the W. W. Hodkinson exchange and has assumed his new duties.

Henry W. Kahn, Metro manager, is a popular guy with his salesmen. Henry got a check for 500 iron men from the home office because Buffalo went over the top into first place in the national sales drive. Henry didn't forget the boys who made the records possible and presented each salesman with a silver cigarette case and each girl in the office with a bottle of perfume.

"Vic" Bendell has been appointed manager of the Albany F. B. O. exchange by Earl Kramer of the Buffalo office under whose jurisdiction Albany is. "Vic" succeeds R. S. Bendell.

Employes of the Universal exchange Friday evening, January 5, will give a benefit in the Elmwood theatre for Johnny Regan, assistant booker, who is forced to go away for his health.

C. S. Williams has resigned as exploitationist at the Fox exchange. He has not as yet made a new connection.

Bob Matson's ill health has made it necessary for him to resign from the sales staff of the local Associated Exhibitors office in the Pathe exchange.

Harry E. Lotz, manager of the Select exchange, is now in charge of several additional counties formerly in the Albany office's district.

William Garyn, special representative for Goldwyn, was in town last week for a conference with T. W. Brady, local manager.

In the Washington Exchanges

MANAGERS ROBIN, FULLER AND GALANTY are all in the list of recipients of holiday gifts from the force. R. Clint Robin received a neat smoking and humidor stand of mahogany, glass and brass, which just fills a void in the Pathe office; George Fuller of Metro was the target of a lonesome sherbet set and Sam Galanty got a desk full of smoking accessories and cigars, cigarettes and the weeds that Pittsburg film salesmen pass out.

Manager Gittelson of F. B. O. here left Sunday (New Year's Eve) for Chicago to assume charge of the F. B. O. exchange there. A Mr. Lieb is expected to take over the management of the exchange here.

The latest advices from the F-I-L-M board point to the holding of the big winter-spring get-together in the early days of February. Among those in charge of the various committees, Harry Hunter of Paramount is to head the entertainment group.

Walter Lusk, former manager of the First National exchange at Cleveland, Ohio, has arrived in Washington to take over the duties of exchange manager for the First National here. He is relieving the retiring manager, "Lou" Bache, who is to handle new duties at the home office in New York and elsewhere.

S. L. Lambert is running for the office of mayor in the town of Welland, Ont., where Mr. Mayor-to-be owns the Lambert theatre.

The Goodwill theatre, Johnson City, N. Y., will open February 1 with motion pictures. William H. Mack, who is the proprietor of the Endwell in the same Southern Tier town, will be the manager, succeeding Harold F. Albert who will devote all his time to the position of director of recreation for the Endicott-Johnson company.

I. M. Moskowitz has arrived in town and has re-opened the local branch of the Independent Movie Supply company in Pearl street.

A fine smoking set was presented to Al Beckerich, manager of the Loew State, at the Christmas party given by Marcus Loew in the Seames and Zeitler cafe. The party was given by the big boss in appreciation of the faithful services rendered during the past year.

Two new Simplex projection machines will be installed in the new Palace theatre soon to be opened by Peterson & Woods in Jamestown, N. Y., by Al Becker of the Becker Theatre Supply company.

Bruce Fowler, manager of the Indiana Theatre, Terra Haute, Ind., and former manager of the local Elmwood, was in town for the Yuletide season, accompanied by Mrs. Fowler and son.

Harold E. Dygert is about to launch a movement to add Lockport, N. Y., to his Associated Theatres, Inc. chain. A site has been purchased for a theatre in the Lock city.

T. G. Thompson, manager of the Grand theatre, Rochester, has written Buffalo friends that the grapefruit which he raises on his ranch at San Benito, where he is wintering, can shoot the farthest of any in existence.

Washington Paragraphs

The Department of Agriculture has produced thirty-three pictures devoted to the work of the thirty-eight bureaus of the Department during 1922. In 1923, Director Perkins says that he expects to turn out a larger production and with greater efficiency.

Efficient inspection of building jobs and speedy approval is held up by the lack of funds at the disposal of the building permit office. The city is divided into nine districts and each man has at least 200 to 300 jobs. Some of these jobs are new theatres, exchanges, club projection rooms and school auditoriums. That is why Crandall's new theatres and the rest of the city's record mid-winter building program is held up. December 23 Inspector Healey reported plans for twenty-five big buildings on file to be checked. One set of these plans had been there since September 6.

Reliance Films is now on the ninth floor of the Mather building in charge of the former office manager Lueber. Leo Garner is now with Sidney Lust as publicity and exploitation expert. Garner is to apply the same successful policy to the exploitation of "Deserted at the Altar" that he applied to his successful plug for "Mickey," which is one of the record film exploitation stunts of the territory.

Many Georgetown University graduates who have made their mark in the movies will be surprised to learn that a motion picture lecture, "Georgetown, Past, Present and Future," is the most effective method of securing the needed funds for the new endowment and foreign trade school extension work. The funds to be raised through local chapters in such movie towns as Rochester, Chicago, Milwaukee, Buffalo, Syracuse and Pittsburghwill provide for new dormitory and lecture space for the foreign trade school.

Mrs. Locher of the Crandall staff entertained the directors of the Child Welfare Society, of which Miss Mary Gwynn is president. Mrs. Breckenridge Long gave a screening of the Government film, "Our Children," made for the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.

Kansas City Snapshots

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Newman have returned to Kansas City from what Mr. Newman terms as his most interesting visit to the Pacific coast. Mr. and Mrs. Newman, whose primary purpose for going to the coast was to attend the Paramount convention recently, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil DeMille at a party at the DeMille home and Mr. Newman is loud in his praise of the work now being done by the film folks in the production of pictures for the coming year.

"They see at last that the mediocre films are not going to get by the public," Mr. Newman said, "and they are making every effort to make good ones. The day of the star is passed, I believe. More and more the demand for better stories is rising, stories with a real plot. In the future the play will be starred, or the whole cast, not just a single man or woman actor."

The Gem theatre at Harper, Kas., has been purchased by Thurman & Son of Anthony, Kas., from Mrs. H. Robinson, while a new house is to be opened at Cambridge, Kas., by Davis and Horner.

Children of movie patrons of the Royal theatre, Kansas City, enjoyed a week of real Christmas entertainment this week. A huge tree was decorated and extra playroom equipment placed in the childrens' playroom. There were gifts and candy for each "visitor," and several nurses were in charge. Baby Dell Borden, a local entertainer, sang and danced for the children each afternoon and night between 1.30 o'clock and 9.15 o'clock.

George Erdmann picked the job of office manager from the First National Christmas tree last Saturday. Erdmann has been associated with First National for the last three years. Prior to that he was manager of the local Famous Players-Lasky exchange. He succeeds Walter Lusk, who has been appointed manager of First National's office in Washington. Lusk has made a host of friends in the Cleveland territory during the seven years that he has been serving the exhibitors first with Mutual, and for the past five years with First National releases. They all express regret at his leaving, and wish him good luck in his new enterprise.

Cleveland Chatter

Fred Desberg, general manager of the Loew Ohio theatres has a nice Christmas present for the people of Cleveland in his announcement of coming attraction at the Stillman theatre which include "Robin Hood," "Dangerous Age," "One Exciting Night," "Jazzmania," "The Voice in the Minaret" and others of like calibre.

Christie Deibel, of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, was in town the fore part of the week to do his Christmas film shopping.

Jack Greenbaum of the Opera House, Mansfield, answered present at the roll call of out-of-town exhibitors this week.

Forest Kelly of the Lincoln theatre, Massilon, was picture shopping in the film building the middle of the week.

In Kansas City's Exchanges

THE exploitation campaign in the Kansas City territory for "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" has been placed in charge of Harry Greenway by the Richards & Flynn exchange of Kansas City. Greenway is well known in the Kansas City territory, having served as advance man for several road shows.

D. M. Major, former assistant manager of the Kansas City Vitagraph office, was presented an engraved gold pencil last week when he resigned.

Art Jacobson, Universal salesman out of Kansas City, and his wife had a narrow escape last week near Iola, Kan., when the car which Mr. Jacobson was driving on an icy pavement skidded and was demolished. Neither Mr. Jacobson nor his wife were injured.

Another series of western pictures, starring J. B. Warner, has been obtained for distribution in Kansas and Western Missouri by the Standard Film Company of Kansas City, according to Bernard C. Cook, manager.

A special preview showing of the Fox production, "The Village Blacksmith," was staged for Kansas City exhibitors at the Main Street theatre last week. The production won the hearty praise of the majority of the theatre owners.

St. Louis Film Row Notes

PHIL LANGDON has joined the local Goldwyn selling organization. He formerly worked out of Cincinnati. He has been assigned the city sales job by Manager Dugger.

Oscar Cantnor, publicity man for the local Paramount office, who underwent an operation for a throat affection at the Methodist Hospital recently, is rapidly convalescing. He was taken home on Christmas Day.

Billy Truog, district manager for Goldwyn, was a visitor of the past week.

J. Slater, general manager of the Universal theatres, is in St. Louis in connection with the recent opening of the Rivoli theatre by Universal here. He is very well pleased with the progress made by the Sixth street house since its grand opening. The attendance has been far in excess of the advance estimates made by the Universal officials.

Jerome Safron, home office representative of the F. B. O., is in town for several days as the guest of Milton Simon, local F. B. O. manager.

Fox conducted an educational exhibit at the annual gathering of the Illinois School Teachers' Association held in Springfield on December 27, 28 and 29. C. W. McKean was in charge. Among the films shown was "The Village Blacksmith." Manager G. E. McKean believes that the teachers can do much to spread the gospel of better pictures and he couldn't overlook the opportunity of showing them "The Village Blacksmith." Another interesting little feature was "The Runaway Dog," one of the best one-reel pictures Fox has ever produced. It has an especial appeal for school children.

Along Cleveland's Film Row

ITS A BOY! Ask Nat Baruch, manager of the local Goldwyn exchange — he knows. Baruch joined the army of fond fathers last Thursday, and now he doesn't care whether Santa puts anything in his Christmas sock or not. District manager Flynn wired Baruch that Nat, Jr., was to be put on the pay roll immediately, so neither Goldwyn nor the Baruch family has anything to worry about the future.

Mark Goldman, local Select Manager signed up with Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland, to show "One Week of Love" the week of January 7th. This completes the bookings of "One Wek of Love" in every city in the northern Ohio territory of 10,000 and upward population, says Goldman.

Aaron Wayne has moved from the Cleveland Paramount office to the Columbus Paramount office, where he has been placed in charge of the sales department.

A. H. Tuffler has been added to the local Paramount sales force. Tuffler formerly was connected with the Pathe exchange in Cleveland.

Eddie Fontaine, manager of the F. P. L. Company here, took a long trip to Akron this week. Ordinarily it takes about an hour to travel the roads between Cleveland and Akron, but with half a foot of snow on the ground it was a regular journey. Bet Exhibitor Allen Simmons' house, on the top of the hill as you enter Akron where hospitality is lavishly dispensed among film folks, looked good to Fontaine as he drove into the town.

H. L. Conway, who used to be with the Famous Players Lasky exchange in Milwaukee, has changed his address to Cleveland, but is still with the same concern.

J. J. Crandall, in his capacity of division manager for Associated Exhibitors, granted himself, as Cleveland exchange manager, a leave of absence to spend the holidays with his family in Washington, D. C. Crandall has been commanding the local office for the past two months, and will continue to do so until a permanent resident manager is appointed to succeed E. C. Fielder who resigned to become associated with J. E. Jessey in the Progress Pictures Corporation.

St. Louis Snapshots

After having been dark for many months, the Amuse U theatre, Dupo, Ill., reopened for business on New Year's Day.

The Mighty Doris Shows in winter quarters in an old car barn near Edgemont, Ill., was destroyed by fire on December 27. The loss was estimated at $140,000, with little insurance. Johnny Lazier of Kansas City, Mo., owned the shows.

George E. York, 37 years, caretaker of the Lyric theatre, East St. Louis, is reported to have confessed to the police of that city that he engineered the hold-up of October 1 last when two masked men took $2,480 from William Cravens, assistant manager of the theatre, and York, and made an unsuccessful attempt to loot the theatre safe on Christmas night.

About 6 a. m. December 26, York informed the police that he had been kept prisoner by two robbers who had attempted to open the safe, which contained $5,000. The intruders had used a welding acetylene torch instead of a cutting torch and hadn't been able to get into the strong-box.

Chief of Police Mulconnery didn't think much of York's account of how he was overpowered and tied to a chair by the robbers and held him for investigation. His confession is said to have followed.

The police later arrested another man who was implicated by York.

Frank Tate, Charley Cella and their associates in the string of theatres conducted by them, including the Grand Opera House, Columbia, Strand, Rialto and American and their other business ventures have had a very good year, according to all reports. Recently they cleaned up about $800,000 by exercising an option to purchase the Columbia theatre site for a price fixed twenty-five years ago, while during the past week applications for increases in capital stock by their various companies show a very healthy condition, it is stated.

The Southern Real Estate and Financial Company raised its capital from $1,000,000 to $1,450,000 showing assets of $3,279,469 and liabilities of but $1,824,824. The Columbia theatre raised its stock from $200,000 to $300,000 with assets of $430,436 and liabilities of $86,751. The Middleton Theatre Company's new capital will be $450,000 instead of $100,000 having assets of $718,000 and liabilities of $115,599. The Castle Amusement Company from $25,000 to $100,000 with liabilities of $5,000 and assets of $105,006; and the Mid-city Realty Company from $100,000 to $200,000, showing assets of $249,228 and liabilities of $9,612.

A few days ago Tate and his associates took out $125,000 loan on the Strand theatre site. The loan will run for five years at 5½ per cent. This site was also purchased recently at a very low figure compared with its present value. Tate has long been regarded as one of the shrewdest real estate investors in St. Louis and he and the late Louis Cella made big profits by buying property that generally was believed to be dead. Some said they were lucky, but men in the know said it was simply ability to interpret the trend of events and act accordingly.

Seattle Slants

A special matinee for children at 10 a. m. the opening day of Christmas week was successfully put over by Manager H. B. Wright of the Strand theatre for Betty Ann Hisle, the tiny Goldwyn star, spending the holidays in Seattle at her home. The five-year-old tot was also featured on the Strand's Christmas week bill in a novelty playlet which featured her as one of the youngest stage dancers in the city.

"The Flirt" was given its world premier in Seattle during Christmas week by Manager R. W. Case at the Columbia theatre. Advance advertising and plenty of publicity put the picture over to a good start, and press comments after the initial performance were very gratifying. In spite of keen competition from other houses, the Columbia managed to attract the crowds with the latest Universal Jewel, and the enthusiastic way in which the public received the picture was considered a good omen by Mr. Case and Jack Schlaifer, head of the local Universal exchange.

As a special Christmas novelty, all ushers at Manager Frank Steffy's Coliseum theatre were attired in red costumes with white trimmings and caps to match.

San Diego, Cal., News

Manager Russell Rogers of the Plaza theatre succeeded in booking for the week beginning December 23rd the new Douglas Fairbanks feature, "Robin Hood," thus bringing to San Diego the only showing of that film this year aside from its presentation at Grauman's Hollywood Egyptian theatre.

The Superba Theatre has been using with good results a special orchestra for several weeks, directed by Chris Betz. The orchestra, of six pieces, gives an overture for the main afternoon and evening shows and then plays throughout the program, adapting for each film.

The Truth About Gorham

News of the Canadian Exchanges

PHIL. KAUFFMAN, general manager of Regal Films, Ltd., Toronto, recently completed a tour of inspection of all branch exchanges of the Regal company from coast to coast in Canada.

Morris Milligan, formerly manager of the Winnipeg branch of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, is now district manager with headquarters at Cincinnati, Ohio, for Famous-Lasky.

H. Kirchgassner of New York, chief auditor of the Goldwyn Film Company, has been a visitor at the Winnipeg branch of the Goldwyn company, which is now managed by Haskell Masters.

New incorporations at Montreal, Quebec, include the following: Le Bon Cinema Compagnie, Limitee, which has been organized to distribute French and other film releases; Burpee & West, organized by Donald A. Burpee and Maurice West, to handle pictures produced by Ernest Shipman in Quebec and Eastern Canada; and the Court Amusement Enterprise, Limited.

The Famous-Lasky office staff at Montreal, Quebec, won the first half of the schedule in the theatrical alley bowling league by a wide margin. Sol. Levitt and Jack Weir were the stars of the team.

Around Seattle's Branch Offices

AL BLOOM has recently accepted the position of assistant manager and booker of the local Universal exchange, after having held that position in the Seattle branch of the Metro Pictures Corporation for several years. He succeeds Emil Erickson at the Universal office. Mr. Bloom was a Universal employee in this city when that organization first opened offices here about ten years ago, and since that time has always been actively engaged in the motion picture business.

Ned Edris, salesman and publicity specialist for the De Luxe Feature Film Company, arrived in town after a five weeks' tour of Washington and Oregon, with reports of better conditions all along the line. Mr. Edris, after spending a few days in the city, left again for an extended tour into Montana, where he expects to be for about three weeks or more.

Wallace Rucker, salesman for the local Educational Pictures exchange, returned to Seattle from a tour of Oregon and Washington, and spent the holidays here. After the first of the year he planned to start out on the road again, making a trip into Idaho and Montana.

L. K. Brin, president of the L. K. Grin exchanges, returned to Seattle from Denver, where he conferred with his branch manager in regard to the new Warner Brothers' pictures being handled by the Brin exchanges in the Pacific Northwest. Bookings on "The Beautiful and Damned" and "Little Heroes of the Street" are now occupying the attention of Mr. Brin.

Louis Rosenberg left Seattle this week for a trip into Oregon with the features "Shadows," "The World's a Stage" and "Thorns and Orange Blossoms." After covering Oregon he will return and cross over into Montana.

"The Hero" has been booked with the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit for showing in Seattle about January 20, according to an announcement made by Al Rosenberg, of the De Luxe Feature Film Company recently. Prints of the picture arrived in this city last week and the feature is being shown to exhibitors in the local territory at the present time.

"Dr. Jack," Harold Lloyd's second five-part comedy, has arrived in the city and will be shown at the Liberty theatre here in the near future, according to word from the Seattle Pathe exchange. "Grandma's Boy" ran two weeks at the Liberty several months ago, and is still being shown in neighborhood houses in Seattle and surrounding territory, where it is establising many new house records.

"Tess of the Storm Country" was recently booked by Charles Hardin, manager of the local United Artists exchange, with John Hamrick for showing at the temporary Blue Mouse theatre in Astoria, Oregon. This is the first picture to play in that city since the conflagration that destroyed the entire business district several weeks ago.

Canadian Brevities

Canadian Educational Films, Limited, representing the Educational Film Corporation of the United States in the Canadian territory, has opened its own direct chain of offices in the Dominion, according to announcement just made by O. R. Hanson, Toronto, general manager for Canada. Branches have been established in six different cities to provide service from Coast to Coast and managers have been appointed for each of these offices as follows:

Toronto, S. B. Taube; Montreal, W. E. Allen, Albee Building, Mayor Street; Winnipeg, S. Brint, Room 504, Film Exchange Building, Hargrave Street; Calgary, T. H. Davey, Princess Theatre Building, and Vancouver, C. R. Dippe, 553 Granville Street. The manager of the new office at St. John, N. B., has not yet been announced.

The Canadian Educational Film Company was formerly associated with Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen for the distribution of Educational releases in the Dominion but Educational is now independent and will deal direct with all exhibitors, it is stated. The headquarters for Canada have been established on one floor of the new Universal Building, 277 Victoria Street, Toronto, where the Toronto sales branch has also been opened. S. Brint of Winnipeg is officially known as the Western Representative of the Canadian company and he also has charge of the Winnipeg branch. W. E. Allen of Montreal is the manager of the Eastern territory, including Montreal.

The new Queen theatre at St. Stephen, N. B., is being built out over the St. Croix River in order to secure an enlarged site for the structure. For this purpose, huge concrete supports have been sunk into the river bed. The Queen theatre is to replace the Bijou theatre, which was destroyed by fire some weeks ago.

The Acadia theatre at Minto, N. B., is enjoying a period of fine prosperity because of the fact that there is an unprecedented boom in the coal mining district of which Minto is the center. The Acadia theatre has no opposition now because the Minto Opera House was destroyed by fire not long ago.

I. M. Allen, formerly of Winnipeg, is now manager of the Globe theatre in Vancouver, B. C. He was manager of the Winnipeg exchange of the Famous Players Film Service, Winnipeg, for a year before going to Vancouver. Harry Price has resigned as manager of the Allen theatre, Calgary, Alberta, and H. J. Allen is now in charge of that theatre. Bernard Allen, father of Jule and J. J. Allen, is now in Windsor, Ontario, to look after Allen interests there.

Hector Quagilotti, proprietor of the Colonial theatre, Vancouver, B. C., for the past 10 years, has secured a renewal of the lease of that theatre and will continue to have charge of the popular house.

Manager Thomas Shields of the Grandview theatre, Vancouver, B. C., has installed a new pipe organ. The four-piece orchestra formerly at the Grandview has gone to the Globe theatre, Vancouver.

The staff of the Allen theatre at Winnipeg, Manitoba, enjoyed its annual Christmas festivities on Friday evening, December 29, when presents were distributed at a party which was held on the mezzanine floor of the theatre. Each of the 55 employees received a present from the management, the married men taking home a large turkey each. Refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed.

Manager Miller M. Stewart was presented with a gold watch and chain, with gold pen knife, gifts of the staff. In accepting the tokens, Mr. Stewart expressed pleasure over the fact that he had the same 55 employes on the payroll as he had when he assumed the management of the theatre two years ago.

Announcement has been made that the personnel of the Capitol Theatre Company of Windsor, Ontario, which recently took over the Loew theatre in that city is composed of the following: Simon Meretsky, owner of the Windsor theatre; Edward Glassco,, owner of the former Empire theatre, Windsor, and Hon. Dr. Rheaume of Windsor, prominent as a Canadian Member of Parliament. The Loew house was renamed for Capitol theatre and because of this fact there was an impression that it was identified with the chain of Capitol theatre operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto.

Butte, Mont., Briefs

Great interest has been aroused in this section of the Northwest and especially in Montana over the historical photoplays which are soon to be produced depicting the life of the Vigilantes. January tenth is the date set for active work to begin on the first picture. The first pictures will deal with the life of Henry Plummer.

Harold J. Binney is director of the Montana Vigilante Motion Picture Corporation. He lectured in Dillon, Saturday evening, at the City Hall, on "The Movie Industry." A large audience listened attentively to this entertaining and instructive talk.

The Press of Montana has written a number of articles relative to the "come back" of Fatty Arbuckle and most of the editorials have been rather inclined to favor his return. Merle Davis, General Manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company, and recently elected head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Montana, in an interview for MOTION PICTURE NEWS said, "he thought Fatty had paid the price and that in all probability he was as much sinned against as sinning." Mr. Davis declared that he believed the public should withhold judgment until positive proof was produced of Fatty's guilt.

The week of December 24th at the Broadway theatre, has brought a return engagement of four of the biggest pictures in Filmdom; The Four Horsemen, Queen of Sheba, Prisoner of Zenda and The Connecticut Yankee. For return engagements the box receipts are considered fair.

"When Knighthood. Was in Flower" is on the program this week at the American. Manager C. C. Pratt is offering this Super-Special at regular show schedule with general admission $.50, children any time $.15. Butte's prices are only half the prices charged in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. There are four performances daily.

Merle Davis, General Manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company, in speaking of current prices of admission to the theatres said, that in his opinion the Butte people are enjoying a very fine class of films and at a cheaper rate than other cities of the Northwest and that considering current expenses and film rentals he did not think it advisable to lower the price of admission, though he admitted that there is a tendency to reduce the admission price.

The Ansonia, it goes without saying, is doing a good business this week because of John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes" and the latter part of the week the program contains "Sisters" with Seena and Matt Moore, also a Comedy in "Edgar the Detective."

On December 23rd, the American at Roundup, Mont., was totally destroyed by fire. The fire started at the rear of the theatre and completely gutted the building. It is believed to be of incendiary origin. The loss is estimated at $20,000 and only partially covered by insurance. Fortunately the films were saved. A. H. Goetz is contemplating the erection of a new house.

Lee Franks of Missoula, Montana, who has been organizer of the Hollywood Location and Production Company, on Dec. 18 was arrested on the charge of obtaining funds under false pretenses. Franks in connection with Miss E. M. Nobles conducted a Movie school at Missoula charging $60 for the course, it is stated. They had apartments at the Florence hotel and held rehearsals, of contemplated productions, in the sample rooms, it is declared. It is reported that Miss Nobles was such a clever artist as to move the students to tears in her parts before the make-believe camera.

Several prominent Missoula women are said to have been students at the school, and one old man is said to have registered for the course.

Franks says that he was at one time a Miles City cattle dealer and having met Miss Nobles in Spokane where she was engaged in the movie game he was easily persuaded to try it out with her at Missoula.

Miss Nobles is reported to have skipped out with the funds of the company, and it is supposed she has gone to Canada. Franks has promised to complete his contracts with his pupils or return the money, if the local officers will release him.

With the Butte Exchanges

KENNETH O. KENAUD of Salt Lake City, spent the holiday week in Butte attending to business of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for which company he is engaged in exploitation work.

All are Famous-Players Lasky exchange staff.

Bill Strickland and Nicholas Amos, salesman, journeyed to Omaha for Christmas.

The employees of the Universal exchange presented Mr. F. L. Davie, manager, with a platinum watch set in diamonds.

Cincinnati Close-Ups

Attorney Edward Becker has been named receiver for the Theatre Amusement Company, operating the Boulevard theatre, Canal and Vine streets. The appointment was made as the result of a suit filed by the Queen City Coal Company, which alleges it secured a judgment against the company for $89.50 in Municipal Court several weeks ago, and that this amount has not been paid.

"Tess of the Storm Country," the new Pickford production, is the opening attraction at Gift's theatre under the new management of the Frankel interests. The picture opened on Sunday, December 31, for an indefinite run. An innovation in the musical line for photoplay presentation consists of an orchestra comprising violin and cello accompaniment to the organ.

Clarence E. Runey, Cincinnati cameraman and dealer in film supplies, has leased the property at 9 East Fifteenth street, adjoining his present location. It will be remodeled, after which it will be known as the Runey Annex.

Des Moines Items

C. F. Schnee, owner of the Plaza theatre at Ackley, sold the house to Mr. Gross.

Mr. Burgun is again running the Eagle theatre at Eagle Grove.

The Liberty theatre at Davenport, which has been undecided whether to maintain a program of vaudeville and pictures or all pictures, has adopted the all-picture program with four changes a week as their policy.

The employees of the Garden theatre, who are not superstitious though they are thirteen in number, celebrated Christmas eve with a supper at midnight in the office of Dan Burgum, manager of the Garden theatre, Des-Moines. Mr. Burgum has his office on the second floor in the same building. Mr. Burgum was presented with a rear bumper for his car by the employees of the theatre, Mrs. Floy Smith, organist, making the presentation speech. Gifts were received by all from the company and from Mr. Burgum and thanks were voiced by E. C. Ross, the genial doorman.

Connecticut Notes

With the passing of the Scenic theatre, at which the last program was presented last week, Willimantic, Conn., loses one of its Motion Picture houses. It is reported that the house will be used for a synagogue. The building was constructed by the First Spiritualist Society in 1868, and was psed by that parish for several years, when it was closed because of the small membership of the parish. It was leased in 1908 to John F. Hurley and John R. Pickett for a Motion Picture house and since that time has been conducted by several proprietors and considered a profitable venture.

The Foti family has conducted the house for more than six years, but is giving up the venture because of litigation with the owners. Throughout the past week work of removing property of the Foti family has been in progress, so that now all left standing are the folding seats.

The Scenic theatre was the third motion picture house to be opened in that city, the first being opened by Harry W. Gale in the Kimbal block, now occupied by John T. Ashton, and the second was the Elite, in the west store of the Chamber of Commerce building, now occupied by the Grand Union Tea Company. James F. McClune, now deceased, was proprietor of the second house, which was opened in the early part of 1908.

The Plaza Amusement Company of Bridgeport, Conn., has been incorporated, to take over lease of Poli's old Plaza on Fairfield avenue, one of the oldest and best-known motion picture-vaudeville houses in that city and section. Management will be assumed January 1. The corporation has an authorized capitalization of $50,000, and will begin business with $5,100. Incorporators are Joseph Saperstein, I. J. Goldman and B. B. Steiber.

S. Z. Poli, proprietor of numerous motion picture and vaudeville houses throughout the East, including several in this city, wins his appeal to the supreme court in a damage verdict of $2,000 against him last May, as the result of a suit brought by Mary E. Seabridge of Bridgeport, Conn., who claimed she suffered serious injury when she stumbled over a weighing machine in one of the local theatres. The Supreme Court finds errors and directs a new trial.

Fred A. Valles, manager of the Poli theatre at Meriden, Conn., recently transferred to the managership of one of the Poli houses at Bridgeport was last week presented with a chest of silver at a farewell reception given by the theatre force in his honor. The presentation address was made by David J. Paull, assistant manager of the Meriden theatre and the presentation by Miss Artkop, treasurer. Mr. Valles is succeeded at Meriden by W. J. Cotter of New Haven.

Manager Peter Magaro's new Regent theatre, Harrisburg, at 9 o'clock on New Year's morning put on a special show for the free entertainment of the children of the Catholic Sylvan Heights home. The feature film was Charley Chaplin's "The Kid." Following the show the kiddies were treated to ice cream and cake.

So skilfully did the management of the Grand Opera House, a motion picture theatre in Norristown, Pa., handle the situation when the house caught fire during a recent performance that a panic was averted and in fact few of the audience even knew there was a fire until they read about it in the papers afterward. The management summoned fire engines by telephone and the smoke-eaters conquered the blaze without the screen performance being interrupted. Few of the audience left the theatre during the blaze. The damage was small. It started from an overheated film in the projection booth.

Michael Comerford, member of a firm that operates a big chain of motion picture theatres in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania, was one of a committee who presented Bishop M. J. Florida Flashes

C. D. Cooley, manager of the Victory theatre, Tampa, gave his patrons a great treat the week before Christmas, with Harl Smith's Jass Band of ten pieces, as an extra added attraction. The band was an exceptionally fine one, and in connection with the film, "Heroes of the Street," pulled big business, even with the competition of the holiday shopping.

It was indeed a real merry Christmas for the showmen of Tampa and South Florida. The weather was ideal, and the people turned out en masse, giving the theatres a record-breaking day.

The Grand Theatre of Tampa, all newly decorated and with new seats, reopened on Saturday, the 23rd, with "The Headless Horseman" as the initial attraction.

W. H. Carroll, who will be remembered by the show folks of Tampa, as he operated, during his stay here, the Alcazar, Prince, Gasparilla and Sans Souci theatres, has bought the Rivoli theatre at Douglas, Georgia. He took the house over on the 18th of December.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Tea N. Tea"

(Hamilton—Educational—Two Reels)

THE important characters embrace the eternal triangle, burlesqued, with Jimmie Adams, the lover in favor; Virginia Vance, the girl, and another suitor described by a sub-title as "the rival, twice as wide as a river," introducing a fat man who has designs upon the affections of the girl. It is her birthday and while preparations for a party are in order the servants quarrel and leave the hostess in an embarrassing situation. Jimmie assists the debutante in preparing refreshments, but when the two leave the kitchen to welcome guests the rival gets in his dirty work and sprinkles the food with explosive powder. When the birthday cake candles are lighted there is an explosion and general confusion. This comedy is above the average, rapid in action, humorous inoffensive and presents some comical situations which have not been done too often before. Well directed, well cast.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Prickly Conscience"

(Bruce Wilderness—Educational—One Reel)

A YOUNG man, unfortunately possessed of the opinion that the world owes him a living, is obliged to "travel on" rapidly, when by mistake he encounters the town marshal by asking for accommodations at the officer's back door. He becomes a fugitive and believes that conscience is giving him a rather hard deal, even interrupting his dreams, but when he has covered beautiful mountainous countries tourists might envy, it develops that fear of the law has been mistaken for conscience. In following the fugitive over the territories he covers unusual scenic values are unfolded. The reel has enough story element to hold the interest and presents some marvelously photographed beauties of the great west.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Double Trouble"

(Fox—Two Reels)

THE Lee Kids—bless 'em—herewith present views of themselves being taken by their father to see themselves in a movie. They are shown seeing themselves in a comedy, and the result is that one gains enjoyment not only out of the comedy, but out of the Lee Kids' enjoyment of it and out of their perfectly abominable behavior while the performance is going on. The combination picture, of course, is only a series of episodes more or less loosely related; but the children are picturesque little bodies and carry with them an undoubted appeal. Watching them even in such episodes is a cheery occupation.—STUART GIBSON.

"Stung"

(McDonald-Pathe—Two Reels)

BRIGHT and snappy is this comedy featuring juvenile talent, who carry their respective roles in the most satisfactory manner, remaining delightfully child-like, yet never failing to deliver their work in grown-up style.

To begin with the leading players, Johnny Jones and Gertrude Messinger, are having some difficulty in geting their worn out and altogether decrepit "motor" to carry them back to town from their route, after making deliveries of periodicals, a part of their news service. Along comes a one-horse conveyance, driven by an old settler. The children beg to be "towed," but when the scheme doesn't work out well, finally are picked up by Johnny's sister's admirer, who drives a smart roadster. Then there are some amusing scenes in a drug store at the soda counter, where the plot develops, embracing an amateur performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," resulting in the downfall of the city boy and profitable readjustment of affairs all around. There is enough genuine comedy in these two reels to carry it well, the players are all splendid and the offering a safe one with marked general appeal and need not be considered only suitable to amuse children.—LILLIAN GALE.

"No Luck"

(Educational—Cameo—One Reel)

UNDOUBTEDLY the best work Lloyd Hamilton has done and a picture that may be described as a novelty-comedy. Its initial locale is unique, since it describes a private fishing club's first fishing tournament of the season. Among the fisherettes is a girl, "the catch of the season," who inspires Lloyd Hamilton with a desire to become a hero, since the girl declares a hatred for cowards. After becoming a hero, Hamilton is invited by the girl's father to attend a smart party at their palatial home, where laughable situations develop rapidly. Then comes the summer storm which blows in more comedy and creates chaos in amusing variety. A comedy that promises to provoke hilarious laughter and win considerable favor with all ages and classes.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Paste and Paper"

(Roach-Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL PARROTT, comedy hero, is a newcomer in the business of paper hanging whose reclination is interrupted by an assignment to paper the drawing room of a fashionable dwelling.

Needless to say, his inexperienced use of ladders and accessories is hard on household treasures and decorations. Worst luck of all, he papers over the window cavities, makes himself a prisoner and it requires every modern method of extraction to get him out. The situations, while not new, are always comical and there is sufficient fun worked into the reel to hold good averages.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Hazel from Hollywood"

(Christie-Educational—Two Reels)

HERE is a clever travesty upon the "movie struck" girl situation, and describes the adventures of Hazel Nutt, one of the family of Iowa Nutts, who goes to Hollywood in search of fame and excitement. Her sorrowing family and friends back in Iowa visualize all sorts of terrible things which never happen to Hazel, for when she found Hollywood not in need of her talent as an actress she also found a job as waitress in a studio restaurant. In her envied position she came in close contact with idols of the screen, and then, quite by accident, was rushed into a part when a serial star found her role unsuited to her comfort. Hazel, always accompanied by her dog, enjoys many new experiences, which bring with them loss of time, money and patience to the director. But when real robbers take the places of extras who were to appear in a bank robbery scene and Hazel's rapid thinking saves the company severe complications and the bank officials from harm she becomes a genuine heroine.

This picture has speed, interest, laughs, a splendid cast and is altogether satisfactory. It offers particular interest to motion picture fans who enjoy glimpses of studio life, even when burlesqued.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Under Suspicion"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

ANOTHER of the Range Rider Series of considerable interest. It has to do with the efforts of a Texas ranger to put a stop to a traffic in "dope," the fearless westerner ably portrayed by Leo Maloney.

It so happens, after the ranger is assigned the case, that work becomes so complicated he fails to report his progress to headquarters, which causes his chief and a party of men to start for the ranch. The hero discovers the hiding place of the opium, meanwhile getting into complications that throw suspicion on him. But being very much on the job, he is a party to a running fight, where Maloney's skill with the lasso and as a rider as well as a fighter, is brought into play.

In a race over the mountainous country, the locale of the story, some expert riding and exciting escapes from accidents occur, keeping the interest intact to the very end of a satisfactory western worthy of favorable comment.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Watch Your Wife"

(Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL PARROTT, in the role of a correspondence school detective, is assigned a commission to earn a fee for watching an innocent wife, with the hope of getting fifty dollars' worth of scandal about her, to deliver to a jealous husband who desires his mistaken beliefs confirmed. The amateur sleuth is supplied with numerous disguises, all of which he uses at the most inopportune times, keeping the ball of fun rolling rapidly and bringing many comic disasters upon himself, as well as some upon the irate husband.

In this comedy Paul Parrott has developed a few new amusing "wrinkles" and commands several hearty laughs depending upon some welcome incidents cleverly introduced in a sort of light comedy vein.—LILLIAN GALE.

Comedies, Short Subjects & Serials

Two Weeks on B'way for "The Speeder"

"THE Speeder," the first release in the series of Educational-Hamilton Comedies, starring Lloyd Hamilton, has been booked for two weeks on New York's Broadway.

This two-reel fun feature is the comedy subject on the program at the Rivoli theatre during New Year's week, beginning December 31. This week is also the Rivoli's fifth anniversary week, and a gala program is arranged. The following week it goes to the Rialto theatre.

"The Speeder," in which Hamilton is supported by Ruth Hiatt as his leading lady and Tom Kennedy in the role of the neighborhood "tough," has been shown in many of the country's leading theatres and has won unusual praise from newspaper critics.

Selznick News Shows Mer Rouge Events

Selznick News claims an important scoop in obtaining graphic and vivid pictures of the events in Mer Rouge, La., following the slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards by men said to be connected with the Ku Klux Klan. The double murder has aroused nation-wide interest because of the wave of popular sentiment against mob rule.

These remarkable scenes are presented in Selznick News Number 1104.

Ring Partner of "Kid" McCoy with Montana

Billy Elmer, former scrapper who plays the role of Little Joe in "Rob 'Em Good," a Hunt Stromberg comedy for Metro, starring Bull Montana, used to be a sparring partner for Kid McCoy when the Kid was middleweight champion of the world.

Educational News Reel Shows Lives Stories

The current issue of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, contains exclusive views illustrating one of the most unusual "human interest" news stories of many months.

Intimate views of Henry A. Dix, the New York clothing manufacturer who startled the industrial world by presenting to his employes his million dollar clothing manufacturing business, are shown. Mr. Dix also loaned the new owners of the business $250,000 with which to carry on, and contributed his services, estimated at $60,000 yearly, without charge, to the management of the plant.

Scenes taken at Mer Rouge, La., where State and Federal governments are investigating murder outrages, attributed to the Ku Klux Klan, are also shown in this issue of inograms.

Pathe's Current Short Subjects

Release Schedule for January 14th Presents Eleven Subjects in All

PATHE'S release program of eleven subjects for Jan. 14th leads with the Johnny Jones 2-reel comedy, "Stung."

In "Stung" Johnny Jones is assisted by a large cast, including Gertrude Messinger and several necessary grown-ups. One of the latter is a young actor who arrives in the country town from the city and proceeds to break up a youthful love affair by taking charge of an amateur performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The hero (Johnny Jones) needs a new automobile in his delivery business. With other boys, he turns the performance into a riot by placing a wasp's nest in the donkey's head which the actor puts on to play the part of Bottom. With eyes "stung" shut, the youth is seized by deputy sheriffs for running away with a machine only partly paid for. They collect by selling the auto to the hero for the amount of the balance due, and the soda fountain clerk gets his girl back.

"Risky Business," the thirteenth episode of "Speed," shows Sprague, the hero's unwilling witness, ready to give up his fight. But the conspirators still plot to get the hero into their power. They cut the cable attached to a car in which the hero and heroine are descending a mountain. The released car descends with frightful speed, plunges through a shed and over a cliff into the river.

"Royal Chinook," is the title of the 1-reel Kiser art film, which, with startling clearness, depicts the life-history of Columbia River salmon, together with spirited and often comic fishing scenes which make the story of the picture released with this program, in the Oregon Trail Series.

Hal Roach presents Paul Parrott in the one-reel comedy, "Paste and Paper." The hero, a novice at the business, has everything possible happen to him while making a rush job of decorating the drawing room of a fashionable family.

Harold Lloyd one-reel comedy re-issue "He Leads; Others Follow," is in this list.

Stories Purchased for Century Comedy Stars

FOR the Season of 1923 a number of stories have been purchased by Julius and Abe Stern from which scenarios will be made for the Century Comedy stars under the direction of Sig Neufeld, recently appointed production manager.

For Baby Peggy the following will be adapted to the screen: "Tilly Jones," by Marc Rex; "Little Trouble Mender," by Zackery Miles; "Smile Maker," by Rae Blumer; "Kissable Tess," by David Brown; and Sweetheart of the Mounted," by Bert Sterling.

For Brownie the Century Wonder Dog the following have been accepted: "Dogdom," by Thomas Wisdom; "A Dog's Day," by Charles Gould; "Dog Tracks," by T. W. O'Neill; and "His Master's Breath," by James Wyler.

For Buddy Messinger two stories have been purchased—"Slim Saunders, Detective" and "Amateur Gangsters," both of them by Harold J. McBride.

Chile Earthquake Views Shown in Pathe News

Picture patrons last week were indebted to Pathe News exclusively for graphic screen reports of the havoc wrought by the great Chile earthquake in which more than six hundred lives were lost.

Among the earliest of the outsiders to reach the scenes of destruction, after many hardships, was the Pathe News cameraman. He says that he made all possible speed back to Valparaiso, most of the way by pack mule train, arriving just after the weekly steamship for North American ports had left the harbor. Still by catching the next ship his films reached New York in time for the showing of the first section on Christmas Eve.

Release Date Near For "If Winter Comes"

NEW screen history will undoubtedly be made when the William Fox screen version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's widely read novel, "If Winter Comes," is soon released to the exhibitors. As a book it has surpassed the million mark in circulation and the announcement of its adaptation to the screen created much public interest, it is claimed by Fox during the past year.

Harry Millarde directed the entire production. At the present time the film is being cut and edited.

An extensive and elaborate advertising campaign will be started before the release date set for this photoplay.

Boston Papers Acclaim Doug's "Robin Hood"

Newspapers of Boston were unanimous in acclaiming "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," which opened at the Park theatre there on Monday evening, Dec. 18, as a marvelous contribution to the screen.

Here is what they had to say:

"Chivalry, romance, love—and Douglas Fairbanks. One doesn't need anything more to make a perfect picture."—Globe.

"It is not only the best picture Fairbanks has made; it is one of the best that has ever been made."—Traveler.

"From this prodigality of Mr. Fairbanks a film results of truly imposing proportions. No admirers of his art should fail to see Robin Hood."—Herald.

"As a combination of chivalry, romance, spectacle, comedy and personality that give Fairbanks a place all by himself, 'Robin Hood' is irresistible."—Advertiser.

"In 'Robin Hood' Douglas Fairbanks has made the most stupendous picture ever screened."—Telegram.

"Extremely rich in color and romance. Everything is done sumptuously to the last detail."—Post.

Screen Romeo, Juliet Suggested

Writer Would Have Mary Pickford as Juliet and Doug in Role of Mercutio

GOING even further than the recent suggestion by Augustus Thomas, arbiter of the spoken drama, to Will Hays that the motion picture industry would do a service to the public by putting "Hamlet" on the screen, the Chicago Tribune, in an editorial under date of December 31, takes a definite stand in favor of a Shakespearean drama in the films. The Tribune nominates "Romeo and Juliet" as the play, and Mary Pickford as the one eminently desirable screen artiste to play the role of Juliet, and casts Dougles Fairbanks in the character of Mercutio.

Indicating a keen sense of what the public wants on the screen as entertainment, the Tribune emphasizes the great love story as the theme of such an enterprise. Pure tragedy has a limited appeal, but a love story is universal in its interest. Says the Tribune, referring to "Romeo and Juliet":

"It has a tragic close, but it is the immortal love story of all literature, and all the world loves a lover, even unhappy lovers."

The versatility of Mary Pickford has mastered all sorts of roles, from the lightest to the most profound, and she is even now appearing in the most emotional role of any that she has every played, her new ten-reel production of "Tess of the Storm Country." However, Miss Pickford thus far has essayed no Shakespearean role, the demand for the Bard of Avon's philosophy never having been exactly insistent among picture-playgoers. It is said that at one time or another Miss Pickford had given thought to doing a role like Juliet.

The Tribune sees a strong reason for her to produce such a role, declaring emphatically that such a picturization "would bring Shakespeare out of the library and off the highbrow platform into the hearts of the people where he belongs, and it would do so because the acting genius of our film stars of the highest rank would waft him on the warm breath of their own universal appeal.

"Mary Pickford as Juliet, we hazard the prediction," the editorial goes on to say, "would prove an unforgettable memory of a generation of all the people and she would make Shakespeare to us all what he has come to be to only a fortunate few, the master magician of the theatre."

"The Flirt" Praised by Critics

Universal Jewel Is Approved at Premiere in New York Rialto Theatre

HAILED as one of the foremost examples of screen excellence and as a picture that everyone should see, Universal's Jewel production, "The Flirt," had its premiere last week during the holiday season in the Rialto Theatre, New York City. Both from the press and the public, there was great praise for Hobart Henley, who directed it, and for the first rate actors and actresses who played in it. Universal also was commended for giving to the screen world such a high class production.

Despite the fact the picture opened on Christmas eve, supposedly the worst theatre day in the year, "The Flirt" drew an asounding crowd to the Rialto.

Eileen Percy, who plays the title role; Helen Jerome Eddy, the bashful sister; George Nichols, the father, and Buddy Messinger, the mischievous kid brother, all came in for exceptional praise at the hands of reviewers and public.

E. V. Durling in the N. Y. Globe said: "Additional proof that nothing is wrong with the movies when made by the right people can be found this week at the Rialto. The Universal Company has been producing pictures for more than a decade, but 'The Flirt' is the best thing it has ever made."

"Booth Tarkington's 'The Flirt' at the Rialto theatre, is a powerful, well acted picture," wrote the reviewer in The Mail.

In the N. Y. Sun, the reviewer wrote as follows: "Although it is not considered etiquette for a critic to show wholesome enthusiasm, the rule must be broken in the case of Book Tarkington's 'The Flirt' at the Rialto. The actor who should be presented with highest laurels is George Nichols, who plays the role of the hard working, home loving, always honest Papa Madison."

The reviewer for the Evening Journal said: "'The Flirt' is a significant production. It is the epic of a typical American family. Under the direction of Hobart Henley, the cast, headed by Eileen Percy has done admirably."

Don Allen in the Evening World said: "It must be said for 'The Flirt' that it has in it everything a movie ought to have, and that's a strong statement, coming in these days of thrills. But we enjoyed 'The Flirt' and think most movie goers will agree with us."

P. W. Gallico, in the N. Y. Daily News, acclaimed the picture as one of the best he had seen in some time.

"In the first place, the picture has had unusually intelligent direction," he asserted, "and in the second place it boasts of a cast of actors and not merely pretty people."

Goldwyn in 80 of 250 Theatres in Paris

EIGHTY out of the 250 motion picture theatres in Paris showed Goldwyn Pictures during the first week of December, according to Jacques Edelsten, general manager of Film Erka, which distributes Goldwyn pictures in France. Mr. Edelsten is in this country on a business trip. Four of the biggest houses on Grandes Boulevard screened Goldwyn films. At the Marivaux "Doubling for Romeo" was the bill; at the Max Linder Theatre, "The Grim Comedian"; at the Madeleine "Poverty of Riches"; and at the Parisiana "The Old Nest."

Goldwyn pictures are now distributed from the following centres in France and her colonies, Mr. Edelsten stated: Paris, Lille, Lyon, Marseilles, Tunis, Algeria, Strasbourg, Bordeaux, Toulouse and the district of Rouen.

Schulberg Pictures Are Booked by Roth

Eugene H. Roth, whose large western theatre circuit includes such houses as the California, the Pertola, and the Granada in San Francisco, has booked the next four pictures to be released by B. P. Schulberg, of Preferred Pictures, through the Al Lichtman Corporation.

Roth made a special trip from San Francisco to Los Angeles to preview "The Hero," "Are You a Failure?", "Poor Men's Wives" and "The Girl Who Came Back" at the Schulberg Studios. After a screening of the first two which are already completed and rushes from "Poor Men's Wives" and "The Girl Who Came Back," the pictures now under way which are being directed by Gasnier and Tom Forman respectively, Roth booked them for his entire circuit.

"Village Blacksmith" Is Fox Special

"The Village Blacksmith," suggested by Longfellow's immortal poem, has been made into a special production by the Fox Film Corporation. This super-special, which received the whole hearted acclaim of the New York critics following a Broadway run, heads the list of the six new specials announced by Fox as a supplement to the original group already released for the season of 1922-23.

It was directed by Jack Ford.

"The Village Blacksmith" is an idyll of small town life and can apply to every village in America. Without descending to mawkish sentimentality it does for father what "Over the Hill" did for mother last season.

Unusual vigor is brought to the role of the mighty smith by William Walling.

Questionnaire to Trade to Guide Producer

BEFORE definitely making plans for 1923 productions, President A. J. Xydias of Sunset Productions has sent a questionnaire to independent exchange men and exhibitors to ascertain the popularity of Jack Hoxie and other stars.

President Xydias has decided to produce at least sixteen feature subjects during the coming year and the answers on the questionnaires will determine what additional series of eight pictures he will make, it is announced. The first four of the Jack Hoxie pictures now distributed are titled "Barb-Wire," "The Crow's Nest," "Back Fire" and "Riders of the Law." The fifth and sixth, directed by Robert North Bradbury, are titled "The Forbidden Trail" and "Gallopin' Through," both of which are completed. Story is now prepared for the seventh of the series which will be titled "Wolf Tracks" and it has been determined to make a Canadian snow picture for the eighth.

Historian Sees "Knighthood" as An Ally

The motion-picture in general, and "When Knighthood Was in Flower" in particular, were the recipients of high praise from Dr. Francis Trevelyan Miller, prominent historian and author of some forty volumes.

"'When Knighthood Was in Flower' is a picture that makes history," he declared. "Gibbons in his 'Roman Empire' or Macauley in his 'History of England' do not more vividly preserve historical events for the generations to come than does Miss Davies in her epoch-making production.

"I am, in truth, beginning to believe we historians must soon confess that these picturizations of world events in dramatic action are more important records for posterity than our cold type and scholastic researches."

"Dr. Jack" Scores on Broadway

Plays to Fine Business at Strand Xmas Week; Kiddies as Press Guests

HOLIDAY week at the Strand theatre goes down in motion picture records as Broadway's "unconditional surrender" to Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack." Capacity audiences were reported at each show.

The Strand, with its "Dr. Jack" attraction, proved to be the natural focus for New York's benevolent activity in providing Christmas entertainments for thousands of children. At least 3,500 kiddies from charitable institutions laughed and shouted their delight as guests of the New York Evening World. At the Christmas performances, as in past years at the Strand, The New York American was host to several thousands of the city's poor children. These packed the auditorium as early as 10 o'clock in the morning.

Manager Joseph Plunkett presented "Dr. Jack" with an attractive prologue, including a "Dr. Jack" song written by himself, which was sung by the Strand Male Quartette.

Here are some of the New York press reviews:

Evening Journal—"The comedian's newest work is important because it is even funnier than his preceding five-reeler, 'Grandma's Boy,' which is another way of saying it is extremely funny."

Evening Telegram—"With Harold Lloyd as the jester, all are at liberty to enjoy merry-making fit for a king, and most inexpensively. His fun-making in 'Dr. Jack' brings forth a wealth of hearty laughter; his Christmas gift to the world is a ray of cheer that will penetrate all its desolate corners."

Robert E. Sherwood in the Herald—"We hasten to advise our readers to obtain their merriment at the Strand theatre, where the joyous Mr. Harold Lloyd is dispensing larger doses of good will through the medium of his latest picture, 'Dr. Jack.' You will find that 'Dr. Jack' is as gay, scintillant and spontaneous a comedy as you ever saw in your life."

P. W. Gallico in the Daily News —"If possible take a youngster with you to hear his laugh. Take the whole family and hear them shriek. For Harold Lloyd is still batting a thousand. 'Dr. Jack' is every bit as good as 'Grandma's Boy,' since people will compare, and in some ways better.

Big Set in "Enemies of Women"

Beautiful Exteriors and Gorgeous Interiors Mark Cosmopolitan Film

IN the filming of "The Enemies of Women," Vicente Blasco Ibanez's romance, Cosmopolitan Productions has not only embellished it with some of the most striking natural scenic beauty ever been seen in a motion picture but is also creating some unusually gorgeous interior scenes.

One of the most beautiful of these scenes shows the interior of the Monte Carlo home of Prince Lubimoff, played by Lionel Barrymore, who is featured in the production. It is here that Prince Lubimoff brings into being the strange cult that he styles, "The Enemies of Women." This "set" reveals a balcony which looks out on the sea and is a replica of the Villa Maryland, Cap Feret, near Nice, claimed to be the most beautiful villa on the Cote d'Azur.

It was in the vicinity of the Villa Maryland that the most strikingly picturesque "exteriors" of the picture were filmed during the six weeks the company spent making scenes in France. These scenes are said by Cosmopolitan to be among the most beautiful ever filmed. Ibanez himself put Director Alan Crosland in touch with people who have lived more than thirty years on the Cote d'Azur and who know all the picturesque spots.

In addition to Lionel Barrymore, the cast of "The Enemies of Women" includes such prominent players as Alma Rubens, Pedro de Cordoba, Gareth Hughes, Gladys Hulette, W. H. Thompson, William "Buster" Collier, Jr., Paul Panzer, Mario Majeroni and Betty Bouton.

Warner Float Nears Destination

Completes Two-Thirds of Transcontinental Tour Advertising Pictures

THE huge Warner Brothers float advertising the seven screen classics being distributed by the organization for this season arrived last week in Kansas City. Practically two-thirds of the transcontinental tour from New York to the Warner coast studios in Los Angeles has been completed, and it is expected that the float will arrive on the west coast within the next sixty days.

The float is in charge of Frank A. Cassidy, former newspaper, theatrical and motion picture exploitation man, assisted by Herbert Swor. Several months ago the float left New York City equipped with a calliope, and during its trip across the country it is estimated that fully twenty-five million people have become acquainted with the names of the Warner Classics.

Throughout the trip Cassidy has been calling on various city officials, Chambers of Commerce and Rotary clubs, and impressing upon them the fact that motion pictures are being produced on a bigger, better and higher standard than heretofore attempted.

11,000 Children View "Nanook" at Museum

AS was recently reported in the News, Pathe's Revillon Freres picture titled "Nanook of the North" has been made a permanent part of the educational archives of the American Museum of Natural History in New York City. That the print of the picture presented to the Museum's authorities by Pathe is being put to immediate practical use was revealed in a letter recently received from Curator George H. Sherwood. The curator wrote in part:

"Our first showing of the film was in the auditorium of the Museum on December 13. It may interest you to know that 10,400 school children applied for seats. Inasmuch as our auditorium holds about 1,550, we have found it necessary to exhibit the film nine times in order to accommodate the number. The total number of children who have seen the picture in the last eight days is approximately 11,000.

"Again thanking you for your interest in the Museum and its work, I am

"Sincerely yours,
"George H. Sherwood,
"Curator."

Marion Davies Starts a New Production

Marion Davies has started work on her next Cosmopolitan picture, "Little Old New York," adapted to the screen by Luther Reed from the stage play by Rida Johnson Young. The picture will be about three months in the making. Sidney Olcott is directing, assisted by Phil Carle. Miss Davies will have the part of Patricia O'Day. New York of a century ago will be depicted with such well-known figures as John Jacob Astor, Robert Fulton and Washington Irving moving across the screen. Ira H. Morgan, perhaps better known as "Joe" Morgan, is turning the crank.

Bray Closes Contracts for Product

Bray Productions, Inc., has just closed a contract placing the Bray Magazine, released every two weeks, and Bray Nature Pictures, released every four weeks, in New England territory through the Motion Picture Distributing Corporation, Geo. M. A. Fecke, President, of Boston.

The same two releases have just been sold for New York State and Northern New Jersey territory to Renowned Pictures Corporation, of New York.

"Notoriety" Rights Selling Fast

Two Months on Market, Will Nigh's Subject Almost 100 Per Cent Sold

RELEASED to the independent market only two months ago, "Notoriety" is reported to be now almost 100 per cent. sold. Sam Sax, sales manager for the producers and distributors, L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, announced this week that Will Nigh's society production, "Notoriety," has come out of the running far in the lead of many current independent productions. In a year that has seen the severest competition in the state-right field and the highest standard of independent releases, Nigh's eight-reeler smash has lined up a list of state-right buyers throughout the country that does credit to the calibre of the production, declared Mr. Sax.

From the very day that the first print of "Notoriety" arrived from the laboratory there has been an average sale of three territories per week, it is declared. The largest territories were the first to sign up for the feature. Will Nigh's picture has already won its way into some of the country's leading first-run theatres, and bookings at additional premier picture houses of the country are being reported daily, it is announced.

The latest buyers added to the list of distributors of the feature are The H. Lieber Company of Indianapolis, who bought the rights for the state of Indiana; Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago, headed by J. L. Friedman, whose territory includes Northern Illinois; United Film Service of St. Louis, operated by Sam Werner, territory comprising Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois; and the Crescent Film Exchange of Kansas City, Mo., for Iowa, Nebraska, Western Missouri and Kansas.

Screen Rights of Plays Bought

Principal Pictures Corporation Also Acquires Some of Best Sellers

NEGOTIATIONS that have been on for several weeks have been closed this week and as a consequence of this dickering Principal Pictures Corporation has obtained the screen rights to some of the greatest plays and best selling books of the past decade. Production on several big Principal pictures already is in full swing at the studios in Hollywood.

Four units, is was reported this week at the New York offices, will be in action within the next three weeks turning out pictures that will be released through foremost exchanges that have formed a co-partnership agreement with this concern, which recently absorbed Western Pictures Exploitation Company and the other Lesser and Rosenberg interests on the Coast.

Principal Pictures Corporation's producing force right now is concentrating on the re-production of two Harold Bell Wright pictures, "The Eyes of The World" and "The Shepherd of The Hills," both of which will be ready for release early in the Spring.

Other Harold Bell Wright stories that Principal Pictures Corporation will adapt to the screen include "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent," "The Uncrowned King," "The Calling of Dan Matthews," "The Printer of Udell's," "When A Man's A Man" and "Their Yesterdays." These productions will be supervised by directors who have won a firm footing in this industry by their accomplishments.

Metro S-L Film Pleases Critics

N. Y. Reviewers Find "Quincy Adams Sawyer" an Enjoyable Production

NEW YORK press reviewers greeted the first showing of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" at the Capitol Theatre, December 17, with some very favorable comment.

The New York Evening Mail, writing of this Metro-SL (Sawyer-Lubin) version of Charles Felton Pidgin's famous novel, declared the river scene in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" to be "the most thrilling climax to any picture play since Griffith's 'Way Down East.'"

"The whole picture," continues the Evening Mail, "is one of the most thoroughly enjoyable and interesting shown on Broadway in some time. There is plenty of action, some delightful comedy, clever subtitles and very good acting. One looks for a disappointment when an all-star cast is announced, but this play proves a pleasant surprise."

The Evening World observes that "Metro has taken 'Way Down East,' 'The Old Homestead,' and several more of the successful rural melodramas, placed them all in a big pot, melted 'em down and run off the syrup that was good in all of them."

The Evening Telegram reviewer declared that the picture "steps into the front ranks of the season's most notable photoplays."

"The emotional gamut of the production," continues the Evening Telegram, "is a long one; it ranges from one of the most thrilling water scenes ever staged to the spontaneous humor of the delightful rustics, and its pictures range from the effect of inspiring murals to the delicate details of the cameo."

The New York American's reviewer, Grena Bennett, contributed significantly to the chorus of praise by declaring: "'Quincy Adams Sawyer' is well worth an hour of anyone's precious time."

Of the "most capable cast" Grena Bennett continued: "There are seventeen important characters, a veritable milky way, if one insists upon the celestial description . . . . No scheming, sneaking rogue of play or book deserved the hiss of right-loving folks more than Lon Chaney as Obadiah Strout."

The reviewers generally praised the cast, each, however, selecting different ones as his or her favorites in the performance. Harriette Underhill of the New York Tribune wrote of Barbara La Marr's performance as the gingham vamp: "Not only is she a joy to look at but she can act." This critic also commended Joseph Dowling. The Morning Telegraph singled out for praise John Bowers, "a manly and pleasing choice," Blanche Sweet, "incarnation of all that is lovely and appealing," Barbara La Marr, "extremely capable as the country vampire and excellent in her emotional scenes."

"HeadlessHorseman" Approved

Hodkinson Release Featuring Will Rogers Is Given Favorable Notices

THAT the motion picture public have put their stamp of approval on "The Headless Horseman," the Hodkinson release featuring Will Rogers in the role of Ichabod Crane, is apparent by the reception it has been accorded in the various cities where the picture has been shown, according to the Hodkinson office.

A report emanates from the home offices of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation to the effect that it recently played at the Lyric Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio, where it met with a decided success and drew capacity audiences at every performance. Writers and critics have pronounced it a real gem, and the newspapers have been vociferous in their praise.

After the showing at the Lyric Theatre in Cincinnati, Ohio, the Cincinnati Inquirer wrote: "In beauty and landscape and perfection of photography, few pictures surpass or even approach 'The Headless Horseman.' Many of the mellow, rustic landscapes which furnish the background for this production possess the charm of an oil painting."

A statement that the role of Ichabod Crane is particularly adapted to the inimitable Rogers is credited to The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, which says: "The part of the avaricious New England school teacher fits the angular shoulders of Wilyum of Oklahoma like the proverbial glove. It is far and away the best thing he has ever done and shows a high degree of merit indeed.

In the opinion of the Cincinnati Times Star: "People who have not read 'The Legend of Sleepy Hollow' for many years will be taking the old book from the shelf after seeing the picture this week at the Lyric unless we are mistaken. The picture is a charming record of days that are gone, and it has been so faithfully recorded with costumes and settings exactly as they should be, that it ought to stimulate a re-reading of the fine old classic."

Much satisfaction is expressed by the Hodkinson officials over the manner in which the picture has been received. Its success in the Lyric theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio, is typical of its drawing power in other parts of the country.

Standard Service Buys Trimble Features

Harry Charnas of the Standard Film Service Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, has purchased the territorial rights for his section of the two-reel Arthur Trimble features from the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., of Hollywood, according to Morris R. Schlank, head of Anchor. Twelve of these short subjects will be produced.

"Little Church Around Corner" Jan. Release

THE fifth of the Warner Brothers classics of the screen, "Little Church Around the Corner," is announced for January release by Harry M. Warner. The photoplay was written by Olga Printzlau, based on the stage play by Charles Blaney and the novel by Marion Russell. It was directed by William A. Seiter, who directed the current Warner release, "The Beautiful and Damned," with Marie Prevost.

One of the many highlights of the production is said to be the exact reproduction of a Pennsylvania coal mine.

The cast headed by Claire Windsor includes Kenneth Harlan, Hobart Bosworth, Walter Long, Margaret Seddon, Bessie Love, Alex Francis, George Cooper, Winter Hall, Cyril Chadwick and Tom Kennedy.

Releases by Independent Corp.

President Goldburg Perfects Organization to Properly Handle Product

MUCH interest has been aroused among state right buyers by the consistent yet modest announcements and advertisements inserted in the trade publications with repect to the releases of the Independent Pictures Corporation for the year 1923.

For the past twelve months, Jesse J. Goldburg the president and general manager of that company, has been perfecting his organization and acquiring productions and contracting for other productions to be made for release through independent exchanges.

The first series of product purchased by the Independent Pictures Corporation was the series of twelve two-reel Biograph subjects reissued under the name of "Favorite Star Series."

Thereafter Mr. Goldburg acquired the world's distribution rights to the new series of Nick Carter subjects the first four of which are completed and produced by Murray W. Carsson, Inc. In the first four pictures the cast is made up of motion picture favorites among whom are Edmund Lowe, Anders Randolph, Henry Sedley, Vincent Coleman and Diana Allen.

Announcement is also made of a contract having been entered into with the Iroquois Productions for delivery during the year 1923 of six feature attractions the first two of which are completed, namely, "The Devil's Partner," featuring Norma Shearer, Edward S. Roseman, Chas. E. Delaney, Henry Sedley and Stanley Walpole; and "The Valley of Lost Souls," featuring Muriel Kingston, Victor Sutherland, Anne Hamilton and Edward Roseman.

In addition to these productions contract has also been entered into with Premium Picture Productions of Oregon for the taking over by the Independent Pictures Corporation of the entire product of that producing unit. The contract provides for the delivery of twelve five reel subjects for 1923, the first six of which have already been completed. Four of these releases feature George Larkin and two of them Jack Livingston.

An extensive and consistent advertising campaign involving weekly advertisements in the trade publications has been planned by the Independent Pictures Corporation and a special exploitation department has been installed for the purpose of assisting the exchanges in booking the product of the Independent Pictures Corporation even after it has been sold and delivered to the exchange, it is said.

Of the first six pictures completed four of them have been entirely edited and titled and will be released under the titles of "Flames of Passion," "The Way of the Transgressor," "The Clean-up" and the "Timber Bride."

In addition to these twelve releases, three special productions will be made in the West Coast Studio of the Premium Pictures Corporation, the books and stories of which have already been purchased.

"Third Alarm" to Open in N.Y.

Prominent Officials Will See World's Premiere at Astor Theatre, January 8

THE opening of "The Third Alarm" at the Astor Theatre on Monday evening January 8th, will see one of the most representative gatherings that have attended a screen premiere in New York. The Film Booking Offices of America have extended invitations to the leading city and fire department officials and a great many have already accepted. In addition the leading lights of the industry in and about New York will see the world's premiere of this Emory Johnson production, which will occupy the screen of the Astor Theatre for an entire month.

"The Third Alarm" will be presented twice daily at the Astor with an appropriate prologue and a program of short subjects. This will mark the second time that F. B. O. has entered the ranks of Broadway producers for extended run. "In the Name of the Law," the first Emory Johnson production to be distributed through the Film Booking Offices of America, ran at the George M. Cohan Theatre last summer.

Enacted by a capable cast headed by Ralph Lewis, "The Third Alarm" is described as a gigantic melodrama with an equal amount of heart interest and human appeal. It was written by Emory Johnson, author of "In the Name of the Law." The plot revolves around an old fireman who has spent twenty years of his life driving his engine, only to find that the march of progress has caused the abandonment of the horse-drawn apparatus and the substitution of the motor truck. This drama is said to be lightened by many comedy and romantic touches and capped by a tremendous climax.

The past week saw the opening of the huge advertising campaign on "The Third Alarm," executed by Mr. Nat G. Rothstein, of the advertising and publicity department. It included, among many other unusual advertising features, the climbing of five big buildings throughout the city by Captain Harry Gardner, known as "the human fly."

Alexander to Distribute Home Life Series

That arrangements have been completed by Alexander Film Corporation whereby it will distribute the American Home Life Series through independent exchanges in many territories is announced by Aralma Film Company, producers of the new "Better Film" two-reel subjects.

Mary Pickford's "Tess" Praised by Texan

Under the heading "Our City" a writer for the Chronicle, Houston, Texas, one of the leading newspapers of the city, writes at length on the exceptional quality of the motion pictures that have been shown there, and makes special reference to Mary Pickford's new production of "Tess of the Storm Country," which was then showing at the Queen theatre. Of this United Artists release, the Chronicle writer had this to say:

"'Tess of the Storm Country,' now showing at the Queen, certainly conveys a beautiful moral and depicts characters that are well worth observing. Furthermore no evil predominates, and those who have belief in God and goodness are rewarded on this earth. It conveys a beautiful lesson of faith, charity and helpfulness, with the inimitable Mary Pickford in a part that brings both tears and laughter."

Preliminaries Under Way for "The Fog"

Final arrangements for the filming of William Dudley Pelley's novel, "The Fog," are being consummated by Louis Graf, president of Graf Productions, Inc., of San Francisco. The photoplay, produced under the personal supervision of Max Graf, will be released by Metro.

Adaptation of the novel to the screen is proceeding rapidly in Los Angeles through the collaboration of H. H. Van Loan and Max Graf.

First-Run Showings on "Notoriety" Set

"NOTORIETY," the Weber and North attraction, produced by Will Nigh, is finding its way to the screens of some of the leading first-run houses of the country.

Following its first-run showings at the Clinton Square, Albany, N. Y., and the Alamo in Louisville, Ky., the production was played at the Strand Theatre, Newark, N. J., during last week. Despite the competition of Christmas shopping the picture is said to have done an excellent business. Newspaper broadsides distributed by newsboys served as effective advance publicity for the subject.

Two other first-run bookings for "Notoriety" are those of the Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.; and the Apollo, Indianapolis. These bookings were closed by the H. Lieber Co.

F.B.O. Lays Claims to Unique Record

Film Booking Offices of America is claiming a record for booking their pictures in the smallest theatres in the country. A report from a Los Angeles salesman shows that he recently sold a contract to the Simpson theatre, with a post office address of Niland, California.

This theatre stands out on the prairie a mile and a quarter from the nearest habitation. The total population is two, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson. The rest of the audience is drawn from the farmers and ranchmen within a radius of twenty miles—all of whom are forced to cross a mile and a quarter of the Imperial Valley desert before reaching this unique "neighborhood" house.

"The Kingdom Within" Shown to Exhibitors

In order to give the exhibitors in his territory an opportunity of getting first hand information regarding the Victor Schertzinger production, "The Kingdom Within," it is reported that C. L. Peavey, manager of the Cleveland branch of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, arranged a private showing at Loew's Allen theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, recently. According to Mr. Peavey, the showing was well attended and many enthusiastic comments were received from those who witnessed the picture.

Distinctive Plans Busy Year

President Arthur Friend Announces Formidable List of Coming Productions

DISTINCTIVE PICTURES CORPORATION announces this week its preliminary plans for a busy year of production. The statement which Arthur S. Friend, president, issued from his offices confirms reports of many months in the industry that 1923 would see Distinctive Pictures in the market with a formidable list of offerings.

The first production will be "Backbone," Clarence Budington Kelland's story which appeared first in the Saturday Evening Post, Charles Whittaker has written the scenario. Edward Sloman is directing the work.

Alfred Lunt—his first time on any screen—and Edith Roberts have the leads.

The second production will be "The Ragged Edge," based on Harold MacGrath's novel of the South Seas. Harmon Weight will direct this picture from a scenario by Forrest Halsey.

Three more productions will be ready by the middle of May. Detailed work on these will soon be put into the hands of individual directors, while Mr. Friend and Mr. Hobart, vice-president of Distinctive Pictures, will devote their attention to arranging for the productions to follow. They are now said to be in negotiation for several stories.

"Oliver Twist" Opens in Phila.

Press Reviewers Enthusiastic Over Photoplay of Charles Dickens' Story

PHILADELPHIA critics were just as enthusiastic over Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist," as were the New York critics. After viewing the First National attraction at the Stanley, the North American writer stated in the headlines: "Jackie Coogan in 'Oliver Twist' a real treat," and in his story declared the screen play "supremely satisfying." The critic added:

"All the famous characters are here, and it is little short of wonderful the way in which the actors and directors have caught the spirit of the story. . . ."

Commenting further on Jackie, the writer stated:

"Charlie Chaplin added something of great value to the motion picture field by his discovery."

The Record's comment was: "If Charles Dickens could see what the camera has done with his immortal novel, 'Oliver Twist,' he would rejoice as did the large throngs which saw the screen version at the Stanley Theatre."

The Public Ledger: "This boy is the character very nearly as his creator conceived him."

The Evening Bulletin called Jackie as "Oliver" a "decided hit."

"Oliver Twist has real Dickens spirit . . . . The atmosphere of old England, especially the underworld of London, has been admirably caught."—The Evening Public Ledger.

"Jackie is seen in a part that suits him well and which more than ever shows the surprising ability of the youngster . . . . Jackie is not alone in sharing the honors for the excellence of the production. With him is a remarkably good cast . . . . Pictorially the picture is also one of excellence."—Inquirer.

"Strangers' Banquet" At Capitol

Critics Approve First Neilan Production in Association with Goldwyn

MARSHALL NEILAN'S first production in association with Goldwyn, a film version of Donn Byrne's novel, "The Strangers' Banquet," was shown at the Capitol Theatre, New York, this week to crowded houses. The public and the critics were lavish in their praise of it.

"A fine film feast," says the News. "Goldwyn starts off the new year with a bang by presenting 'The Strangers' Banquet.' This photoplay certainly belongs on your holiday film shopping list. It is novel, it is interesting from the opening scene to the last. Mr. Fellowes is the best hero we have seen in ages."

"Has plot that is different," said the American, "with plenty of action and sentiment, intelligent direction and spectacular settings."

"Gives the director a wide field of photography in which to display his virtuosity and affords the camera some fine shots," said the World.

"A typical Marshall Neilan production," said the Herald. "When he wants to he can be more forcibly expressive than any director in the business."

"Mr. Neilan has a knack for spirited narration," said the Times. "He selects good casts and gets the most out of the people who play for him . . . There's melodrama, comedy and farce in the piece."

"We have never seen a picture with so many principals in it," said the Tribune. "Miss Windsor is a good actress, but it would be possible to forgive her if she were not. She is so beautiful and she wears such marvelous and always suitable gowns. Rockliffe Fellowes gives a good performance."

Eve. World: "Marshall Neilan has done both himself and his new associates (Goldwyn Pictures Corporation) proud in turning out what we think is one of his best."

Mail: "Almost epic in its proportions. Moves swiftly; not dull at any time."

Marcus Loew Greeted by S. F. Officials

FOR his having established motion picture production in San Francisco the city extended to Marcus Loew a spectacularly hearty welcome during his brief stay there beginning December 4.

The appreciation of Mr. Loew's instrumentality in adding a new industry to the northern Californian city was manifested officially by members of the municipal government and organizations of business men, and unofficially by the crowds. From the time the president of Metro Pictures Corporation was met at the station by a business men's and municipal committee and Chief of Police O'Brien, until his departure, his schedule was made up of one reception after another, with time out only for conference with Max Graf and other leading officials of Graf Productions, Inc. This organization's photoplays, the first to be made in San Francisco, will be released through Metro Pictures Corporation. The pictures are being produced at the Pacific studios.

Fulton's Steamship Is Riding Hudson

Robert Fulton's first steamship, the Clermont, has been brought to life, and is again riding the waters of the Hudson. True, it is not the original Clermont, but a replica built by Cosmopolitan Productions as a setting for some of the scenes of Marion Davies next super-production, "Little Old New York."

Down to the most minute detail the replica is fashioned after the first steamship ever built. One of the most interesting features of the Hudson-Fulton celebration was a replica of the Clermont. At the conclusion of the celebration, it was purchased by the Albany Day Line and taken to Kingston, N. Y. Cosmopolitan Productions intended to use this replica in "Little Old New York," but discovered that the tiny boat was fast in the mud and was in such bad repair that it could not be floated. So a contract was let to the Kingson Dry Dock Construction Company for an exact counterpart.

Last week the boat was completed, and under its own power the strange little craft started down the Hudson River to New York over the very route that the original Clermont had traveled. It proved almost as much of a curiosity as did the original boat.

"Bulldog Drummond" Gets Booking

An interesting report comes from the offices of the Hodkinson organization to the effect that Jones, Linick & Schaeffer have booked "Bulldog Drummond" to play early in the New Year. Following on the heels of the report of the booking of this picture by the Fox chain of theatres in New York and vicinity, it is regarded by the Hodkinson officials as concrete evidence of the box office possibilities of this picture.

Detroit Exhibitor Buys Warner Series

A testimony to the faith in independent productions was demonstrated last week when John H. Kunsky, of Detroit, contracted for the entire series of Warner Brothers' classics of the screen after seeing the Harry Rapf production, "Heroes of the Street," featuring Wesley Barry. The California theatre, Los Angeles, and scores of other theatres, including the chain of Mark-Strand houses in New York, are said to have followed a similar procedure.

Kunsky will give the Warner classics a first run showing at the Capitol, Madison and Adams theatres in Detroit. The productions contracted for include, in addition to the Wesley Barry feature, "The Beautiful and Damned," with Marie Prevost, "Little Church Around the Corner," "Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriages and divorce, directed by Sidney Franklin, and the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Main Street," directed by Harry Beaumont.

Hope Hampton Seen in "Does It Pay"

"Does It Pay?" one of Fox Film Corporation's January specials, throws new and interesting light upon the price the transgressor pays for his breaking of the moral law.

Directed by Charles Horan, its scenes range from the calm domesticity of a Connecticut village to the hectic existence of the fast set in the metropolis.

The cast is a notable one. Hope Hampton has been especially engaged for the part of the "gold-digger." As Doris Clark she has every opportunity to wear several of the elaborate gowns for which she is famous. The character of John Weston is in the capable hands of Robert T. Haines, who was last seen on Broadway as the leading support of Marjorie Rambeau in "The Goldfish." Others are Florence Short, Walter Petri, Peggy Shaw, Charles Wellesley, Mary Thurman, Claude Brooks, Pierre Gendron, Marie Shotwell and Bunny Grauer.

Anchor Issues 4-Page Press Sheet

A four-page press and exploitation booklet, size 9 by 12 inches, including a clipping sheet, to be used in connection with the exploitation campaign by the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., in furthering sales and exhibitions of the Arthur Trimble two-reel feature series, is just off the press, according to Anchor's publicity department.

In addition to this service the Anchor has also purchased several thousand 8 by 10 pictures of Arthur Trimble, many of which have already been mailed to state rights exchanges and prominent first run theatres.

According to Morris R. Schlank, head of Anchor, his publicity department is preparing a twelve-page press book for Anchor's "Gold Seal" production starring Hobart Bosworth, temporarily titled "The Law of the Sea."

Theatre Club Views A. E. Film

"Bill of Divorcement" Is Presented for Professional Study in New York

FOLLOWING a preview which had been arranged exclusively for the organization and its guests, in the grand ballroom of Hotel Astor, New York, the Theatre Club, Inc., composed of more than 400 women interested in club, educational and social activities, paid a tribute to the Associated Exhibitors feature, Constance Binney in "A Bill of Divorcement."

The Theatre Club was formed primarily to study and pass upon the merits of stage plays. Meetings are held twice monthly. The members vote to attend a given production, and, having witnessed the performance, discuss the story, the acting—every point which makes for interest in the offering. Recently it was decided to extend the organization's activities to a consideration of outstanding photoplays also, and a motion picture committee was formed with Mrs. L. F. Bardwell, of 453 West 152nd street, as chairman.

With the cooperation of Associated Exhibitors, Mrs. Bardwell arranged a special Holiday Season entertainment with "A Bill of Divorcement" as the central feature, uncommon interest having been expressed in the picturization of this subject because of the great success of the play. The special screening at the Astor was the only pre-release showing of any picture which has ever been arranged for the club.

Mrs. George M. Clyde, president of the Theatre Club, presided. After the filming of the last scene the women remained in their seats and applauded. Later officers of the club and other prominent members expressed hearty admiration of the production itself. Three points were emphasized in these commendations: the beauty of the picture; what was declared to be its remarkable fidelity to the original play, and the fact that in the ending a departure is made from the customary expected embrace and the assurance that the heroine and her admirer "lived happily ever after."

Announcement was made that at its first January meeting the Theatre Club will take formal action recommending "A Bill of Divorcement" as a feature of extraordinary entertainment appeal.

Stage Play Is Fox Production

"The Net" Said to be Replete with Elaborate Settings and Action

"THE NET," a drama which had a successful run on Broadway, has been made into a screen play by the Fox Film Corporation. The story was written by Maravene Thompson, and J. Gordon Edwards directed the picture.

Elaborate interiors and lovely scenes along the coast of Florida are said to be attractive features of the production. One of the handsomest settings shows the interior and exterior of a studio belonging to a wealthy artist. It was remodeled from an old church. The lofty interior has been changed into a novel arrangement of six different styles of architecture. Moorish columns contrast with Greek and Italian decorations, the walls being hung with valuable paintings and tapestries.

In this room is enacted a tragedy that throws the net of circumstances about a devoted wife and mother and forces her to choose between casting the shadow of a crime over her young child or of condemning an innocent man to prison for life. The manner in which the tangle is straightened out holds the interest firmly to the end, the finish being a happy one.

The acting company has been selected with great care. Barbara Castleton, whose beauty and sympathetic acting have won her a high place as a screen favorite, is the Mrs. Norman. Raymond Bloomer is the handsome but unprincipled husband and Albert Roscoe is the man unjustly accused of murder. Peggy Davis, a Ziegfeld Follies girl, makes a gorgeous appearance as the model. Others in the cast are: Artist, Arthur Gordoni; assistant artist, Cornelius F. Keefe; nurse, Helen Tracy; the boy, Eliah Nadel; inspector, Alexander Gaden; Foster, Guy Combs; the doctor, Byron Douglas; the vamp, Claire De Lores; the friend, Eileen Grout.

Fire Department Aids "Bell Boy 13"

The entire equipment of the Los Angeles fire department was turned over to Thomas H. Ince for street scenes in Los Angeles for "Bell Boy 13," a First National release, with Douglas MacLean in the title role.

This is said to be the first time on record that any picture company has been aided in this way. Ince is an honorary chief of the Fire Chiefs' Association in recognition of his services toward fire prevention. McLean drove the fire chief's racing car through the streets of Los Angeles at fire racing speed through crowded traffic while the department engines followed him.

Good Cast in "Be Yourself"—Educational

"Be Yourself," the latest Christie Comedy to Educational for release, has a cast of unusual merit. Neal Burns is featured, and opposite him is Charlotte Merriam. Lincoln Plumer, George French, Henry Murdock, Babe London, Ward Caulfield and Natalie Johnson appear. "Be Yourself," which was directed personally by Al Christie, is built around the strike of the girl workers in a shirtwaist factory.

"Grandma's Boy" Introduces Train-Movies

"GRANDMA'S BOY" Associated Exhibitors' release starring Harold Lloyd was awarded the honor of introducing the motion-picture service for passengers aboard the Chicago-St. Louis Limited of the Chicago & Alton Railway Co. As was reported recently in the columns of Motion Picture News, the Chicago & Alton has installed this form of entertainment to make the traveling less tedious. A portable projector is mounted at one end of the dining car, the chairs arranged in the form of a miniature auditorium, and the train "movies" are ready to start. The Springfield, Ill., State Journal reports the initial trial proved an unqualified success with Harold Lloyd furnishing the merriment.

Many Sales Reported on "Sure Fire Flint"

Lester F. Scott, Jr., general sales representative for C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., returned to New York last week after an extended sales tour through the South.

That the territory on "Sure Fire Flint" is rapidly closing out is evident by the contracts which have been closed to date. B. D. Craver, head of the First National Exhibitors Circuit of Virginia bought the rights for this picture for his territory which includes the six southern states, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Florida. Mr. Scott also closed a contract with True T. Thompson of the True Film Corporation of Dallas, Texas for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Lichtman Closes Foreign Deal on Specials

Australasian Films East, Ltd., have purchased from the Al Lichtman Corporation the rights to the first eight specials produced by Preferred Pictures for Dutch East Indies, Singapore and the Strait Settlements.

Under the terms of the purchase the pictures disposed of for this territory are "Rich Men's Wives," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "Shadows," "The Hero," "Are You A Failure?" "Poor Men's Wives," "The Girl Who Came Back," and "Mothers-in-Law."

"Shadows" Praised by Detroit Press

"Shadows," Tom Forman's latest producstion for B. P. Schulberg of Preferred Pictures, the distribution of which is handled by the Al Lichtman Corporation, is receiving comment from the press in every large city in which it is having its premier showings for its unusual handling as well as its story, which is said to be totally different from the stereotyped screen plot.

Roy E. Marcotte added his opinion during the picture's recent exhibition at the Broadway Strand in Detroit. His review in the Detroit Free Press said in part: "Several far-seeing picture makers are abandoning the sensational in favor of the good, solid story, honestly and simply unfolded. There is a sterling example of this in 'Shadows.' . . . 'Shadows' is one of the most refreshing pictures of the year, and shows that there are directors who really want to give us something new and worth while."

Mary Carr to Be Seen in "Custard Cup"

"The Custard Cup" from the novel by Florence Bingham Livingston, is a Fox offering with Mary Carr in the leading role. It is a story of optimism, its principal character going on the theory that one smile is worth a dozen sighs. It was adapted by G. Marion Burton.

In its original form "The Custard Cup" ran as a series of short stories in McCall's Magazine. In book form it reached another large circle of readers. There are said to be a number of sensational features in the picture, including a most realistic steamboat explosion and a thrilling episode showing the tracing down of a gang of counterfeiters.

New Electrical Chief for Century Studio

D. C. Stegal has been appointed chief electrician for the Century Comedy Studios. Stegal, who has had a varied experience with other large companies, took his new post with the finishing of Baby Peggy's "The Flower Girl."

Charles Gould, who was acting chief pending the engagement of a new chief, has been made Stegall's assistant, with Walter Gould and Harold Story as second assistants.

Christies Are Booked at Eastman

The new series of Christie Comedies, released by Educational are playing at the new Eastman Theatre at Rochester, which was recently opened as the premier art theatre of the motion picture industry. Latest releases played at the Eastman are "Let 'er Run," "Ocean Swells" and "Choose Your Weapons."

To Pick Shopgirl for C.B.C. Role

Exchanges and Exhibitors Asked to Join Forces in Choosing Candidates

C. B. C. FILM SALES CORPORATION announces a plan whereby a committee will select "the most beautiful shopgirl" among candidates to be chosen from various sections of the country for a part in "Temptation," the third of the C. B. C. series of feature productions.

Word has gone forth to the territorial holders of "Only a Shopgirl," requesting them to arrange with exhibitors playing that picture for the selection of the most beautiful shopgirl in their respective cities. The mode of choice and the manner of announcing the plan to the public are to be left to the individual exchanges and exhibitors. Only shopgirls in each city are to be considered eligible. The selection is not to be made by photograph but by personal appearance of the candidates in accordance with the plan laid down by the exchange and the exhibitor.

The winning candidates from each city are to be judged in turn by a committee headed by Estelle Taylor and Mae Busch, who play the shopgirl roles in the picture; Joe Brandt, Harry Cohn and Director Edward J. LeSaint. The winner will be given the opportunity of appearing in "Temptation," it is announced.

"This is in no sense of the word a contest," said Jack Cohn of C. B. C., "but simply an expression of our opinion that just as a shopgirl was sufficiently interesting to form the heroine of Blaney's great story from which our picture was made, so we believe there are many girls in real life, who, though circumstance has thrown them to work in shops, nevertheless have the yearnings for better things that Mame felt in the play—and we want, if possible, to give one of them a chance to satisfy it—or at least to try out her ability to do so.

Stirring Melodrama Fox Special

"The Face on the Barroom Floor" Among Features of Super-Program

GREAT exhibitor value is contained in a special. "The Face On the Barroom Floor," according to the Fox Film Corporation, who are releasing this production in its new super-program.

This film counts among its players Henry B. Walthall. Ruth Clifford carries off the feminine lead and Alma Bennett contributes her part toward the success of this photodrama. The director is Jack Ford. G. Marion Burton is responsible for the story.

The story is said to be tensely dramatic, touching the depths of human emotion as its tides sweep life's sea of experience.

Walthall, in the character of Robert Stevens, an artist, has come to see the worst of life. Circumstantial evidence tightens about him the iron web of prison bars. Then comes a mob scene in the penitentiary. Men mad to gain freedom, dashing, pounding their way to liberty with demoniac strength—the Governor of the State attacked by a prisoner in the warden's office—Stevens' protection of the Governor, then his swim in a raging storm—these are gripping incidents of the screen creation.

The touches of comedy are the reflections of human traits that we all find so naturally humorous. But the real heart interest, the true strength of the film drama, lies in its love theme. Here Ford took every advantage offered by the scenario and created a deeply appealing love symphony.

Fox to Release Feature Comedy as Special

Among the six specials which Fox Film Corporation will release this month is "A Friendly Husband," starring Lupino Lane. This is the first time in two years that a feature comedy has been released by Fox as a special.

The new Lane special promises a merry treat to the many Lane admirers throughout the counrty. Jack Blystone, who directed Lane in his previous two reelers, "The Reporter," "The Pirate" and "My Hero" wrote and directed "A Friendly Husband."

Special accessories are ready to assist in exploiting and putting this picture over with unusual exploitation suggestions. One twenty-four sheet, one six sheet, two three sheets and three one sheets, novel window cards, circus heralds, slides, folder heralds and a full line of advertising and publicity. Cuts and mats are available at all Fox exchanges.

Strong Cast for "The Famous Mrs. Fair"

Metro officials point to the cast of "Famous Mrs. Fair" as "in accord with the prestige and direction of the story." The director is Fred Niblo, who is responsible for the direction of "The Three Musketeers" and "Blood and Sand." The picture version is based on the James Forbes play which had a year's run on Broadway with Henry Miller and Blanche Bates co-starring.

The cast presents Myrtle Stedman (in the title role), Huntley Gordon, Marguerite De La Motte, Cullen Landis, Ward Crane, Carmel Myers, and Helen Ferguson.

"Prince and the Pauper at Newsboys' Show

Motion pictures played an important part in the Christmas entertainment provided for children in institutions and the newsboys of the city. The New York Sun, in conjunction with the Plaza Theatre, acted as host to over a thousand of its newsboys at two morning shows all their own. Mark Twain's "The Prince and The Pauper" was chosen because of the particular appeal of the story to the boys as well as the personality and acting of Tibi Lubin, the little Polish boy, in the dual role of the Prince of Wales and a waif of the streets. The picture is distributed by American Relcasing.

Baby Peggy's Latest Is "Carmen Junior"

The title of Baby Peggy's Spanish picture has been changed three times. It was first called "The Senorita," then "Sunny Smiles," then "Carmen Junior.

In "Carmen Junior, which will be released shortly, Peggy takes a dual role as a boy and as a girl vamp. Her changes of costume are miniatures of all the most elegant and rich Spanish costumes for toreadors and mantilla draped Castillian vamps. Little Thomas Wonder, a marvelous child dancer, supports her cleverly in several of the scenes.

Great Importance of Electric Signs in Success of Theatre

Salient Features of Design Necessary for Strongest Power of Attraction

By J. M. Shute, Illuminating Engineer

ADVERTISING by means of electric signs has become almost universal, and the character of these displays has rapidly assumed a high standard. In approximately seven years sign advertising of the motion picture theatre has grown from a negligible quantity to its present position of sixth in lists of sign users. To understand more completely its present importance, the motion picture theatre now stands first, with about 20% in the users of large signs, employing 1,000 lamps or over, and also leads the list as users of medium signs employing from 200 to 1,000 lamps. Such a remarkable growth immediately brings out the importance attached to electric advertising by the progressive members of this industry.

Necessary for Success

This type of advertising has been found to have the essentials necessary to make the motion picture theatre a financial success; that is, attracting power or the ability to gain attention and selling power or the ability to impress a message and make it endure. To increase the selling power, legibility or the power to show the message clearly in well defined lines is absolutely essential. It is no doubt due to the fact that greater attention has been given in the past few years to increasing the selling power that electric advertising has gone ahead in gigantic strides.

It has always been known that brightness is the greatest factor for increasing the attracting power of a display. Instinctively a human being is attracted by bright objects and the eyes are centered on it usually from curiosity to discover its purpose. However, this same all important factor, if incorrectly applied, defeats its own purpose for the eyes will immediately be diverted to something else should the brightness be such as to cause annoyance or uncombined with some other factor fail to hold the interest of the observer.

Thus in the early days of the motion picture theatre, though it was recognized that brightness was essential, the very nature of its application prevented the intended results. The art of sign lighting was much below its present stage of development, and lighting facilities for this service were very poor in comparison to the present standards. To obtain the essential brightness in those days large gas or electric arcs were suspended in front of the theatre to illuminate the advertising posters and attract patrons to the brightly lighted area. The result obtained was a glaring brightness, annoying to the eyes and of such a nature as to obscure the posters from view rather than to display them.

First of Series

THIS is the first of a series of articles on the lighting of the exteriors of Motion Picture theatres for advertising purposes prepared from data and photographs furnished by:

The Lighting Service Dept. of the Edison Lamp Works of the General Electric Company.

The New York Edison Company.

The Norden Electric Sign Company.

The Engineering Dept. of the National Lamp Works of the General Electric Company.

The author covers the general development of this phase of lighting in this article. Future installments will take up in detail the design and lighting of theatre Signs and Marquees.

Fig. 1. A Forerunner of the Modern Theatre Marquee. Compare the sharp contrast of the light sources and background with the beautiful lighting effects in the theotre entrance of today

An example of this type of advertising is shown in Figure 1. The globes containing the arcs stand out in vivid contrast to the background and, because of their high intrinsic brilliancy and positions directly in view of the passerby, cause a glaring illumination which is very annoying to the human eyes. An even greater disadvantage caused by these units for lighting was due to their positions with regard to the posters, since these high powered light sources were often between the eyes of the observer and the poster itself. As the human eyes cannot adjust themselves simultaneously to the high intensity of the light sources and the comparatively lower intensity of the poster board, the picture was blurred and indistinct as in the case of looking through a lens improperly focused. In this case the eyes were the lenses out of focus, due to the high intensity light course before them.

Unfavorable Results

The result of this form of advertising was far from favorable. Interest could not be held, due to the illegibility, and thus the selling power was low. The better class of patronage was driven away instead of being attracted and it was seen that such a type of advertising could not survive. Naturally, the failure of the advertising to perform its function brought about changes by attempts to better it, and in Figure 2, though the general type is the same, improvements have been made.

Here the whole front of the building has been brightened by rows of small lamps and the glare greatly lessened by decreasing the contrast between the large lighting units and the remainder of the building. The advertising posters have been placed in front of the low hanging large light sources and receive their illumination from other lamps suspended high enough to prevent glare to the observer. The result is a poster which can be seen much more distinctly and can be read without discomfort.

Though this type of lighting has been superceded, it was a step in the right direction. From such theatre entrances as these have finally developed, through the steady advancement of this phase of the lighting art, the modern theatre marquee and lobby entrance artistically decorated and lighted brightly but by methods which preclude the possibility of annoying glare.

Developments in the signs themselves have been rapid. Poor results due to defects of

Fig. 2. The type of theatre entrance in vogue about eight years ago. Former experience had shown to some extent the necessity for less contrast and more diffusion

design and improper lighting have been catalogued, and past experience has aided greatly the betterment of this form of advertising. One great factor in this development has been the growth of the lamp industry. The past few years have shown the advantages gained in sign lighting by the use of types of incandescent lamps formerly not applicable. The uses of the high efficiency gas-filled lamp to obtain high brilliancy, of the daylight lamp to give whiteness and sparkle and of the diffusing bulb lamp to give soft illumination have been tried, and in each case these lamps have made places of importance for themselves in the sign lighting industry.

Figures 3 and 4 show the changes in the theatre signs during the past few years. In the former the crude and ugly sign with its yellow burning carbon lamp tries to attract the attention of the passerby. It has no brilliancy, and if from curiosity some person affords it a glance there is nothing in the display to hold one's attention and convey to the mind the idea that the motion picture may be interesting.

Compare this with the brilliancy and grandeur of the sign in Figure 4. As this powerful lighting display is flashed on, the entire surrounding area becomes as bright as day and no person within reach of its powerful rays can refrain from glancing up to discover the cause of this flood of light. Immediately the attention is caught and held by the pictorial grandeur of the display. The imagination begins to work because the brain feels that a performance which is so brilliantly and beautifully advertised should not be passed by, even though the price of admission is several times that of the other theatre.

It is because the theatre as well as other sign users have recognized the value of the added selling power in displays of this kind that the sign industry has grown to its present importance. Its growth has by no means stopped, and from day to day we see new and more attractive signs which compel our attention and sell to us an idea that a certain theatre is worth attending or a certain article is worth buying.

As the advantage of this type of advertising to the motion picture theatre has become apparent the characteristic factors which increase the value of the electric sign have been tried with success. Other than brightness in the sign, the factor in electric advertising of the greatest importance for increasing the attracting power is motion. Motion has a fascination which is hypnotizing in its effect. Border lamps, figures continuously chasing each other, falling water and many other equally attractive motional effects have been made use of to give added attracting value to the motion picture theatre sign. Not only do such signs have greater attracting power, but from an economical standpoint the operating cost is often as much as 30% lower than would be the case if the sign was operated continuously.

It is impracticable to present elaborate rules for the production of such works of art, when individual treatment is of so great importance. However, the following are some of the most essential factors, as found from modern practice which have been made use of to increase the value of this advertising medium for the motion picture theatre:

1. Originality—An effect to give a distinctive attitude to the theatre and add to it an individuality which causes attention and favorable after comment.

2. Color—A means to obtain variety and richness which greatly adds to the attracting power.

3. Size—A method to enhance the grandeur when other means fail, size is bound to impress.

4. Position—An important factor in determining the circulation of the advertisement, not merely to those who see it, but to the number who actually read it.

Fig. 3. The Broadway Motion Picture sign of 1914. Such a display would be completely lost at Herald Square today

Besides those mentioned above the factors of beauty, border, picture and maintenance have important positions in adding to the attracting power and the selling power of the sign.

The methods of combining these various factors in the proper proportions are essential if the sign is to produce its desired effect, that is to attract the prospective customer and to convey to him with the necessary punch that the motion picture advertised should be seen. To discuss in detail at this point these methods

The famous story of the Pied Piper typifies the power of Music—a power beyond words today.

Do you use music to draw the crowd? Do you realize the influence of good music? Cares are flung aside, troubles forgotten, under the spell of its seductive charm.

Important to have that melody supplied by an instrument of highest development! Install the Barton Orchestral Organ!

As a full pipe organ its range is wide and varied. But the marvelous orchestral instruments, with thousands of new combinations makes it even more capable of interpreting emotion on the screen. Exact shades of subtle meaning are brought out by the harmony, and what might be lost in the action is supplied by the sound.

As one owner of a Barton says, "The eye sees the picture; what the ear hears makes it seem real!"

The Linwood Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., which recently opened its doors, is considered one of the most beautiful suburban houses in that district, the exterior and interior present a most attractive appearance

Linwood Theatre Most Beautiful of Kansas City Suburban Houses

COSTING $75,000, the Linwood theatre, which recently opened its doors to the Kansas City public, is among the most beautiful of Kansas City's suburban houses. The new house, erected by Capitol Enterprises, is located at Thirty-first Street and Prospect Avenue and stands on the site of the former Linwood theatre, but only the walls of the old house remain in the new structure.

The seating capacity on the lower floor has been diminished 100 seats or so to make provision for space used in a foyer that extends across the entire breadth of the building, a foyer finished in circassian walnut paneling with a marble base and illuminated with lights concealed in suspended baskets. However, the addition of loge balconies has more than made up for this sacrifice and brings the capacity to 1,400.

Every need and whim of the patrons has been provided for. The lobby is capacious, containing plenty of area for the announcing of coming attractions, eight mirrors for the vanity of "my lady" and a box office in marble that easily is available, yet not obtrusive. Retiring rooms for men and women are on the balcony floor, as well as a second foyer furnished with lounges, easy chairs and stand lamps. Directly off of this foyer are loges with movable chairs seating 150 persons. The stage scheme is made up of pillars and French doors. There are two drapes, one of attractive design on silk, the other of velvet. A special lighting system in three colors aids in the proper presentation of novelties in conjunction with the cinema programs. This system has been embraced alike in the illumination of the main auditorium so that the theatre proper may be flooded with a number of color combinations. A manager's office with leads to the outside, to the lobby and to the auditorium balances a confectionery shop on the opposite side of the front.

The decorative scheme is very elaborate and has as its predominating color a rich old rose. Contrast has been obtained by a liberal use of ivory and embossments in polychromatic designs. The overhead work is especially artistic and makes a ventilating system of grills one of beauty as well as of usefulness.

Music has been well taken care of in the installation of a Hope Jones Wurlitzer pipe organ.

The Linwood theatre is one of the most important additions to the circuit of theatres that Capitol Enterprises has acquired thus far and is located at one of Kansas City's busiest transfer points.

W. O. Lenhart, a well known exhibitor, has been appointed manager of the new house.

"With a large neighborhood area to draw from, consisting of a class of patrons whom only the best productions appeal to, I can see no reason why a great success does not lie ahead for the Linwood," Mr. Lenhart said.—TRUE.

Hyland Preparing Second Eastman Film

Jack Hyland is now preparing the scenario for the second of the five-reel productions being made by the Eastman Kodak Company. The first picture, recently completed, was written and directed by Mr. Hyland and met with enthusiastic approval of the Eastman exectives. The films are to be used by the Eastman professional photographers' school. Each picture represents a phase of photographic work and is told in an interesting manner. They include instruction for professional photographers in the arrangement of the studio, improvements in photographic methods, lighting, reception and treatment of subjects and general business. The productions are being made in the Paragon Studio at Fort Lee, and the sets are being constructed by the Tilford Cinema Studios.

Review of Industrial Standardization During the Year 1922

THE year 1922 has seen greater activity in industrial standardization than any other year in the history of American industry. Notable progress was made during the year in standardization of raw materials, of manufacturing processes, and of finished products by individual firms, by industrial and technical associations and by bodies that are working on national and international lines.

Exterior of the Whiteside Theatre, Carvallio, Oregon

Another outstanding accomplishment in the industrial standardization work of this year was the development of the "standardization-by-conference" idea, in which all of the interests involved in the subject, including producers, consumers, and representatives of the public and government, participate in deciding: first, whether standardization is to be undertaken, second, what shall be its scope, and third, what shall be its relation to other standardization work.

The year 1922 saw also the development of an increased interest in industrial standardization and an increased appreciation of its effect on production efficiency, distribution of costs, and consumer demand.

It is universally recognized that standardization is a legitimate and constructive activity of trade associations. The clarification of the legal aspects of the question by the publication in the early part of the year of the correspondence between the Attorney-General and Secretary Hoover has done much to foster and extend standardization activity among trade associations.

Theater Lighting Control

While theater lighting and the lighting of stage sets has been a matter of history for nearly 100 years, the perfection of theater lighting control has been accomplished only in the last ten years. Control of lighting is practically as important as lighting itself and wonderful stage effects could not be accomplished without it.

In the Major System the flexibility in the control of lighting is the primary object. In gaining this, however, has been brought about many other advantages not to be found with any other controlled system. So well has the Major System filled every theater lighting need that it has become standard equipment with leading architects of the country, and the choice of all wide-visioned exhibitors every year.

The new, magnificent book, "The Control of Lighting in Theaters," covers the subject fully, not only explaining the Major System but also giving some valuable information regarding theater lighting never before available. Write for your copy now.

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

Why Not?

THE editor has the pleasure of receiving each week a great number of letters from the members of the N.A.M.L. and also from the other readers of this department.

There are, roughly speaking, three classifications into which these letters can be placed.

1. Short ones requesting labels, buttons, etc., with possibly a remark concerning the Forum.
2. Letters of somewhat longer length than those classified in (1) which usually extend their length through a few encouraging statements on the good work of the N.A.M.L.
3. Finally comes the letters that everyone likes to read both for their general interest and for the valuable information and advice they contain. These are letters written by men who are interested in their profession and want to tell what they are doing to improve their work in hopes that their ideas and schemes will help the other fellow.

A Real Need

What is needed and needed badly, is more of these last type of letters. Keep up the good work of the N.A.M.L., don't forget to mention in any letter that you are doing your bit toward eliminating poor film BUT add some more valuable information. Ask yourself these questions:

Why is my projection A-1?

What is my best original device or idea that may help the other fellow?

What interesting activities are happening around here that others would like to hear about?

Then consider the other side of the matter by asking yourself,

Do I know it all? (No answer needed, nobody does.)

Therefore what information do I need most?

What discussion on projection would I like to have taken up by the other projectionists?

And about a dozen other queries you can put to yourself.

There is one absolute guarantee that the editor will make, namely; the fellow that puts the above questions to himself and writes the answers to the N.A.M.L. Forum is going to submit one fine letter, one that every reader of these pages will enjoy and derive benefit.

Now for a confession!

The Editor has had in mind writing this message for quite a long time but the trouble is, he didn't.

The jolt that brought forth action was contained in a letter from Otto L. Goldberg, 634½ L St. N. W., Washington, D. C., who says: "Put a little more life into your projection department,—let's have a lot of wiring diagrams on motion picture apparatus or care and adjustment of new mechanisms." Those remarks are just about the truth. Who do you think is to blame? Think it over.

The Editor can write a bunch of technical discussions and draw still more diagrams. In other words, it's easy to make this a one man department.

Interesting Reading

But does that make good interesting reading? Do you want one man to tell you everything? Do you want to listen to the same person advise and criticise all the time?

Not a chance. What you readers are interested in is what the other fellow is doing, what he thinks and how he puts over some original idea.

Now that you all agree, don't sit back and let "George" do it. Write something good, the right sort of material and see if it doesn't go over pretty big when its printed in these pages.

The Editor is going to expect some real results. Let's make it a record that every letter is too good to be thrown away. That's all that is needed—then we'll have to increase the space now devoted to this department.

Benefits and Rewards

While writing along these lines it might be well to call to attention the benefits that are the rewards of the wide awake and progressive man. The projectionist that devotes a part of his time to studying his profession or to be more general, anyone who devotes part time to improving his knowledge of any subject, is bound to advance. Maybe not in the first six months or maybe in no startling degree even in the first six years, but eventually, yes. All of us assume we've still quite a number of years to live. Look forward and plan out a career to reach a goal.

The motion picture business is progressing. Naturally this progress can't be seen from one day to the next. Look back ten years and then imagine the advancement of this industry ten years hence.

Position of Projectionist

The position of the projectionist in this industry is gradually being elevated to a higher plane deserving of greater compensation and respect. Today there are opportunities for positions that should prove an aspiration for many. But, remember this, positions worth having are always in demand and in demand by competent men.

Not only is diligent study and application to one's work the road to financial success, but it also compensates through the pleasure and satisfaction of having knowledge. It lends a real active interest to work.

The Editor is going to derive an immense amount of pleasure from any letters that are written through the instigation of this talk. It will show real interest.

Those Who Read

THOSE who read the accompanying talk "Why Not?" are encouraged to give the many points brought out serious consideration.

This department of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS exists for one purpose only, i.e., to be of service and interest to the projectionist.

Remember these columns are your columns and it's up to you to make the most and best use of them.

If you have any message that you want to carry to the other projectionists, a message that will help or interest them, there is no better medium to express it than through this department.

When you as projectionists send a letter or discussion to this department and it is printed in these columns, bear in mind that thousands of other projectionists read what you have to say. If you have a good idea they will benefit by it.

Just read over the other article on this page and get into action. "Why Not?"

Picture Jumps

A projectionist, A. Allen from Barre, Mass., writes in that he is having trouble with his picture jumping though no great amount of detail is given which might help to locate this trouble in an accurate degree.

There are so many causes for a jump in a picture that the best policy in giving advice in this case would be to outline in a general way the various causes.

All the sprockets on the machine should be perfectly clean and in particular the intermittent sprockets. When dirt or gum accumulate on these parts there is a good chance that a jumpy picture will result.

Where the unsteadiness of the picture is not regular, that is, at no definite interval and the picture moves up with increased speed, it is well to inspect the tension shoes as they may not be set tight enough. However, it is necessary to bear in mind the danger of getting the tension too great while making such an adjustment.

In case the jumping of the picture is at regular intervals, that is to say, four times every time the crank shaft revolves then it may be caused by a bent sprocket shaft, badly worn bushings carrying shaft or intermittent sprocket itself not true.

Badly hooked or under cut sprocket teeth may cause jumping as is the case where old dry film is used, particularly where the sprocket holes are in very poor condition.

Business Outlook of Industry Judged from the Past

By Dan Barton, Barton Organ Co.

It may seem that an organ manufacturer would not have a very definite idea of the conditions among the exhibitors of the country. This is not really true, as it is quite understandable that any business that brings one into close contact with various localities and all grades of theatres would be a fairly good index of business prosperity.

The business of supplying fine organs to moving picture houses gives a pretty accurate index on the general business conditions in the field. It is but human nature to stop spending when business is poor and to expand in good times. Early last year exhibitors were holding back their money; a few had the courage to install organs and these profited accordingly. Their experience was spread and used to induce other theatre owners to see that progress was the order of the day. With the installation of a new organ the whole theatre took on new life.

Working on the most progressive exhibitors and pointing out to them the real necessity for bringing good returns by giving more for the money, business began to pick up and it was particularly good in the late Spring, just before the Summer closing period.

Then we launched our "Stay open all Summer" campaign, suggesting that with good music, good pictures properly exploited, people would keep coming. Naturally we emphasized the good music appeal and sold many Barton Organs in what is usually a dull season.

The Fall busuiness opened with a bang and by September we were working a greatly enlarged factory at Oshkosh nights.

Sawyer and Lubin Lay Cornerstone for New S-L Studios in San Diego

CO-INCIDENT with the release of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" the most important production turned out thus far by Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin of S-L Pictures, for Metro, these two well known producers have achieved a long cherished ambition to build and operate their own studios. The fruit of two years of effort toward this end on the part of Arthur H. Sawyer, Supervising Director of S-L Pictures, was realized on November 20th, through the formal laying of the corner stone of the new S-L Studios at Grossmont Park, San Diego, California. Using a silver trowel, Barbara La Marr, star of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," laid the cornerstone for the first stage of the new studios before an audience of more than twenty thousand people. Incidently, this is the first motion picture studio to be erected in San Diego. The opening exercises were attended by a galexy of motion picture celebrities from Los Angeles and Hollywood. Among those present were Elmo Lincoln, Hank Mann, Allen Ray, Rosemary Theby, Lon Chaney, Louise Fazenda, Clarence G. Badger, Director of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," Walter Hiers and others. Mayor E. W. Porter made the address of welcome to Sawyer and his associates, who responded in turn, as follows:

"The laying of the cornerstone for S-L Studios today mark the initial construction of a series of stages intended to accommodate fourteen producing units. I believe that San Diego is an ideal location for a project of this kind, and the building of these studios will provide motion picture producers with an opportunity to secure completely new atmosphere and exterior locations. It is the intention of Herbert Lubin and myself to produce S-L special pictures here immediately the new studios are completed, and I am sure that other film makers will appreciate the opportunity to secure stage space in a city which has equal advantages with Hollywood in the way of facilities, locations, etc. When completed it is expected that S-L Studios will report an investment of more than one million dollars and it is only through the cooperation and assistance of the various leading business men of San Diego that the laying of this corner stone today has been made possible. Incidentally, all future S-L productions intended for release by Metro Pictures Corporation will be made under the supervision of Arthur H. Sawyer in the Metro West Coast Studios at Hollywood until completion of the plant now being built at Grossmont Park. San Diego, California."

In addition to the speech of Mr. Sawyer, brief speeches were also made by F. M. White, General Manager of the Benson Lumber Company, Colonel Bishop of the Marine Corps. Clarence Badger and Barbara La Marr.

S-L Studios will be erected on a plot of twenty acres at Grossmont Park, and in addition to the fourteen stages will include a large administration building. The stages have been designed and will be built under the personal direction of Edward J. Shulter, well known technical director aud responsible for the technical work in several of Metro's biggest pictures. The new building will include in addition to the group of stages, a paint shop, a carpenter shop, costume room, property house, electrical shop, garage, photographic department and a special film laboratory. Additional space will include rooms for the use of directors, film cutters, accounting and publicity departments and executives offices.

New Holmes Portable Projector recently placed on the market. This machine has many unusual features

Portable Projector has unusual features

A new portable projection manufactured by the Holmes Projector Company, Chicago, Ill., has been placed upon the market. This projector has some very unusual features. There are no belts used in the mechanism, thus eliminating any trouble with stretching or slipping. This portable projector is shaft-driven on both the mechanism and take-up and is equipped with independent motor driven rewind. All the film is enclosed in metal and the opening in front has been eliminated. The projector has been so constructed that the motor, lamp and lens can be changed instantly to meet the varying conditions. It is claimed that the Holmes portable projector is a professional machine in all respects which has been reduced to portable size. The machine as a whole presents a very neat and attractive appearance.

The Howell Cine Equipment Co. has the distribution of these machine for New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, also all foreign rights.

"My American Wife"

Paramount—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

GLORIA SWANSON has an Argentine setting as the background of her newest offering—an adventure story carrying a familiar intrigue and seasoned with romance. While it is melodrama it is not so improbable as some of her recent releases. Since the locale is South America, or rather the Paris of the western hemisphere, the spectator may anticipate the hot Latin temperament as involved in much of the action.

The heroine is a Kentucky girl who enters her champion race horse in the big race and wins. This of course starts the melodrama on its way and, before Finis is written one sees the customary duel, the nursing back to health of the hero and the culmination of the romance. The fair Kentuckian's horse noses out the hero's in the Latin Derby. Before the day is over the hotblooded youth is challenged to a duel by a hated rival. But the latter isn't sure of his aim so he hires a gunman who shoots from ambush and the shot severely wounds the gallant horseman. This is the point to build up the romance. The girl goes to his hacienda and nurses him back to health, which causes a deal of misunderstanding on the part of his mother, who orders her from the house.

The climax reveals the expected revenge. The girl bribes the gunman to make a public confession. So she is able to expose the treacherous rival as a figure of little consequence. The story is extremely old-fashioned—one of those stories made to order. The steady screengoer can anticipate every scene. And there is very little suspense to add to its highlights. The chief appeal is in the atmosphere which comprises some effective race-track shots and a flower festival.

The star has occasion to flash her individuality in matter of dress and manages to be fairly convincing at times. Antonio Moreno is a spirited Latin hero and others who render capable assistance include Josef Swickard, Edythe Chapman, Geno Corrado, and Walter Long. The latter has a small part and comes very near to stealing the picture.

The Cast

Natalie Chester.....Gloria Swanson
Manuel La Tassa.....Antonio Moreno
Don Fernando De Contas.....Josef Swickard
Carlos De Grossa.....Eric Mayne
Pedro De Grossa.....Geno Corrado
Donna Isabella La Tassa.....Edythe Chapman
Hortensia De Varela.....Eileen Pringle

Gaston Navarre.....Jacques D'Auray
Danny O'Hara.....Loyal Underwood
Maid.....Mary Land

By Hector Turnbull. Scenario by Monte Katterjohn. Directed by Sam Wood. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Kentucky girl finds herself in Buenos Ayres where she enters her thoroughbred race-horse in a big race. The horse carries off the honors. The girl is insulted by a native son which precipiates a duel between him and the son of his father's political opponent. The father employs a gunman to shoot from ambush and the hot-blooded Latin is wounded. Eventually she bribes the gunman to confess publicly and is able to expose the treachery of the opponent of the man she loves.

Production Highlights—The scenes at the Buenos Ayres race track and during the flower festival. The backgrounds and atmosphere. The capable work o fa well balanced cast.

Exploitation Angles—The title might come in for some special exploitation through a teaser campaign. Would advise playing up racing atmosphere and exploiting the star and her bizarre gowns.

Drawing Power—Best suited for high class audiences. Followers of star will like her here.

"Kindled Courage"

Universal—4418 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WE'LL chalk up another good mark opposite Ed (Hoot) Gibson who has in "Kindled Courage," a neat little western. True its general idea is old, but it travels along with such colorful action and incident that one never thinks of the obvious note. The theme is none other than our young hero who finds his courage when he falls in love. The hero is disguised this time as a Western coward—a young fellow who takes a lot of insults before it dawns upon him to fight in return.

There is some snappy comedy presented in the scene when Hoot accidentally appears as the lucky winner of a snug fortune for capturing two bank robbers. He has left town via the top of a freight car—to avoid contact with the town bully. As he climbs into the empty car he discovers that he has two desperadoes for company. But he miraculously escapes their bullets. The train is flagged and Ed is congratulated by the sheriff who pins a deputy's badge upon him, besides giving him the money. His next contract calls for the capture, dead or alive, of Overland Pete and his gang.

Where is the romance? Well, a girl appears at the sheriff's office asking aid to find her brother. She doesn't know that he is a member of Pete's gang. So the officer orders the hero to accompany her and locate the brother. They arrive at a haunted house and some more neat comedy is furnished when Pete and his thugs put in an appearance. The hero pins his medal on the front of his coat and gives himself away. Later he learns that Pete is the man he is after. It is short work before he has them captured—although most of this action is depicted in the dark with flashing guns speaking their well known language. The brother is mortally injured upstairs and the girl has some effective moments with him.

The concluding scenes find the deputy bringing in the desperadoes who are piled up up for dead in the tonneau of the car. Then the youth gets his reward, hops into the flivver with the girl, and journeys back to punish the bully who started him on the road to courage and wealth. And thus to the final fade-out. The idea is familiar but it has been treated with plenty of human interest, pep and humor. The Gibson crowd will enpoy it.

The Cast

Andy Walker.....Hoot Gibson
Betty Paxton.....Beatrice Burnham
Hugh Paxton.....Harold Goodwin
Sid Garrett.....Harry Tenbrook
Sheriff Naylor.....James Gordon Russell
Town Marshal.....J. Russell Powell
Overland Pete.....Albert Hart

By Leet Renick Brown. Scenario by Raymond L. Schrock. Directed by William Worthington. Photographed by Virgil Miller.

The Story—Western youth is frightened out of town by bully. Hops a freight car and unwittingly captures a pair of desperate bandits. Is made a deputy by sheriff in neighboring town and starts out to capture a vicious band of criminals. Takes girl along for company. Is successful in his mission. Gets rich and courageous.

Classification—Western melodrama involving thrills, gun-play and humor.

Production Highlights—The theme which will appeal most everywhere. The scene in the box car. The scenes in the haunted house. The capture of the bandits. The punishment of the bully. The humor.

Exploitation Angles—Gibson is getting some good pictures. Play up this fact. Tell them that this is a neat little western. Put up "reward" notices to stimulate patronage.

Drawing Power—Will be enjoyed by any community catering to westerns.

"The World's Applause"

Paramount—6528 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS production is released at an opportune time. It is excellent propaganda for the industry. It seeks to show that the public is ever ready to condemn anyone whose name is linked in any way with scandal, no matter whether that person be perfectly innocent. Some of the subtitles in which this condition is set forth will undoubtedly make some of these women's club members do a little thinking.

As a film entertainment, "The World's Applause," is just what present-day moviegoers want. It is a story that answers the demand for a bit of spice. It is a story that holds the interest at all times. It is told by a cast of well known players. The presence of that talented actor, Lewis Stone, adds much to its value as a box office production.

The gowns that Bebe wears will startle. They are decidedly original and at all times gorgeous. The star, by the way, has never looked more attractive than in this film. In the hands of a competent director such as William De Mille, Miss Daniels shows that she can really act. Kathlyn Williams' work is one of the features of the picture. This veteran actress gives a particularly realistic and convincing bit of characterization in the role of the wife who is thrown aside by her husband when he becomes infatuated with the actress. In her scenes with Adolph Menjou, Miss Williams rises to new emotional heights.

The opening of the picture shows a theatre interior and ovation given Corinne d'Alys. This opening gives De Mille opportunity to go the limit on lavish scenic investiture and Bebe a chance to startle with gowns—that may get by the censors.

The production has a goodly quota of dramatic situations. It should find a welcome place on any program.

The Cast

Corinne d'Alys.....Bebe Daniels
John Elliot.....Lewis Stone
Elsa Townsend.....Kathlyn Williams
Robert Townsend.....Adolphe Menjou
James Crane.....Brandon Hurst
Maid to Corinne.....Bernice Frank
Secretary to Corinne.....Mayme Kelso
Valet to Townsend.....George Kuwa
Valet to Elliot.....James Neill

By Clara Beranger. Directed by William De Mille. Scenario by Clara Beranger. Photographed by Al Guy Wilky.

The Story—Deals with the widespread passion for publicity that animates certain folk in public life and of the evil consequences that befall when scandal comes. Corinne's passion for publicity involves her in great trouble, but she is saved through the self-sacrifice and heroism of the man whose love she had scorned.

Classification—A highly dramatic story dealing with consequences of an actress's passion for getting her name before the public.

Production Highlights—The presence of Lewis Stone in support of Bebe Daniels. The stabbing to death of the husband by the wife crazed with jealousy. The discovery of the body and the scenes attending the investigation. Kathlyn Williams' convincing portrayal of the wife. The value of the picture as propaganda against the present inclination on the part of the public to condemn everyone in the motion picture industry.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone. Tell them about the striking as well as gorgeous gowns worn by the star. Tell the women this one will appeal to them especially. Don't forget William De Mille's name in your ads.

Drawing Power—This is just the type of picture that the fans want. Give it to them. It should hold up well at the box office.

"All the Brothers Were Valiant"

Metro—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

HERE'S a red-blooded story from the pen of Ben Ames Williams that should be enthusiastically received by the great motion picture going public. It is a Jack London type of tale, bubbling over with adventure on the high seas. Some folks like stars. Some like stories. This picture will please both. It has stars and a story. Lon Chaney's presence in any production usually carries it to success. Lon is in this one and as Captain Mark Shore gives another of his inimitable character impersonations. Malcolm McGregor adds another laurel to his histrionic wreath through his work as the brother who assumes the role of a young whaling skipper and whose temper is tried by many stirring happenings after he takes command of the ship which his brother deserted. Billie Dove as Priscilla Holt, the bride, adds personal charm throughout. Robert McKim, of course, is convincing in the heavy role. The rest of the cast is adequate.

One of the most interesting features of this extraordinary picture is the introduction of a whale hunt. Get this straight. It is the real thing. There are real whales. Harpoons are fired into the mammoth bodies of these monsters of the deep and at one point we see a man jump from the boat onto the back of one of them and send a long spear home. We are given a number of shots of the whales. Jaded fans will sit up when these scenes are shot on the screen. They'll also edge toward the end of the seats during the mutiny of the whaling crew and ensuing fistic battles. These fights remind one of the scenes in "The Spoilers," of other days.

All praise to Irving V. Willat for his admirable direction. The picture has been given a realistic setting. Everything is natural here. There is little use of sets. The photography is one of the highlights of this offering. There being some especially fine shots during the whale hunt. Julian Josephson has adapted the story for screen use in excellent manner. "All the Brothers Were Valiant," should find a welcome reception in these days of a flood of society drama. It's different. There lies its value to the exhibitor.

The Cast

Priscilla Holt	Billie Dove
Mark Shore	Lon Chaney
Joel Shore	Malcolm McGregor
Aaron Burnham	William Orlamond
Finch	Robert McKim
Cook	William H. Mong
Varde	Bob Kortman
Morrell	Otto Brower
Hooper	Kurt Rehfeld
The Brown Girl	Shannon Day

By Ben Ames Williams. Directed by Irvin V. Willat. Scenario by Julian Josephenson. Photographed by Robert J. Kurrle.

The Story—Mark Shore, captain of a whaling ship fails to return to port with his vessel. His brother Joel is given command. He starts on the long cruise with his bride. He is determined to find his brother. Arriving off the point in the South Seas where Mark disappeared, the crew is surprised to see Mark rowing toward the ship. Once aboard he starts a mutiny among the crew by telling them of a rich treasure of pearls which he has left behind. Captain Joel refuses to turn the ship from its course to get them. A series of battles then ensues ending with the triumph of Joel.

Classification—A highly exciting tale of the sea, introducing shots of a real whale hunt.

Production Highlights—The whale hunt, realistic in all its details. The work of the very fine cast. The thrilling fistic encounters aboard ship. Irvin Willat's direction. Some exquisite photography. The realistic mounting given the production.

Exploitation—Decorate your lobby to look like the front of a fisherman's cottage, nets, row boat, oars, etc. Tell them about the whale hunt. It's a real one. Play up the "names" in the cast, especially Chaney.

Drawing Power—Suitable for presentation in any first class house at any time. This one has the power to entertain.

Scene from "Chop Suey," Christie-Educational comedy with Dorothy Devore.

"The Firebrand"

Phil Goldstone—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS western introduces Franklyn Farnum in the role of a nester, so naturally it has to do with a conflict over land. The star has opportunities to indulge in heroics and gets away with them, although the plot also furnishes some comedy which is presented at opportune times to balance the action. "The Firebrand" is a peppy western which moves along at creditable speed, maintaining the interest not so much through the plot which is rather old, but through several original twists which are revealed occasionally.

The nester holds his small tract of land in spite of severe opposition which forces him to vacate his homestead. Cattle rustling also figures in the melodramatic scheme and the hero helps the sheriff by capturing the gang and forcing them down a deep well for safe keeping until the minion of the law makes his appearance. There is plenty of conflict with a neighboring rancher who is unsuccessful in his attempts to make the nester leave. The latter gets even by informing the old man that his daughter has been married to him for a year.

The direction is excellent. The scenes furnish plenty of adventure and a good share of suspense. Take notice of the charging of the barbed wire with electricity. This is one of the original twists. Another depicts the episode of the well. The picture is also well taken care of in its production values. Beautiful backgrounds greet the eye and the atmosphere is always suggestive.

The action never sags, but on the contrary carries a kick in nearly every scene. There is some expert horsemanship displayed by the boys, while Fred Gamble as the elderly rancher shows that he is competent in playing comedy scenes. We would call "The Firebrand" a snappy western—one which will compare with the best of program releases.

The Cast

Bill Holt	Franklyn Farnum
Alice Acker	Ruth Langdon
Judd Acker	Fred Gamble
Hank Potter	Pat Harmon
Sheriff Harding	William Lester
Buck Knowles	Tex Keith

Directed by Alfred J. Neitz.

The Story—Nester has considerable opposition in holding his small tract of land. Overcomes his obstacles in this direction and helps the sheriff in rounding up a band of cattle rustlers.. A neighboring rancher is determined to make him vacate his property, but hero gets even by informing the man that his daughter had been his wife for a year.

Classification—Western melodrama, featuring conflict over land and cattle rustling.

Production Highlights—The several new twists. The conflict over land. The capture of the rustlers and their imprisonment in the well. The comedy scenes. The good riding. The backgrounds.

Exploitation Angles—Play this up as a snappy western which releases good action, plenty of suspense and a nifty vein of humor. If the star has a following use his name.

Drawing Power—Will be liked wherever westerns are popular. Good for any house featuring daily change of program.

"Solomon in Society"

American Releasing—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE big vital heart tug is missing in this story so it fails in becoming another "Humoresque," even though it is peopled with human characters from New York's East Side. The author has written a conventional tale—one which becomes quite commonplace before its conclusion is reached. The theme introduces the sudden wealth—does-not-bring happiness formula, and one accustomed to seeing this tale will anticipate its obvious development. You feel that those involved must appreciate true human values—must discover a sense of proportion—must keep from letting success go to their heads—and it works out accordingly.

The title character is a poor dress designer whose dream is that some day he will have his own Fifth avenue shop and a palace in which to live. But his dream is too fantastic to appear real. He climbs up into society's lap by doing a good deed every day. One of these deeds involves a poor laundry worker who begs the dressmaker to give her a decent costume before she applies for another job. Luck follows her for she stumbles into a picture company "on location" and soon after emerges as a star. A buyer notices her fashionable frock and, making inquiries, discovers that it came from Solomon's shop.

Then his star is on the ascendant. The characters are properly paired off. For the laundress there is a struggling lawyer who rises to success through the kindly offices of a magistrate. For the sake of adding a dramatic touch Solomon's wife is much impressed with a temperamental pianist. Thus you have your triangle. A divorce is on the calendar but when it is brought forward for a hearing the impressionable spouse decides that she loves her Izzie the best. The pianist gets his just deserts.

The early scenes in the shop are quite lifelike. Here is the picture's appeal. But because it doesn't generate the vital heart note it is doubtful whether it will even be compared to "Humoresque." Too much emphasis has been placed upon the society scenes, which makes us wonder why it wasn't treated more humorously. It contains possibilities in this direction, seeing as how the leading character is an Abe Potash type. The supporting cast gives fair support to William H. Strauss in the title role. Less obvious treatment and more humor and heart touches would have made this a better than average offering. The staging is adequate.

The Cast

I. Solomon	Wm. H. Strauss
Rosie Solomon	Brenda Moore
Mary Bell	Nancy Deaver
Frank Wilson	Charles Delaney
Orlando Kolin	Fred T. Jones
Mrs. Levy	Lillian Herlein
The Butler	Charles Brooks

By Val Cleveland. Directed by Lawrence C. Windom. Photographed by Edward Paul.

The Story—Treats of the rise of a Jewish family. Poor dress designer has ambitions to own store on Fifth Avenue. He helps a girl in distress and she helps him when she achieves fame. The wife, however, cannot stand prosperity and loses her head over temperamental pianist. Eventually she learns that her love is bound up with her husband.

Classification—Drama based upon climbing-into-society formula—with characters from East Side of New York. Triangle situation is involved in plot as well as juvenile love interest.

Production Highlights—The good acting furnished by Wm. H. Strauss. The good atmosphere and background. The scenes in the shop and environment of the dressmaker during his residence on East Side.

Exploitation Angles—Would emphasize fact that this is a slice of New York life as it is represented on East Side. Play up fact that sudden wealth doesn't always bring happiness.

Drawing Power—Should appeal in certain communities. Best suited for neighborhood houses.

"The Strangers' Banquet"

Neilan-Goldwyn—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is a different Marshall Neilon who sponsors "The Strangers' Banquet." The Marshall Neilan responsible for "Go and Get It," "Dinty," "Bits of Life" and "Minnie," and seems to have lost himself in a highly complicated story which carries so many characters that as they pass a given point they resemble a parade. There is enough material to make another "Bits of Life," which, as you remember, comprised four separate stories carried along on the same continuous film. He should have followed a similar plan here, for what is revealed will tax anyone to follow it so completely involved is the plot.

In his attempt to weave this material together such virtues as consistency, plausibility and coherency are sacrificed. One simply cannot keep track of the endless procession of characters. There is nothing the matter with Neilan's sincerity or his grasp upon what constitutes effective scenes. He can get the most out of any situation. Here he has assembled one of the greatest casts which ever graced a picture. Such well known leading lights of the silent drama as Claude Gillingwater, Tom Guise, Stuart Holmes, Hobart Bosworth, Lillian Langdon, Philo McCullough, Jean Herscholt, Brinsley Shaw, Eugenie Besserer, Ford Sterling and many others equally famous make very brief appearances. It seems as if he has been unduly prodigal with his casting considering the small parts many of them play.

The story wanders off on a tangent jumping from one scene to another with such rapidity that the spectator is overwhelmed with the array of characters and events. The main theme depicts the age-old conflict of capital versus labor—which means that considerable talk must be involved with the movement of the characters. And this means that the picture is cluttered up with titles, many of which are unduly descriptive and flowery. The picture starts off showing a tremendous shot of a church wedding which is interrupted in dramatic fashion. The bridegroom runs away and becomes an anarchist. And until he is mortally wounded the spectator is in for considerable hodge podge of action and incident—conflict and what not.

Neilan's well known sense of humor is completely submerged. The story doesn't explain anything which hasn't been explained before. Of course the anarchists lose out in the end. Why? Because a charming girl has enough confidence in the arch conspirator to make a play upon his better nature. Some of the individual scenes carry a great deal of interest, being well executed. There's a moral, but you lose sight of it in view of the involved story and the small army of characters.

The Cast

Shane Keogh	Hobart Bosworth
Derith Keough	Claire Windsor
Angus Campbell	Rockcliffe Fellows
Al Norton	Ford Sterling
Jean McPherson	Eleanor Boardman
John Trevelyan	Thomas Holding
Mrs. McPherson	Eugenie Besserer
John Keogh	Nigel Barrie
Prince	Stuart Holmes
Uncle Sam	Claude Gillingwater
Bride	Margaret Loomis

Other characters played by Tom Guise, Lillian Langdon, William Humphrey, Edward McWade, Lorimer Johnson, James Marcus, Edw. Borman, Jack Curtis, Brinsley Shaw, Arthur Hoyt, Aileen Pringle, Virginia Ruggles, Cyril Chadwick, Philo McCullough, Jean Herscholt, Lucille Ricksen, Dagmar Godowsky, Hayford Hobbs and Violet Joy.

By Donn Byrne. Directed by Marshall Neilan and Frank Urson. Distributed by Goldwyn.

Classification—Capital versus labor formula involving melodrama, mystery, romance and intrigue.

Production Highlights—The competent acting by large and well known cast. The church scene; the scenes at shipyard.

Exploitation Angles—Theme might be exploited in several communities where labor versus capital is the main topic of conversation. Would advise playing up all-star cast.

Drawing Power—Neilan's name and mention of cast will draw them.

Lloyd Hamilton as he appears in a scene in "No Luck," Educational comedy.

"The Power of a Lie"

Universal—4910 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A HUMAN little document is this Universal release based upon a story by Johan Bojer—showing as it does the consequences derived from indulging in a base lie. While this theme has been worked out before it has been treated so differently as to appear quite novel. The lie itself seems rather trivial on the surface—something of a white lie—and revolves around a man who attempts to shield his own reputation so as to appear virtuous before his wife.

He has attended a wild orgy and is fearful of the consequences. He signs a note for a friend with a shady reputation. The latter has reformed and is engaged to the former's sister. Unfortunately he is the victim of a surprise party from his cronies on the night the man comes to his house to sign the paper. And to save himself he denies that he has been at the party and claims further that the signature is a forgery.

The plot is well developed and releases some realistic touches. What takes place could reasonably happen. The friend is put on trial for forgery and convicted before the husband can muster enough courage to admit the truth. The characters seem real, especially the husband who commands a deal of sympathy even though his "tight jam" is an unsympathetic one. It is a story which has been treated in a dignified manner by the director—who has not executed his scenes in a broad manner but in a way which appeals to the intelligence of his audience.

The plot always holds the interest because there are very few obvious features discernible. The outstanding highlights include the apartment orgy and the trial. David Torrence is the husband and makes the figure entirely convincing, while Earl Metcalfe as the injured friend is always in character. Mabel Julienne Scott is the youth's fiancee and gives a pleasing performance. Maude George plays the disagreeable wife with a good understanding of its psychology. "The Power of a Lie" should be accepted as one of the better program offerings.

The Cast

John Hammond	David Torrence
Joan Hammond	Maud George
Betty Hammond	Mabel Julienne Scott
Mrs. Hammond	Ruby Lafayette
Richard Burton	Earl Metcalfe
Lillie Cardington	June Elvidge
Jeremiah Smith	Phillip Smalley
Mr. Lawrence	Stanron Heck

By Johan Bojer. Scenario by Charles Kenyon. Directed by George Archainbaud. Photographed by Charles Stumar. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Treats of a husband who, to shield his own reputation, indulges in a lie which convicts a friend of forgery. At the trial the husband summons his courage and admits the truth. He had told the lie to save himself in the eyes of his wife.

Classification—Domestic drama based upon the power of fabrication and its evil consequences.

Production Highlights—The intelligent treatment of plot. The orgy and the trial. The good acting of David Torrence, Maude George and Earl Metcalfe. The human interest and the realistic direction.

Exploitation Angles—Title can be linked up in a snappy teaser campaign, co-operating with merchants, etc.

"Catch My Smoke"

Fox—4070 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

TOM MIX AND TONY are back. Which means that picturegoers fortunate enough to see "Catch My Smoke" will take nearly as much delight in it as in earlier releases, "Just Tony." It's a picture of ranch life revealing a full quota of thrills which center around Mix and his superb horsemanship. He is a returned buddy who discovers his ranch occupied by a pretty girl—her explanation being that since her father's death she has become sole owner.

The soldier suspects some crooked work. Why not, since he also discovers his noble steed has been mistreated during his absence in France? So any screengoer who knows his westerns will anticipate that a vicious foreman is putting over the villainy. Oh, yes, there is some cattle rustling and also some typical stuff having to do with forcing the girl to sell the ranch because oil has been discovered on it.

The cowboy masquerades under an assumed name, is shot from ambush and after he is recovered, starts in pursuit of the kidnapped girl. Then the thrilling climax arrives when the hero beats his enemies single-handed. The romantic appeal is deftly handled so that it seems a part of the story and not added to provide a balancing note. However, the big highlights are the thrills as furnished by the star and his justly famous horse. There is pep in every scene and a good deal of danger. Watch for the sensational bridge scene and a runaway. Watch for the opening shot when Tony gallops madly to meet the train which brings his master home.

The backgrounds are thoroughly picturesque and charged with proper atmosphere. A few of the scenes are familiar, particularly the kidnapping of the heroine and the pursuit, but they have all been well handled so that action and suspense are entirely dominant. It is one of Tom Mix's best bets, and this is saying a good deal. The star will have to share honors with his horse. Lillian Rich is appealing as the girl, while Claude Peyton makes an 'ornery villain.

The Cast

Bob Stratton	Tom Mix
Mary Thorne	Lillian Rich
Tex Lynch	Claude Peyton
Bud Jessup	Gordon Griffith
Paul Draper	Harry Griffith
Frank Hurd	Bob Milash
Joe Bloss	Pat Chrisman
Sheriff	Cap Anderson
Mrs. Archer	Ruby LaFayette

By Joseph P. Ames. Scenario by Jack Strumwasser. Directed by William Beaudine. Photographed by Dan Clark. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Cowboy soldier returns from war to find his horse mistreated and his ranch in possession of a pretty girl. He suspects something is wrong. The foreman is responsible for the villainy and is determined to get rid of the girl because the ranch has proven valuable through the discovery of oil. The hero masquerades under an assumed name and restores order. He is compelled to rescue the kidnapped girl and beat the enemies single-handed.

Classification—Melodramatic western based upon cattle rustling and other familiar ingredients. Plenty of pep and ginger in thrills.

Production Highlights—The bridge scene. The meeting of horse and master. The runaway. The atmosphere. The thrills. The action and suspense.

Exploitation Angles—Play this up as a fitting successor to "Just Tony." Emphasize that it is one of the liveliest westerns of the season. Feature the star and his gifted horse.

Drawing Power—Will draw well anywhere, especially with those who delight in westerns of action and thrills.

The Big Reason:

In 1922 the trade purchased advertising with the sole idea of obtaining the greatest results at the smallest cost. And that's the big reason why Motion Picture News carried 736 more pages of paid advertising than Moving Picture World.

1020 more pages of paid advertising than Exhibitor's Herald.

1275 more pages than Exhibitor's Trade Review.

A Happy Medium

"THAT'S too hard; I don't like it," said a big producer on seeing a sample print at THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES. "That's too soft; I don't like that either. Can't you strike a happy medium?" he asked, upon seeing a print of another production. "If we were doing your laboratory work we could give you a happy medium or even something more extreme; any kind of a print you wanted," we answered.

THIS producer unknowingly had brought up one of the chief factors in the superiority of STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES camera-to-screen service. Many directors depend upon the laboratory to help create the atmosphere of their story. Tastes differ. Some like a "soft" print. Others prefer scenes that are sharp and clear. We give them what they want. Our service adds to, rather than detracting from the artistic effect for which all producers are striving.

FACTS—

About

"The Covered Wagon"

About

3,000 actors spent three months on location, eighty miles from a railroad.

Nine states were searched for locations.

1,000 Indians were brought from reservations hundreds of miles away, with their horses, tepees, and complete equipment.

Eight truckloads of supplies a day had to be taken over the rough desert roads.

Three hundred wagons were built. 40,000 square feet of canvas used to cover them.

100 oxen broken to the yoke.

3,000 costumes of the period made.

Water backed up three miles for river scene; dam broke and flooded camp, tearing down tents.

500 horses brought from Oregon for buffalo hunt scenes, which required particularly strong animals. 500 ordinary horses also used.

500 buffaloes used in the hunt; the only large herd in existence.

Nine square miles of territory burned up for prairie fire scene.

Seventy trees felled and transported eighty miles for building of ferries.

Sixty wagons hauled material daily for six weeks to build replica of Fort Bridger.

Mile-wide river forded by 300 wagons; men and animals had to swim; this was really dangerous, as bottom was quicksand.

Every department of studio represented on location: wardrobe, property, scenario, publicity, film laboratory, construction, bookkeeping, auditing, stenographic and doctor's office.

Electric light plant built and light supplied to all tents.

Complete commissary department employing several hundred fed the crowds. Mess tent held 1,000 at a time.

These facts give you some idea of the BYRON MORGAN'S first story for a woman star. This one will be as big as Morgan's Wallace Reid stories.

An automobile story, full of thrills and real love interest, with the greatest race scene ever staged, culminating in a terrific smash-up, with Agnes Ayres driving the winning car.

Theodore Roberts and Richard Dix are featured in support, and Robert Cain plays the heavy.

This one is a novelty and is bound to be a sensation.

"THE THIRD ALARM"

(Film Booking Offices)

"The Third Alarm," a picture which undoubtedly will go down in film history as containing the greatest fire scenes ever staged for the camera—The climax of this picture should pull every mothers' son and daughter too, right out of their seats—It is the most exciting ending to a picture that we have seen in many, many moons —There is an apartment burned to the ground right before your eyes—Motor driven apparatus flying wild through the street—Firemen fight against terrible odds —brilliant and daring rescue—walls of building crumble—Thrilling dash of fireman on the back of a horse through the huge blazing arch-way—all very colorful, true to life—material which contains the stuff with which box-office records are cracked—"The Third Alarm" has wonderful exploitation possibilities.

New York Evening Journal

"The Third Alarm" lifts you right out of your seat —you have an almost irresistible impulse to cheer— brilliant example of how surpassingly fine screen melodrama can be made—See this picture—The finished quality of Mr. Lewis's acting does much to make the picture successful—In its freedom from tearful closeups it plays honestly with the audience, depending upon art, and not hukum for its effect—One of the biggest pictures Broadway has seen in many years.

New York American

P. A. Powers presented "The Third Alarm" at the Astor Theatre, January 8th, whose thrills equals, if it doesn't exceed anything Broadway has ever seen in its history—it has a reality that cannot fail to quicken the pulse of even the most blasé motion picture fan— Emory Johnson has directed the picture splendidly.

Entertainment value.....Excellent
Appeal .....Everywhere

Thrills, heart interest, practically universal appeal, and tremendous exploitation possibilities. If these factors make a successful picture, then "The Third Alarm" is. It's melodrama with a wallop.—Punches come so fast and forcefully that for audience appeal makes patrons come back for more—The picture is well nigh in a class by itself—It should be one of the biggest clean-ups of the year—The picture has a smashing climax, spectacular effects—No situations or human touches have been overlooked in giving the picture powerful appeal—This, coupled with the wealth of exploitation material offered, make the picture a winner of the kind showmen have been waiting for.—Show this picture to your local fire department, and take advantage of the many exploitation helps furnished, and you will have little difficulty in mopping up with this picture.

AT THE ASTOR THEATRE

THEY SAY:

New York American—January 10th

The title of the picture as well as the preliminary unreeling of the plot has prepared every one who enters the Astor to expect some thrilling fire scenes as a climax to the evening, and this expectation is more than fulfilled—" The Third Alarm " for sheer thrills probably surpasses anything that Broadway has seen since the ride of the Klansmen in " The Birth of a Nation." —Emory Johnson has handled the direction splendidly throughout.

New York Globe—January 10th

" The Third Alarm " now running at the Astor Theatre stages a fire that should win the respect of even the most indifferent. This comes as the grand finale and rages for fifteen minutes—stirring conclusion—full of action—a tribute to our Fire Department.

Exhibitors Trade Review

" The Third Alarm " has whirling action and stark realism—It registers as a unique attraction destined to win wide-spread popularity—That the photography is immense goes without saying—The picture fairly throbs with spectacular views—The person who does not respond to the thrills of " The Third Alarm " with real-life sensations must be a hopelessly " hard shelled " proposition—The feature ought to prove a big money maker—It possesses all the kinds of stuff which " gets across " to the masses and is a credit to all concerned in its production and presentation.

" THE THIRD ALARM "
By special reviewer

Go see " The Third Alarm " and you will both laugh and weep—it is truly a thriller replete with heart-throbs and excitement.

New York Evening Mail

Those who like heart throbs will get them to their heart's content at the Astor Theatre when they see " The Third Alarm."

New York Tribune

All of the people went out at the end of the show with tears on their cheeks and gladness in their hearts.

Moving Picture World

Will appeal to all who love the big thrilling scenes, backed by a wealth of sentiment.

Big appeal lies in the human interest that surrounds the fire department as well as big spectacular fire scenes.

New York Times—January 10th

Pathos—Comedy—Virtue—and thrills.

Illustrated News—January 11th

Fire bugs will answer the call of " The Third Alarm." If you are one of those who will rush away from a meal to see the fire engines go by (and we are) you will probably wish to drop in at the Astor and see " The Third Alarm "—distinctly worth while—fire scenes are beautifully colored and thoroughly thrilling—it is all quite realistic—we see an apartment house swept by flames—fire apparatus dashing to the place at night—firemen trapped—fighting desperately—burning hose—crumbling walls—when it was all over we felt like calling up our house to make sure it was still there—smashing three alarm fire.

A PROFITABLE CONNECTION

THE TEST of a producing and distributing organization is its ability to supply good consistent motion pictures continuously.

There is nothing more important to the exhibitor than a permanent source of supply of good motion pictures.

It is no less important for the producer to have a permanent outlet in every town and neighborhood in the country.

When Ben Schulberg, Jack Bachmann and myself organized this business, we determined to build an organization that would soon be recognized for its Quality and Dependability.

Our producing organization consists of a staff of picture creators, whose sincerity of purpose, loyalty, ability and efficiency will assure exhibitors a steady flow of profitable motion pictures.

There is no guess work or waste in our Studios. We try to make every dollar look like two on the screen.

In distribution, we have allied ourselves with the foremost independent exchanges in the United States. They know your problems and are in business to serve you.

We offer our first eight now. Seven of them are finished. They are all good—some are great! Each is sold at a price proportionate to its value.

We are doing big things, and will do bigger things, with the exhibitors' support.

Exhibitors know we stand squarely in back of every contract. They will always make money with us.

The Towers of Notre Dame.

Now under construction at Universal City for the stupendous Universal Super-Jewel production of Victor Hugo's masterpiece, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," to be presented by Carl Laemmle.

I did not write a word of this

Carl Laemmle

WHEN a photoplay can run to eight reels without a break in interest, it is a great picture. And "The Flirt" deserves to take its place with the best photoplays produced in 1922.

ADAPTED to the screen, "The Flirt" retains its values—its charm—its human appeal, and all of its lifelike incidents.

"THE FLIRT" on the screen is as good as the story. It is, without doubt, one of the best program offerings ever put out.

IN this carefully wrought picture of American life there is much food for thought and one of the most comprehensive character studies the screen has given.

THERE is an abundance of heart throbs and real humor in this Universal Jewel production. Under the expert direction of Hobart Henley, it is one of the most intensely human stories ever presented on the screen.

KEEPING interest at a white heat, as skillful direction as was ever given a screen production is manifested here. All through it one is making tears of laughter or wiping eyes wet with deeper emotion.

IT must be said for "The Flirt" that it has everything in it that a movie ought to have, and that's a strong statement coming in these days of thrills.

YOU'LL like "The Flirt" because it is human.

IN case we do not manage to convey to you how good it is, we suggest you go to see it on our say so.

THE Universal company has been producing pictures for more than a decade, but "The Flirt" is the best it has ever made.

A Very Definite Appeal to a Big Majority of Picture Goers

"THE NINETY AND NINE"
Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ..... David Smith
AUTHOR ..... Ramsaye Morris
SCENARIO ..... G. Graham Baker
CAMERAMAN ..... Steve Smith, Jr.
AS A WHOLE.....Fine money-making possibilities in this one for a big majority of exhibitors
STORY.....Contains elements of appeal that make it a good general audience picture that will prove sure-fire for "fan" crowd
DIRECTION.....Very good for a picture of this kind; sequences too long drawn out occasionally; climax a genuine thrill
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... First rate
LIGHTINGS ..... All right
PLAYERS.....Warner Baxter and Colleen Moore both do splendid work in this with Lloyd Whitlock, Gertrude Astor, Robert Dudley and others giving capable support
EXTERIORS ..... Suitable rural locations
INTERIORS ..... Good
DETAIL ..... Ample
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Fugitive, seeking forgetfulness in drink, is saved by little country girl and eventually has his name cleared
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..... 6,800 feet

For the biggest majority of picture-goers in this country, the city patronage in particular, "The Ninety and Nine" will undoubtedly prove an especially strong attraction and sufficiently popular to make it a definite box office offering for those exhibitors who make up the largest part of the entire number of picture exhibiting theaters, catering to people who seek action and thrills for their entertainment in preference to originality of story or artistry of production.

And as an entertainment of its kind, "The Ninety and Nine" is thoroughly capable of satisfying the many who want their diversion supplied in quantities of thrills. Besides this element of appeal Ramsaye Morris' story, adapted from the play, contains other angles that make it an attractive audience picture. It includes the ever popular regeneration theme in which a fugitive from justice, trying to drown out the past in drink, is urged to "go straight" by the little girl who sticks by him even when her father falsely accuses her and turns her out of his house. This sequence, especially, is very well handled by Colleen Moore and Warner Baxter, who have the principal roles. Director Smith has directed it well also except that he uses too much footage and draws it out longer than he should to obtain the best effect.

The development is smooth and the interest very well sustained. Coincidence is the most prominent means of development, but it probably won't annoy those to whom the picture will appeal and for whom it is evidently intended. Prohibition has been ignored for purposes of the plot, and hero drinks freely at an honest-to goodness bar.

The very best feature of this production is the splendid climax which Smith has provided. The forest fire has been staged with unusual realism and offers a genuinely spectacular thrill. It has been excellently photographed, and no doubt will set a good many wondering how it was done. The train flying through the forest with the flames jumping at it from both sides is indeed fine.

Story: Tom Silverton, a fugitive, hides in Marlow, where a little girl of the town, Ruth Blake, urges him to give up drink, and her interest in him finally causes her father to send her from the house. Leveridge, owner of the railroad who, with his fiancee Miss Van Dyck, is stopping with the Blakes, secures the cooperation of a half-wit admirer of Ruth's to frame a robbery on Silverton, whom he suspects to be Bradbury, the fugitive. How Silverton saves the lives of many in a forest fire and wins the admiration of all follows the clearing of his name which proves him not guilty of the crime which made him a fugitive.

"The Ninety and Nine"

Vitagraph—6800 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

WELL, folks, they've all come back. Yes, and they're in the movies! What? Why, the mortgage on the old homestead. The evil working villain. The hero fleeing from misguided justice. The village belle falling in love with said hero. The dirty deeds on the part of the villain to "git rid" of our hero. The village "human newspaper." The dash of the hero to rescue the folks in the next town. The arrival of the "papers" setting forth that Tom Silverton isn't guilty after all and the close-up of the loving doves "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree."

Doesn't all this conjure up memories of the days when you used to sneak down to the old "opery house," and hiss the villain and loudly stamp your feet as the old engine poked its nose through the scenery, emitted a couple of puffs from its chimney, the hero dropped from the cab and clasped Nellie to his bosom? Didn't you like it in the halcyon days? Sure you did and you'll like it now, for in the second screen version, Vitagraph has made it all into a sure fire meller with all the trimmings and a bang up climax that will pull most folks close to the edge of the chairs.

The forest fire and the running of the locomotive through the flames to rescue the folks in a neighboring town is the big feature of this production. Seldom has a forest fire been more realistically portrayed on the shadow stage. This feature is well done—both coming and going. On the way back the hero drags a freight train filled with human beings.

The direction is good throughout, and the camera work during the fire scenes deserves praise. Life in a small town is realistically pictured and right here it might be mentioned that this one should prove a strong drawing card in the towns of these United States. Vitagraph has done well by this old classic of the barnstorming days.

Production Highlights—The dash of Silverton in a locomotive through a blazing forest fire to rescue the inhabitants of a neighboring village. The fine attention to detail. David Smith's excellent direction. Some fine camera work during the forest fire scenes.

Exploitation Angles—Why not rig up a small locomotive made out of beaver board, put a Ford inside it and drive it about town, loudly ringing a large bell the while? Play up the fact that this is the film version of the famous stage play. Tell them about Colleen Moore, Warner Baxter and other well known stars in the cast.

Drawing Power—There has been a demand for a rehabilitation of the old favorites lately. If your patrons are among those that like these pictures, hop to this one.

The STORY

THE GREATEST RELEASE OF THE YEAR

CALEB DEMING, a sturdy blacksmith in the little village of Alden, wanted a boy who would be straight and strong and a man among men.

His son, Amos, however, was born a cripple, paralyzed in his right arm. Deming's disappointment was so great that he became very much embittered against his son. Amos, however, was endowed with a keen spiritual insight and a capacity for love which he exercised on all about him, particularly the children of the town, for whom he made toys.

Emily Preston, the girl next door, had been ostracized by the villagers for the sins of her brother. The gossips made life unbearable for Emily, and after a fight with one of the village gossips she planned to leave town. Amos sought to befriend her and was repulsed several times. Amos's great spirituality, however, and the unselfish force of his love finally caused a change of heart, and she decided to remain. Amos's father learned of his son's friendship for Emily and disowned him.

In the meantime, Preston endeavored to obtain justice at the hands of Dodd, his former partner, the owner of a huge lumber camp. Dodd instructed Krieg, a powerful, unscrupulous lumberjack, to cut timber on Preston's land. Krieg bore a secret grudge against Dodd and endeavored to use Preston as a tool for gaining his revenge on Dodd. Preston, however, refused to have anything to do with Krieg. Krieg was caught spiking Dodd's timber, and realizing that Dodd had learned of his enmity, he killed him. Preston was accused, tried, and sentenced to death.

Krieg took refuge in Emily Preston's house and forced her to hide him until dark, when he could escape. He was a prey to superstitious fears. He planned to kill Emily before leaving, but a demonstration, which he took to be an omen of evil, prevented him. That night he left with the threat that if she told on him he would return and kill her. At the suggestion of Amos, she testified before the court and saved Preston, although she knew she was taking her life in her hands.

A few nights later Krieg returned for his revenge upon the girl. Little Connie, an orphan whom Emily had adopted, ran to Amos for help. Terror-stricken, Emily barred the windows and locked the door, but Krieg burst through the window and entered the room.

Emily fought desperately and managed to elude him for a few minutes. Relentlessly, he closed in on her, and his writhing, clutching fingers were about her throat when Amos entered the room. Amos threw himself between the girl and Krieg. A terrific battle ensued, but Amos was a child in the hands of the powerful Krieg.

Krieg seized Amos by his paralyzed arm and twisted it. With a sickening blow and kick Krieg threw the boy in the corner and turned again to attack Emily. Nothing but a miracle could save her.

Amos saw the girl he loved being strangled to death at the hands of the maniac Krieg, and he made a superhuman effort to crawl to his feet and reach him. As he struggled to his feet a look of joy spread over his face. He could use his right arm! He was no longer a helpless cripple! With both arms outstretched he advanced on Krieg. Krieg, startled by Amos's cry, turned and beheld a strong, vigorous youth in place of the once frail weakling.

It was too much for his ignorant brain to comprehend. His fears and superstitions overcame him and he frothed at the mouth like a wild beast. With a shriek of terror he ran frantically for the door and into the arms of the villagers, who had been aroused by Connie.

As Amos stood in the doorway with the light shining out behind him, a hush fell upon the group gathered without, as they gazed on what seemed to be a veritable miracle. The tears came to old Caleb Deming's eyes as he gathered his son in his arms and begged forgiveness. The great force of Amos's love had brought about a change in the hearts of villagers, and gained for him the heart of Emily.

Dear Mr. Gillett,

I am very glad I have received my Motion Picture News Booking Guide.

I find this a great help in booking for my various theatres - it gives the right information and does not take an hour to find what you want.

When you are 3000 miles away from America it is difficult to keep in touch with the pictures produced in that land, and even more difficult to keep your books clear for attractions which you know will come across the Atlantic sooner or later.

Your Guide helps immensely in our booking organisation which to a great extent revolves around it.

Kind regards,

Yours very truly,

Lionel Bernstein

A Remarkable Character Change, Influenced by the Action of a Fascinating Plot—

Wyndham Standing's amusing characterization in "The Inner Man" is the most novel feature of a production that is interesting. It will be entertaining to many—

There is much action in the picture, especially when it gets under way in the mountain locale. The "bad men" of the district, in which the hero owns a mine, set out to frighten away the youth, but instead they set off the spark of manhood and there are some stirring fistic and gun battles—

KATHERINE MacDONALD

The American Beauty in

"THE WOMAN CONQUERS"

ONE of the star's best, and a wondrous tale of a society girl's battle for life and love in the snow wastes of the far North. The story of a girl who told her aristocratic sweetheart, "You are a weakling," only to meet him again in the Arctics, where, in the fight against the raging elements, the wild beasts, and men worse than beasts, he proved himself superior to them all. This is the kind of picture every audience will thrill to. An artistic and entertaining photodrama by Violet Clark and directed by Tom Forman; produced by Preferred Pictures, Inc.

Katherine MacDonald

The American Beauty in the Lucky Four. Book them all now and announce them to play a month apart. Pictures that appeal especially to women. Fine for evenings, great for matinees. The last word in artistry and entertainment with the world's most beautiful woman starring.

"THE WOMAN'S SIDE"

Just a girl, forced to fight a woman's battle, against the man who would sully her father's honor and leave her nameless, for the sake of her father and every hope he had in the world, and for the love of a youth brought strangely into her life. A drama of a woman's instinct and a woman's motives. Story and direction by J. A. Barry.

"STRANGER THAN FICTION"

A society girl caught in the toils of a crook and how she escapes—with a fight on the wing of an aeroplane, 5,000 feet in the air. A take-off from the roof of a sky-scraper. A parachute jump from a burning plane—a man caught in mid-air in a leap from one airship to another and finally hauled to safety. The greatest air circus ever filmed. Story by Charles Richman and Albert Shelby LeVino; Directed by J. A. Barry.

"HER SOCIAL VALUE"

Here is drama with the ring of the human note—today a sales girl—tomorrow the wife of a society man. And after that the woman who learns the bitterness of the realization that she is "not good enough for her husband." From poor girl to rich wife—here's a theme that will interest everyone in your audience. And Katherine MacDonald makes both portrayals as magnetic as any she has ever done. From the original story by B. P. Fineman and J. A. Barry; scenario by Gerald Duffy and Jerome Storm; Directed by Jerome Storm.

"DOMESTIC RELATIONS"

This is the simple, but tensely dramatic story, of a man who drove a woman from his life but who could not drive her from his heart. A picture which will make both men and women wonder, because they have all seen some of it in their own lives. Gorgeous gowns, sumptuous settings, backing up a real drama that starts where others finish. Your patrons will love it. Story and scenario by Violet Clark; directed by Chet Withey.

Norman Clark in The News—"Will amuse you and thrill you. There is one of the most nerve-tingling horse races the eye of the camera has ever caught. How on earth those horses and riders kept from breaking their necks is something at which to marvel."

Q. E. D., Evening Sun—"If this be a sample of what the new year holds for us, bring on 1923. Here's a film that will rear its head over the year's output."

Robert Garland, in The American—"Combines comedy, excitement and heart-interest in almost perfect proportions. Quite worth anybody's while."

Here's the answer to a puzzle—

We often wonder why certain pictures go over so big. Pictures like "Humoresque," "Miracle Man" or "Over the Hill." Many of the greatest hits are without famous stories or famous stars. Why do they break box office records?

The answer is—

They make people feel what the screen doesn't show.

Such pictures are rare but Edwin Carewe's "Mighty Lak a Rose" is one of them. It is from Curtis Benton's original story of high society and low society.

It has a title the whole world loves.

A Good Idea Gone Wrong

WHAT seemed at first thought to be a fine service idea recently originated in this office.

Briefly it was this: We would read carefully all the "movie" pages of the various big city Sunday papers and from them select, for reprint, well-written, original and interesting press notices pertaining to pictures, thereby making these exceptional stories available for use by other papers and exhibitors at large.

"Fine," you say. "A worth while idea."

But investigation of the project disclosed some rather surprising facts. Inspection of more than a dozen papers, selected as the most likely to contain what we wanted, uncovered not a single yarn that any editor, not under obligation, would print.

There were many press stories about many different pictures but they all followed the same stereotyped style—just announcements or worse yet, pure gush, without an iota of originality or reader-interest.

It seems as if this is a condition that could be improved if we set ourselves about it. Certainly we have enough writing ability among our press agents, press book and picture page editors to turn out, at least, an occasional story that a newspaper would be glad to grab regardless of the fact that contained therein was some publicity for a motion picture.

We write, all of us, words upon words, intended for use by the newspapers. Suppose we did less writing and more thinking before we began to write. We might turn out a better product.

Instead of taking ten minutes to decide what to write about and ten hours to write it, we probably would do better if we reversed the process—spend ten hours in originating a real story and ten minutes to tell it.

At any rate, we can't give you that brand new service which we contemplated until somebody begins turning out press notices that have some news value.

Valentino Briefs His Case for the Public

WE have but little knowledge concerning the legal controversy between Rodolph Valentino and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and no opinions as to what the final judicial decision will be but we do possess considerable interest in a phase of the case which it seems the plaintiff has taken into his own hands.

Instead of leaving the whole matter to his attorney and marking time until the law defines his status, Mr. Valentino has filed a brief with the public.

The January issue of Photoplay contains an article published over Mr. Valentino's signature in which he explains the reasons for his action and professes that he is fighting for a principle, rather than from a mercenary purpose.

It strikes us that this is a most sensible and strategic course for him to pursue, for after all ultimately, it is the public who will decide what the professional career of Rodolph Valentino, actor, is to be.

He asserts, and without a doubt in absolute truth, that the papers have maligned him and misrepresented the merits of his action. So he tells the public his side of the story, simply and effectively, making a good case for himself from a fan point of view, no matter what the law may finally decide about his contract with Famous Players-Lasky.

All of which leads us to inquire why the whole motion picture industry, individually and collectively, has not learned, when it has controversies and misunderstandings, to do likewise—tell the public the whole truth and thus nullify the effect of the twisted, distorted, evasive version of facts that the yellow journals always insist on dealing out about motion picture events and people.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

VOL. XXVII JANUARY 20, 1923 NO. 3

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG, the artist, was the guest of the A. M. P. A. last Thursday noon and after the completion of the luncheon, made an address upon Art in Advertising. His advice is to get a Grade A artist and put him to work. Mr. Flagg says he has seen a big improvement in the humble three sheet of the movies. "A number of the better lithographing firms invite artists to come to their shops and make drawings on stone. Why do they do this? Because they are alive to the fact that they must improve—they want their artisans to be inspired by something better than the old German lithograph ideal which looks—they still make them—as if it was painted with colored butters."

* * *

ANTONIO MUZII, a young extra in pictures, and who is known among the tenants of the apartment house in which he lives as the "Spanish boy," has come forward as a pretender to the Valentino throne. His pretensions naturally worried Rodolph enough to cause him to appeal to his attorney. Muzii claims to be a brother of Valentino—but the latter declares that his brother is a physician in Italy.

* * *

HENRIETTA CROSMAN, long identified upon the stage as one of its leading stars, has heard the call of the camera. She will make her screen appearance in George Melford's production of Earl Derr Biggers' story, "Broadway Broke."

* * *

GOLDWYN'S big production, "The Christian," will go down in history as a masterpiece, according to the reviewer who witnessed the picture the other day and which is reviewed in this issue of the NEWS. Hall Caine's vital story is an enduring one—a story carrying emotional stress and a spiritual tug and as beautiful a romance as ever found its way into fiction. The company went to England to catch the genuine atmosphere and backgrounds and Tourneur's talent for harmony of colors and scenes is brought to its highest development. The book is so well known and the production has been so well heralded as an exceptional canvas of its kind that screen patrons will undoubtedly stampede the box-office to see it. As a stage play Viola Allen was the star. As a picture Richard Dix and Mae Busch divide equal honors.

* * *

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER left Chicago Tuesday for a ten days' stay at the New York offices of his company. His brother, Douglas D. Rothacker, is in Washington, attending a meeting of the National Commission of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. On the commission he represents the Screen Advertisers' Association, of which he is president. He will go from Washington for a short stay at the Rothacker New York offices.

* * *

WILLIAM DUNCAN, the intrepid star of Vitagraph serials, and his wife, Edith Johnson, who has supported him the past few seasons as leading woman, are in New York stopping at the screen's favorite hostelry, the Algonquin.

* * *

WE would call it the PERFECT COINCIDENCE. And Nat Rothstein, who presides in the chair of publicity and advertising for F. B. O., didn't have anything to do with it. Just as "The Third Alarm," his company's newest picture, which graces the screen at the Astor—the screen which was flooded with water by "The Town That Forgot God," and is now being scorched with flames in this vivid document of fire, fire engines, and fire laddies—was flashed last Monday evening, the New York Fire Department was answering a third alarm on Broadway, a mere mile above the theatre. It also strangely happened that the thrilling climax in "The Third Alarm" was practically reproduced in real life at the big warehouse fire in Sixty-seventh Street. But Nat did put over one publicity stunt last Saturday morning. Broadway, particularly the west side of the street from Times Square to Forty-eighth Street, was packed with nervous spectators watching a human fly in a white suit scale up and down and perform circus stunts on Marcus Loew's huge sign in front of the State Theatre Building. A red banner lettered in white with "The Third Alarm" was extended over the top of the building. So Broadway knew that the agile acrobat wasn't performing his hazardous feats for his health. Any student of human nature passing the crowded sidewalk might have learned something of the psychology of nerves. Several women kept their eyes glued to the pavement. They didn't want to see him fall, yet they wanted to be around if anything happened. And if a tragedy had occurred they would have rushed home and told excitedly about seeing a human fly plunge to death. In reality they would never have seen the fatal dive.

* * *

LOUIS J. GASNIER, who is making a series of special productions for Preferred Pictures to be released through Al Lichtman, arrived in New York this week for a ten days' vacation. This is the director's first visit East in a year. During the past seven months he has been constantly at work handling the megaphone of "Rich Men's Wives," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "The Hero," and "Poor Men's Wives." When he returns to the Coast he will begin work upon "Mothers-in-Law." Mr. Gasnier has reason to feel highly elated over his production, "The Hero," one of the most compelling human interest pictures ever released. Incidentally the feature wins the asterisk in the latest bulletin issued by the National Board of Review—the only asterisk in a list of twelve pictures. The Board calls it particularly good; we agree with them.

* * *

OUR spies in Birmingham have informed us that Octavus Roy Cohen has come on from the Alabama city in answer to an interesting offer from a producer who wants to make a series of two-reel films based upon Mr. Cohen's widely popular negro stories which have appeared in the Satevepost.

* * *

SPEAKING of "The Flame of Life," Priscilla Dean's new opus, we must record that it carries vivid and vital qualities. There is good, red, dramatic meat; there is spirituality; there is humanity; there is realism which fairly leaps from the silversheet; there is background which kindles sentiment; there is flawless acting as turned in by Priscilla Dean, Wallace Beery and Robert Ellis. With such totally different stories as "The Flirt," and "The Flame of Life," Hobart Henley's directorial talent may be called versatile indeed.

* * *

MADGE KENNEDY, who has been appearing upon the stage in "Spite Corner," sailed Monday on a trip to Japan via Panama. The star of stage and screen has been kept continually busy for a number of months and had promised herself this respite for some time. Miss Kennedy was accompanied by her mother, who will continue on the boat for a world-wide tour. After the stay in Japan, the star will return to America to make her second Kenma production. The first of this series of six, "The Purple Highway," was recently completed and will be released very shortly.

THE Torrences, David and Ernest—brothers you know—are making plans for a trip to their native Scotland during the coming year.

* * *

MONTE BLUE, who plays the leading male role in "Brass," has returned to the Warner coast studios after spending the holidays in the East with his mother. Mr. Blue will also play the character of Dr. Kennicutt in "Main Street," an adaptation of Sinclair Lewis' novel which is breaking records as a best seller throughout the United States and England. If you have read the book you will appreciate that Monte Blue is an ideal figure for the role of the amiable doctor of Gopher Prairie.

* * *

GASTON GLASS and Kenneth Harlan, two of the most popular players of the screen, have signed on the dotted line—long-term contracts—for B. P. Schulberg of Preferred. Which means that they will appear in Al Lichtman productions. The girls certainly like these boys, according to the inquiries received among the fan magazines.

* * *

THE new year is certainly starting off with a bang. Such sterling pictures as "The Christian," "The World's Applause," "The Flirt," and "The Flame of Life," "Dr. Jack," "Back Home and Broke," "The Hero," and "A Bill of Divorcement," indicate that 1923 will be a banner year—and there are eleven months to go. Boys—they're off.

* * *

PATRONS of the silent drama will look upon the passing of Edwin Stevens with genuine regret. He was an actor adept at playing character parts and his death leaves a void which will be difficult to fill. Mr. Stevens was long a stage favorite and perhaps reached his zenith behind the footlights in "The Devil." His screen career began with Universal and World. Other banners under which he appeared are Artcraft, Metro, Select, Pathe, Goldwyn, Paramount, Hodkinson, and Realart.

* * *

BILL BRADY has a broken rib. The theatrical producer was hurt the other night while motoring to New York University, where he was to lecture before the class in literature and the drama. Mr. Brady's chauffeur ran into a tree in order to avoid a collision with a speeding taxicab. The producer was scratched and shaken up, but he thought that he had escaped without serious injuries, until the pain in his side was diagnosed as a broken rib. The appointment was canceled. How the punsters would have taken advantage of this "copy" had Mr. Brady carried the monicker of Adam instead of Bill.

* * *

JOE FARNHAM, the w. k. motion picture editor and title writer whose name has appeared on a few dozen features the past two years, has left New York for a well-earned vacation at Palm Beach and Miami, Florida. Mr. Farnham will spend the month of January at work on a spoken drama for early summer presentation on Broadway, returning early in February to resume activities as "doctor of films."

* * *

ERIC VON STROHEIM will waltz around with the megaphone when "The Merry Widow" is ready to be "shot" on the Goldwyn lots. The popular operatta which scored a sensation upon the stage several years ago, is to be revived as a film tale of adventure and romance. Franz Lehar's music will enhance the feature with all its haunting charm. The original production ran for over a year in London and over a year in New York, where the public accepted the inspired score as the best that ever came from the banks of the Danube or from anywhere else for that matter. Musical comedies have been adapted to the screen before. Take notice of "The Beauty Shop," "Oh, Lady Lady," "So Long, Letty," "The Belle of New York," "Oh, Boy," and "Baby Mine."

* * *

THEY'RE coming back after an absence of five years away from the camera and the screen. Who? Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. The stars who once basked in the sunshine of popularity have signed up for a Whitman Bennett production. The last few seasons they have appeared in vaudeville in a sketch especially written for them.

* * *

JOBYNA RALSTON, who has been appearing as leading woman of the Paul Parrott comedies, has signed up with Harold Lloyd to play opposite him in the comedy which is now going into production, the title of which is not yet announced. Miss Ralston appeared in "Two Little Girls in Blue," a musical comedy featuring the Fairbanks twins. The piece had a run in New York a couple of seasons ago.

* * *

ROME is paying homage to Lillian Gish who went to Italy several weeks ago to film F. Marion Crawford's story, "The White Sister." The star has also been the recipient of unusual attention in Naples, Palermo and Sorrento.

* * *

PRODUCTION is going on apace at the Tilford studios where "The Bright Shawl," an adaptation of Joseph Hergesheimer's novel of the same name is being filmed by John Robertson for Inspiration. Everett Shinn, the artist, who accompanied Mr. Robertson, Richard Barthelmess, Dorothy Gish, and the other players to Havana in order to gather a true perspective of Spanish atmosphere, is busy at the studio modeling sets after sketches made down in the Cuban city. Castilian backgrounds are going up in rapid order at the studio. Mr. Shinn was formerly an art director for Goldwyn, having designed the sets for "Polly of the Circus," and "Sunshine Alley," the Mae Marsh productions.

WE understand that the advertising copy for the 16-page insert placed in this issue by the Al Lichtman Corporation was written by Mr. Lichtman himself. This is unusual as marking a recognition by a prominent executive of the importance of putting real "sales talk" into trade paper copy, and surely no one is better qualified to do this than the head of this thriving young company. The production schedule announced in this insert is an impressive one, and gives promise of some splendid things from the producing end of the organization, Preferred Pictures, under the direction of Mr. Lichtman's associate, B. P. Schulberg.

"The Pilgrim" Goes to First Nat'l

Is Last of Chaplin Releases Covered by Contract of 1917; Released February 26

AFTER several months' negotiations with Sidney Chaplin, representing his famous brother, Charlie, H. S. Schwalbe, secretary-treasurer of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that this company has secured the world's rights to the comedian's latest feature length production, "The Pilgrim." It is over six weeks ago that Mr. Chaplin gave officials of First National and a few of his personal friends an opportunity to see "The Pilgrim" produced before a matinee audience at Bim's Standard theatre, New York City, and an evening or two later the picture was shown before over two thousand people at the Gotham theatre, New York. The evidence of approval on the part of the two audiences left no doubt in the minds of the distributing company's officials that "The Pilgrim" will be a rival of "The Kid" for first honors among all of Chaplin's productions, declares a statement from the First National home office announcing the acquisition of "The Pilgrim."

It is said that in "The Pilgrim," which is of feature length, Chaplin's art reaches heights of subtlety which he has never excelled. The story briefly is that of an escaped convict who steals the clothing of a parson and who later is mistaken by the members of a Texas town's congregation for their new minister whom none of them has ever seen prior to his arrival on Sunday morning in time to conduct church services. "The handling of the story has been very cleverly done in order to avoid any possible criticism because of the comedian's role of a convict masquerading as preacher," declares the First National statement.

First National further states that "The Pilgrim" is the eighth and last Chaplin release on the famous million dollar contract entered into between First National Exhibitors' Circuit and the comedian, about June, 1917. Beginning with the release of "A Dog's Life," which was followed by "Shoulder Arms," "Sunnyside, "A Day's Pleasure," "The Kid," "The Idle Class" and "Pay Day," the public's reception of each succeeding picture demonstrated that the contract was not at all the hazardous proposition it at first appeared to be. As a matter of fact, the disinclination of a great many exhibitors to sign series contracts for the eight Chaplin subjects, which comprised the million dollar contract, has proved to be to the advantage of both the comedian and the distributing company, declares First National, because it left a large proportion of the market open from which much better rentals were returned than those paid by the holders of series contracts.

While the price paid for "The Pilgrim" is not disclosed, First National officials state that there is a heavy cash consideration, in addition to a sharing arrangement which will make the consideration only less than the price paid for "The Kid."

The foreign and domestic negatives were delivered to Associated First National's Los Angeles office on January 9th, and immediately shipped east. The release date has been set for February 26th. Because of the feature length and importance of the release, First National will provide a complete line of feature advertising accessories, it is announced.

Be American, Is Hays' New Year Resolution

The New Year's resolution delivered by Will Hays, who concluded his visit in Kansas City with addresses before the motion picture committee of the Women's City Club and the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity, was as follows:

"The New Year's resolution for America is to be steadfastly American. The manhood and womanhood of America is sound. We need have no concern about the future if America will follow the resolution to be American. And every real American knows what it means—make no mistake about that—to be an American. America must not tolerate any attempt to array class against class, section against section, or sect against sect. Guard against this as you would against a pestilence; the nation has no greater enemy than one who would thus divide the country against itself."

Speaking before the motion picture committee and more than 150 guests, many of whom were film officials and exhibitors of Kansas City, Mr. Hays urged co-operation in demanding only the highest class of films of producers.

Mr. Hays highly approved of plans under consideration by the motion picture committee of the club to have special nights at the theatres when films which they approved of would be shown under their endorsement.

F. P.-Lasky Still Negotiating for Direct Control of Lynch String

PREMATURE ANNOUNCEMENT was made in some quarters last week whereby it was said that Famous Players-Lasky had acquired direct control of theatres formerly controlled or under lease to S. A. Lynch and his associates in Southern Enterprises. According to the latest advices from the Famous Players-Lasky office, negotiations are still pending and all details of the transaction have not yet been concluded.

Official confirmation was made at the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation office that negotiations were in progress between S. A. Lynch and his associates and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the purpose of terminating the managerial contract of S. A. Lynch and his associates of Southern Enterprises. If these negotiations are satisfactorily concluded, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will take over the direct management of Southern Enterprises, which company it has owned for over three years. It was stated that this transaction had nothing to do with the acquisition by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of any additional theatres, but was simply the transferring to it of the direct management of theatres which it has owned for some time past.

Washington Flooded by Blue Law Petitions

A VERITABLE flood of blue law petitions and Sunday observance bills have clogged the legislative machinery of the House District of Columbia Committee the past week, and their opponents have also been in evidence. Representative Benjamin K. Focht, Chairman of the Committee which in theory governs and protects the District of Columbia the city of Washington as the aldermen of other cities function, was called on by a delegation from the Religious Liberty association, headed by Charles S. Longacre, editor of the Association's publication as spokesman. Mr. Focht was told that the Sunday observance people were making a drive to close up the District because of the significance of Washington nationally. It was intimated that the committee might consider such closing laws this past week, but the rush to get necessary supplies appropriations through, will prevent it at this time. Should a special session of the 68th Congress be convened in March or April as is predicted now, blue-law measures would go over until then, the usual jockeying for place and power on the committees, the different make-up of the District and other committees and the pressure for fiscal measures to be passed, and large amount of unfinished business to be put in the calendar, will then again pigeon-hole the Blue Law program.

Bomb Planted in Seattle Labor Troubles

Conflict between the Seattle theatre and musicians' unions, union houses and non-union houses came to a sudden head in the Western city on December 28 when a limousine belonging to John Danz, veteran Seattle theatre manager, was shattered by a dynamite bomb explosion as it stood before his home.

It is believed that the bomb was planted in the car with the intention of killing Mr. Danz. Mrs. Danz had driven the car to the Colonial theatre to bring Mr. Danz home to dinner. Less than a half hour after they had entered their home, the car was entirely demolished by the blast which shook the entire neighborhood.

Discussing the explosion, Mr. Danz declared that he believed it to be the result of labor trouble. William Short, president of the state federation of labor, indignantly denied the charges, saying that they were framed up to discredit the unions.

Since last June, 1922, Mr. Danz has had trouble with the musicians' union because they are alleged to have attempted to force him to employ a larger number of musicians than he believed he could afford, at his theatres in Seattle, the Florence, Colonial, and Class A, all second run, ten-cent houses.

Colorado Opposes Leasing to Organizations

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Colorado have adopted a resolution to the effect that a plea of consideration be sent to all producing and distributing organizations asking that the practice of leasing to any but regularly established and licensed theatres engaged on the exhibition of motion pictures be discontinued.

The resolution was prompted by the practice of leasing pictures other than strictly educational subjects to parties, institutions and organizations in detriment to the exhibitors' branch of the industry.

Hays Issues Final Statement on Arbuckle

Says Question Must Be Left Finally to Public and Comedian's Business Associates

WILL HAYS has issued what he declares will be his final statement in the Arbuckle matter. In it he says the solution of the matter must be left to the public and to those who have business associations with Arbuckle.

The final Hays statement is as follows:

"All suggestions which have been received from all viewpoints, and they are many and varied, will be referred to the proper parties. This is the kind of question that must be left finally to the judgment of the public on the one hand and on the other hand to those who have business associations with the individual and the individual himself. I have removed the artificial situation of one man being or appearing to be the judge in such matters either for one hundred and ten million people, or for a great industry and art. Such a condition in the development of a business is absolutely unsound economically, and from every other standpoint, and permanently must not be. A temporary framework or scaffolding may be a very valuable tool for a period in the remodelling or construction of a great building, but it must be remembered as the building progresses that such structures are only temporary facilities."

The Public Relations Committee made up of leaders of National organizations for the purpose of cooperating with the Hays organization met last week and adopted a resolution reiterating its confidence in the Hays program. It expressed itself as being impressed with the sincerity and genuineness of Mr. Hays' motives in the Arbuckle matter, but recommended that he advise the industry not to show Arbuckle pictures. There were forty-six members of the Public Relations Committee present at the meeting.

At the conclusion of the session Lee F. Hanmer, Chairman of the committee, gave out the following statement:

"We had a splendid representative and enthusiastic meeting. Many problems were discussed and many of the activities of the Committee reviewed, and plans made for the future. Among the things of particular interest in the Committee was the development of plans to carry to the public the problems of the industry and information relative thereto, as well as bring to the industry the ideas of the public.

"The Arbuckle matter was discussed in a way which developed a sympathetic understanding among the entire membership of the Committee as to the problems incident thereto. A resolution expressing the point of view of the Committee was passed and it was as follows:

"The Committee on Public Relations, having received from Mr. Hays a report on the Arbuckle matter is impressed with the sincerity and genuineness of his motives in showing a willingness to allow everyone a chance to go to work and make good if he can. The Committee, however, does not believe that there should be any action taken which would result in bringing Roscoe Arbuckle again before the public as a motion picture actor. In the judgment of the Committee it would be extremely detrimental to the youth of America for Arbuckle's pictures to be released for circulation, since it is highly desirable that reminders which would naturally come with his reappearance on the screen should not be thus placed before the public. Such releases would also, in the opinion of the Committee, tend to destroy public confidence in the purpose of the motion picture industry to establish and maintain the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production and develop the educational as well as the entertainment value and general usefulness of motion pictures. The Committee, therefore, recommends to Mr. Hays that he advise the motion picture industry to refrain from exhibiting pictures in which Mr. Arbuckle appears, and that any consideration shown him, as an individual, should be along lines not involving his appearance before the public as a motion picture actor.

"The Committee takes this occasion to reaffirm its desire to assist in every possible way in the improvement of motion pictures and to express its confidence in the practicability of the program which is being developed under Mr. Hays' leadership for securing better pictures and for realizing the highest possible usefulness of motion pictures in the recreation and education of the American people."

Those present at the meeting were:

Mr. Lee F. Hanmer, Director, Department of Recreation, Russell Sage Foundation; Mr. Julius H. Barnes, National President, Chamber of Commerce of United States; Mr. John Ihlder, Manager, Civic Development Department, Chamber of Commerce of United States; Mr. Howard S. Coogan to Make Four for United Artists

A WIRE from the Coast announces the completion of plans for the signing on Wednesday of this week of an important contract whereby Jackie Coogan will make four pictures for United Artists on a forty-sixty split and a cash bonus. The company sponsoring the child-star had offers for a renewal with Lesser and Principal Pictures, as well as bids from Metro and other companies.

The Coast wire also advises that Frank Lloyd will become an independent producer for First National upon the completion of the present Norma Talmadge subject.

Ohio Fighting Against School Showings

Ohio seems to be the ring where all film troubles are fought. Right now the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of Ohio is waging a fight in behalf of the theatre owners of the state against the showing of theatrical films in schools and churches.

The trouble, long fermenting, broke out last week in Salem. A prominent exhibitor of Salem complained to the M. P. T. O. A. that his business is going to the dogs owing to the competition he has to buck up against with schools and churches, which are showing, not only educational films, but complete picture programs, at stated admission prices. Louis Metzer, attorney, of Salem, has been retained to represent the exhibitor in an effort to secure an injunction against the institutions which are preventing him from the lawful pursuit of his business.

The Film Board of Trade of Cleveland was approached in an effort to secure its support by refusing to serve the schools and churches of Salem, and help to extricate the exhibitor from his financial embarrassment. The Film Board of Trade, however, decided that such a movement, in order to be effective, must be national. If all exchanges refused to serve non-theatrical institutions, then the Film Board of Trade would also stop this service. "As long as it is the practice of other communities to serve the schools and churches," said Robert Cotton, president of the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland, "we would be accomplishing nothing by refusing service to these institutions."

Music Publishers Recommended

M.P.T.O.A. Submits List from Whom Tax Free Music May Be Secured

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has issued a bulletin incorporated in which is a list of music publishers who are not members of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers. The organization hopes to popularize music issued by these concerns and suggests that when ordering music from them they be asked for tax free music.

The M. P. T. O. A. has lodged a complaint in Washington against the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers alleging a combination in restraint of trade and unfair dealings in an attempt to collect a music license tax from theatre owners.

The suggested list of music publishers recommended by the M. P. T. O. A. together with their addresses follows:

Bill Asks Repeal of N. Y. Commission Law

A BILL was introduced in the Assembly Tuesday by Louis Cuvillier, of New York, calling for the repeal of the law which brought about the creation of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, in 1921. Only a week ago, Governor Smith, in his message to the Legislature, recommended the repeal of the law.

The bill has been referred to one of the committees and in all probability action will be taken in the near future and it will go to a vote.

Mayor Sees No Demand for Sunday Closing

With the theatres apparently permanently closed on Sunday at Wabash, Ind., a new Sunday closing war has broken out at Richmond, Ind. Mayor James Wilson of Wabash clamped the lid down so tight that a newspaper could not be bought on the first day of the week, but now has relented, and some lines of business are being permitted to resume Sunday operations. Sheriff Hoyt Summerland of Wabash county declared he would not permit the theatres to reopen.

Several weeks ago the Richmond Ministerial Association circulated petitions in churches calling upon Mayor Lawrence A. Handley to close the picture houses on Sunday. The theatres circulated similar petitions and got as many names favoring continued operation.

The mayor last week gave out a public statement addressed to the ministerial association in which he said Sunday shows would not be interfered with, and that he did not believe there is a demand for closing action on his part.

Attorney for Valentino Denies Settlement

Arthur Butler Graham, attorney for Rodolph Valentino, has taken exception to stories appearing in certain trade journals regarding a settlement between the star and Famous Players-Lasky.

The attorney's letter follows in part:

"There is no foundation whatever for articles in certain trade papers reporting a rumored settlement between Rodolph Valentino and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"There has been no final determination of the action in the equity court. Preparations are being made to try the case when reached, and the evidence will be Mr. Valentino's complete justification for his present self-denial and courageous resistance."

Mary Pickford to Produce "Faust" for Screen

MARY PICKFORD will produce "Faust" under the direction of Ernst Lubitsch. Miss Pickford will appear in the role of Marguerite. The photoplay will be elaborately produced. As work on "Faust" is to be started at once the production of "Dorothy Vernon in Haddon Hall" will be postponed to be taken up again at a later date, probably next summer. This is the substance of a statement given out this week from United Artists' headquarters in New York. The statement continues:

"To portray the role of Marguerite in 'Faust' long has been a cherished dream of Miss Pickford, and Mr. Lubitsch was engaged by her with this idea in mind. Mr. Lubitsch also has long been ambitious to undertake the direction of a screen version of 'Faust,' but asserts that he never had found the right person to picturize the character until he met Miss Pickford, who he declares represents the ideal type for this role that has been made famous in drama and opera."

It is of interest in connection with the above announcement to note that Ferdinand Pinney Earle, the director, has been preparing a production of Goethe's "Faust" for the past 14 months. Mr. Earle expresses the opinion that the two motion-picture versions of "Faust" will afford screen patrons with the opportunity for an interesting comparative study of the methods of treatment applied in both his own and Miss Pickford's adaptations.

Music Tax Law Needs Understanding

The recent revival of the theatre owners' campaign against the "music tax," so-called, suggests the necessity of understanding the legal situation. One phase of the attack was the institution of Sherman "anti-trust" Act proceedings by the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission on the grounds that the alleged abuse of the copyright laws was in effect a conspiracy to foster unfair competition and to restrain the trade of theatre musicians and other composers, not in the alleged "music trust." The other form of relief is of a legislative nature, intended to revise the music copyright laws, which are an integral portion of the patent laws. The House Patents Committee have assured the industry of favorable inclination toward a satisfactory amendment, and it now remains for the industry to appear in hearings before the patents committee, headed by the Hon. Florian Lampert of Wisconsin, who has gone into the music tax very thoroughly.

One thing to bear in mind is that no title can be copyrighted, for titles are under the head of trade marks and are handled through the patent office and not the Library of Congress. Neither can ideas be copyrighted. Registration and not any prior protection is given in the certificate of copyright. It is not adjudication of a claim but simply registration. All music so registered has to pay one dollar as a fee to the Library. Last year gross receipts were $145,398.26. Registrations numbered approximately 140,000. Of the 20,074 printed volumes no doubt several thousand were movie stories or special editions of classics for movie features from the nearly 9,000 photodramas listed. The copyright term on all subjects begins the moment the copyright "line" is given to the public.

Novel Plan as Aid to Kansas Finances

C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas, has under consideration three plans, one of them a precedent in the Middle West, as a means of making the Kansas organization one of the strongest financed bodies of exhibitors west of the Mississippi river.

The M. P. T. O. Kansas, like many other state exhibitor organizations, is in need of funds to successfully carry out its public service campaign. The first plan of Mr. Cook requires a tie-up with some large banking institution in which the M. P. T. O. Kansas funds will be kept. Mr. Cook, through such a bank, would obtain the distribution of small pocket banks to each member of the state organization. The first ticket sold each night, regardless of price, the amount would be placed in the small bank, which would be placed in the box office. Collection of money thus obtained would be made about once every three months, Mr. Cook said.

"The price of the first ticket sold every night never would be missed by the exhibitors," Mr. Cook said, "regardless of how small the theatre may be. Such a revenue would amount to a respectable total at the end of the year and greatly relieve the heavy expenditure of sending out innumerable form letters each month, which are an absolute necessity in rendering service to exhibitors. This plan would not interfere with the annual dues of $52 from each exhibitor."

Retiring Penn. Governor Approves Censors

A great financial saving to the motion picture industry in Pennsylvania has been effected through economies created by the Board of Motion Picture Censors, according to a statement made by Governor William C. Sproul in his final message to the legislature, made at the opening session of that body in Harrisburg on January 2.

He declared that a great improvement in the character of films shown in the state has been brought about through the board's policy of driving the "hero crook" from the screen, and added that "despite the move to the contrary the necessity for censorship is very apparent," declaring it was found necessary to make 29,868 eliminations from 18,366 reels examined during the last year.

It is pointed out, however, that Governor Sproul's insistence on the continuance of censorship in Pennsylvania carries no special significance in view of the fact that his term of office expires this month. Gifford Pinchot, who succeeds Sproul as Governor, has not committed himself as to what his policy will be on the question of censorship.

Late News Notes from the West Coast by Wire

PAUL GERSON PICTURES CORPORATION of San Francisco has leased space at Universal City for the production of "The Cricket on the Hearth" under the direction of Lorimer Johnson. The cast will include Virginia Brown Faire, Fritzi Ridgeway, Jones Standing, Margaret Landis, William Stoddard, Paul Gerson and Charles Gerson.

The annual ball of the Motion Picture Directors' association will be held at the Alexandria Hotel on the evening of the 17th of February.

Pettijohn Is Missionary on Censorship

The seriousness of the censorship situation in Missouri and Indiana resulted in a visit to those states by Charles Pettijohn, as representative of the Will Hays organization, during the past two weeks.

Pettijohn conferred with leading men of the industry at Indianapolis where the state legislature convened last week. Several of the local influential women's organizations have declared in favor of censorship, but the powerful Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays, with branches in dozens of cities, are expected to continue their stand with the industry against the regulation, believing in unofficial indorsement rather than legal restriction.

Pettijohn's schedule in Missouri included a conference with exchange managers and exhibitors in St. Louis and another one at Jefferson City.

Two years ago Missouri was saved from censorship through the efforts of a valiant band in the state senate. A few of those gentlemen are no longer members of the legislature, which makes the situation all the more difficult.

Reform Bureau Will Urge Federal Regulation

In a statement to the United Press Monday evening, Robert Watson, president of the International Reform Bureau, replacing the late Dr. Wilbur Crafts, announced that the church leaders will meet January 18th instead of January 10th, to discuss movie and other indigo legislation.

Watson said that his bureau will launch a movement for federal regulation of the film business as a result of the Will Hays order restoring Arbuckle to the screen.

In effect the law the Reform Bureau promises is a six-member federal movie commission of four men and two women, to each receive $9,000 a year, all the perquisites of government officials, travel allowances, etc., clerks and other supernumaries.

Dr. Giannini Honored at Coast Luncheon

Not since the initial visit of Will H. Hays to Los Angeles have as many motion picture producers gathered together to pay homage to an individual as the assemblage that honored Dr. A. H. Gianinni at a luncheon given in his honor by Joseph Schenck and Sol Lesser at the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles, this week.

Dr. Gianinni is regarded as one of America's greatest bankers. He is president of the East River National Bank of New York. In the past few years, Doctor Gianinni has been loaning motion picture producers and distributing organizations for the production and releasing of film product of merit.

According to Gianinni, the motion picture industry is placed in his estimation on a parallel with the greatest industries in the country.

Three years ago, according to Gianinni, when the big crash came and finances were at their lowest ebb in recent money history, the picture world stood pat and paid its debts. Dr. Gianinni proudly asserts he has never lost a dime in all his bank loans with the silent drama industry.

Among those present at the Schenck-Lesser luncheon were Mack Sennett, Thomas H. Ince, Abraham Lehr, F. J. Godsol, Irving M. Lesser, B. P. Shulberg, Jack, Harry and Sam Warner, Samuel Goldwyn, Jack Coogan, Sr., Sid Grauman, J. G. Bachman, M. C. Levee, A. L. and M. Gore, Adolph Ramish, George Lichtenberger, John McCormick, A. L. Fitzmaurice to Produce for Goldwyn

SAMUEL GOLDWYN announces his affiliation with George Fitzmaurice and wife to make a series of George Fitzmaurice productions. The first of these will be a screen version of a well known play, the title of which has not yet been announced. Production will begin upon completion of Fitzmaurice filming "The Cheat," with Pola Negri.

Goldwyn states negotiations are pending with several other well known producers, each to conduct a separate unit.

Coogan Pictures for First National

Sol Lesser Arranges for Distribution of Jackie's Two New Productions

WITH the advent of the new year comes the announcement from Sol Lesser on the west coast to the effect arrangements have been completed whereby Associated First National Pictures, Inc., have arranged to release and distribute two new Jackie Coogan productions.

The new Coogan features are "Daddy," an original story which was directed by E. Mason Hopper and which will be released some time in March and "Toby Tyler," the circus story which is now practically completed and which was directed by Eddie Cline who was loaned the Coogan unit through the courtesy of Joseph Schenck. Cline is Buster Keaton's director.

Each of these Coogan offerings will be released as have the former Coogan features, on open market booking basis.

The "Toby Tyler" production is scheduled for a June release. Harper and Brothers contemplate issuing an elaborate photoplay edition of the book with stills from the Jackie Coogan film version. The book will precede the release of the film several months and a special campaign will be put into effect throughout the country by the publishers.

"Daddy" was 15 weeks in production at United Studios, Hollywood. "Toby Tyler" consumed practically an equal amount of time. Each of the productions are in full feature length.

The deal for these two Coogan pictures was entered into during the west coast visit of the First National executives last month and was completed immediately upon their return to New York.

Irving M. Lesser has returned east to his New York headquarters where he will handle the general distribution of the new products as well as pilot distribution for all of the former Jackie Coogan productions.

These are the fifth and sixth offerings that Jackie Coogan has made for First National under the presentation banner of Sol Lesser. The former products are "Peck's Bad Boy," "My Boy," "Trouble," and "Oliver Twist."

"Daddy" is said to be somewhat along the pathetic lines of "Oliver Twist" while "Toby Tyler" is just the opposite, dealing with the adventures of a little lad who runs away with a circus and finally is proclaimed the greatest bareback rider the world has ever known.

New York, Atlanta Jump Ahead in Pathe Contest

At the close of the seventh week of the Eschmann Sales Contest, on December 23, the returns showed Pathe branches at New York and Atlanta making the best speed recorded for the week. New York had advanced from tenth to fourth place, while Atlanta had made a spectacular jump from eighteenth to tenth. The three leaders continued to be Portland, Los Angeles and Milwaukee, in the order named.

This contest ended at midnight on December 30. It will remain for the complete returns from the eighth and final week to make certain that some "dark horse" has not usurped, or tied for, one of the prize positions.

Herbert Brenon to Direct for Paramount

The production department of Paramount announced this week that Herbert Brenon had signed a contract whereby he becomes a special director of Paramount pictures. His first production, which will be made at the Lasky studio, will be Cosmo Hamilton's "The Rustle of Silk," in which Betty Compson will bo starred. This will be followed by "The Woman With Four Faces," by Bayard Veiller, in which Miss Compson will also be the star.

Mr. Brenon has been prominent in the profession ever since he produced "Neptune's Daughter" for Fox. This production was followed by "A Daughter of the Gods," which he produced also for Fox. In both of these pictures Annette Kellerman was starred. Then came "War Brides," in which Alla Nazimova was the star. Later on he produced "The Fall of the Romanoffs," "The Lone Wolf," and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back."

Assoc. Exhibitors' Sales Representatives Named

W. B. FRANK, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, announced this week the appointment of A. W. Smith, Jr., as general home-office representative. The appointment was effective January 1st. Mr. Smith resigned as assistant general manager of Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation to accept this appointment.

Mr. Frank announced also the appointment of Daniel L. Martin as branch sales manager in Kansas City, and Irvin Hirsch in Indianapolis, and of the following additions to the list of sales representatives at various branches: Chicago, E. P. Pickler and Phil Solomon; Buffalo, John Thomson; St. Louis, L. C. Dillon; Pittsburgh, R. J. Matthews; New Orleans, L. S. Collier.

Geller Will Establish Publicity Agency

James Geller, formerly press representative for Douglas Fairbanks and special writer for the Jackie Coogan Productions and more recently director of exploitation for the William Fox Circuit of Theatres, has severed his connection with the Fox Film Corporation to establish an agency in New York in partnership with Edward Frohlich for the purpose of publicizing stage and screen artists.

Mr. Frohlich has served for the past fifteen years as a staff writer on many of the large metropolitan dailies and has also been a frequent contributor of articles on the stage and screen to most of the leading publications of this country and abroad.

Ivor Novello Is Signed by D. W. Griffith

D. W. Griffith has signed Ivor Novello, the English actor, to an optional contract extending for five years. The engagement of Novello is stated by United Artists to have followed a survey by Mr. Griffith of the domestic field, especially among university and college men, in search of screen acting material.

Herbert Rawlinson stars in "The Scarlet Car," Universal attraction from which these scenes are taken.

Stroheim to Film "Merry Widow"

Goldwyn Also Announces "Three Wise Fools" to Be Produced by King Vidor

ERIC VON STROHEIM will produce a screen version of Franz Lehar's comic opera, "The Merry Widow"; King Vidor will film John Golden's stage production, "Three Wise Fools"; and Clarence Badger has been engaged to direct the picturization of Edward E. Rose's new mystery play, "Red Lights." These are three interesting items contained in the sheaf of trade announcements from the Goldwyn home office this week.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation purchased from Col. Henry W. Savage the screen rights to Franz Lehar's comic opera, "The Merry Widow," as the second production to be made by Eric von Stroheim, who was recently placed under a long term contract.

Von Stroheim is now completing the continuity for his first Goldwyn picture, "McTeague," from Frank Norris's famous novel. Upon completing the photography on that photoplay, von Stroheim will prepare the continuity for "The Merry Widow" and then direct it.

The history of "The Merry Widow" is unique in the annals of light opera. After its successful production in Vienna, Colonel Savage bought it for America and presented it in New York, where it scored an instant and complete hit, and several companies toured the country in it for several years. Colonel Savage has staged two revivals to enormous receipts.

Goldwyn is going to make one of its superproductions from the successful Austin Strong play, "Three Wise Fools," which John Golden produced in New York three or four seasons ago and which had a season's run on Broadway and has since been on tour.

King Vidor, recently placed under contract to direct for Goldwyn for a term of years, has been selected to wield the megaphone on the production. Mr. Vidor is making the screen adaptation of the play in consultation with June Mathis. The work of casting the play will soon be begun.

Rupert Hughes is using Goldwyn's studio offices and the technical departments as settings for his new picture based upon his novel concerning the film colony in Hollywood, "Souls for Sale." The picture will give movie patrons an inside view of the workings of a great motion picture studio.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has engaged Clarence Badger to direct the picturization of Edward E. Rose's new mystery play, "Red Lights," formerly called "The Rear Car." This is the play which has had such a long run in Los Angeles and is now being presented in the East.

Carey Wilson, of Goldwyn's editorial department, is making the screen adaptation of the play. The cast is now being selected by the production officials, and the art department is at work on the interior settings. This marks Mr. Badger's return to the ranks of Goldwyn directors after a two years' absence.

Active Schedule Ahead for Sawyer-Lubin Company

Arthur H. Sawyer, supervising director of S-L Pictures, made some interesting announcements this week concerning his company's activities. Following the release of "Your Friend and Mine," the company will start production work on "Dangerous Dan McGrew," adapted from Robert W. Serviss's famous poem. The rights to Willard Mack's latest stage-play "Red Bulldogs" have been purchased. Arrangements have also been completed whereby Willard Mack will write special original stories for Associated Pictures Corporation, the organization recently formed by Sawyer and Lubin for the production of S-L features for release through Metro.

"Third Alarm" Opens at N. Y. Astor

Dignitaries Attend World's Premiere of Emory Johnson Production For F.B.O.

THE clang of the fire-engine, that noisy Pied Piper which draws the youthful of the nation from six to sixty, resounded throughout the Astor theatre, last Monday evening with a vengeance. The occasion was the world's premiere of the Emory Johnson production, "The Third Alarm," which Film Booking Offices of America is presenting for an extended run at the Broadway house.

Outside on the street the gong stopped passers-by and brought them into the attractive lobby; inside it served as part of the musical embellishments of the most thrilling fire sequence ever seen upon the screen.

Monday evening was a big night for F. B. O., the eight months old infant of the "infant industry." In presenting such a production as "The Third Alarm," F. B. O., under the management of P. A. Powers, has made great strides.

Even while the dedication to Thomas J. Drennan, fire commissioner of New York was flashed on the screen, Fire Chief Kenlon and his men were answering a third alarm fire less than two miles away. It was this fire which kept Chief Kenlon and several other leading officials of the fire department from seeing "The Third Alarm" on the screen. But the theatre was filled with notables, including Commissioner Drennan, Deputy Commissioner Joseph M. Crawley; Chief Thomas J. Hayes, Chief Valentine Fendrich; Commissioner of Public Works Joseph Johnson; Honorary Battalion Chief William W. Cohen, and many other officials in addition to leaders of the film world in New York.

The picture will run a month at the Astor theatre. It is being heavily exploited by the F. B. O. advertising department under the direction of Nat. G. Rothstein. Great advance interest was created by the work of Capt. Harry Gardner, "the human fly," who made a series of climbs up the sides of large buildings throughout the city advertising the feature at the Astor theatre.

The production is the second of Emory Johnson productions to be released through the Film Booking Offices of America. It was directed by Mr. Johnson and the story written by Emelie Johnson. Ralph Lewis is featured and its all-star cast includes Johnnie Walker, Ella Hall, Virginia True Boardman, Richard Morris, Josephine Adair, and Frankie Lee.

"Love Letter" with Gladys Walton Due February 21

Gladys Walton's first 1923 picture for Universal, titled "The Love Letter" and adapted from Bradley King's "The Madonna of Avenue A," will be released on February 12th, according to an announcement this week from the Universal home office.

"Gimme!" at the New York Capitol Next Week

"Gimme!" Rupert Hughes's latest Goldwyn picture, will be the attraction at New York's Capitol theatre next week. Mr. Hughes wrote the continuity for this photoplay in collaboration with his wife and was assisted by her in directing it.

Helene Chadwick and Gaston Glass have the leading roles. Others in the cast are Kate Lester, Henry B. Walthal, Eleanor Boardman, David Imboden, May Wallace, Georgia Woodthorpe, Anderson Smith and Jean Hope.

Scenes from the new Harry Carey picture, "Canyon of the Fools," presented by P. A. Powers, distributed by Film Booking Offices of America.

Three Stories Purchased By Universal

Universal has just acquired the screen rights to a group of important stories from the pens of well known persons, and which are to be made into feature productions for mid-year release.

One is an original story by William J. Flynn, former Chief U. S. Secret Service. It is a strange story of adventure based on actual facts unearthed by the great detective during his professional career as a government sleuth.

Another important story secured by Universal is "The Self Made Wife," a recent Saturday Evening Post serial by Elizabeth Alexander.

A third story purchased by Universal for early production is "Blinky," a Gene Markey story.

Hamlin Resigns as Editor of M. P. Journal

Thomas J. Hamlin, for three years managing editor of Motion Picture Journal, has resigned to devote all his time to Tom Hamlin, Inc., advertising agency serving the eighteen regional film trade journals of the United States and Canada.

Lawrence A. Urbach, for many years associated with Mr. Hamlin on Motion Picture Journal, is now managing editor of that publication, while Marion D. Weber, formerly asociate editor of Motion Picture Journal, is now secretary-treasurer of Tom Hamlin, Inc.

Dave Thompson on Staff of Fox Sunshine Comedy Co.

Dave Thompson, for many years connected with Metro in an executive capacity, is the new business manager of the William Fox Sunshine comedy productions, replacing Horace Hand, who now handles the business end of location production.

"Tol'able David" Wins Honor Medal

JAMES QUIRK, publisher of Photoplay Magazine, has formally awarded to Inspiration Pictures the Medal of Honor for having produced in "Tol'able David," in which Richard Barthelmess made his first appearance as a star, the best picture of 1922. This was done at the Radio Show held in Grand Central Palace, New York City, Mr. Quirk's speech being broadcasted. The handsome gold medal was accepted by J. Boyce Smith, Secretary of Inspiration Pictures.

This award is made not by a jury of critics of judges, of so-called experts, or of censors, but by the American people. These people are regular attendants of motion picture theatres throughout the United States, and they are therefore qualified to pass upon the merits of any production.

Vitagraph President Off for Hollywood

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, left for Hollywood Tuesday where he will supervise personally the special productions which have been announced for release this season by Vitagraph. The next of these is "Masters of Men," Morgan Robertson's sea novel, which has been picturized by C. Graham Baker.

These special productions will have all-star casts and Mr. Smith will select the players. Before leaving, Mr. Smith said that the all-star cast of "Masters of Men" will include Earle Williams, Alice Calhoun, Cullen Landis, and Wanda Hawley. David Smith, who recently finished "The Ninety and Nine," will direct "Masters of Men."

"Cress" Smith to Australia for United Artists

Cresson E. Smith, assistant general sales-manager of United Artists Corporation, is sailing on January 23d from San Francisco, by the steamship Ventura for a tour of the Australian offices of United Artists, and a general investigation of United Artists business in that territory.

Fox Names Releases for January 7

"Footlight Ranger" with Chas. Jones and Dustin Farnum Film on Schedule

PRODUCTIONS starring Charles Jones and Dustin Farnum, a revival of "Salome," a Sunshine Comedy and a Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoon comprise the release schedule for the week of January 7th by Fox Film Corporation.

"The Footlight Ranger" is the title of the Charles Jones vehicle, and will be released on the fourteenth. The story, which was written by Dorothy Yost, presents the actor in a role demanding both comedy and dramatic action. The director is Scott Dunlap. Fritzi Brunette plays opposite Jones. The other players are James Mason, Lillian Langdon, Lydia Yeamans Titus and Henry Barrows.

The Dustin Farnum release is "Three Who Paid," scheduled for January 7th. This is a story of the American plains by George Owen Baxter and directed by Colin Campbell. Bessie Love, Frank Campeau, William Conklin, Fred Kohler, Robert Daly and Robert Agnew are all in the cast. The scenario is by Joseph F. Poland.

The Fox Film Corporation, after deciding upon a revival of its screen version of "Salome," undertook the preparation of lobby displays and advertising accessories for the re-launching of the production. "Salome" is on the release schedule for January 14th.

The Sunshine Comedy, "Rides and Slides," will be ready for distribution January 7th, and the Mutt and Jeff cartoon, "Steeplechase," on the same day. Fox News continues its bi-weekly publication.

Scenes from "Brass Commandments," starring William Farnum, a William Fox production.

"Tents of Allah" Set for February 25th Release

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS has selected February 25th as the release date for "The Tents of Allah," the second of the productions made for that organization by Edward A. MacManus. Both story and direction are by Charles A. Logue, well known novelist and magazine contributor. Mr. Logue assisted in the general supervision of the producing company's activities. The picture was filmed at the Edward A. MacManus studios in Porto Rico.

Monte Blue and Mary Alden have leading roles. The cast also includes Mary Thurman, Frank Currier, Macey Harlam, Charles Lane, Sallie Crute and Martin Faust.

Doug's Picture Opens in Boston

Park Theatre Sold Out; Police Called to Handle Crowd; Paul Dickey on Hand

THE opening of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Park theatre Boston, Mass., was one of the most conspicuous events that has been seen in this city. An entire day before the first performance the whole house was sold out, and hundreds upon hundreds of people seeking tickets at the last minute were turned away. Even the sale of standing room tickets had to be stopped, for the Fire Department served notice that the limit was already exceeded some time before the performance.

The audience, which included a great number of Boston's official and social elect, was highly appreciative of the picture. Paul Dickey, prominent as playwright and actor, and who took the part of Sir Guy Gisbourne in the Fairbanks spectacle, came on from New York for the opening. He was accompanied by John Fairbanks, Doug's brother and manager. Shortly after the arrival of these notables a press luncheon was tendered at the Hotel Touraine, all the critics being present.

The lobby was so jammed at the time of the first performance that the police had to be called on for aid in making a passageway that ticket holders and the evening's guests might get in. Never in the city's history, according to many of the theatre habitues who flocked to the premiere, has a crowd equal to this ever been seen at the first night of either screen or stage presentation. It was found necessary to delay the start some minutes so that ticket holders might have a chance to get in before the beginning.

Following the intermission after the first part of the picture, John Fairbanks came out before the orchestra and introduced Paul Dickey, who received a rousing ovation. Mr. Dickey related many of the more interesting incidents in connection with the filming of the spectacle, and read a letter from Doug extending his congratulations to the city and best wishes for the season.

Prominent among those in the first night audience were Lieut. Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, Mayor James M. Curley, Frederick S. Snyder, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Jeremiah Burke, superintendent of schools; Arthur S. Johnson, president Y. M. C. A.; Rev. A. Z. Conrad, Mrs. C. A. Hutchins, president Business Women's Club of Boston; Judge Edward L. Logan, Mrs. Charles W. Norby, president Y. W. C. A.; Richard Ray, vice-president Y. M. C. Union; James J. Phelan, fuel administrator; Professors Baker and Hersey, of the English department at Harvard, and B. Loring Young, speaker of the house of representatives of Massachusetts.

Carl Laemmle Host to Universal Home-Office Staff

Carl Laemmle's annual party to the Universal home office employees was held last Saturday night at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City. It was a dance and buffet supper, and was by far the most elaborate affair ever staged by Universal. The entire Hotel Pennsylvania Roof Garden was given over to the Universal joy makers. By special arrangement, the Waldorf Astoria Orchestra was obtained for the dancing. More than five hundred Universalites, including executives and employees of the Big U Exchange, Universal's New York sales branch, were present.

The high light of the evening was the appearance of Mr. Will Hays, who had gladly seized the opportunity to meet the film family of the Universal home office.

E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of Universal, acted as master-of-ceremonies. The committee on arrangements comprised R. S. Biggart, Jack Gartman, Joe Ludwig, Paul Kohner, Sidney Singerman, Mrs. M. F. Todd, and Harry H. Zehner.

Fred E. Baer Opens Advertising Office

Fred E. Baer, associated with the Charles Urban enterprises for the past several years as advertising and publicity director, has entered the advertising business on his own. Mr. Baer, who entered the film advertising and publicity field several years ago from the newspaper business, is well known in metropolitan film circles. While setting up his own organization, Mr. Baer still remains associated with the Urban enterprises in his former capacity. The Fred E. Baer Advertising organization is headquartered in the Loew Building.

Fox Manager Made Member of Detective Ass'n

The Detective Endowment Association of the New York Police Department has elected John Zanft, general manager of the William Fox circuit of theatres, an honorary member of the association. Mr. Zanft, who is known personally to many members of the detective bureau through his long connection with the William Fox theatrical circuit, now exhibits a membership card the back of which bears the imprint of his good right thumb, a signature that the most skilful of forgers will find impossible to duplicate.

Bayard Veiller on Scenario Staff of Cosmopolitan

Bayard Veiller, well-known playwright and author, has been engaged by the Cosmopolitan Corporation as a member of the scenario staff of that organization.

Mr. Veiller is best known as the author of "Within the Law" and "The 13th Chair." Recently, he has been devoting most of his time to motion picture work.

Floyd Brockell on Tour of Key Cities for 1st Nat'l

On Monday of this week, January 8th, Floyd M. Brockell, manager of distribution of Associated First National, Inc., left the New York office on an extensive business tour which will take him into all the big big key cities of Western United States and Canada with a short trip to Mexico City.

Mr. Brockell's itinerary will take him first to Chicago, then to St. Louis, New Orleans, Mexico City, Dallas, Oklahoma, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Butte, Seattle, Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, back to Chicago and returning to the New York office March 17th.

A statement from the First National home-office describes the purpose of Mr. Brockell's trip in part as follows:

"Mr. Brockell expects to come back with data gathered from exhibitors and from First National men in the field that will put First National in as harmonious a relation with the exhibitor as it is possible to make any organization. He will take up the question of better service and will discuss the exhibitors generally and with first run exhibitors in particular the matter of rentals as compared with receipts.

"He will seek, too, the best information on just what percentage of the cost of a first run theatre's program may safely be paid for the feature picture."

Mary Carr Is Honored by A.M.P.A.

At a recent meeting of the A. M. P. A., Mary Carr, "the greatest mother of the screen," was elected an honorary member. She is the only woman who has ever been so honored. The motion to make her a member of the organization was made by John C. Flinn, the president, who said that this was due Mrs. Carr, not only because of her work as a screen actress and star, but also because of the deep interest that she takes in all branches of the industry and because of the good she has done.

Pathe Serial Sales Manager Goes to Coast

E. O. Brooks, Pathe serial sales-manager, left New York on Saturday for an extended visit to Pacific Coast key cities. It was announced that Mr. Brooks would devote ten weeks, or longer, to a detailed inquiry into trade conditions in that important territory. His headquarters during different periods will be the Pathe branch offices at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle.

Principal Pictures Purchases King Vidor Studio

SOL LESSER, president of Principal Pictures corporation, this week announced the purchase by the corporation of the King Vidor studio, 7200 Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood. Principal Pictures took possession on the tenth.

Production will be started immediately on the first Harold Bell Wright story, "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent."

Lesser also promises a statement this week regarding the renewal of Jackie Coogan's contract with Principal Pictures, which has been pending and which has caused considerable discussion.

Principal is to make 12 features during this year, it is announced.

New Universal Managers at Buffalo, Salt Lake City

IMPORTANT changes in the sales organization of Universal Pictures are announced as follows by the home office this week:

Harry Bernstein named branch-manager at the Buffalo office, succeeding Maurice A. Chase recently sent abroad as Universal's general representative in Continental Europe.

Robert Epperson appointed as manager of the Salt Lake City branch in place of F. L. McNamee, who has returned East.

Both the appointees have been with the Universal Pictures Corporation over a long period of time, and their promotions were made in accordance with Universal's policy of advancement within the ranks for meritorious service.

Bernstein was formerly district-manager of the Western Canadian branches prior to his appointment to the Buffalo managership. He started as a salesman at the New York office of Universal a few years ago and has advanced rapidly. Epperson has been with Universal for six years, rising from the shipping room to his present position.

Fox Employees Entertain at New Year's Party

New Year's Eve was celebrated with real jollification by the sales force and employes of the New York exchange of the Fox Film Corporation, who presented a vaudeville and gave a dance for exhibitors and friends. Louis Rosenbluth, the executive, left a sick bed to act as host.

The guests included Messrs. Schmertz, Conlen, Myers, Juskowitz, Smolen, Saunders, Blenderman, Nicholls, Green, Horowitz, Walsh, Lamb, Furst, Muller, Gibbs, Fromage, Limburger, Giller, Steiner, Blumenthal, Block, Levine, Dazey, Willis, Moses, Thompson, Scott, and many others.

Gladys Walton to Start Work on "Gossip"

King Baggot is ready to start work on a new Gladys Walton picture at Universal City. It will be "Gossip," a screen adaptation of a novel by Edith Barnard Delano, entitled "When Carey Came To Town."

For "Gossip" Universal has lined up Gladys Walton, star, King Baggot, director, and Hugh Hoffman, scenario writer.

It probably will be ready for release about the middle of March.

Paramount Engages Allen Dwan to Direct Series

Allan Dwan, who was specially engaged to direct Edith Wharton's "The Glimpses of the Moon" for Paramount and now has the production well under way at the Long Island studio, has signed a contract for a series of Paramount productions to bear his name.

The first production to be made by Mr. Dwan under his new contract will be "Lawful Larceny," Samuel Shipman's play which, produced by Al. H. Woods, ran the good part of a year at the Republic theatre in New York. Edmund Goulding has been engaged to write the script.

"Scaramouche" to Be Next Rex Ingram Picture

"Scaramouche," a picturization of Rafel Sabatini's novel of the same name, will be the next Rex Ingram production for Metro Pictures Corporation, by arrangement with Charles L. Wagner. Mr. Ingram is now in New York, having returned from Miami, Fla., where, for the past three months, he was engaged in the production of "Where the Pavement Ends," based on a story by John Russell. Mr. Ingram is now cutting and titling this picture.

The final selection of Mr. Ingram's next picture also brought with it the information that the director plans to make his next photoplay following "Scaramouche" in Europe.

Miss Dupont and Washburn in "Common Law" Cast

Miss Dupont and Bryant Washburn have been added to the cast of "The Common Law," which is now in production at the Selznick studios under the direction of George Archainbaud. Miss Dupont has been loaned to the Selznick company for the part of Lillian Neville. Washburn will appear in the role of Burleson. Players already engaged include: Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle, Elliott Dexter, Doris May, Harry Meyers, Hobart Bosworth, Phyllis Haver and Wallie Van.

Antonio Moreno and Bebe Daniels to Co-Star

Antonio Moreno, who appears as leading man with Gloria Swanson in Paramount's "My American Wife" and is featured in support of Mary Miles Minter in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," is to be co-starred with Bbe Daniels in "The Exalters," Paramount announces. This picture will be made at the Long Island studio following the completion of the Allan Dwan production, "The Glimpses of the Moon," in which Miss Daniels is a featured player.

"Peg O' My Heart" to Be Made Into Operatta

"Peg o' My Heart" is now to be presented in operatic form. Dr. Hugo Felix is at present at work upon the scores of a "Peg" operetta in collaboration with J. Hartley Manners. The story has already been adapted from its original version as a novel, as a printed play, stage comedy, and most recently a photoplay. The screen version was made for Metro release.

Metro to Spend $400,000 in Enlarging Coast Studios

JOSEPH ENGLE this week announced an enlargement program for Metro which will require the expenditure of $400,000 in the next three months for new buildings.

The largest enclosed stage of today will be built, 150 by 350 feet in size. A fireproof building will be built for storage and various mechanical and garage departments.

Sawyer-Lubin has announced the building of a studio at San Diego to be used for their own productions and as a commercial plant.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

When Knighthood Was in Flower—

Are there any more pictures being made like this one? If so, I'll book the output. Patrons praised it. Receipts top. (West.)

Doing capacity with this on run. (East.)

Too Much Wife—

A program picture but it drew big business. Good crowds for the entire showing of a half week. (Middle West.)

Thirty Days—

Favorable comment by patrons. (Middle West.)

Fair picture and business very good.

Nancy from Nowhere—

This feature was used as the New Year celebration when the crowd was good enough for a week. Business good the half week. (Middle West.)

Outcast—

Not so good. (Middle West.)

For the Defense—

A good box office attraction. Received much praise from press and patrons and did a big business all week. (Middle West.)

Singed Wings—

Not much of a picture, and not much business. Nothing special to condemn, also much worthy to recommend. (Middle West.)

Kick In—

A very well balanced picture. Patrons liked the work of Compson, Lytell and MacAvoy very much. Nice attendance. (Middle West.)

The Young Rajah—

Not up to Valentino's best, but his popularity brought them in. Business good. (Middle West.)

Back Home and Broke—

Meighan's popularity brought them in; a good picture advertised the attraction so that we did well on it for a week. (West.)

This picture broke records for the price of rental. These crowds were holiday rushes and not criterion, however, of what business might be at other times. But it's a picture that everyone likes. (Middle West.)

Meighan popular with our patrons and they liked him in this one. Played to good business for a week. (Middle West.)

Best picture we have had yet and business was phenomenal. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Hottentot—

Unusual racing picture that got average business. (Middle West.)

Business was fine for the whole week with lock-outs for first three days. Holiday crowds responsible partly for big business, but the picture also serves as a good drawing card. (Middle West.)

Splendid comedy which brought heartiest laughter of the season and proved fine box office attraction. (Middle West.)

The Dangerous Age—

A splendid drawing card which played to a big week's attendance. (Middle West.)

Went over very well, all our patrons declaring that it was very enjoyable. (Middle West.)

Good picture, about average business on this. (Middle West.)

Did very well for this house. Never can tell what they'll like. (West.)

A very good picture and business unusually good. (East.)

East Is West—

Greatly to the surprise of the management, this one stood them up all week, beating several of the biggest attractions of the past several months in box office results. (East.)

Omar, the Tentmaker—

Conceded by our patrons as very fine. Did well with it. (West.)

Alias Julius Caesar—

Charles Ray made many new friends with this one, which did a lively week's business. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Pawned—

Cold weather did not prevent this one from playing to large crowds for a week's run. (Middle West.)

A very good picture. (Middle West.)

Picture and business both under par. (East.)

FOX

My Friend the Devil—

It was impossible to get in on opening day and New Year's and the S. R. O. was put up early each evening during the rest of the week. (East.)

Catch My Smoke—

Tom Mix is a prime favorite and he didn't lose any of his popularity with this one. Had a real kick. (Middle West.)

Just Tony—

Mix is a big favorite with patrons of this house and business was unusually satisfactory for the week. (East.)

The Ragged Heiress—

Cold weather and picture without drawing power resulted in bad week. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Flirt—

Good picture, good business, good receipts. (West.)

One of the best pictures of the year and true to life all the way through. Pleased our patrons. Business exceptionally good. (Middle West.)

One Wonderful Night—

Average picture; business was fair. Best part of the attraction is the title, which brought people into the theatre. (Middle West.)

Caught Bluffing—

Business better than usual. Holiday rush probably responsible. (Middle West.)

The Flaming Hour—

Slumped off after the first two days of the week and attracted below average business. (East.)

Another Man's Shoes—

A good picture in every way. Very good attendance during week's run. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Brothers Under the Skin—

Strong competition hurt this one, which is a very good entertainment. Business fair for a seven-day run. (East.)

This is sort of a crazy story with a good cast. There was no complaint against the business. They stepped right up to the box office. (Middle West.)

Hungry Hearts—

An appealing picture; gets under the vests. Should go big anywhere. (Middle West.)

Broken Chains—

This is a powerful story, well played and with thrilling incidents. Did good business. (Middle West.)

FILM BOOKING OFFICES

The Broadway Madonna—

Most audiences like to see the Gay White Way. This film brings it home to them from a different angle. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Dr. Jack—

Specializes in curing the blues and poor box office receipts. My patrons and critics said that it was Harold Lloyd's best effort. (Middle West.)

Not quite so good as "Grandma's Boy" but a great picture, just the same. Played to fine business, held for a second week. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Tess of the Storm Country—

Stood them out the first week, and still coming strong. (Middle West.)

A Tailor Made Man—

Better than most of Ray's recent efforts. Went over in good shape here. (Middle West.)

ALLIED PRODUCERS AND DISTRIBUTORS

Garrison's Finish—

Jack Pickford not in favor here, was sorry I booked it and it didn't do any better than I expected. (West.)

A Woman's Woman—

Mary Alden is strong enough to make an otherwise poor picture seem to please patrons. Some liked her better than in "The Old Nest" on account of her looking younger. (West.)

METRO

Peg o' My Heart—

Second week went over only fair. The picture was well liked and did big business the first week. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

The Ninety and Nine—

A thriller that attracted those who want thrills. Good picture of its kind. (Middle West.)

MAJESTIC
Well—what would You do?
Some day we expect to get around to showing another picture. We've worn out one print of this already, and the organist plays the funny music in his sleep.
BUT—one-third more people saw it last week than the week before—so what are we going to do about it? You—we know we said the fourth and fifth weeks would be the last. We won't say it this week. We'll run it all winter if you want us to. Certainly if more people come this week than last week we'll hold it.
But unless the whole town is seeing it two and three times we can't possibly see how this week can help bring the last.

Opera Cars Used in Australian "Masquerader" Campaign

Sydney, Australia.—Haymarket Theatre, Ltd., has established a reputation for exploitation in Australia, and its work is closely watched by other theatres. Recently the theatre initiated a First National anniversary in what was sloganed and advertised as a "Go-to-the-Haymarket-Month."

The opening picture of the month was "The Masquerader," and the chief exploitation stunt on this was the use of masked chauffeurs, masked girls and five de luxe enclosed opera cars that were driven around the city. The signs painted on the windows of the five cars, respectively, read: "Go to the" "Haymarket Month," "Starting Tomorrow With" "Guy Bates Post" "In 'The Masquerader.'" The cars were lined up and driven through the city in uninterrupted order, forming a procession that gave pedestrians the complete wording of the sign.

The theatre, the firm handling the cars and their manufacturers, the Fiat company, all obtained enormous publicity. The "Go-to-the-Haymarket-Month" was a tremendous success following this introduction. The four men who engineered the month's exploitation were: Stanley N. Wright, general manager; Hal. H. Carleton, publicity director; Jack Robertson, film buyer, and Walter Grant, producer.

Large Question Marks Used on "Who Are My Parents?"

BALTIMORE, MD.—When the New theatre put on "Who Are My Parents?" a striking part of the exploitation was the use of huge red interrogation points above the marquee, which flashed on and off at brief intervals. The marquee is over Lexington street, ever a thronged shopping thoroughfare, and the stunt attracted wide attention.

Banners from the roof to the top of the marquee, illuminated at night, also were used to advertise the picture.

Humorous Teaser Ads Used for "Brothers Under the Skin"

Wichita, Kans.—Stanley Chambers of the Miller theatre and William H. Branch, Goldwynner at the Kansas City exchange, used an effective series of newspaper teaser ads for "Brothers Under the Skin" recently.

Two series of teasers were used, one in each of the daily papers. They were alike in form so that each ad was related to every other one in the series whether in the same or a different paper. The ad was one column wide by three inches deep. In the upper left-hand corner was a heavily ruled box containing a humorous message to the public. A smaller box, in the lower right-hand corner, lightly ruled, contained merely the title of the photoplay.

In the bigger box, in one newspaper, was run a series of rules for husbands. Rule No. 1 read: "Don't talk back—except to say 'yes.'" No. 5 ran: "Avoid hiring pretty stenographers—'fast' typewriters have led to many matrimonial smashups."

In the other newspaper the messages in the larger box ran as follows: "Sure—all wives think they're door mats—all husbands think they're henpecked—this difference of opinion makes the divorce mill operate. Yes!—it would be nice for some folks if they had bought their mates on the installment plan—quit paying—and the company takes 'em back. Yep!—'there's no place like home'—that's why you find club rooms full of males with hunted looks in their eyes. And—when you get right down to facts, the boss of the bank roll is the one who talks loudest—and longest."

"Old Homestead" Tied Up With Apples at Stillman

Cleveland, Ohio—M. A. Malaney, publicity manager for Loew's Ohio theatres, put over a campaign on "The Old Homestead" for the Stillman theatre which embraced two special features.

One was the most elaborate lobby display that the Stillman has ever indulged in. The other was an apple campaign that was inaugurated the second week of the run.

This is the first time that the Stillman theatre has built up a lobby display that came right out to the sidewalk. This one was made to look like the entrance to a county fair. The fall festival idea was carried out. Pumpkins, corn stalks, and autumn leaves decorated the picket fence that closed in the lobby. It took Cleveland about a week to hear all about the lobby display, and by the time the second week of the engagement came around, Malaney had another surprise for folks. Beginning with Monday of the second week, he tied up with the Wenatchee Apple Company. The apple company contributed huge barrels of apples, each barrel well labelled with the trade name of the Wenatchee apple. The Stillman theatre had girls in sunbonnets and gingham dresses handing out these apples to all patrons. Malaney says that more than 5,000 apples were distributed.

Exhibitor Ties Up with Army on "Grandma's Boy"

Frankfort, Ind.—A tie-up which worked both ways was made by Manager Charles Metzger of the Rialto theatre in putting over "Grandma's Boy." On the day the run opened the army was recruiting in Frankfort, so he (Metzger) tied up with the recruiting officers, who were using airplanes to attract volunteers.

The planes, flying low over the town, attracting wide attention, dropped handbills, one side of which bore selling copy for "Grandma's Boy" at the Rialto and on the other side recruiting copy for the Army Air Service.

Novelty Folding Herald Used on "My Friend the Devil"

Montgomery, Ala.—Manager H. C. Farley, of the Empire theatre, for his campaign on "My Friend, the Devil," made up a novelty folding herald, printed in red ink. The front cover read, "You Should Meet—." Then on the two inside pages was displayed the title, "'My Friend, the Devil,'" and in a bottom corner, "at the Empire theatre, Tuesday and Wednesday." To the left of the title was a two and one-half inch cut of "the devil," and below this in small type, "Whatever else he is—he's interesting."

On the back cover appeared selling copy for the picture.

Street Ballyhoo Used to Put "Nero" Over at New

BALTIMORE, MD.—J. J. Geller, special exploitation representative of Fox, used an effective street ballyhoo for putting "Nero" over at the New theatre.

The week previous to the opening of "Nero" Mr. Geller secured the services of two of the tallest men available in Baltimore and dressed them up in the uniform of Roman soldiers. Both men paraded the downtown streets of the city during the height of the Christmas shopping.

On the day of the opening of "Nero" the men were mounted upon two horses, which were also dressed in the accoutrements of Nero's time. The lobby was also appropriately decorated for this motion picture.

Winking Contest Put Over in Butte on "East Is West"

Butte, Mont.—The winking contest idea on "East Is West" sounded good to Manager Charles C. Pratt of the American theatre.

Acting on the suggestion of the press book and feeling that every wink would make people think of Ming Toy and her coquettish wink, Mr. Pratt hustled down to the editor of the Butte Post, the city's most conservative newspaper, and laid the contest idea before him. The idea was so novel the editor grew enthusiastic and started the contest with a four-column ad and column story next day, and gave it front page publicity for a week.

The American theatre paid for having photos made of the Butte winkers who entered the contest, also the cost price of the cuts made from these photos and screen slides, but the total bill was not large. A half page ad with a large line cut of Ming Toy winking, as the only illustration, was used by Mr. Pratt as his opening day display, and teasers varying from one column four inches to two columns eight inches preceded the big spread. Normal advertising after the opening was the rule.

Atop the American marquee Mr. Pratt put three sheet cut-outs of the principal characters of the play under the rays of reflectors, and beneath the marquee covered his bright electric bulbs with vari-colored Japanese lanterns.

Exciting Experience Contest on "One Exciting Night"

Seattle, Wash.—"My Most Exciting Night" was the title of a contest put over in conjunction with the Seattle Star by Vic Gauntlett for John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre here when "One Exciting Night" was run at that theatre.

Cash prizes of $35, $25, $15 and $10, as well as tickets to the theatre, were awarded for the best 200-word essay by Seattle citizens on the "Exciting Night" subject. The six best essays were printed in the Star's columns, and publicity on the contest was run for several weeks in advance, as well as during the showing.

Another item of exploitation put over by Mr. Gauntlett was the distribution of bright yellow cards, four by five inches in size, to each patron of the theatre as he passed out at the end of the performance. Each card bore a small cartoon of "Romeo Washington," the colored comedian of the play, and the words, "Shh—! Not a Word to Your Friends About the Solution of the Mysterious Plot in D. W. Griffith's 'One Exciting Night,' Now playing at the Blue Mouse Theatre."

These cards, as well as carrying out their purpose and keeping the solution of the plot quiet, also had the effect as clever advertising matter, due to the fact that patrons of the theatre, after carrying the card out and reading it, would drop it some place on the street where it would attract the attention of many more people.

Window display on "The Young Rajah" arranged by Poli's Bijou theatre, New Haven. The frame was made over from a cigarette display, and Oriental rugs and cut-outs completed the window

Challenges Local Newspaper to Review "Human Hearts"

KITCHENER, ONT.—C. J. Appel, manager of the Lyric theatre, is handicapped by the fact that the local press will not review any motion picture performance.

In exploiting "Human Hearts," Manager Appel challenged the press to be present at one of the first day's performances and tell their readers just what they thought of the picture. They accepted the challenge and gave a very favorable review, to which Mr. Appel then replied, again taking advantage of free space.

"Knighthood" Campaign Tied Up with Large Ballroom

Detroit, Mich.—A tie-up which placed signs on "When Knighthood was in Flower" in the Greystone, Detroit's "million dollar ballroom," was put over for the showing of that picture at the Adams theatre.

Walter P. Lindlar, Paramount exploiteer, sold the management of the ballroom the idea, and the theatre got away with little or no expense. The feature was balloting among the patrons for the girl who most resembled Marion Davies, and who would receive one of the gowns worn by the actress in the picture.

Lindlar obtained the gown from Cosmopolitan, but only at a price. And of this price he relieved the theatre, and convinced the dance hall proprietor that he ought to pay. The latter thought so much of the idea that he hopped in with no objections at all.

The night of the "Knighthood Ball" the floor was packed because the balloting had been heavy and the electioneering active. The winner was presented in her costume looking for the world like Henry VIII's beautiful sister.

Hunt for Pearls Put Over as "Sherlock Holmes" Stunt

Peterborough, Ont.—Thanks to a stunt put across by William Stewart, Goldwynner, "Sherlock Holmes" was the chief topic of conversation in Peterborough for more than a week before and during its showing at the Grand Opera House.

It consisted mainly of a hunt for a replica of the famous Lansdowne pearls, stolen by Professor Moriarity and recovered by Sherlock Holmes. The string of pearls, in a case, hidden on top of a telephone pole, cost exactly $3.50. A Peterborough jeweler was induced to put an expensive string of pearls in his window with a suggestion of pearls as an appropriate Christmas gift, with a card announcing that the string was an exact duplicate of the Lansdowne pearls stolen at a society ball in London and recovered by Sherlock Holmes.

The toy department of a large department store placed a card in their window announcing "Sherlock Holmes informs us that Moriarity, Europe's Master Crook, visited our toy department while in the possession of the stolen Lansdowne pearls. Why don't you?"

A map of the streets was published in a local newspaper showing the route taken by Moriarity. Cards in four styles were made with arrows pointing direction and "Sherlock Holmes" says—"Warm on the trail of the Lansdowne Pearls. Hot—Hotter—Stop—Look—Here!" The reward for finding the pearls was "Keep the pearls and here's a couple of seats for your trouble."

Window Display with Dummies and Cage on "Bond Boy"

RENO, Nev.—Frank Costello, manager of the T. & D. Jr. theatre, used an ingenious window display to tie up with "The Bond Boy."

Life-sized dummies of a youth within a cage and a woman on the outside, were placed in the windows of several stores. Fastened on one side of the cage were neat window cards announcing "The Bond Boy," now showing at the Majestic.

"Old Homestead" Photos Get Page of Publicity

SEATTLE, WASH.—A tie-up which obtained a solid page of free publicity on "The Old Homestead" was made by J. W. Sayre, advertising manager of the Greater Theatre Company.

He sent a photographer around town to "snapshot" some of the leading old homesteads of the city. One of the Sunday papers ran this as a full page feature in the magazine section, with text telling the history of the old houses and working in conspicuous mention of the photoplay. The only cost was for the photographer.

An interesting example of what can be done in the way of window tie-ups in a small city is furnished in these four attractive displays, part of the campaign of the Odeon theatre on "Lorna Doone" at Bartlesville, Okla.

William K. Mitchell of the Isis theatre, Denver, arranged for this attracive window in a leading department store as a tie-up with "Nero"

Motorcycle Accident Utilized to Aid "Manslaughter"

Chickasha, Okla.—A local motorcycle accident helped Manager Clayton Tunstill, of the Rialto theatre, to put "Manslaughter" over, through his initiative in taking advantage of it.

Just two days before the picture opened, a motorcycle had run into an automobile in front of the Rialto theatre, the man riding the motorcycle being seriously hurt. It seemed that chance played right into the hands of Mr. Tunstill.

He immediately arranged with the owner of the motorcycle to let him place the machine, before any repairs were made, in the lobby of his theatre. On each side of this motorcycle stood a cut-out, one of Thomas Meighan and the other of Leatrice Joy. A large banner extended from cut-out to cut-out with the following sales message: "You Must Pay—Sex, Wealth or Social Position Won't Save You."

On the motorcycle was a sign which read: "Someone Injured—The Machine Demolished—Be Careful of 'Manslaughter.'"

This local accident helped Mr. Tunstill to sell his city officials on the idea of allowing him to stencil the main street corners with the title of the picture, also a cautioning "To Avoid 'Manslaughter' Drive Slow."

Prizes Given to Children with Coogan Birthdate

HARTFORD, CONN.—Manager Harry Needles, of the Princess theatre, reaped a harvest of thirty columns of publicity when he exploited "Oliver Twist" with a newspaper contest tied up with the Hartford Morning Courier.

Awards varying from a monetary consideration to a set of Dickens' books were given to Hartford children whose birthdays were on the same date as Jackie Coogan's.

There was some difficulty in establishing claims and at times the birth certificates had to be referred to. The management and spectators got considerable fun out of it when a 150-pound boy came along and insisted that he was only nine years old, having looked up Jackie's birthday in a film magazine.

Short Subject Exploitation Is Employed on "Just Dogs"

Forth Worth, Texas—Manager Harry Gould of the Hippodrome theatre capitalized upon the novelty of the comedy, "Just Dogs," when that picture was part of his program recently.

One week in advance of play date there appeared on the front pages of the local newspapers articles about a dog show to be held by the Hippodrome theatre on the morning of the Shrine parade. The size of these articles and the interest they created increased as the week progressed. The day before the show was to be held, a full page tie-up appeared in the newspaper advertising the short subject in connection with several local owners of kennels.

Hundreds of people were gathered in front of the Hippodrome theatre the next morning to watch the contest for prizes for the best trick dogs. The stunt was a "howling" success. Dogs of all kinds were on display, collie dogs, shepherd dogs, German police dogs, pedigreed dogs, curs and just dogs made their debut before this large crowd.

The prizes were awarded from the theatre's stage, in connection with the showing of "Just Dogs" and Priscilla Dean in "Wild Honey."

Wooden Slabs Used as Novelty on "Kindred of the Dust"

Olympia, Wash.—An original novelty for the exploitation of "Kindred of the Dust" was evolved by Manager W. E. Bowman of the Rex theatre. Patrons wondered at the ordinary wooden slabs that were given out as souvenirs the week prior to the appearance of "Kindred of the Dust," but in fixing this unique style of token Manager Bowman was playing hard upon psychology and civic pride.

"Kindred of the Dust" dealt with the lumber section of the northwest. The slab was donated with the compliments of the Olympia Veneer Company, one of Bowman's tie-ups, and the copy on the front side read:

"This comes from the forest of the great Northwest, where live the wonderful characters of drama and delight whom you'll see in Peter B. Kyne's story, 'Kindred of the Dust,' a story of the great Nor'west and the people who live there. For everybody, especially those who are hard to please. Rex theatre."

Special Showing Used to Start Run of "Knighthood"

Baltimore, Md.—"When Knighthood Was In Flower" was introduced to Baltimore during the week just ended in a manner almost unique here. A special performance of the feature was given at the New theatre, admission being by card. Invitations were sent to persons whose names appear in the Blue Book, and members of the Rotary Club also were invited. As a result, the theatre was crowded.

Special programs were printed, with a history of the making of the production, and these were distributed by a girl garbed as a page of the Court of Henry VIII. Marquee lights for the week were red, and two long banners from the roof of the theatre to the top of the marquee announced the attraction. A big cut-out of Marion Davies in the role of Mary Tudor was affixed to the front of the marquee.

Louis A. De Hoff, booking manager of the Whitehurst theatres, and Leslie F. Whelan, exploitation man for Famous Players, arranged the special showing, which was one of the most successful exploitation stunts carried out in Baltimore for some time.

Attractive Lobby Display Is Made for "Sin Flood"

LANCASTER, PA.—The management of the Hamilton theatre arranged an attractive lobby display for "The Sin Flood" which took the form of a miniature stage set showing an altar in front of a church window.

The figures of Richard Dix and Helene Chadwick were cut out of the 3-sheet poster, mounted and placed in front of the window. The name of the player was painted on each cut-out.

In front of the figures an altar was arranged, with bulb-tipped imitation candles and the customary altar trappings. Spotlights played upon the picture at night, making it stand out strikingly. Passersby stopped to gaze at the miniature stage set and many took the pains of hunting up the manager to congratulate him.

The name of the picture, "The Sin Flood," occurred but twice, and that very inconspicuously, on a card placed at each end of the altar.

Novel Bank Note Is English "East Is West" Stunt

LONDON, England.—The newly organized English offices of First National, with Ralph J. Pugh as managing director and Percy Phillipson as sales manager, have already distinguished themselves for exploitation, through the stunt pulled on "East Is West."

In England, to protect itself against fraud, a bank will often ask a person making a deposit or asking for change to write his name and address on the back of the paper currency that is tendered. This makes the individual, and not the bank responsible.

Taking advantage of this custom the First National officers had 100,000 ten shilling notes put into circulation with the endorsement on the back: "East Is West—Constance Talmadge." These notes have gone into thousands of homes.

Bathing Houses Put in Lobby for "Mrs. Bellew"

SAVANNAH, GA. — In exploiting "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," Manager J. G. Evins of the Lucas theatre, built and placed in the lobby two regulation French bathing houses about 6 feet square and 8 feet high. The doors were open and inside were cut-outs of bathing girls. The houses were fitted with folding chairs and clothing was hanging on the walls, making the impression as realistic as possible.

On the marquee was placed a 24-sheet cut-out of Gloria Swanson in bathing costume. The lobby and marquee were decorated with pink and white bunting, making a gala appearance. Banners were hung across the sidewalk under both ends of the marquee.

Bread Baking Contest Exploits "The Old Homestead"

Waco, Texas.—Manager J. P. Harrison, of the Hippodrome theatre, put over an excellent advance campaign recently on "The Old Homestead."

One week in advance of play date, Manager Harrison arranged with a local newspaper to hold a "bread baking" contest for the ladies of Waco and the surrounding country. Announcements were made in the paper about the contest, and tie-ups were secured with local bakeries around the town advertising their bread along with the contest. The contest in detail was this: the News-Tribune and the Hippodrome theatre joined together in arranging a contest to aid the poor of Waco. Every woman who brought a loaf of bread baked by herself to the News-Tribune office by 4 o'clock on a certain date received a free 50-cent ticket to "The Old Homestead," showing at the Hippodrome theatre.

She also competed for one of five prizes—a season pass to January 1st for the Hippodrome for two people, a season pass to January 1st for one, a six months' subscription to the News-Tribune, a box party for eight people at the Hippodrome and a box party for five at the Hippodrome.

The contest bread was distributed through charitable organizations to the poor of Waco.

National Publicity Stunt Put Across on "The Flirt"

New York, N. Y.—An exploitation and publicity stunt of unusual scope was put over recently by Marc Lachmann, Universal home office exploitation representative on "The Flirt," centering about the organization of an Anti-Flirt Crusade.

A meeting was held in the Hotel Biltmore, New York City. Five persons using the names of the characters from Tarkington's story called a meeting to order with James Madison presiding while representatives and reviewers from all New York newspapers were present. Photographers snapped flashlights of the committee and 24 hours later the wires were hot with the news spreading in all directions.

Two more meetings were held and the same representatives were present with other follow-up stories executed. It was not long before Boston, Philadelphia and other cities started their own crusade with local enthusiasts for the movement interested. Buffalo

In an N. E. A. feature which ran in 680 newspapers from coast to coast both sides of the flirting situation were brought out with James Madison's version and that of an averse one by a New York business girl. K. C. B., Lucy Lowell and others contributed syndicate details for editorial space in their many newspapers.

Special tack cards were posted all over the city bearing the organization's insignia, a lizard pierced by a hatpin illustrated by a drawing of the various modes of flirtations.

Newspapers devoted daily space for three solid weeks.

Prior to the opening of "The Flirt" at the Rialto theatre, the crusade was tied-up with the showing by daily newspaper ads.

"Penrod" Is Advertised as Worst Boy in Town

MONTREAL, Can.—Advertising featuring "the worst boy in town" was used broadcast in Montreal recently. It was the way in which Loew's theatre advised its patrons that "Penrod" was coming. Such admonitions as "Keep the Cat in the Cellar out of Harm" and "Have the Policemen Hide" were simple reminders that Penrod was a very wicked urchin and that it wasn't safe to have anything breakable around when he hit the community.

Ties Up to National Stunt on "Brothers Under the Skin"

Newark, N. J.—An exploitation campaign designed to capitalize upon the national publicity stunt pulled on "Brothers Under the Skin" was used by the Strand theatre.

Application blanks for membership in the "Brothers Under the Skin" Club were distributed at the theatre, in offices, shops and on the streets, the only reference to the picture occurring in the last paragraph, "Husbands, Take Notice—If you approve of it—assert your rights—demand that your wife see the laughable picture." The theatre was given as headquarters of the club. The by-laws used in the national story were printed at one side of the application.

Postcards, in a man's handwriting, were mailed to men. They read: "A new organization has just been formed by a number of well-known citizens of Newark in the interest of henpecked husbands, called 'Brothers Under the Skin.' It is a matter vitally important to a man's position in his own household. It's to your interest to attend one of these meetings, to be held at the Strand theatre, Newark, N. J., week starting Friday, December 1. The card was signed Newton Craddock, a Brother Under the Skin.

Another postcard, in a woman's handwriting, was mailed out to a selected list of women: "Dear Madam: I have just received information that a new organization has been formed in Newark, called 'Brothers Under the Skin.' The by-laws of this league make it plain that men are trying to dominate our households. Do you favor such a movement? If not, each and every one of us should be present during the meetings being held at the Strand theatre, Newark, N. J., during the week starting Friday, December 1." It was signed Mrs. James Kirtland, a Sister Under the Skin.

Vaudeville Singer Uses Song to Aid "Oliver Twist"

Omaha, Neb.—The same week that Manager Julius K. Johnson, of the Rialto theatre, was playing "Oliver Twist," Bob Hall, a friend of Mr. Johnson, was singing at a local vaudeville theatre, which offered a possibility for some exploitation which was too good to pass up.

Mr. Hall was called upon to address the Advertising-Selling League at a dinner of 700 members, and went through with a promise to sing "Oliver Twist." Then the plan was evolved to plant the gag in the theatre. Mr. Hall, in his act, always had one number where he asked the audience to select the song. Girls planted in the house for each performance, beat their competitors to it by asking for either "Jackie Coogan" or "Oliver Twist."

By special permission because of its literary antecedents, "Oliver Twist" was announced by cards in the public library.

Bookmarks, to the number of 3,500, advertising the coming of "Oliver Twist" were given out by the library with each book loaned.

A special telephone operator called up book subscribers to say: "Just saw 'Oliver Twist' at the Rialto. It's wonderful. Pardon me, some one is at the door. I'll call again."

Varied Exploitation Campaign on "Foolish Wives" Abroad

London, Eng.—What is said to be the largest exploiotation campaign yet staged in England was put over in London in connection with the showing of "Foolish Wives" at the New Oxford theatre, under the supervision of Managing Director Edwin J. Smith of the European Motion Picture Company, Limited.

Among those working under Mr. Smith in presenting and exploiting the film were Walter Wanger, successful presenter of films at Covent Garden, Castleton Knight, one of the livest showmen in England, and Ben H. Grimm, formerly of the Universal home office.

Outstanding among the stunts was the idea of having twelve girls parade the streets of London masked and dressed in duplicates of the fashionable black gown worn by Maude George in the picture. Each girl bore across her chest a white sash with the words "Foolish Wives."

Crowds were attracted to a gigantic billboard site on the Strand—a painted replica of the half-page newspaper ad in the press book—by the simple expedient of having a further dozen girls, in artists' costumes, "painting" the sign.

Great interest was aroused by a motor coach carrying 12 men, attired as Stroheim appears in the picture. This conveyance carried signs on both sides and the rear. Atop the buss was a movie cameraman grinding away on the crowds. He was "looking for foolish wives."

Manager Charles Sasseen of the Queen theatre, Galveston, Texas, prepared this "Human Hearts" front

Persian "Omar" Walks Streets for "Omar, the Tentmaker"

SIOUX CITY, Iowa.—Omar Khayyam strolled about the streets of Sioux City as "Omar the Tentmaker" played the Princess theatre.

The twentieth century prototype of the Persian verse maker was dressed up in the latest approved fashion of the Kismet or Mecca Temples. He carried a furled banner on a flagpole and a huge shield that bore the advertisement for "Omar the Tentmaker at the Princess." Part of his time he distributed teaser cards and the other part he led a big steer around the streets. The catch line is easy to guess.

Special One-Sheet Teasers Are Used for "Dr. Jack"

San Francisco, Cal.—The management of the Portola theatre used a series of six special teaser one-sheets in its advance campaign for the premiere of "Dr. Jack" at that theatre.

The copy on these one-sheets read: "If Pills, Powders, Plasters Can't Cure You, See 'Dr. Jack.'" "A Positive Cure for the Rich or the Poor—Consult 'Dr. Jack.'" "Why Cure Your Ills with Little Pills When 'Dr. Jack' Is in Town?" "If Nature Won't, 'Dr. Jack' Will." "Office Hours, 10:30 a.m.—11:00 p.m. Phone, Douglas 2040. 'Dr. Jack.'" "The M D 4 U 2 C Is 'Dr. Jack.'"

Cut-Price Coupon Proves Aid to Dull Matinees

Torrington, Conn.—The Palace theatre management, with the co-operation of Russell B. Moon, Paramount exploiteer, has found an aid for dull matinees. They sewed up the larger of Torrington's two dailies to print this coupon every Thursday morning on the front page:

"Bring this coupon and five cents and it will admit you to the special school children's matinee at the Palace theatre today, between 4 and 6 p. m.

The exhibitor is working the stunt up to the point where he can include the name of the picture in the coupon. The matinee has only been tried once so far, for "On the High Seas."

Chestnut Party Gets Publicity for "Village Blacksmith"

Denver, Colo.—Managing Director Louis K. Sidney put over a strong exploitation campaign for "The Village Blacksmith" at the Isis theatre.

Three weeks prior to the opening of the run, Manager Sidney, by means of a tie-up with the Denver Evening Post, announced his preparation for a chestnut party to which all the children of the city would be invited.

The largest open space available in the center of town was secured. 10,000 chestnuts were hidden under the shrubbery about the place, and the scramble was on. Hundreds of orphans from the city's institutions were brought to the park in large buses provided by Manager Sidney.

More than 2,500 of the 10,000 chestnuts hidden bore a number written in black ink. The finders of the chestnuts with the numbers were awarded the listed prizes. Of the 2,500, 1,000 represented pairs of seats for the children's matinee and a large number entitled the holders to seats at any chosen performance. The remaining prizes consisted of everything from bicycles, articles of clothing and toy wagons to boxes of candy and small trinkets.

That none of the contestants might be disappointed, every child who appeared at the hunt area was given a noise-maker and a story book, the donation of the leading department stores.

"Our Organization's Pledges to Exhibitors"

By Al Lichtman

President of Al Lichtman Corporation and Vice-President of Preferred Pictures

THE exhibitor of today is like the man from Missouri—he wants to be shown. With the tremendous development of our industry the doctrine of "the Survival of the Fittest" has become operative. The salesman who resorts to bunk and the exhbitor who shows junk in his house are being wiped out by those who practice precise and truthful business methods and good showmanship.

Our organization, comprising Preferred Pictures, Inc., and the Al Lichtman Corporation, is founded on the solid rock of quality and square dealing. We were formed to create and distribute great motion pictures. We are doing it. With the first anniversary of our organization close at hand we are prepared to offer exhibitors fifteen of the best box office attractions in the history of the screen. Seven of these are now completed. "Rich Men's Wives," our first release, directed by Gasnier, tells its own story of big profits for the houses where it was shown. "Shadows," a Tom Forman production, is another tremendous success. "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," a Gasnier production, is a third. And so it goes, with "The Hero," "Poor Men's Wives," "Are You a Failure?" 'The Girl Who Came Back,' "April Showers," ready to blaze their own trail of picture house prosperity. Then will come our second group of eight big pictures, with more to follow. Our releases are on a basis of one a month.

We make no pretensions. We stand on our bottom as an energetic, successful, wide-awake picture producing and releasing organization. Why? Because the men in it are experienced in every angle of the industry. B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, Inc., who is in charge of production, knows how to produce the very best for the screen, because picture-making has been his life work. He served his apprenticeship as a youth under a master—E. S. Porter, the father. He was the first scenario writer and editor employed by Famous Players. He adapted such famous successes for the screen as "Tess of the Storm Country," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "The Prisoner of Zenda, "Hearts Adrift," "Caprice," etc. In addition to being scenario editor he was also publicity and advertising manager and wrote what was then considered the best copy in the whole industry. After retiring from Famous Players he, with Hiram Abrams, organized United Artists. Very soon thereafter he formed his own producing company and launched the Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corporation.

We have under contract two of the foremost directors in the industry—Louis Gasnier, who created "Kismet," "Rich Men's Wives" and other successes. Mr. Gasnier has been a producer of motion pictures for eighteen years, serving as director general of the Pathe production organization which, during his regime, was one of the foremost producing and distributing companies in the business. He also was director general for Robertson-Cole.

Our other great director is Tom Forman. Although a young man he is old in experience as a maker of motion pictures, having been connected with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for eight years, first as leading man and then for three years as one of their foremost directors. He produced almost every picture in which Thomas Meighan was starred, foremost among them being "The City of Silent Men," "If You Believe It, It's So."

J. G. Bachmann, treasurer of the Al Lichtman Corporation and of Preferred Pictures, Inc., is a highly trained financier. Our sales manager, Mr. Henry Ginsberg, needs no introduction. He is known to every exhibitor.

We are equipped in every way for the best possible service to the best picture houses. Our advertising, publicity and exploitation departments, headed by men of experience in motion picture showmanship, are at the disposal of exhibitors using our product. Our sales policy is powerful in its very simplicity. We do not aim only to sell our pictures. We aim for the good will of the exhibitor by staying right with him after the sale and helping him put over the attraction in a manner that is sure to make money for him.

Travelling throughout the country as exploitation and service directors for our pictures we have four men of great proven ability. They are:

Foster Moore, who for many years has been an invaluable part of the Jans Film Corporation.

Joseph Klein, formerly manager of Metro's New York Exchange and afterward with F. B. O. as district manager.

Edward Grossman, formerly with Paramount and Associated Producers.

B. P. Whitaker, formerly with Artcraft, Select and Thomas H. Ince.

In selling our pictures we guarantee big results because of the noted people who are turning out Preferred pictures. Our stars are the best. We spare no expense in making our settings conform to what the productions require. And, with these facts in mind, I make the following pledges to exhibitors:

Every story produced by us shall possess unusual qualities and heart appeal.

Every story will bear a title possessing box office value.

Every picture will be made by a director of proven ability and have in it stars of proven popularity.

No picture will bear our trade mark unless it is suitable for the best theatres.

We have supreme faith in the exhibitor. We believe he knows what he wants and will grasp eagerly at meritorious productions when they come his way. We have those productions. And we are willing to pay for our mistakes if the exhibitor will pay for our successes.

The Home and Creators of Preferred Pictures

By B. P. Schulberg

President of Preferred Pictures

EXHIBITORS who are looking for dependable pictures which contain the elements of sure-fire box office appeal have definite proof that these characteristics have been carefully incorporated in the first eight Preferred Pictures distributed by the Al Lichtman Corporation.

Preferred Pictures has framed each of these productions with one thought uppermost in mind—the requirements of the box office. The exhibitor's angle—which is that of popular appeal—is our angle in every stage of the production from the choice of the story, through the casting, the choice of director, the treatment of the plot, until the feature is completed and ready for delivery to the Lichtman exchanges.

A summary of current and future productions reveals that each one has an undisputable guarantee of popularity. These productions are:

"Rich Men's Wives"—a picture which has made money for every exhibitor who has shown it. A story that is full of heart interest and a cast including Claire Windsor, House Peters, Gaston Glass, Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Stedman, Mildred June and Baby Richard Headrick.

"Shadows"—Tom Forman's picturization of Wilbur Daniel Steele's prize story, "Ching, Ching, Chinaman." Chosen by the National Board of Review as an exceptional photoplay; unanimously praised by trade papers, newspapers and picture magazines. Lon Chaney heads its cast, supported by Harrison Ford, Marguerite De La Motte, Walter Long and John Sainpolis.

"Thorns And Orange Blossoms"—Gasnier's production of Bertha M. Clay's story and stage play, which has reached an audience of thirty million before its translation to the screen. This widely known work has been filmed with a cast headed by Estelle Taylor, Edith Roberts and Kenneth Harlan.

"The Hero"—a picturization of Gilbert Emery's celebrated play which Sam H. Harris presented last season on the Broadway stage. New York's dramatic critics called it the best play ever to come from the pen of an American author. Under the direction of Gasnier, Schulberg has made it into a picture that is at once a subtle character study, a tremendously human story with a spectacular climax. Gaston Glass, Barbara La Marr, Doris Pawn, John Sainpolis and David Butler are in the cast.

"Poor Men's Wives"—a screen original by Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston. A companion piece to "Rich Men's Wives," though a totally different story, enacted by an entirely different cast. Its players include Barbara La Marr, David Butler, Zasu Pitts, Richard Tucker and Betty Francisco.

"Are You A Failure?"—the first Preferred Picture with a comedy vein. Larry Evans, whose contributions to the foremost magazines are well known, is the author of the piece. His stories have formed the basis for pictures in which H. B. Warner, Alice Brady, Charles Ray and William Farnum have played. His first work for Schulberg, who has lately placed him under contract, was Katherine MacDonald's vehicle, "Money, Money, Money." The picture, whose climatic effect is achieved through the actual dynamiting of a log jam, was photographed in the heart of California's timber lands. Through a special arrangement with Thomas Ince, Lloyd Hughes and Madge Bellamy have the featured roles, supported by Tom Santschi, Hardee Kirkland and Hallam Cooley.

"The Girl Who Came Back"—a film version of the play by Charles E. Blaney and Samuel Ruskin Golding, the popularity of which has been sustained on the stage season after season. The play, which is a drama of prison life and its aftermath, has been made under the direction of Tom Forman, with Gaston Glass, Kenneth Harlan, Miriam Cooper, Zasu Pitts and Joseph Dowling.

"April Showers," another Tom Forman production, is a screen original written by Hope Loring. Colleen Moore has been cast for the leading feminine role. Kenneth Harlan will play opposite her.

Our production program for Preferred Pictures to be made this year extends into the next group of pictures, which are now in process of preparation by our staff.

One of the most important of these is the Broadway stage success, "The Broken Wing," by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard, which will be photographed during California's rainy season for the aeroplane sequence, in which it is hoped to capture for the screen an electrical storm photographed from an airship. This is to be directed by the masterly hand of Tom Forman.

Other stories include "The Parasite," from the novel by Helen Martin; "Mothers-in-law," a screen story by Agnes Johnston and Frank Dazey which Gasnier expects to direct; "My Lady's Lips," "The Satin Woman," "A Mansion of Aching Hearts," "The Aristocrat," by Larry Evans, and "Frivolity," or "When A Woman Reaches Forty" a story which Mr. Lichtman and I recently obtained from Royal A. Baker, motion picture censor in Detroit.

This schedule carries the Schulberg-Lichtman organizations well into next season.

Gasnier and Forman by Reason of Achievements Stand in Forefront of Directorial Ranks

PREFERRED PICTURES which the Al Lichtman Corporation is offering in the first group of eight to exhibitors throughout the country are made under the direction of two veteran directors. Two separate units have been constantly at work during the last six months, one headed by Gasnier, the other by Tom Forman.

Gasnier has had as wide an experience in pictures as any man in any branch of the industry. Gasnier's first notable works of direction were Mrs. Vernon Castle's serials for Pathe and Fanny Ward's features. One of his early outstanding films was "The Corsican Brothers" with Dustin Farnum. He also directed Robertson-Cole's version of "Kismet."

When Schulberg engaged Gasnier to make a series of special productions for Preferred Pictures to be part of his release output through the Al Lichtman Corporation he made his first offering in "Rich Men's Wives," a picture which carried gratifying gate receipts into every film house that has booked it, and is still going strong. Critics in every part of the country have given the delicate handling of the piece their commendations.

Tom Forman's first dramatic experience was received in a stage stock company which he managed and in which he played more than a decade ago in the West. His initial connection with films was in the capacity of an actor. When he became a leading man for Lasky he refused a starring contract to accept a post of assistant director, from which he climbed to a full-fledged director for Famous Players.

Shortly after his contract with Schulberg was signed Forman began on Wilbur Daniel Steele's prize story, "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," which was released recently under the title of "Shadows." The picture was selected by the National Board of Review for a special screening at the Town Hall in New York under their auspices.

Franchise-Holders of the Lichtman Product

THE calibre of the film men behind Preferred Pictures is another guarantee of the quality of the Al Lichtman output.

The Al Lichtman exchanges in the twenty-nine key cities of the country are controlled by twelve of the foremost men in the sales end of pictures.

In Boston the Lichtman franchise is held by Harry Asher, head of the American Feature Film Company.

J. L. Friedman holds the franchise in Chicago. Friedman has been connected for years with Celebrated Players Film Corporation.

Harry L. Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service Company has Lichtman's franchise in Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

A. H. Blank, head of the A. H. Blank Enetrprises, is Lichtman's franchise man in Des Moines.

In Minneapolis Lichtman's product is backed by J. F. Cubberley.

Herman F. Jans, who controls Northern New Jersey, is so confident of the superiority of Al Lichtman's features that he is handling them to the exclusion of all others.

Greater New York's franchise is held by Sam Zierler, head of Commonwealth.

Lichtman has given Philadelphia to Ben Amsterdam. As chief of Masterpiece Film Attractions he serves the foremost exhibitors in his section of the country.

Spyros Skouras, another nationally known picture man, controls many of the largest motion picture houses in St. Louis through Skouras Brothers Enterprises of which he is head. Lichtman's St. Louis franchise is in his hands.

Al Rosenberg of Seattle owns the Lichtman franchise for his city where he is at the head of the De Luxe Feature Film Company. In the south it is held partly by E. V. Richards of Atlanta and partly by the Sanger Amusement Company.

In Washington, D. C. Lichtman has his personally supervised exchange where Howard Beaver is manager. The Canadian territory is served by Famous Players Film Company, Ltd. which is also handling Preferred Pictures.

Preferred's Technical Staff of Experts :

B. P. Schulberg has gathered around him a staff of experts for the making of Preferred Pictures that is not to be excelled in any studio in either the East or West.

Preferred Pictures are photographed in the Mayer-Schulberg Studios in Los Angeles. The building which was originally erected by Colonel Selig was later acquired by Louis B. Mayer from whom Schulberg has recently purchased a half interest.

Preparations of scenarios are under the supervision of Eve Unsell, one of the foremost screen writers in the industry who was affiliated with Famous Players for a number of years and later was scenario chief for Robertson-Cole. Miss Unsell in addition to preparing some of the scripts edits and titles the productions. Several other screen authors have been busy on continuities for Preferred, among them Lois Zellner, Hope Loring, Frank Dazey, Agnes Christine Johnston and Evelyn Campbell. According to a recent announcement made by Schulberg, Olga Printzlau who was in charge of continuities for William de Mille for a number of years has been engaged to write the script for "April Showers," Tom Forman's next production.

Schulberg's camera work has been in the hands of Carl Struss and Harry Perry. Struss, who is the holder of numerous awards for photographic work was cameraman for Cecil De Mille before joining Gasnier's unit. Perry has been associated with Director Tom Forman since Forman was connected with Famous Players for whom he directed Thomas Meighan's vehicles. Charles Lang another former member of Lasky's camera staff, is associated with Harry Perry.

Assisting Gasnier in the direction of his productions is George Yohalem, a former continuity writer for Famous Players. Forman is assisted by Sam Nelson.

The business management of the Schulberg Studios is in the hands of Sam Jaffe who has been affiliated with Schulberg since he first went to Los Angeles to make Katherine MacDonald's features. Jaffe's assistant is Fred Leahy.

Lichtman Corporation Has Had Rapid Rise

IN a statement from the New York home office of the Al Lichtman Corporation this week, the rapid ascendancy of this distributing organization since its inception several months ago is briefly pointed out and the scope and character of its service and product clearly set forth. The Lichtman statement follows:

"In offering exhibitors throughout the United States the first group of eight Preferred pictures, Al Lichtman, president of the distributing organization that bears his name, and B. P. Schulberg, head of the production company, have built up a service that insures showmen pictures of a consistently high quality, delivered to them with a maximum of efficiency and sales aid.

"In the seven months of its existence the Al Lichtman Corporation has established itself as a factor in the film industry and has gained the confidence and trust of theatre owners as a source of supply for dependable features made for the box office. Well-known stories and originals from the pens of the foremost film writers form the basis of these pictures. All star casts comprised of the best screen talent and stars whose drawing power at the box office is assured, are featured. Schulberg is acquiring the services of well known players toward the formation of a permanent all-star stock company and has already placed two popular leading men under contract, Kenneth Harlan and Gaston Glass.

In helping the exhibitor sell Preferred Pictures to the public the Al Lichtman Corporation gives its aid in every possible way. Prompt service in getting prints to the exchanges, a wide assortment of accessories, punctually delivered, nationally distributed publicity on current and coming productions, special representatives to aid in exploitation are all designed to facilitate the sale of the Lichtman product.

"The Preferred Pictures comprising the first group to be offered through Lichtman are completed and those in the group to follow are now in preparation. The four features already released have proved their worth from the theatre owners' angle, beginning with 'Rich Men's Wives,' Gasnier's production.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

O. K. Redington, of La Porte, Ind., has completed plans for remodeling the Central, his 800-seat house, and when completed it will have a capacity of 1,400. Four loges and a mezzanine floor are to be installed and the house entirely redecorated. Mr. Redington is a firm believer in good music for a theatre and plans to give La Porte movie fans even better entertainment along this line than in the past when he reopens his remodeled house. Work will start early in spring.

Harry and Leo Brunhild are planning to leave Chicago for a three or four weeks' vacation, which will be spent in Florida and will include a short sojourn in Havana and probably New Orleans. This will be the second visit of these popular showmen to Manana land and they state that the orange juice, etc., (especially etc.) is most enjoyable.

F. W. Fischer, of Fischer's Theatre Company, Inc., who recently purchased the Grand theatre, one of the oldest playhouses in Madison, Wis., is having it remodeled and expects to open it about February 1 under the new name, the Madison. An entire new front of cream-colored tile and canopy will be built and the seating capacity of the house increased to 1,000 by eliminating the lobby in front and reducing the size of the stage. A large pipe organ will be installed. F. J. Williams is to remain as manager of the house. Mr. Fischer states that he has not dropped his plans for the erection of a new Fischer theatre in Madison and construction will probably begin early in the spring.

Edgar Hopp, well-known projection expert, who, by the way, is the son of Joseph Hopp was installed as Worshipful Master of the new Illini Lodge of Masons on Friday evening. Ceremonies were held at the Auditorium Hotel in the presence of a large gathering the Grand Master of Masons of Illinois, Elmer E. Beach, and other high officials participating. Joseph Hopp was founder and first master of this lodge and two-thirds of the members of it are film folks. A feature of the installation was the presentation of a beautiful watch to the senior Hopp.

Julius Stern of Century Comedies stopped off in Chicago for a couple of days en route to the west coast studios of his company. He states that production activities are in full swing at his studios and that six brand new comedies will be shown to Chicago exhibitors very shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert De Lacey are at the Rothacker Chicago laboratory doing the final editing on Edwin Carewe's First National production, "Mighty Lak' A Rose."

Wooley Brothers, of Gibson City, Ill. have opened their new 700-seat theatre the Edna.

The Illmo Amusement Company, of St. Louis, Mo., has purchased the Main Street theatre of Anna, Ill., and will take possession immediately.

C. E. Beck, of the Castle theatre, has taken over the Alcazar and Rose, two of the Madison street houses which have been operated by Jones, Linick & Schaefer. It is understood he will continue to run houses until they are dismantled to make way for the proposed addition to the Morrison Hotel.

Steve Bennis reports that he is putting the finishing touches on his new Lincoln theatre at Lincoln, Ill., and expects to open its doors to the public by February 1.

After spending the holidays in Chicago, Edward O. Blackburn left for two weeks' work in New York. He will return to Chicago for a few days and leave January 18 for the west coast to resume his duties at the Rothacker-Aller laboratory, where he is in charge of sales and service. John G. Hahn, secretary of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, will return to Chicago the last of January from Hollywood, where he has been installing a service system at the Rothacker-Aller laboratory.

Maurice Choynski left for a month's vacation in California this week. It is his intention to first visit his old home town, San Francisco, where his mother resides, and later journey to Los Angeles for a short sojourn. He expects to be back in Chicago early in February.

Edward B. Rice, who had been connected with the industry for the past twelve years as an exhibitor, died on January 3 and was laid to rest in Wildheim Cemetery, Friday, with full Masonic ceremonies. Mr. Rice, at the time of his death, was owner of the Seeley and Hoyne theatres, both located on Roscoe boulevard. Mr. Rice enjoyed the friendship of an unusually large circle of motion picture men and was held in high esteem, and his demise will bring real sorrow to many.

"Shadows," which was booked into Barbee's by Celebrated, made a hit with the Chicago critics, who gave it high praise and played opening day at Barbee's to the biggest crowds of the winter.

"Tess of the Storm Country" has been held over for a third week at the Roosevelt and probably will remain four weeks at this house, where it has done exceptionally large business. It will be followed by "Robin Hood."

W. D. Burford has returned to Chicago after spending a week in New York. He reports that the outlook for the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation, of which he is secretary, is very favorable, and that matters have now been shaped up so that the organization is ready to go ahead with its plans. While he was in New York, offices were established at 25 West Forty-third street, and the following officers elected: W. A. True, president; Harry Davis, vice president; L. J. Dittmore, treasurer, and W. D. Burford, secretary. Dates for regional meetings throughout the Central West will be fixed this week and negotiations for pictures to be distributed y the corporation are already under way.

The assets of Better Pictures Corporation were auctioned off at a receiver's sale held at the studios, 1729 North Wells street, this week. Studio equipment, scenery and office fixtures, as well as the good will of the Better Pictures Corporation, including the right to use the name as successors to the Better Pictures Corporation, were offered.

With the Exchanges

DIVISION SALES MANAGER H. H. HURN, of Hodkinson, presided at a sales conference at the Chicago exchange last week, in which Earl Reynolds, Minneapolis branch manager, Harry Melcher, Omaha branch manager, Ralph Peckam, Detroit branch manager, and Manager Simmons, of the Chicago office, participated. Plans were discussed for the exploitation and sales of "Down To The Sea In Ships," which is declared to be one of the greatest pictures ever made, and other Hodkinson features, which will be released at early dates. Mr. Hurn stated that the Saturday Evening Post advertising campaign will start on January 27th with ads exploiting Glen Hunter in "The Second Fiddle," and that Hodkinson has extensive plans for selling the company's productions to the public.

Maurice Hellman, of Reelcraft, has recently secured a number of additional features of release in this territory including Bennett Productions' Picture. "Your Daughter And Mine," in six reels; "Reclaimed" in six reels; "Wolves Of The Range," featuring Jack Livingston, and "Judge Her Not" with the same star; "False Women," featuring Wheeler Dryden, in six reels, "Battling King" in seven reels; and "Shadows Of The Law" in six reels, starring Fritzie Ridgway.

Milton Crandall, of Hodkinson, arrived from New York last week to do exploitation work here and will remain for a week or ten days. He will specialize this trip in putting over "Bull Dog Drummond," which is scheduled to open at the Orpheum Theatre January 21st.

Manager Stemson, of Vitagraph, sees a sure winner in "Ninety and Nine," and states that one week after his force started to sell it, more than half the key centers had been closed, as well as practically all the first run houses in Chicago, and that it is his belief that this picture will break all Vitagraph records in the territory.

Jeff Lazarus, who made many Chicago friends during his connection with the local First National exchange as exploitation man, passed through Chicago last week, en route to Los Angeles, where he will Join Sid Grauman's staff.

Phil Solomon is now covering the north side territory for Associated Exhibitors. Phil was formerly connected with the Vitagraph sales staff. E. P. Pickler is selling the Associated product on the south side now.

J. F. McConnell, manager of Universal's serial department, was a Chicago visitor last week. He states that Carl Laemnle has decided on a broad policy of serial production and within the next fifteen months, ten high-grade serials will be completed and released, plans for production being already well advanced.

George F. Law, manager of Universal's Winnepeg, Canada, office, was a Chicago visitor this week. He reports business on the up grade in the Canadian prairie district and says that the outlook for big business throughout 1923 is bright.

The board of directors of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America will meet at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, on February 8-9. Among other matters to be taken up by the supply men, will be final plans for the annual convention which it is expected will meet in this city at the same time that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America convene here. B. A. Benson, of the Amusement Supply Company, represent Chicago on the board of directors and directors from Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Atlanta. Boston, Denver, Charleston and Cleveland are to attend the meeting.

A brand new kind of a story and a brand new kind of a serial.

Lured by the love of adventure the "peerless, fearless Pearl" pursues, combats and thwarts those who are filled with the love of loot.

Action as swift as the big $15,000.00 car with which she chases the arch-plotter; interiors as rich as those which one would expect to find in the mansion of New York's richest girl; adventure after adventure through the highways and byways of New York, the alluring and mighty; direction and cast and production all worthy of this, the climax of Pearl White's peerless serial career.

The serial that books on sight

Kansas City Jottings

Frank L. Newman, owner of the Royal, Newman and Twelfth Street theatres, Kansas City, gave his annual good fellowship party Tuesday night for members of his organization which included employees of the three theatres. The event was held in the Colonial room of the Hotel Muehlebach, beginning at 11:15 o'clock at the close of the last show at the theatres. About 300 persons, including 250 employees and personal friends of Mr. Newman, attended. Special novelty stunts and musical numbers were presented by members of the Newman organization, while old time dances, including the Virginia reel, as well as the latest ball room dances, were featured. This is the third annual party which Mr. Newman has given his organization.

Police guarded all large downtown Kansas City theatres last Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights. The receipts taken in Saturday and Sunday could not be deposited in the banks Monday, that being a holiday, while a series of daring holdups the last few months have necessitated unusual precaution.

Performers and employees at the Globe theatre, Kansas City, a combination motion picture and vaudeville house, were guests of a New Year's chicken dinner Monday afternoon at the theatre. The dinner was prepared and served by the wives of the employees. About fifty persons sat at the feast.

George Birmingham, a civic worker and lawyer of Kansas City, invited the entire city to attend a free matinee of "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight," at the Empress theatre last Monday. A struggling crowd extended out into the street most of the afternoon.

Jack Johnson, manager of the Isis theatre, Augusta, Kan., knows how to obtain the support of his community. Last week Mr. Johnson effected a tie-up with the local editor and a local minister, the Rev. Daniel Smith, in staging a party for 800 children. The minister acted as Santa Claus, the editor, Kenneth Leatherrock, provided the publicity and Mr. Johnson furnished the meeting place, his theatre, and provided the entertainment. And in Augusta the citizens are 100 per cent for Jack.

Just to express his appreciation of the patronage for the year, J. A. Townsley, of the Odeon theatre, Lyons, Kan., gives a free show each year. His last show of this type was last week and he called it Universal Day, playing a complete program of Universal short subjects.

In the Kansas City Branches

W. BENJAMIN, former Universal salesman in Kansas City, who recently was appointed F. B. O. branch manager in Omaha, again has been promoted, this time to the position of special F. B. O. representative. Mr. Benjamin, after going to Omaha, was sent to Des Moines, Ia., where he made a record that qualified him for his present position.

J. H. "Curley" Calvert, former Universal branch manager in Kansas City who has been serving as F. B. O. district manager for the last several months, is coming back to Kansas City at his own request, asserting that eating and sleeping on trains is too much of a good thing. Mr. Calvert, who had under his jurisdiction the Omaha, Des Moines, Sioux Falls and Kansas City F. B. O. exchanges, is one of the most popular exchange managers that ever came to Kansas City. Fred Young, who recently was promoted to the branch managership at Kansas City, is to be transferred to Omaha.

G. B. Howe, service manager for the Universal branch at Kansas City, doesn't believe in applying the word "service" to theoretical phases. Last week, through a delay in shipment, Lee Jones, of the Auditorium theatre, Marshall, Mo., was without any film. Mr. Howe promptly sent a telegram to Mr. Jones, telling him to cover his motor car with a white sheet and get out in a field near his town. This done negotiations were made with an aircraft company for the prompt delivery of the film, the white top on Mr. Jones's car serving as a "landing signal" for the pilot.

It was a narrow escape that Edward Green, Goldwyn salesman out of Kansas City, had last week. While making the "rounds" his motor car rolled down a steep embankment, but luckily "Eddie" was uninjured.

E. C. Rhoden, First National branch manager at Kansas City, again is back on the job after undergoing an operation for appendicitis.

Al Kahn, manager of the Crescent exchange, Kansas City, who returned from New York last week, announced that he had purchased a fifteen episode serial, "Nan of the North," featuring Ann Little.

Fortune was with Tommy Taylor, Hodkinson salesman out of Kansas City, last week when his motor car collided with a passenger train near Richmond, Mo. The worst Tommy received was a sprained wrist.

Around the Cleveland Exchanges

J. A. KOERPEL, central Goldwyn division manager, celebrated the first of the year by making a swing around the territory. Indianapolis is his first stopping off place. Cincinnati, Detroit and Pittsburg follow.

Eddie Carrier, Goldwyn exploiteer, spent the week in Toledo putting over a publicity campaign on "Hungry Hearts," which played "Doc" Horater's Pantheon theatre.

Ethel Epstein, office manager of the local Fox exchange, is spending a week in the home office. This is the first time a Cleveland girl has been given the opportunity to see how a home office is conducted.

R. A. White, general sales manager for the Fox Film Company, spent Sunday and Monday here. He came to attend the annual sales meeting which was held on Monday in the Fox offices.

Charles Schweitzer, formerly connected with the local Vitagraph exchange, has turned exhibitor and is now manager of the New Robbins theatre in Warren, Ohio. The Robbins theatre opens January 10 with "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

C. E. Almy, Metro manager, says that "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is the best little theatre-opener in the country. It was selected as the opening attraction of the new State theatre in Uricksville on January 1.

Paul Mooney of the Louis B. Mayer outfit, spent the holidays in Cleveland with his family. Mooney sprung from the shores of Lake Erie, so there was a warm welcome in addition to cool breezes awaiting his return. He used to be local Fox manager.

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service, Cleveland, is in receipt of many telegrams from exhibitors congratulating him and the Al Lichtman Corporation on the merits of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms." I. Silverman of the Strand theatre, Altoona, Pa., wired in his congratulations with the additional statement that "it is 100 per cent audience picture." C. A. Barbian of the Waldorf theatre Akron, played the picture for ten successive days and states that it was the biggest engagement but one in the entire year of 1922.

Walter Lusk, for the past six years manager of the Associated First National exchange, was knocked speechless last week when he was presented with a gold cigarette case, gold match box and sport wrist watch from the motion picture exhibitors of Cleveland as a testimonial of their friendship and their regret at his departure for Washington, D. C., where he will have charge of the First National office. Lusk was in Cleveland over the holidays to close up his house and pack up his belongings. He be-

Cleveland Bulletins

E. E. Blair, who made hosts of friends in Cleveland when he was manager of Loew's Euclid theatre, is now manager of the new State theatre in Urichsville, Ohio.

Peter Rettig of the Mystic theatre, Galion, came up to town last week to do his shopping at the Goldwyn exchange.

Manager Nichols of the Park theatre, Amherst, was also a visitor to these shores during the past week. Nichols says business is brightening somewhat in his town.

Harold Wendt has sold his Rivoli theatre in Defiance, Ohio, to Harry O. Thomas and Frank Nafus, both of Defiance.

Martin Printz, Cleveland exhibitor, received the Circle theatre, Euclid avenue and East 101st street, for a Christmas present. He continues to operate the Lakewood theatre in addition, but will personally supervise the Circle.

George Ryder, former manager of the Strand theatre, Cleveland, together with Walter W. Kulp, also of Cleveland, have taken over the Strand theatre from Paul Gusdanovic. The Strand has been closed for the past three weeks. It opens the week of January 7 under the new management with "Night Life in Hollywood," which is being released in Ohio through the Progress Pictures Company.

Manager Dann of the Strand theatre, Wadsworth, has taken over the Opera House of Wadsworth, formerly managed by Joseph Bender.

Robert Madigan has been elevated from the post of assistant manager to that of manager of the Standard theatre, Cleveland. That's a nice way to begin the new year.

The Bowling Green Amusement company has purchased from A. V. Meekinson the Elite and Rex theatres in Napoleon, Ohio.

Judge Foster picked out Christmas day for the opening of his new Oakland theatre in Marion. The new house has 450 seats, and has all the latest equipment. Foster also has the Marion and Orpheum theatres in Marion.

Dan Robbins, who owns and operates the Duchess theatre in Warren, announces that his new Robbins theatre, with 1,500 seating capacity, will be ready to open its doors on January 10.

F. G. Wallace, personal representative for D. W. Griffith, is in town making preparations for the early showing of "One Exciting Night" at the Stillman theatre. Wallace says that the picture will be staged just as it was in New York.

Des Moines Notes

A. H. Blank and Arthur Stolte of the A. H. Blank Enterprises recently made a visit to Council Bluffs to make arrangements for letting the contracts for the decoration of the Broadway, a new theatre in Council Bluffs. The opening of the theatre will take place the middle of February. The seating capacity of the theatre is 1,500 with a special reserved loges section in front of the balcony seats.

B. I. Van Dyke of the Royal theatre, Des Moines, received a Christmas present from a distance when he received his gift from his daughter, who lives in Petoria, South Africa. She met a government service man, who carried her off to South Africa, where they are now having their summer time.

C. C. Burton of Grimes was a visitor at the F. B. O. offices, as was Mr. C. Hales, manager of the Lyric at Madrid.

Montana Items

Manager W. J. Sullivan, of the Rialto theatre, has been showing "Dr. Jack" to large and enthusiastic audiences. Mr. Sullivan recently underwent an operation at the Mayo Bros. hospital in Rochester and he thinks he can qualify as an expert in the selection of doctors. Certainly he heartily endorses "Dr. Jack" and so does Butte.

Merle M. Davis, general manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company, who was elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Montana when the organization was effected last month, reports that it is meeting with enthusiastic support throughout the state. Letters of approval are being received from practically every city of Montana, and the consensus is that organization is necessary for co-operation in the interest of the exhibitor, and as a guard for the fair producer. Every indication is that the association will be a marked success.

Manager C. C. Pratt, of the American theatre, is back in his office after a struggle with la grippe in which he was victor, though he still bears marks of the fray. His convalescence was helped by the approval given by patrons of the American to "When Knighthood was in Flower." For this presentation the ushers were appropriately costumed after the fashion in which Marion Davies appeared so winsome, and they helped from the first to create the atmosphere of past centuries.

Albert Nadeau, of the Bluebird theatre of Anaconda, exhibiting "The Hottentot," played to one day larger gross business than any other picture in a two-day period. The seating capacity of the Bluebird theatre is 800. Four shows gave 3,200 seating capacity. The receipts of the four shows for "The Hottentot" were for 2,800.

George Landy, personal representative of Richard Walton Tully productions, starring Guy Bates Post was in Butte, Dec. 11th.

Des Moines Film Row News

BOLAND G. McCURDY, exploitation man at Universal at Des Moines, had a pleasant New Year's surprise when he received word that he was to be transferred to the Buffalo office.

The promotion comes in recognition of his ability, says Mr. Davies, manager of the Universal exchange. Mr. McCurdy will act in the same capacity at the Buffalo office.

There have been a number of changes at the Famous-Players office with the beginning of the New Year. Ernie Frase is now acting as assistant booker. He was formerly head shipper. Wesley Runnells, who was the assistant shipper, is now the accessory shipper.

Mr. Hyde, of the Famous-Players office, is in Ottumwa in the interests of percentage bookings.

Harry M. Forman, special representative from New York, arrived at the F. B. O. office on Friday. He's busy auditing the accounts.

Arthur Johnson is the new cashier at the F. B. O. offices. He was formerly at Omaha with F. B. O. Omaha held him for three months. Previous to that he was with Universal at Kansas City for three years.

William Strickland, much better known as "Bill," returned Tuesday from the Christmas celebration with his folks in Omaha.

Mrs. Menzie, chief accountant of the Famous-Players exchange, was home for Christmas. She spent the holidays with her parents in Salisbury, Mo.

A. H. Blank and Arthur Stolte returned Friday evening from Chicago where they made arrangements for securing for Des Moines three of the most expensive features for which they have negotiated, "Robin Hood," "Tess" and "One Exciting Night." "The Voice of the Minaret," Norma Talmadge's latest, will be given its first showing in but three other cities at the time that it is given its premier in Des Moines.

In Charlotte's Film Center

JACK LONDON, booker and assistant manager of the Charlotte First National office, is calling upon other bookers to match it. Christmas morning he found a substantial check in his mail—from an exhibitor! William C. McIntyre, of Burlington, N. C., had sent it, in appreciation for excellent service and many courtesies shown him during the past year. Truth is stranger than fiction—it's usually only the brickbats these fellows get!

E. F. Dardine, on a recent visit to Wilmington, N. C., was invited to attend the regular weekly luncheon of the Wilmington Kiwanis Club as a guest. He never renigs on anything of that kind and he made an instantaneous hit with the Kiwanians, giving them the best four-minute talk against censorship they had ever heard.

S. A. Lambert, former North Carolina exhibitor and more recently in the Dallas territory for Metro, has joined forces of the Charlotte Universal office selling short product in the Carolinas.

C. E. Peppiatt and M. W. Davis, manager and sales manager, respectively, of the Charlotte Southern Enterprises office, have returned from a sales conference held in New Orleans.

Two of Charlotte's most popular exchange managers have been sick with the "flu" the past week, E. E. Heller, of Pathe Exchange, and "Bill" Conn, of Film Booking offices.

Ben Abrams, field representative of the Automatic Ticket Register Company, has been calling on North Carolina exhibitors.

J. J. Rogers, formerly with the road force of the Charlotte Enterprise Distributing Corporation office, has been transferred to the Atlanta territory.

Fritz Friend has completed a fifteen weeks' continuous trip through the Carolinas.

Jos. L. Marentette is in the Carolinas for Goldwyn, leaving the managerial desk temporarily in charge of his assistants.

H. H. Everett, Charlotte manager of Bromberg attractions, spent the holidays in Atlanta.

With the Butte Branch

W. M. HUGHART (known as Whirlwind Hughart), with the Fox Exchange representing Eastern Montana, returned to Butte this week, after spending the holidays with his family at Boise, Idaho.

G. J. Ekre, Fox exchange representative, of Western Montana, spent the holidays in Seattle with his family. He has returned to Butte and is on duty again.

The Fox exchange office is in receipt of prints on the latest special, "The Town That Forgot God." The production has been screened for all the leading exhibitors of the state. There is great enthusiasm over the production.

E. E. Harris of the Film Booking Office of Salt Lake, Fox exchange, is registered this week at the Grand Hotel.

King Sullivan, Salt Lake representative of the Goldwyn exchange, is a guest of the Leggett Hotel.

J. D. Solomon of Salt Lake, from the Goldwyn office, is registered at the Grand.

B. A. Stover, representative salesman of the First National of Butte, called on the office force relative to forthcoming productions.

Miss Evelyn Ralston, now Mrs. H. N. Jaeger, who was called from the cashiership of the Pathe office of Butte a few months ago to take a similar position in the Pathe Portland office, has been recalled to the Butte office. Miss Ralston was recently married in Portland to H. N. Jaegar of Butte.

W. C. Pugh and B. T. Cale, salesmen of the Pathe office of Butte, left this week to cover their respective territories.

Carolina Snapshots

Laurence T. Lester, of Columbia, S. C., has reopened the Ideal theatre there after it had been dark for some time. This was a former Southern Enterprises house, their lease having been surrendered some time back. Mr. Lester will operate it as a first run theatre with orchestra.

Motion picture stars will be given an opportunity to contribute toward building the auditorium which the Carolina M. P. T. O. is financing for the Jackson Training School at Concord, N. C. It is planned to name the structure for the screen star who evidences most interest in the financing of the building.

One of the most thoroughly and modernly equipped small-town theatres in the country has recently been opened at Kannapolis, N. C., a community house operated by the Cannon Manufacturing Company under management of W. J. Shape.

Harry Somerville, formerly in charge of the Leitch-Pryor house in Durham, has been transferred to Greensboro, where he will have charge of the New Iris and Imperial.

All disabled service men in the government hospital of the Norfolk Navy Yard were guests of the Wells theatre of Norfolk, Va., last week at a showing of Thos. H. Ince's "Skin Deep."

A. M. Tengborg has opened the Plaza, a new house, at St. Stephens, S. C. It is a thoroughly modern theatre with seating capacity of 300.

M. Merriweather, of the Ideal, Winston-Salem, N. C., reports business on the up-grade since the beginning of the new year. The Ideal is the fourth first run house in Winston-Salem.

C. E. Buckner has returned to the management of the National at Greensboro; Don Nichols has gone to Durham to take charge of the Durham Amusement Company houses there; all Leitch-Pryor houses.

U. K. Rice, of the Piedmont Amusement Company, Winston-Salem, is back on the job after spending the holidays with relatives in Columbus, Ohio, and paid Charlotte's film row a flying visit the past week.

The beautiful Pack theatre, Asheville, after being closed several months, is operating again under a temporary holding company headed by A. Jarmuth.

The combination picture-vaudeville programs presented at the Academy, Charlotte, before it burned, have been transferred to the Auditorium, Asheville, Claude Lee going as manager.

Many friends regret to learn that T. G. Leitch, of the National, Greensboro, has suffered a severe illness with influenza,

Seattle Slants

Three holiday bills held over by Seattle first run houses for a second week's engagement recently vouched for the public approval and patronage these pictures obtained. "One Exciting Night" was the attraction at the Blue Mouse theatre that continued to draw crowds the second week at a straight fifty cent admission, day and evening. "The Flirt," which had its world premier in Seattle last week, was held over by Manager R. W. Case at the Columbia theatre. Manager Leroy V. Johnson at the Liberty kept "Oliver Twist" over the second week as his New Year's attraction.

Word has just been received here that Edward S. Curtis, a famous Seattle photographer especially noted for his studies of Indian life and characteristics, has been especially commissioned by Cecil DeMille to obtain a set of "still" pictures on the huge prehistoric forest set which is a feature of a new DeMille production. The scene referred to will probably correspond to the Roman bacchanal in "Manslaughter," according to reports.

Frank Leon, formerly head organist at the Blue Mouse theatre, who left there several months ago to preside at the console of the new Elmwood theatre in Buffalo, returned to this city recently. After several weeks in Seattle, Mr. Leon left for Tacoma, where he took the position of head organist at Jensen-VonHerberg's Rialto theatre.

New Year's Eve midnight matinees were given by practically all of Seattle's first run houses usher in the year 1923. Jensen-VonHerberg's Liberty, Coliseum and Strand theatres had special programs arranged, consisting of professional and amateur vaudeville acts, amateur try-outs, special music and film features, and plenty of souvenirs and noise-makers to make the parties more lively. Other theatres gave regular film programs, with several special features as added attractions. Prices of matinees at the different theatres ranged from regular thirty-five cent admission charges to reserved seats at some houses for $1.25.

The University of Montana "Varsity Five" a quintet of vocalists, made a distinct hit at the Blue Mouse theatre recently in their song offerings, and have been routed over the entire Blue Mouse circuit. They were forced to play return engagements in Portland and Tacoma. During their Seattle engagement, Publicity Manager Vic Gauntlett made arrangements with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer to have the "Varsity Five" on one of the newspaper's radio programs for the benefit of the holiday fund, and the enthusiasm with which they were received by radio fans was shown by the contributions that poured in to the Christmas fund after their concert.

"Day by Day, in Every Way, Our Shows Are Getting Better and Better," is the line now being used by the Columbia theatre of this city.

News of Seattle's Exchanges

"ROBIN HOOD," the latest Douglas Fairbanks feature, will be shown in Seattle at a Jensen-Von Herberg house, probably the Strand, according to an announcement made recently by Charles W. Hardin, manager of the local United Artists exchange. Advance advertising of all kinds has been begun on the production by the exchange and the advertising departments of the theatre circuit. The picture will be shown by Jensen-Von Herberg in Tacoma and Portland also, according to the announcement.

"The Third Alarm" has been booked by the Blue Mouse theatre in this city, according to an announcement made at the local Film Booking Offices exchange this week. "In the Name of the Law" was played by the Blue Mouse circuit several months ago, and its success then will be repealed with "The Third Alarm" in the opinion of E. J. Lipson, head of the Seattle F. B. O. organization.

L. K. Brin, president of the L. K. Brin exchanges, was expected back in Seattle soon, after having spent the past few weeks on the road, visiting his exchanges in the Pacific Northwestern states After a tour of his circuit, Mr. Brin spent a few days in Vancouver, B. C., and will return to this city in time to get work started on the coming Warner Brothers' productions.

Whitney Young, for the past three or more years a salesman for the Metro Pictures Corporation exchange in this city, has recently been given the Oregon territory to cover for the local office. Mr. Young's former territory included most of Eastern Washington.

Ned Edris, salesman for the De Luxe Feature Film Corporation of Seattle, has left for an extended trip into Montana. Mr. Edris took with him all of the current Al Lichtman and Preferred Pictures releases being handled by De Luxe and expects to be away from the city for from six weeks to two months. Aside from selling the pictures, Mr. Edris makes a specialty of furnishing publicity and exploitation for them, as part of the De Luxe service to its exhibitors.

David G. Rogers, a former film man of the Middle West, recently joined Charles W. Hardin's local United Artists' Corporation exchange. Mr. Rogers will cover the four states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana for United Artists.

He left on his first trip shortly after his affiliation with the exchange, taking with him all of the recent productions being handled by Mr. Hardin. Mr. Rogers was formerly associated with Mr. Hardin in the Middle West, before the latter came to the Pacific Coast several years ago.

"Forget-Me-Not," the Metro special cast production, has been booked with the Jensen-Von Herberg Circuit for showing in Seattle at an early date, according to an announcement made at the local Metro exchange.

Wallace Rucker, salesman for J. A. Gage's local Educational Pictures exchange, spent the recent holidays in Seattle, and then left again on a trip into Southern Washington and Oregon.

With Washington's Exchahges

HARRY M. CRANDALL, as one of the twenty-six national regional franchise holders of First National, is now in his second week of service in New York City, pursuant to the annual custom of First National Franchise holders of serving two weeks "tricks" there each year.

Vivian P. Whitaker, special representative for Thomas H. Ince up to January and now in similar capacity with the Al Lichtman organization, has been a visitor during the week at the Crandall executive offices, First National offices, Al Lichtman and Tom Moore offices, on his way from Culver City to New York.

Harry Bernstein, representing the Wells interests, passed through Washington from New York to Norfolk this week end.

Frank Smith, former shipper for the local exchange of F. B. O., has joined the sales force of the Independent Exchange here, handling Warner Bros. product in the Washington City and Maryland sections of the territory.

The Flax Brothers, operating the Liberty exchange here, takes a show to the District corrective penal institutions at Lorton and Occoquan, Va., once a week, and has done so for some time. There is no appropriation for this, so it is entirely at the Flax expense. So pleased are prisoners and attendants there with the film entertainment given them that at holiday times products of the farms there and holly and greens from the neighboring woods are sent to the Flax's as a token of appreciation. This year apples and greens and other D. C. penal handicraft were in the Appreciation Holiday box from the prisoners.

Out of town exhibitors visiting at local exchanges during the week included: Jack Revell, of the Broadway, Richmond, Va.; Charles Somma, owing several white and colored theatres in Richmond; I. Rubin, of the Cockade, Petersburg, all lining up product for early spring showing in the South. Some booked into May.

Miss Hattie Flax, now stenographer in the booking department of Pathe's local exchange, is the fifth member of the Flax family to enter the movie business.

Physical distribution of the old Rialto Productions, recently relinguished by Leo Garner of Reliance Films, who is now with Sidney Lust, of Super-Films, is being handled by the Liberty Exchange. A number of William Fairbank's westerns are to be distributed by Liberty during the next few months.

F. B. O., Washington announce the removal of their executive offices from the front suite to the side rooms on the east side of the Mather Building where their poster and stock rooms had been located.

Washington Brevities

To handle the crowds for the Jackie Cookan-"Oliver Twist" bill last Sunday the doors of the Metropolitan here were opened at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, of the Crandall Public Service Department, has been seriously ill, being threatened with pneumonia. Mrs. Grace Woodburn, her new secretary, is in charge during Mrs. Locherof's illness.

Much comment has been caused here by the withdrawal of Julius Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States from the Hays Committee of One Hundred, and the protest of Director McMahon of the National Catholic Welfare Council here as a result of the Will Hays' pronouncement on Arbuckle.

The new Robert Morton organ, of the orchestral unit type, was dedicated at Sunday's performance at the Central of the Crandall chain.

Miss McIntosh, of the Educational exchange, just returned from her holiday in Charleston (S. C.) home, says that theatres there were doing a big business.

Two film favorites, Sessue Hayakawa and Bertha Kalich opened here in "legit" this week. Sessue in "The Tiger Lily," the premiere at Poli's, and Kalich in "Jitta's Atonement," the Shaw play at the Shubert-Garrick.

Dr. Newman's Cape-to-Cairo movie travel thrills opened at the National Sunday night for a series of Sunday evening engagements.

Florida Flashes

The New Year brought but few changes in the theatrical line-up down here. At Dunedin, C. C. Price and Son gave up the Dixie theatre, which will be operated by the owner, S. C. Young, for the present. Price and Son just lately bought the Alimar at Live Oak, and the Royal at Madison. Both these houses are in the north end of the State, while Dunedin is on the southwest coast.

At Frost Proof, J. J. Felder was forced to quit business entirely, as the building, in which he has been operating the Clinch theatre, is to be remodeled and there was no other building available in the city.

South Florida is now well filled with tourists. At Tampa the Tin Can Tourists of the World (the official badge is a can opener) are holding their annual convention. There are over 3,000 of them here. All this helps business in the theatres.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GORHAM

Buffalo Briefs

Manager Eugene A. Pfeil has booked "I Am the Law" as the last picture to be shown in Buffalo's pioneer picture house, the Strand, which closes its doors for all time Thursday, February 1.

There is a rumor that M. Shea will begin building in the spring a new theatre on the Main near Chippewa site, purchased a few years ago. Plans were completed a long time ago for an elaborate picture theatre to be called the Shea Metropolitan. Something threw a wrench into the proposition. Perhaps it may be built yet.

Moe Mark, president of the Mark Strand interests, was in town Wednesday, January 10, to confer with Walter Hays, vice president, on details attending the passing of the local Strand. The equipment is now being sold.

The employes of the Lafayette Square theatre were the guests of M. Slotkin at the big New Year's party held on the stage of the big house New Year's night after the regular show. Seames & Zeitler put on a big feed into which dived some 70 employes.

Edward Lish, operator, was burned on the hands and face when fire, starting in the booth from a short circuit, destroyed about $100 worth of film in the Drohen theatre, Dunkirk, Jan. 2.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood." One day, Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y. All seats reserved; $1.50 top. Sold out before picture started. That tells the story of the stunt put over by Herman Lorence at the Cataract City House last Sunday. Mr. Lorence will bring the production back later for a week run at lower prices.

The will of P. B. McNaughton, former president of the Shea Amusement Company, who died recently, has been filed in Surrogate's Court. The amount of the estate is not given, except to say that Mr. McNaughton left personal property valued at $10,000 and upward and real estate of the same valuation. It is known, however, that Mr. McNaughton was one of the richest men in Buffalo. He left the bulk of his estate to his widow and his daughter.

Niagara Falls exhibitors have put their foot down on spooning in their theatre. This decision followed the hailing into court of a young couple caught making "violent love," in a Falls street theatre. A disgusted patron howled. The manager got busy. The judge gave the pair a talking to. The exhibitors met to talk over the situation. No more love nest stuff, they say.

Shea's Court street house has ended its continuous Sunday policy and substituted two shows, one starting at 2 P. M. and the second at 8 o'clock. All seats are reserved. Acts from the week's vaudeville bill are added to the feature films, which are the same as shown at Shea's Hippodrome.

Buffalo's Film Row News

GILBERT JOSEPHSON has resigned as exploitation representative at the F. B. O. exchange. His successor is scheduled to arrive from New York this week. One of Mr. Josephson's last stunts while on the job was his meeting with the firemen of Watertown, N. Y., and negotiating the sale of 1,500 tickets. The firemen were given a 10 per cent rebate on the tickets, the money going into their pension fund. Mr. Josephson also arranged to dedicate the picture to Chief William A. Gaffney of Watertown. The production was shown at the Watertown Avon, of which Charlie Sesonski is manager.

Harry Buxbaum, general manager of the New York, Albany and Buffalo Paramount exchanges, was in town last week for a conference with Allan S. Moritz, local manager. "Bux" and Moritz also visited Rochester and Syracuse exhibitors over the week end. William Clark, special representative for Cosmopolitan, was also here working on "Knighthood."

Manager W. A. Anthony of Vitagraph is planning a special screen of "A Front Page Story," for local newspaper men. Mr. Anthony made application for his 1923 auto license this week. He got an awful jolt when he saw the price under the new weight system. He offered to trade in his car for a set of plates.

Art Young, booker for Bond Photoplays Corporation, is in Albany this week, installing a new booking system at the Albany branch of the newly formed state right concern. Bond, by the way, is booking a lot of features at the local Lafayette Square, which is showing "Enter Madame," "Notoriety," and other productions handled by this company.

There was a large crowd in attendance at the Elmwood theatre benefit for Johnny Regan, assistant booker at the Universal exchange. The show was given last Friday night after the regular Elmwood program. Johnny is forced to give up his work on account of ill health.

Harold Lloyd Beecroft, exploitationist extraordinary of the local First National exchange, went to New York for the holidays. His collar hasn't fit since. He got his neck so wet that he swelled up to about a No. 17. He is just coming out of the fog. Harold declares the only place you can't find it in New York is in the five and ten cent stores. Gene Markens, city salesman, won $150 as a prize for his fine sales work. The check arrived—then departed. Gene, however, can now talk coherently and find his way home in the light. Still another. E. J. Hayes, branch manager, got a silver flask for Christmas from the exchange employes. It was suitably engraved but it is reported that Eddie has not been able to see the engraving as yet. He should play a much better game of golf this summer with this bit of silverware on his hip. J. S. MacHenry of the legal department has been at the First National office for several days. The whole F. N. outfit received passes to the new Oliver Morosco musical comedy, "Lady Butterfly," at the Majestic.

Al Becker of the Becker Theatre Supply Company has installed a new Simplex projection machine in the Madison high school, Rochester. This makes Rochester high schools 100 per cent Simplex, three other institutions having been so equipped by Becker.

It is reported that Clayton P. Sheehan is doing so much business on his South American mission that the home office is shipping a boat load of prints to that country. Eddie McBride is on the road at last. The former manager of the advertising department is now a full fledged film salesman. He is covering the Southern Tier this week with a dog sled.

A. W. Carrick, formerly of Pittsburgh, has succeeded Fenton Lawlor as sales manager of the local Hodkinson exchange. Lawlor is remaining with the company as salesman.

With St. Louis' Branch Offices

SEVERAL St. Louis film exchange managers a few days before Christmas made the acquaintance of a gentleman who gave his name as "J. Palethorpe" and who left behind some checks that were returned by a New York bank marked "No such account." In several instances he is said to have represented himself to be the personal representative of the president of the film organization of the manager he happened to be talking to. Exchange men in other cities are warned to be on their guard against "Mr. J. Palethorpe."

Jack Underwood of the Enterprise office spent the Christmas holidays in Dallas as the guest of relatives. He says that the movies are enjoying great prosperity in the Southland.

The First National sales organization held a get-together gathering at Hotel Melbourne on January 2. Sort of getting off on the right foot for the New Year.

Gradwell Sears of Chicago, First National sales manager for the Chicago district, spent several days in St. Louis as the guest of relatives.

Eddie Grossman, who represents the Al Lichtman exchanges, after spending a week in St. Louis, departed for Denver, Colo.

R. L. McLean, assistant manager for First National, is making the key cities of Southern Illinois. Harry Weiss, manager, returned a few days ago from Booneville and Sedalia, Mo.

St. Louis Jottings

Frank R. Tate, Charley Cella and their associates, who own the Columbia theatre and the Strand theatre at Sixth and St. Charles streets, are said to contemplate the erection of a large retail store and office building structure on the site of the theatres.

Recently they purchased the Columbia site under the terms of an option obtained some twenty years ago, when they signed a ninety-nine year lease on the property, and are reputed to have cleaned up a book profit of more than $800,000 by swinging the deal. They also bought the Strand site at a very good price a few months ago.

During the past two weeks they have borrowed $300,000 on the Columbia property and $125,000 on the Strand and site. The two holdings give them a frontage of 105 feet on Sixth street by 80 on St. Charles.

The advantage of the film to industry has been proven by the Walsh Motor Company, Delmar boulevard at Euclid avenue, which depends upon the silver screen to swing many sales for Lincoln and Ford automobiles. Three nights a week shows are held in which motion pictures showing the construction of the machines are screened. Prospective buyers are guests at these shows.

The Illmo Amusement Company on New Year's Day re-opened the Yale theatre, Macon, Mo., and the Yale theatre, Anna, Ill., which were purchased a few weeks ago. The Macon house was formerly known as the Princess while the Anna theatre was the Main theatre. The names were changed to conform to that of the Illmo Amusement Company's house at Shelbyville, Ill. All houses purchased in the future will also be known as the Yale theatre. F. S. Russell has been installed as manager of the Anna theatre, Wallace Akin is in charge at Macon and Lou Wagner at Shelbyville. The company's headquarters are at 3330 Olive street, St. Louis, where films for all the houses are contracted for.

Spyros Skouras of the new Grand Central and other local theatres was host at a happy New Year's party given at the Hotel Jefferson on New Year's Eve. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Dave Silverman, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Rodemich, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weiss, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skouras, Mr. and Mrs. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Rankow and Mr. and Mr. Spyros Skouras.

George Newsome of the Plaza theatre, Mount Vernon, Ill., was seen along Motion Picture Row.

Elmer Brient, manager of the Illinois and Grand theatres, Centralia, Ill., was another post-holiday visitor.

Jimmy Clayton of the Strand, West Frankfort, and Tom Reed of Duquoin, Ill., were other regulars who got into town during the past week. They report that business in that vicinity has shown decided improvement in recent weeks.

Joe Mogler, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of St. Louis and Eastern Missouri, plans to spend a week in New York. Spyros Skouras will also be in New York the week of January 15.

Indianapolis Gossip

Back to the musical feature to pull in the crowds. Two downtown houses have done it successfully in the past month. The Apollo has a vocal trio and its own "Apollo Entertainers," being a jazz band and vocal troupe in one, while the Ohio put in a "syncopating orchestra" and a soloist.

The Colonial has been using two cabaret orchestras for years without any decrease in popularity.

The Apollo has been using its entertainers chiefly while the weekly and comedy are being run. They work in spotlight, varying stunts such as singing in the aisles, banjo solos, etc. When the feature is long they play for a reel or two of it to relieve the regular orchestra. The trio is worked as a stage specialty between reels.

The Circle smashed hard in preparation for "Robin Hood's" run this week.

The Pleasure Park Company, of Evansville, Ind., was incorporated with $135,000 capital and I. A. Kelly, Leslie M. Humphrey, I. P. Blanton, P. H. Schmidt and H. F. Kersting as directors.

San Francisco Close-Ups

I. E. Phelps, manager of the "Trivoli" was asked by patrons of that house to keep the Christmas and New Year Greetings in the hall of that motion picture theatre, way after the holiday season because the display was so attractive. The words "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year" were spelled in colored globes and decorated with imitation flowers. However, the words were spelled more attractively than most advertisers spell them and for that reason many patrons asked Mr. Phelps to keep the greetings for another week and he did.

New amusement for the passengers on board the Admiral Oriental Trans-Pacific liners has been added in the form of moving pictures. The first ship to be so equipped is the "President McKinley" when she sailed from Puget Sound. The most modern equipment has been added and the pictures shown are of the highest quality, which will add to the pleasures, said the Captain, on the eleven days' journey across the Pacific Ocean.

Manager Leon Levy of the "California" has built another elaborate stage presentation for the later series of Ben Black's musical presentation which are being very enthusiastically received. Among those that received applause, for which reason the "Band" was forced to give double encores were selections from "Babes in Toyland" and "March of the Toys."

Colfax, Iowa City and this city have been chosen for the filming of Frank Norris' novel "McTeague." This announcement has just been made in San Francisco by Eric Von Stroheim, one of the leading screen stars, and Ray Moore, location manager, and Ernie Traxler, producing manager.

The new "Balboa" motion picture house, is today a promise fulfilled to the people of the West-Wood Park district. Its opening was an auspicious event. This theatre, which cost $200,000, is considered one of the most exclusive residential houses in the United States. It has all the latest improvements and will show only the best pictures. S. H. Levin of San Francisco and D. B. Levin of New York are the owners.

C. Floyd Hopkins, general manager of the six Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and who was appointed on December 15, to the same position for the four Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Reading—making ten theatres under his direction—is critically ill at his home, 1925 Market street, Harrisburg, and at this writing, January 6, there are grave fears that he may not recover. He suffered an attack of grip, following a nervous breakdown which has been attributed to overwork, in connection with taking over his additional duties in Reading. Toxic poisoning developed during his illness, complicating the situation, and he has been delirious much of the time.

R. G. Kirk, of Steelton, Pa., who has written a number of stories appearing in the Saturday Evening Post, based on characters found among the workers in the Bethlehem Steel Company's plant in Steelton, has just completed a film story, "White Heat," which, it is announced, was designed especially for screen presentation by Thomas Meighan.

Advices received in Steelton are to the effect that it will be released in Los Angeles on June 4. Mr. Kirk and his family have been residing in Santa Monica, Cal., for the last six months, where he has been pursuing his literary efforts. Among his stories in The Saturday Evening Post were "Scrapper O'Doon" and "Malloy Campeador."

Increasing their string of theatres in Reading to seven, Carr & Schad announce they have just purchased the interest of the Reading Amusement Company in the Lyric Theatre, on Penn street, that city, and have taken a long term lease on the building from the owners, the Fricker estate.

The Lyric is a large motion picture theatre, equipped also for vaudeville. The house is to be entirely renovated and a modern ventilating system will be installed. New projection machines will be acquired. There will be a new pipe organ and a new electric sign with changeable letters will be placed on the front of the building. The transfer of the property became effective on New Year's Day.

The first Carr & Schad theatre opened in Reading was the Victor, on October 15, 1907. The company met with immediate success and has added rapidly to its chain of Reading theatres until it now controls seven.

At a meeting held December 27, in Philadelphia, of the board of managers of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern Jersey and Delaware, a number of theatres were dropped from membership for non-payment of dues. It is stated that they had received notice of this contemplated action, but had failed to heed it. It was decided to postpone the proposed meeting of the organization, that had been scheduled for Shamokin on January 14, until after the meeting soon to be held in Harrisburg at which plans will be discussed for combating legislation hostile to the motion picture industry that may come up in the session of the Pennsylvania Legislature which holds its first formal business meeting on January 16, having organized on Jan. 2.

Appointment of a new publicity representative for the six Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg has just been announced. He is H. C. McCourt, formerly of New York. Prior to his coming to Harrisburg he was assigned to duty for two months at the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Reading.

A cash bonus was given as a holiday present to all the employes of the L. J. Chamberlain Amusement Company, which operates a chain of motion picture theatres in Shamokin, Mt. Carmel, Tamaqua and Bloomsburg.

Canadian Bulletins

The revenue secured by the city of Alberta from moving picture theatres during the past year took a tremendous drop, according to the official figures announced for 1923 by George Thompson, license inspector. In 1922 the fees collected from local houses totaled only $175, according to the published statistics. The theatre revenue secured by the city during 1921 was $3,137. The big difference was due to the wiping out of a considerable portion of license assessments for last year. In 1921 there were eleven theatres in Calgary. Last year there were nine, two of the smaller houses having closed.

Alberta has joined with the other provinces of Canada which have refused to reconsider their decision with regard to moving picture releases in which "Fatty" Arbuckle is starred. On January 3 the Alberta Board of Moving Picture Censors announced at Edmonton that "Fatty" Arbucklet features would continue under the ban in Alberta because the board did not consider that the lifting of the ban by Will H. Hays was justified. Consequently, it was announced, the board would use its authority to prevent the exhibition of the films in Alberta.

This action has also been taken by the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors and also by the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association for Manitoba. It is believed that the other provinces will follow the example set by Ontario.

"The Game of Life," presented at Toronto, Ontario, by Jule and J. J. Allen as "the first English super-picture," made such a hit during its presentation at Massey Music Hall, the large local auditorium, during the Christmas holidays that it has been transferred for an indefinite run to the Princess theatre, Toronto, Shubert unit vaudeville being retired from the theatre to permit the presentation of the picture. The Princess theatre engagement opened January 8 with two performances daily. Incidentally, this is the first time that a moving picture has been presented in the local Shubert house.

The Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, has added still another large moving picture theatre to its great chain of theatres in Canada by the taking over of the Province theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, one of the best known theatres in the Manitoba capital. Some time ago the Province was controlled by Allen Theatres, Limited, but it was relinquished by the Allens after which it was independently operated for a year or so with varied success. The policy of the theatre under the Famous Players auspices will be the presentation of leading attractions at "family prices." The Province was re-opened New Year's day with "The Pride of Palomar" as the attraction. This was followed by "Burning Sands." Top prices at the Province for evening performances is now 30 cents, including the tax.

Practically all managers of leading theatres in Winnipeg, Manitoba, received special remembrances from their theatre staffs during the Christmas holidays and it is singular that in many instances the managers received gold watches and chains from staff associates. Those who received timepieces included Miller Stewart, manager of the Allen theatre; G. H. Larsen, manager of the College theatre; P. D. Egan, manager of the Lyceum theatre, and L. C. Straw, manager of the Starland theatre. Messrs. Stewart, Larsen and Egan were also presented with gold pen-knives. Manager H. M. Thomas of the sented with a beautiful silk lounging robe from the employes of the Capitol, although he had only been in charge of the theatre for a short time.

Joseph C. Singer has leased the Queen theatre at Dallas, Texas, now operated by Southern Enterprises and will take charge in the near future.

J. Goodfriend opened his new theatre at Moran, Texas, on December 26.

Dr. K. H. Aynesworth has purchased the Victory theatre at Waco, Texas, from Southern Enterprises, Inc.

A fire originating in the booth of the Petrolia theatre at Petrolia, Texas, destroyed films and machine and did considerable damage to the theatre.

The Rialto theatre at Pecos, Texas, will install a radio equipment soon.

D. W. Ray has purchased the Auditorium theatre at Waco, Tex.

Mrs. Marshall and Miss Wilson opened the Palace theatre at Bryan, Texas, last week to pleased capacity business. The Palace is an up-to-date theatre.

The Palace is the name given by Louis Santikos to the new house he is completing in San Antonio, Texas, which will be opened about February 1.

The Haskell theatre at Haskell, Texas, which was recently leased by Ed Robertson, has been purchased by him.

Mr. Keeling, of the Queen theatre, at Santa Anna, Texas, is the proud father of a new daughter, who arrived last week.

The Rex theatre at Weinert, Texas, has opened for business, after having been closed down for some time.

Mayor Defrank Howell, of Cleburne, Texas, will not permit the showing of Fatty Arbuckle pictures in Cleburne, Texas.

The leaders in the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs have voiced a protest against the showing of Fatty Arbuckle pictures in Texas, and in resolutions passed at Waco, December 30, stated in no uncertain terms that the showing of Arbuckle pictures would be an outrage against morals and common decency.

The Rialto theatre, at Pecos, will install a radio receiving outfit and plant, with a loud speaking device, at an early date.

New England Notes

Edward F. Hogan, 57, and well known around the Providence theatres, died suddenly the other day in the Central police station in that city where he had gone to settle an argument over refunding admissions to three brothers ejected from Fay's theatre, where he has been special policeman and ticket taker for six years. He had taken but a few steps into the office of Lieut. Harry F. Brown when he pitched forward in the officer's arms, and died almost immediately. He was formerly with Keith's theatre, and was an Elk, Woodman, and a member of the Theatrical Mechanics' Association of Providence. He leaves a widow, Teresa.

The Codman Square theatre, Dorchester, Mass., became another of the large and fast growing links in the chain owned and operated by The Olympic Theatres, Inc. The house will be under the personal supervision of the president, Nathan H. Gordon, and will run double feature bills. The organist is Francis J. Cronin, well known in New England. A vaudeville bill will be added to the Sunday programs. The change took place on the first of the year.

Under the auspices of the Boston city government's conservation bureau, a motion picture has been completed of the work of the city in meeting the needs of the people during the coal shortage. Among other things it shows the lines of applicants at City Hall, Mayor Curley chopping wood at the city yards, and the distribution of both kinds of fuel. It is being shown at rallies throughout the city in school and municipal auditoriums.

New uses are discovered every year for the motion picture. The first discovery for 1923 was a watch night service held New Year's Eve at the Clark Memorial Methodist Church, Woodfords, Maine. At the Chestnut Street Methodist Church in Portland, Maine, the pastor delivered his sermon at the watch service garbed as Father Time, and there was also a short film.

The storm aroused over the restoration of Roscoe Arbuckle to the films continues unabated in New England, and the newspapers are deluged daily with letters both for and against his return. Opinion at present seems about divided, with the balance swinging against "Fatty" at the present time. One man argues that Arbuckle has no further right in the pictures than an actor whose face had become repulsively disfigured.

Motion pictures will play an important part in the fifth annual reunion meeting of the Massachusetts agricultural organizations, which opens for four days of meetings at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on January 16. Most of the films to be shown represent the activities of the eighteen different bodies in the association, or depict the tremendous and undeveloped resources in other parts of the country and problems met there. Among the titles are: "Bees, How They Live and Work," "Wichita National Forest," "United States, World's Champion Farmer," "Dates, America's New Fruit Crop," "Milk Made Products," "Stable Flies," "Where the United States Raises Poultry," "Logging Eastern White Pine," and "She's Wild."

"The Christian"

Goldwyn—9000 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

ALL the superlatives in the dictionary could be called into action in praising this production. Therefore consider them all used and much space saved right at the start. Not only Goldwyn, but the entire motion picture industry, should be proud of this contribution to the screen, especially at this time when so-called guardians of the plain people are treading the highways of a nation shouting loudly of the "menace of the movies." "The Christian" with one whack puts these folks to rout.

Sir Hall Caine's work has always been considered a literary gem. The producers have transplanted it to the screen with a deep reverence for the text. There has been no insolent butchering of a classic. The result is an opus that will appeal to 90 per cent of those who believe in the motion picture not only as an entertaining but as an educative part of our daily life.

From a production viewpoint "The Christian" leaves nothing to be desired. It has been "shot" in the exact locale of the author's story. Pastoral England and historic London are used as a background for a march of stirring events, a panorama of scenes that seem to leap from the screen in their realism. Photographically the picture is an artistic triumph, some of the night views being among the finest ever shown.

Richard Dix as John Storm does the best work of his career. Mae Busch as Glory Quayle again steps into prominence. Her fine work will cause much favorable comment. And all the others are splendid. Maurice Tourneur has contributed one of the finest bits of direction in the history of the silent art. The production is filled with "big scenes." We couldn't begin to enumerate here. The climax is a tremendous one. We recommend "The Christian" to the world. A treat is in store for a jaded public.

The Cast

John Storm	Richard Dix
Glory Quayle	Mae Busch
Brother Paul	Gareth Hughes
Polly Love	Phyllis Haver
Lord Robert Ure	Cyril Chadwick
Horatio Drake	Mahlon Hamilton
Father Lampleigh	Joseph Dowling
Lord Storm	Claude Gillingwater
Parson Quayle	John Herdman
Liza	Beryl Mercer
Rev. Golightly	Robert Bolder
Matron	Milla Davenport
Mary	Alice Hesse
Lady Robert Ure	Aileen Pringle
Faro King	Harry Northrup
Doctor	Eric Mayne

By Sir Hall Caine. Directed by Maurice Tourneur. Scenario by Paul Bern. Photographed by Charles Van Enger.

The Story—The world-famous tale of John Storm whose passion for the beautiful Glory Quayle proved stronger than the hold cause to which he had pledged his life.

Classification—A tensely interesting drama of real life, masterfully done. Every strata of life seems to have been touched in the action.

Production Highlights—The work of Richard Dix as John Storm, Mae Busch as Glory Quayle and the excellent supporting cast. The many beautiful interiors and the wonderful exteriors—all staged in London or other parts of England. The tremendous mob scenes in Trafalgar Square. The exquisite photography, especially the night shots. The scenes at the real British Derby at Epsom Downs.

Exploitation Angles—Get your ministers to a private screening of this one and then enlist their active co-operation and support. The book is well known. Put over tieups with local bookstores. If you can get a tallyho outfit, use it as a street feature, playing up the derby feature of the picture.

Drawing Power—Unlimited. It's up to YOU.

A novel scene in an Educational comedy which will be called "Chicken Dressing."

"Affinities"

Hodkinson—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

TO say that a story is the product of Mary Roberts Rinehart might magnify its merit, but to say that domestic problems have been spiced with genuine humor from the beginning to the end of "Affinities" is convincing. The same old plot with the neglected wife leaning upon the shoulders of the man who "understands women" has been so twisted about into a comedy drama that it will not be recognized. The humorous phase of the theme, however, is far from being hackneyed; in fact it is a brand new idea which should sell to any audience.

No divorces or "unwritten law" murders mar the action of the picture, which contains nothing more serious than a game of golf, a sport which offers an excuse for the chain of events which occur with pleasing continuity. Being a 1923 "knight of the club house," the proverbial "other man" in this production decided upon a novel method to win the woman who was not to be won for the second time. An affinity club, from which the title is fittingly derived, is formed for neglected husbands and wives and it is around this impromptu organization that the entire synopsis is based.

The husband-golfer, however, proved to be not quite as involved in his game as was supposed, and the real punch of the production comes when it is discovered that he also has been staging a little "affinity" party of his own. Of course, there is some romance, as well as a bit of near pathos, but the principal vein of the picture is good, wholesome humor.

The direction could not be improved upon, while the photography and lighting effects are good.

The Cast

Fanny Illington	Colleen Moore
Ferd Jackson	Joe Bonner
Day Illington	John Bowers
Ida Jackson	Grace Gordon
Prof. Savage	Pietro Sosso

By Mary Roberts Rinehart. Scenario by H. Landers Jackson. Photographed and directed by Ward Lascelle. Photography by Abe Schultz.

The Story—Wife of golfer, who devotes much time to his game, is easy victim of neighbor who proposes the organization of an affinity club for the purpose of neglected husbands and wives. The members of the new club meet, but the wife discovers that the intentions of the neighbor were not just what she had anticipated. The neighbor, Ferd Jackson, who knew nothing of the whereabouts of Ida Jackson during the party, and the wife are much surprised to find that the golfer-husband has been having an "affinity" party of his own during their absence. The golfer takes his wife in his arms and both promise not to have any more affinities.

Classification—Comedy drama of modern club life.

Production Highlights—The surprising climax when it is discovered the husband also has had a "finger in the pie." True-to-life atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Why not play up a comparison of the ancient cave man methods of winning a woman with those of 1923?

"The Valley of Lost Souls"

Iroquois-Independent—4700 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is a stamp of reality about this picture even though it carries the ancient and honorable Northwest Mounted formula—and this realism helps to eliminate the obviousness of this familiar pattern. Moreover the Policeman is not depicted as unduly heroic—but simply as an officer on a mission to get his man without being involved in the orthodox scheme of conflict, the call of love or the call of duty. Happily the girl is not the brother or sweetheart of the disciple of evil who must be captured.

Consequently there is a different flavor to this Mounted story. Another point in its favor is the congenital weakness of the villain. He isn't bad because he has been frustrated in love, but because he can't help it. He's a born bad man whose cunning enables him to play upon the superstitions of the natives. They believe that a stump blower (there's a new character for you—a dynamiter who blows up the stumps of trees for clearing purposes) is a ghost. Well, Mr. Ghost is the bad half-breed who shoots from ambush. When he assassinates the heroine's brother, the Mountie comes disguised to get his man. And with his arrival the romantic element is introduced. The villain dominates the lumberjacks by selling them bad hooch. And his villainy inspires him to conquer the heroine by fair means or foul. A half-breed girl is in love with him and this complicates matters for both of them.

The policeman discovers a clue, employs the bad man for a guide and the suspense intrudes at this point, for you wonder how each one will fare at the hands of the other. The villain attempts to dynamite the Mountie in a shack and failing there, succeeds in knocking him cold with the butt end of his gun. This is unconvincing because the officer is a big man while the half-breed just reaches his shoulders—and a good big man can whip a good little man any day. Still it shows that a hero can sometimes take the count. The climax offers the villain barricaded in his shack and considerable warfare with guns. He is finally captured. The atmosphere is good and the acting first rate except that contributed by Louis Alberni as the villain.

The Cast

Julie Lebeau	Muriel Kingston
Sergt. MacKenzie	Victor Sutherland
Wahneta	Anne Hamilton
Jacques	Luis Alberni
Anton Lebeau	Edward Roseman
Constable Frazier	Stanley Walpole

By J. Seton Drummond. Scenario by George D. Proctor. Directed by Caryl S. Fleming. Photographed by Frank Perugini. Produced by Iroquois Productions, Inc. Released by Independent Pictures Corp.

The Story—Half-breed plays upon superstitions of natives in lumber camp by assuming the role of a ghost and killing those who cross his path. A Mountie comes to solve the mystery and after several trials succeeds in getting his man and winning the girl of his heart.

Classification—Melodrama of Quebec province featuring Northwest Mounted formula—"get your man!" Intrigue and romance.

Production Highlights—The good construction of plot and able direction. The atmosphere The capable acting by Victor Sutherland, Edward Roseman and Muriel Kingston. The shooting climax.

Exploitation Angles—If your crowd is fed up with Northwest Mounted formula don't give away the plot. Feature it as interesting melodrama of the Canadian woods. Plot suggests an atmospheric prologue.

"A Bill of Divorcement"

Associated Exhibitors—5819 Feet

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

THERE is a pleasing sincerity about this entire production that immediately lifts it out of the common run. There is a refreshing naturalness about it and the characters behave like human beings.

The story, presented with little change from the stage play by Clemence Dane which brought Allan Pollock into prominence, is unusual and interesting. The theme of the taint of insanity which runs in families is not new in literature, but it is rather new to the screen. There is an eternal triangle, to be sure, but the ending is more logical and satisfying than is usually the case. Few writers could have resisted the temptation to have the wife re-united with her husband, with the "other man" going away to suffer in silence. Here, however, the wife, as is reasonable and just, goes away to seek happiness, and the daughter, whose happiness has already been shattered by the knowledge that the taint of insanity lies upon her, remains to comfort her father.

Aside from the story, the outstanding pleasing feature is the work of Constance Binney and Fay Compton, as the daughter and wife, respectively, of the insane man. They are called upon for many heavy emotional scenes, but their work is always restrained and a joy to watch. Miss Binney has been very well photographed and is a thoroughly charming figure as the light-hearted girl who rises to the supreme heights of sacrifice. Miss Compton is an extraordinarily intelligent player and in her hands the role of the perplexed wife becomes a very human character.

Malcolm Keen, the principal male member of the cast has a difficult role as the insane husband. A characterization of this sort, if ever so slightly overplayed, becomes grotesque. Mr. Keen, however, has made the most of a part easily made unsympathetic.

In the hands of these three lies the major portion of the story, which makes it unusually easy to follow. Denison Clift has handled his end of the work in good shape and there are many little touches throughout which help to vitalize the picture. We believe you need not hesitate to recommend this strongly to your patrons.

The Cast

Sydney Fairfield	Constance Binney
Margaret Fairfield	Fay Compton
Hilary Fairfield	Malcolm Keen
Gray Meredith	Henry Victor
Dr. Alliot	Henry Vibart
Rev. Pumphrey	Fewlass Llewellyn
Kit Pumphrey	Martin Walker
Aunt Hester	Dora Gregory

From the play by Clemence Dane. Adapted and directed by Denison Clift. Produced by Ideal Films.

The Story—Margaret Fairfield learns after her marriage that insanity runs in her husband's family. Soon after, he is placed in an asylum and pronounced incurable. Seventeen years pass and their daughter grows up. Margaret falls in love with Gray Meredith and finally divorces her husband. The daughter, Sydney, is herself in love. The husband returns, his sanity restored. Margaret is torn between her sense of duty toward him and her love for Meredith. Sydney renounces her own love, sends her mother away to find happiness, and remains with her father to care for him.

Classification—Society drama with strong human interest.

Production Highlights—The husband's attack of insanity. The self-sacrifice of Sydney. The excellent work of the Misses Binney and Compton. The splendid production.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the play on which this is based. The star. The powerful problem situation in which the wife is placed, which offers opportunity for essay contests and the like. The divorce angle, which is timely.

Drawing Power—As a production, it is suitable for the better class of theatre.

Spectacular scene from "Thundering Dawn," the Universal picture, adapted from the stage play "The Attic of Felix Bavu."

"Gimme"

Goldwyn—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

RUPERT HUGHES has taken another vital domestic problem and woven it into a highly entertaining bit of screen fabric. The whole idea is that it's up to the old man to come through with half of his worldly goods on all occasions and not force his mate to humiliate herself by continually howling forth—GIMME! In developing this theme into a screen story, Mr. Hughes has taken advantage of the many dramatic as well as humorous situations offered and has given us a picture that should be well received.

The story will make a big hit with the women folks. Why? Because it hits the men folks. What could please mother more than to get him into a theatre and there have the fact driven home that it's all wrong to salt the weekly stipend in his own jeans, instead of splitting 50-50.

"Gimmie," has been elaborately staged. If you can't put this one over by getting the women behind it, better start bootlegging.

A big feature is the cast. It is headed by Helene Chadwick, who dominates the production with her magnetic personality. Never has she appeared to better advantage. Kate Lester is an ideal selection for the wealthy matron. We were surprised to find Henry B. Walthall cast in a minor role, a man who does the house work while his wife works. But it is later explained that he was gassed in France and has to stay home. It was a novel bit, at least.

The Cast

Fanny Daniels	Helene Chadwick
Clinton Ferris	Gaston Glass
Mrs. Ferris	Kate Lester
Clothilde Kingsley	Eleanor Boardman
Claude Lambert	David Imboden
Mrs. Wainwright	Georgia Woodthorpe
John McGimsey	Henry B. Walthall
Lizzie	Jean Hope

By Rupert Hughes. Directed by Rupert Hughes. Scenario by Rupert Hughes. Photographed by John Mescall.

The Story—Fanny Daniels lands the son of a wealthy woman as a husband, who is disinherited and has to go to work. Fanny borrows $500 for a trousseau from her employer, who loans it gladly, having his own designs upon her. Fanny's husband, unwittingly neglects the financial side of marriage. The employer calls in his loan. Fanny, in terror, lest her husband learns her secret, draws a check for $500 on her husband. A row results. Fanny leaves. She goes back to work. But the husband finds out about the trousseau and about his wife's dread of the word "Gimme," and all ends well.

Classification—Another one of Rupert Hughes' film discussions of a domestic problem that is entertainingly done.

Production Highlights—Rupert Hughes' work as author, director and continuity writer. The fine cast with Helene Chadwick doing especially good work. The mounting given the picture, some of the exteriors being unusually attractive. The good camera work. The moral of the story.

Exploitation Angles—Go after the women on this one. It has to do with women's rights. Therefore all the women's clubs in town are at your call. Write a form letter and send it to every woman in town telling her to bring her husband and tell a little about the theme of the story. The title offers a variety of chances to exploit.

Drawing Power—Suitable for first run houses in the large as well as small cities.

"The Face on the Barroom Floor"

Fox—5787 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE old sob poem has been brought forward as a foundation for an original scenario which, despite the sob stuff and the appeal for tears, comes through an interesting feature. In its favor is the interpretation as contributed by Henry B. Walthall, who has a part made to order for his particular style of acting—suppressed emotion. And Walthall plays with a fine depth of understanding so that he appears to be a life-like character.

The story has nothing in common with the poem aside from the title and incident of the artist painting the portrait upon the barroom floor. For the most part it is melodramatic in action with occasional departures in the valley of romance. The picture is told in narrative style in the form of a fade-back with the artist reciting his "ups and downs" before a group of mockers in a saloon. And when the thread is broken it is conveniently tied together by the governor who picks up the story and supplies the missing links. The spectator follows the tale with interest because it is well developed so that the pathos is ever emphasized.

The entire plot revolves around the misfortunes visited upon the derelict artist who, after he has shielded the weakling brother by assuming his guilt for the suicide of a fisherman' daughter, steps down into the gutter, a bit of human flotsam. He is railroaded to prison through a frame-up and is pardoned by a governor whose life he has saved. This is the point where the melodramatic incident has its airing. There is hardly any excuse for the lighthouse episode other than presenting some beautiful exteriors of a rock-bound coast. However, the derelict adjusts the searchlight and comes back to the prison to be pardoned. The convenient touch intrudes when the governor at a party which is attended by the artist's erstwhile fiancee, remarks that he has seen the painter a short time previously.

It is a "sob" picture yet it never becomes maudlin in its action, nor unduly sentimental in its appeal. Walthall sees to that. It may be called a convenient story—rather arbitrary in places, but it manages to hold the interest and should please any audience which has been attracted by the title.

The Cast

Robert Stevens	Henry B. Walthall
Mrs. Marion Trevor	Ruth Clifford
Richard Van Vleck	Walter Emerson
Thomas Waring	Frederick Sullivan
Lottie	Alma Bennett
Ex-Governor Winston	Norval McGregor
Henry Drew	Michael Dark
Fisherman	Gus Saville

By G. Marion Burton. Scenario by Eugene B. Lewis. Directed by Jack Ford. Photographed by George Schneiderman. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Artist engaged to marry society girl, becomes charmed with daughter of fisherman who poses for him. Society girl's brother brings dishonor upon the fisherman's daughter and when she commits suicide the artist shields the brother. Naturally he is blamed by his fiancee who terminates the engagement. The artist becomes a derelict and is imprisoned upon a false charge. His skill with the brush never deserts him and he paints a face upon the barroom floor. Eventually he is lifted from his environment by his erstwhile fiancee..

Classification—Heart interest drama carrying adventure, romance and counterplots.

Production Highlights—The beautiful photography of the village scenes. The scene when the artist accepts another's responsibility. The lighthouse scenes. The fine work of Walthall.

Exploitation Angles — Title appropriated from poem of same name will arouse curosity. Would advise using poem for throwaways. Play up Walthall. Scenes suggest an elaborate prologue.

Drawing Power—Title should attract them. Good for downtown houses and neighborhood houses.

"The Hero"

Preferred-Al Lichtman—6800 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S just a simple tale of home-folks—of commonplace people in a snug village who turn out to pay homage to a returned soldier of the Foreign Legion because he is a hero—a tale so near to reality—so bound up with humanities and intimate slices of family life and honor that it fairly conquers you with its charm and appeal. "The Hero" wasn't properly appreciated upon the stage, but as a picture let us hope that its spectators absorb its appealing touches—let us hope that they catch its psychology of characterization—of what really constitutes the make-up of a hero.

A youth doesn't have to go through the fire of the trenches to prove his courage. Some of them are forced to stay at home. But the one who stays at home here is long past his youth. He is a colorless individual doomed, by his inability to get ahead, to make any name for himself. But how he does emerge a hero! A human interest picture this—one which tugs at one's finer sensibilities because of its lifelike figures who work out their destinies as they are being worked out every day. The hero comes home and conquers the villagers. He has risen to the emergency in the trenches, but with the war over, he adopts his pre-war attitude of shiftlessness. He will play with the Belgian orphan who is maid in his colorless brother's home; he will play with his brother's wife. And the drone of a husband soaks his aching feet in soap-suds in the parlor. Not much given to manners—this man. But he adores his wife and idolizes his soldier relative.

All these points are excellently brought forth—humanized with faithful fidelity by Gasnier. And as the tale unfolds you feel the keenest sympathy for this husband and brother who never complains, but who irritates his wife with his old-fashioned ideas and humdrum practices. You catch all these qualities of humanity and sympathy. You are made to feel. When a picture does that for you—it carries entertaining values. It is simple and therefore easy to understand. No false heroics, no striving for dramatic effects here. And the colorless brother comes through a hero by offering his skin to be grafted upon the soldier who has rescued his nephew in a fire. The money the injured youth stole is returned without the brother being the wiser. John Sainpolis as this humdrum individual gives a tremendously vital performance—one which will be recognized as genuine and convincing. The others are competent. The picture is splendidly staged.

The Cast

Oswald Lane	Gaston Glass
Hester Lane	Barbara Le Marr
Andrew Lane	John Sainpolis
Sarah Lane	Martha Mattox
Andy Lane	Frankie Lee
Bill Waters	David Powell
Martha	Doris Pawn
Hilda Pierce	Ethel Shannon

By Gilbert Emery. Scenario by Eve Unsell. Directed by Gasnier. Produced by Al Lichtman.

The Story—American soldier of the Foreign Legion returns home and becomes the hero of the village. He is disinclined to work and carries on a flirtation with his colorless brother's wife and a Belgian orphan who is a maid in the house. He steals a sum of money from his brother and leaves. But a fire breaks out in the school and in rescuing several children he is severely burned. The colorless brother proves the real hero by offering his skin for grafting purposes and the money is returned without the victim being the wiser.

Classification—Human interest drama showing an intimate slice of family life.

Production Highlights—The human interest moments. The scene of the welcome home. The scene when soldier steals the money. The rescue at the fire. The work of John Sainpolis.

Exploitation Angles—Adaptation of realistic drama should invite interest. Play up the soldier angle and the hero angle, bringing forth that often the heroes are the men who stay at home doing deeds of self-sacrifice.

Scene from "Pest of the Storm Country," an Educational-Mermaid comedy, featuring Louise Fazenda.

"Pawn Ticket No. 210"

Fox—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture tells the simple story of a child left at a charitable pawnbroker's for several years by a desperate mother who attempts suicide shortly after and disappears. She retains the ticket given her and eventually returns to claim the child. As the little girl grows up the pawnbroker has developed a strong attachment for her, though he decides that she should have a better environment than the immediate neighborhood of the pawnshop. There is a counter plot which reveals the pawnbroker's wife eloping with a man who proves eventually to be the girl's father. This is a coincidence which tends to destroy the realities.

The picture is a reminder of "The Five-Dollar Baby" in which the star's sister, Viola Dana, appeared, though the last mentioned opus carried more highlights in the shape of human interest and humor. Here we are presented with an obvious little tale which tugs at the heart here and there and which develops through a fairly interesting climax—a climax which reveals the girl ready to sacrifice her life for the pawnbroker.

The picture is billed as an adaptation of a play by David Belasco and Clay M. Greene, which is said to have been produced many, many years ago. Mr. Belasco has advanced in the technique of the drama since those early days. Still if he sees this picture version he need not feel ashamed of his pioneer contribution. It is suitable film material in that it offers enough appeal to entertain those who are not too discriminate in their tastes. The story finishes with an acceptable romantic flourish when the girl takes the final fade-out with a reformed crook.

Shirley Mason gives a pleasing study of the heroine, while Robert Agnew demonstrates again that he is one of our most dependable juveniles in the role of the ex-pickpocket. Irene Hunt portrays the mother with a lifelike touch. The feature is competently staged, its chief production values centering in the atmosphere and backgrounds.

The Cast

Meg	Shirley Mason
Chick Saxe	Robert Agnew
Mrs. Levy	Dorothy Manners
Abe Levy	Jacob Abrams
Ruth Sternhold	Irene Hunt
Harris Levy	Fred Warten

By David Belasco and Clay M. Greene. Directed by Scott Dunlap. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Baby girl is left by mother with pawnbroker. She retains the ticket and claims the child several years after. The pawnbroker determines to place the girl in better surroundings. Eventually the girl is reunited to her mother, father and sweetheart.

Classification—Human interest story carrying adventure and romance.

Production Highlights—The work of Shirley Mason, Robert Agnew and Jacob Abrams. The atmosphere. The scene when the mother comes to claim the child.

Exploitation Angles—The authors are well known, especially David Belasco. It is our advice that you should emphasize his name—that he is responsible for this play. Play up title for a teaser campaign. Spread door-knob hangers, etc., in the shape of pawn tickets.

"Flames of Passion"

Premium-Independent—4700 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A PRIMITIVE tale of the lumber regions laid among the primitive backgrounds of the Northwest is "Flames of Passion." Truly in keeping with its rugged and picturesque atmosphere is this plot which releases a compact amount of physical action—the kind of action which keeps one at strict attention. The sponsors have employed a genuine logging camp for their location and the plot gains in reality and tenseness as a result. The idea itself isn't so novel, but it is so packed with physical thrills that the spectator won't be concerned with the fact that he has seen it before.

It's a tale which proves the established theory that only the most fitting survive, though the most sensitive patron need not feel shocked over any violent deaths, for there aren't any. Call the action rude—call it life exposed in the raw—yet any melodrama of a logging camp, to be consistent, must feature such rugged qualities. The mill must work night and day to meet competition. It is the object of a crooked foreman, bribed by a rival company, to throw a wrench, figuratively speaking, into the machinery. It is the duty of the earnest Easterner, who has gone West to forget a disastrous love affair, to frustrate the villain's efforts. And before he is able to breathe easily again the hero is called upon to display his courage and strength in several hectic encounters.

George Larkin may not be a ball-room actor, but he can put punch in scenes which have the great outdoors for a background. As the superintendent he is forced to fight for his life. Fight? That is the word. There is nothing tame about it. He gives and takes his medicine and makes the picture pulsate with realistic touches. "Flames of Passion" is embellished with rugged scenery with the thrills coming thick and fast. And to top it all, there is a vivid forest fire which presents the undaunted hero determined to rescue his sweetheart of the woods and her misguided father who has started the flames out of revenge. For conflict an Eastern girl is introduced who would attempt to win back the hero's affection. A picture of stirring action entirely consistent with its theme and therefore convincing.

The Cast

John Markham	Frank Whitson
Lew Harkness	Al Ferguson
Grant Whitney	George Larkin
Brute Turner	Frank Whitlock
Alys Markham	Laura Anson
Jimmie	Ruth Stonehouse
Victor Lonsdale	Karl Silvera

By George Hively. Directed by G. H. Moody. Photographed by J. C. Cook. Produced by Premium Pictures Corp. Released by Independent Pictures Corp.

The Story—Easterner in charge of lumber camp discovers a plot afoot to embarrass shipments of logs. Locates the villainy and is forced to resort to fighting to protect himself and his company's interests. Villain is foreman, who is inspired to do his evil work by disappointed suitor. Easterner finally conquers his enemies and redemption comes to one of them after his life is saved by hero. The latter is free to marry the old man's daughter.

Classification—Lumber camp melodrama of Northwest, carrying physical action, thrills and romance.

Production Highlights — The fine locations. The rugged atmosphere. The thrills accompanying the fight on the logs, the fight in the cabin and the forest fire. The punch of the picture. Larkin's realism.

Exploitation Angles—Feature it as a vivid tale of a logging camp, realistic to the core. Play up Larkin as a dependable actor in work of this kind. Decorate lobby with lumber camp atmosphere.

Drawing Power—Good for any downtown house. A great picture for men patrons. Will be liked for its picturesque action.

"Second Fiddle"

Film Guild-Hodkinson—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

FRANK TUTTLE'S second picture is not another "Cradle Buster," in entertainment values, lacking as it does the highlights which carried the previous subject to the top of better productions. It is not a satire even though it is a sort of study in adolescence as was the other essay. It features the same delightfully entertaining actor in Glenn Hunter, who can get more values out of boyish roles than any player we can mention. Where it falters is in its lack of sustained interest because there is not much substance to the plot. And this plot is easy to penetrate from the opening flash.

After the story gets started it picks up and unfolds several commendable touches. Frank Tuttle knows how to get the utmost from every scene; he also knows the value of putting in just those qualities which have some bearing on the plot. In other words he has not cluttered up his tale with irrelevant incident. It's a simple yarn of a youth—a drudge—who lionizes his older brother, a collegiate with the swagger, clothes, 'n everything. One may anticipate that the hero-worshipper will emerge with flying colors. And he proves his courage in scenes which have to do with a man hunt.

The shy youth is left in the house to protect his sweetheart and his mother and the brute who has just murdered his daughter seeks refuge there. It is a compelling scene when the boy keeps him at bay with an empty shotgun until overcome with fatigue. The college brother steals the brother's thunder by assuming the pose of hero. He shoots the murderer accidentally. Before this incident occurs there is a deal of melodramatic by-play having to do with the capture of the assassin in his deserted shack. Tuttle has developed these scenes in a genuine dramatic manner. The youth, the girl and the collegiate are seemingly at the mercy of the murderer. And the incident is plausible in these moments. There's not much substance to the scene itself, but Tuttle has packed it with a stirring climax which is introduced in logical fashion and not arbitrarily. Eventually the heroism of the boy who plays "second fiddle" is appreciated and the collegiate returns to his alma mater.

Hunter's sense of comedy comes to the rescue in several places which relieves the stress of the melodramatic scenes. Mary Astor is natural as the girl. "Second Fiddle" may be put down as a likely attraction.

The Cast

Jim Bradley.....Glenn Hunter
Polly Crawford.....Mary Astor
Herbert Bradley.....Townsend Martin
Cragg.....William Nally
George Bradley.....Leslie Stowe
Mrs. Bradley.....Mary Foy
Cragg's daughter.....Helenka Adamowska
Dr. Crawford.....Otho Lang

By Frank Tuttle. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Photographed by Fred Waller, Jr. Produced by Film Guild. Released by Hodkinson.

The Story—College youth is lionized by younger brother who always plays "second fiddle" to him. The boy is misunderstood when he holds murderer at bay with empty gun and the college youth infers that the brother is a coward. Eventually the latter proves his courage in a terrific struggle with the murderer and is accepted as the real hero.

Classification—Character study blended with melodrama, carrying adventure and romance.

Production Highlights—Good work of cast. The human interest moments. The character development. The scenes in the shack. The scene when younger brother holds murderer at bay with empty gun.

Exploitation Angles—Suggests opportunities for teaser exploitation through title—which can be worked out in several ways. Would play up Glenn Hunter as star of "The Cradle Buster," and the stage hit, "Merton of the Movies." Also play up Mary Astor.

Drawing Power—Will be liked by most patrons of the average picture house.

Scene from "The Lion's Mouse," with Mary Odette as "the mouse," a production handled by Producers Security Corporation.

"The Scarlet Car"

Universal—4417 Feet

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS' story of a young chap who circumvents a crooked politician has been screened as a pleasantly diverting picture that should prove entirely satisfactory to the star's following.

The story is all action and has accordingly made a suitable vehicle for the athletic star. Stuart Paton has directed it in an appropriate manner with the result that interest holds up well throughout.

The theme is that of the hypocritical reformer who is shown up just in time to prevent his election. Added punch is given to his defeat by the fact that the girl with whom the hero is in love has promised to marry the reformer.

Rather stronger in characterization than the usual program release is this picture. The star has been surrounded by a cast that includes several remarkably good types, and the acting as a whole is adequate.

Tom O'Brien as "Mitt" Deagon, a rough ward politician, contributes an interesting portrayal of a warm-hearted character hidden beneath a "hard-boiled" exterior, and Norris Johnson gives a rather appealing performance as the wronged girl with whom "Mitt" is in love. Edward Cecil is well cast as the treacherous politician, and Marc Robbins gives a true-to-life "old soak" characterization. Clair Adams, as leading woman, has little to do save appear attractive, but she is an effective foil for the star.

George Randolph Chester prepared the script for this, and the continuity is satisfactory. This is not a "heavy" picture, but it should provide an entertaining hour.

The Cast

Billy Winthrop.....Herbert Rawlinson
Beatrice Forbes.....Claire Adams
Ernest Peabody.....Edward Cecil
Violet Gaynor.....Norris Johnson
Jim Winthrop.....Tom McGuire
Jerry Gaynor.....Marc Robbins
Mitt Deagon.....Tom O'Brien

Adapted by George Randolph Chester from the story by Richard Harding Davis. Directed by Stuart Paton. Photographed by Virgil Miller.

The Story—Billy Winthrop returns to find his father backing the campaign of a reform politician and the girl he is in love with engaged to this same man. The politician has betrayed the father's secretary. The politician plans to double-cross the elder Winthrop after his election by giving a franchise to a rival traction line and the secretary learns of this. Billy loyally tries to prevent "Mitt" Deagon, in love with the secretary, from exposing the politician, but when he learns the facts regarding the franchise deal, they unite forces and prevent the reformer's election as mayor. The tangle is then cleared up.

Classification—Adventure story, dealing with politics, with romantic interest.

Production Highlights—The excellent characterizations by several members of the cast. The automobile scenes. The fight on the cliff.

Exploitation Angles—Title offers good possibilities. Automobile ballyhoo. Fake campaign literature would be appropriate.

Drawing Power—Should be a satisfactory attraction for theatres playing this type of picture.

"A Friendly Husband"

Fox—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

FOX has given Lupino Lane a fair test as a comedian and there is no question that the English dispenser of humor has made good. The three-reel subjects in which he has appeared, namely, "The Reporter," "The Pirate" and "My Hero," have been packed with generous slices of laugh-provoking moments. In addition they have revealed Lane as a comedian with a distinct brand of humor—a comedian with individuality and talent quite out of the ordinary.

There is nothing of the slapstick artist about him. He ingratiates himself because he knows the value of repression. As a result he never thrusts himself forward to secure his points. Lane is particularly gifted in acrobatic agility—yet he is a very able pantomimist, whose pantomime is expressed through a mobile countenance and co-ordination of legs, arms, toes and fingers.

"A Friendly Husband" is his first five-reel subject and he deserves this extra footage through an ability to put himself over. Some may say that the comedy would be more enjoyable compressed into three reels. True it might appear more spontaneous. We have with us again the domestic couple who get along amiably enough except when mother-in-law is around. Friend Husband is friendly to everyone and goes out of his way to please his wife. We see some laughable high jinks concerning an ingenious trailer which is joined to a flivver. It's a Komfy Kamping outfit sure of a laugh anywhere—especially with motorists who have camped out themselves. One is able to eat, sleep and live aboard the contraption—which works with a row of buttons. It is vacation time for hubby—which means that his wife's family accompanies the friendly couple.

The humor is well sustained here and follows through with its interesting moments when the latter reels present a travesty on the "up and at 'em" type of western melodrama. Here is where Lane puts over his real acrobatic stuff. He succeeds in overpowering a small army of bandits and wins a reward after saving his spouse from the desperadoes. "A Friendly Husband" will rouse the risibilities of any audience. Lane is so talented that his subtleties will appeal to the intelligence, while his broad comedy will intrigue the uneducated. We'll put it down as sure-fire.

The Cast

Friend Husband.....Lupino Lane
Tootsie, friend wife.....Alberta Vaughn
Mother-in-law.....Eva Thatcher

Directed by Jack Blystone. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Friendly husband, particularly friendly to his wife, buys an automobile trailer for his car so he can enjoy himself on a camping tour. It is his vacation time and the husband has his troubles because his wife's family go along with them. The friendly husband becomes a hero and rescues his wife from a dangerous outlaw. And wins a reward as a result.

Classification—First five-reel comedy featuring Lupino Lane, the English comedian. Plenty of antics with an auto trailer. Latter reels present a travesty upon a popular type of western melodrama.

Production Highlights—The auto trailer scenes. The "pep and go" to the comedy. The finished comedy work of Lupino Lane, a real acrobat. The burlesque of the western melodrama. The humor abundant throughout.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise playing up Lupino Lane as featured in his first five-reel comedy. If you have played this gifted comedian's pictures, you know his capabilities. Feature the comedy as filled with pep and spirit. How about putting over a ballyhoo stunt showing an auto trailer attached to a car which would parade the principal streets.

Drawing Power—Will be enjoyed in most any community. If star is unknown he will win them here.

"The Flame of Life"

Universal-Jewel—5700 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is a vivid and vital picture which Universal offers in "The Flame of Life," an adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's story, "That Lass o' Lowrie's,"—vivid in its dramatic sweep, realism, and the picturesque shots of England's mining district of 1870, vital in its characterization and acting and the appeal of its charming romance and the spiritual note which runs through it despite the cruel song of vengeance which dominates the rugged tale. There is something of a cameo quality in this production. The progression of the story stands out, the acting is exceptionally fine, and the direction is truly inspired.

There is not a moment when it fails to grip one's attention. Why? .Because every scene has its place and all of them are perfectly dovetailed. There is an ever-increasing interest from the moment that the kindly overman, sincerely played by Robert Ellis, watches the work of the pit-girls sifting the coal, to the scene when one of these unfortunate slaves of industry goes away with the promise of giving her heart to the overseer when she gets her education.

Such a story needed extraordinary types and acting. It has received such. Wallace Beery, portraying a miner with a mean heart, is unduly realistic in his expression. He is fired by the over-man for smoking in the mine. And he plots vengeance. And if his daughter crosses him (which she does time and again) she is brutally man-handled. She takes her punishment in silent humiliation—yet her spirit is ever dominant. Here is Priscilla Dean showing the emotional capabilities which are her endowment—a vibrant actress giving an inspired performance. Yet she must share honors with Beery, who as the leering, sulking bully of the mines, adds another unforgetable portrait to his gallery. And vividness is finely expressed. There is a fight scene when the bully would whip the over-man which is one of the cameo touches. The fighters accidentally fall down a cellar. They are out of sight—yet you instinctively feel that tremendous blows are being struck. Clever suspense there. And more of it when the bully returns to murder the over-man in the mine. He smokes and the explosion follows. And the subsequent scene is powerful in its sweep. A story of the conflict of souls—some who have seen the light, others refusing to see it, while a few are groping for it. Get it quick.

The Cast

Joan Lowrie.....Priscilla Dean
Fergus Derrick.....Robert Ellis
Amice Barholm.....Kathryn McGuire
Dan Lowrie.....Wallace Beery
Spring.....Fred Kohler
Liz.....Beatrice Burnham
Rev. Mr. Barholm.....Emmett King
Jud.....Frankie Lee
Mag.....Grace Degarro
Baroness.....Dorothy Hagan
Fauntleroy.....Evelyn McCoy

By Frances Hodgson Burnett. Scenario by Elliot Clawson. Directed by Hobart Henley. Photographed by Virgil Miller. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Pit-girl in English coal mine suffers cruelties from her brutal father, a miner, because she likes kindly over-man. The father is whipped in a fight and plans vengeance. He seeks out the over-man in the mine and an explosion follows. Over-man is rescued by pit-girl and love is triumphant.

Classification—Rugged, realistic document of mining village in England during 1870. Hate and romance go hand in hand.

Production Highlights—The exceptional realism. The noteworthy performances contributed by Priscilla Dean, Wallace Beery and Robert Ellis. The mine scenes, depicting the explosion and flood. The atmosphere. The fine staging and direction.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise playing this up far in advance. Human and realistic. Play up author and star and cast. Put on a dignified campaign.

Drawing Power—Suitable for big and little houses everywhere. And good enough for a run.

A scene in "Garrison's Finish," Allied Distributors.

"Drums of Fate"

Paramount—5715 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THE appeal of this picture is to the eye rather than the emotions. There are a number of colorful shots in the African jungles—transplanted in convincing manner to California. There are shots in the various capitals of Europe, the Venetian scenes being gems of the camera art. There is a ceremonial dance, showing natives racing about a mammoth blazing pile. There are some thrilling clashes between the blacks and the native constabulary. But as for the acting and emotional display, "Drums of Fate" has nothing to distinguish it from the usual triangle tale that has gone before.

During the action of the story the star wears some striking gowns that accenuate her beauty. She is fortunate in having such a good cast. There is Maurice Flynn, who as Larry Teck, the engineer, is deserving of praise. George Fawcett is always good. He has a minor role here. Casson Ferguson appears as Verne, a musician, but overacts his part at times. Robert Cain and Bertram Grassby have the other important roles.

The picture has been given a picturesque setting. There are some dramatic situations, notably when Teck, believed to have been killed in a clash with the cannibals, returns to life, and goes home to find his wife married to another. Another comes when the servant shows Verne the story in the newspapers of the return of Teck, which results in the death of the musician, who has been in ill health.

"Drums of Fate" bears a striking resemblance to "South of Suva," Miss Minter's last Paramount starring vehicle. However, it's a good program production and should interest most fans.

The Cast

Carol Delliver.....Mary Miles Minter
Felix Brontome.....George Fawcett
David Verne.....Casson Ferguson
Cornelius Rysbroek.....Robert Cain
Servant.....Bertram Grassby
Laurence Teck.....Maurice Flynn

Adapted by Will M. Ritchey from the novel, "Sacrifice," by Stephen French Whitman. Directed by Charles Maigne. Photographed by James Howe.

The Story—Believing her husband killed in the jungles of Portuguese East Africa, Carol Delliver is persuaded to marry David Verne, a musician, who is in love with her. The marriage saves his life. Later the husband turns up in the jungles, hears of his wife's marriage. His return is such a shock that the musician husband dies. Husband No. 1 returns to the jungle, believing that to be the solution of the problem. Carol follows him and after her men have a thrilling battle with the natives, joins her first love.

Classification—An eternal triangle story starting in New York, jumping to East Africa and returning to Gotham for the clinch.

Production Highlights—Some very realistic battles with the cannibals of the jungles. The convincing manner in which the jungle atmosphere has been staged. Maurice Flynn's work as Larry Teck. Very attractive camera work.

Exploitation Angles—Miss Minter is well known and has many followers. Play up her name and the popular players in the cast. Might dress up a colored man in jungle style and send him through the town beating a jungle type drum. Have suitable advertising on this ballyhoo.

Drawing Power—Will draw as good as any average program picture. Should be O. K. for neighborhood houses.

"The Last Hour"

Mastodon—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

IN "The Last Hour" we have rather conventional material somewhat redeemed by some first rate acting and a few new twists. The real surprise of the picture is the work of Carmel Meyers, whom we remember in past years as not particularly extraordinary ingenue. Her work has matured and developed remarkably and in this instance she gives a portrayal that is really excellent although she is severely handicapped by being placed in situations which have rather lost their suspense.

There is a constant feeling throughout the picture of straining after effect—of trying so hard to create suspense that the mark is overshot. Just where the fault lies it would be hard to say.

The story which originally appeared in short story form by Frank R. Adams, possesses several elements of distinct novelty, but in order to bring this material up to screen length a great deal of threadbare material has been introduced.

It seems rather incongruous to see a man, even though he is a criminal, shot in cold blood by a detective, who apparently goes scot free without so much as an investigation. It is doubtful also, if audiences will find much suspense nowadays in the "heroine-locked-in-the-villian's-room" scene or the sequence in which the hero is led to the scaffold and blindfolded, with heroine racing in an automobile to save him. In all fairness, however, it must be confessed many otherwise excellent productions have erred in this same matter.

The real punch of the picture it seems to us, is not in these things but in the situation in which the herone is placed when, after having given her promise never to forge another signature, can save the hero by forging the governor's name to the pardon which his paralysis prevents him from doing.

Milton Sills gives a characteristic performance of a reformed crook and Pat O'Malley is likewise as his overseas "buddy."

We would advise exhibitors to sell this mainly on the strength of the cast rather than the story material.

The Cast

Steve Cline.....Milton Sills
Saidee McCall.....Carmel Myers
Philip Logan.....Pat O'Malley
Tom Cline.....Jack Mower
Reever McCall.....Alec Francis
William Mallory.....Charles Clary
Red Brown.....Walter Long
Governor Logan.....Eric Mayne
Quales.....Wilson Hummell

From the story, "Blind Justice," in Munsey's by Frank R. Adams. Directed by Edward Sloman. Produced by Mastodon Films.

The Story—Steve Cline, a reformed crook, returns from South America just in time to aid in the escape of Saidee McCall and her father, a forger. Later, in the World War, Saidee is a nurse and meets Philip Logan, son of the governor of their state, who falls in love with her. Her life has been saved by Steve. Back in America they all meet at a banquet to the governor by the political boss, formerly a detective enemy of Steve. He forces his attentions on Saidee and Steve comes to the rescue. Saidee's father kills the politician and Steve takes the blame. He is convicted and sentenced to death Saidee attempts to save him through forging a pardon, but arrives too late. The gallows fails to work, however, and the forger confesses before it is readjusted, saving Steve.

Classification—Crook melodrama with heart interest and strong moral lesson.

Production Highlights—The work of Carmel Myers as Saidee. The thrilling melodrama. The race to save Steve. Edward Sloman's direction.

Exploitation Angles—The title suggests several teaser and contest possibilities. Play up the many well known names in the cast. The author's name.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

" Border Law "

(Range Rider Series-Pathe—Two Reels)

IN the role of a Texas ranger, afraid of neither man nor beast, but bashful in the presence of the fair sex, Leo Maloney delivers a very good performance in " Border Law," and as a Government employe, proves he has a way of enforcing law, if he hasn't the ability to propose to a girl. She is the daughter of Captain Melville, who has received important information concerning some trouble with Mexicans. The indulgent father, seeing the youngsters in love, but things moving slowly, suggests a way to his daughter to percipitate matters, thereby innocently starting a lot of trouble that takes the young athlete to stop. By the time he has captured law breakers ,and prevented their escape in an automobile with the girl a captive, he loses his sense of bashfulness. Then the honk of the automobile horn sounds like wedding bells, to the young couple in the rear seat, the criminals handcuffed, the couple wishing their eyes were bandaged. There are the usual fights, spirited riding and splendid manifestations of physical strength that has made these Range Rider Series justly popular.—LILLIAN GALE.

" Dig Up "

(Pathe—Two Reels)

HERE we have Snub Pollard in the role of an average young man, who desires to earn enough money to place him in a position to win the hand of a girl above the average, played by Marie Mosquini. He attempts to collect rents in a neighborhood where lives are not worth a day's lodging, and encounters " Butch McKill," a desperado, whose reputation for killing on sight protects him from paying debts of any kind. Charles Stevenson characterizes the bad man to a nicety; the action throughout is swift, good for a number of hearty laughs and is inoffensive, slap-stick comedy of marked appeal to those who enjoy this kind of entertainment at all. The comedy may be recommended to " speed " up an otherwise slow program or be used in contrast to a dramatic feature of one dwelling upon a serious subject.—LILLIAN GALE.

Screen Snapshots No. 17

(Pathe—One Reel)

ANYONE anywhere, who is interested in motion pictures, will enjoy this offering, which describes screen stars as they appeared in a benefit for the Actors' Fund, given in Hollywood, California. It first introduces the director, Maurice Campbell, who was in company with Daniel Frohman, and the cast for the entertainment included screen stars of today, yesterday and tomorrow. Following this, some views of the departure of Lillian Gish for Italy, who is seen ready to sail and bidding goodbye to Dorothy Gish, Mary Pickford and other friends, hold the interest developed in the initial subject. The reel ends with the comedians Ben Turpin and Charles Murray in the act of writing a scenario on billing machines. Sure fire for "fans."—LILLIAN GALE.

(White-Educational—Two Reels)

THE hero of Casey Jones, if memory serves us, was the engineer of a make-believe train. Casey Jones, Jr., the hero of this Jack White comedy is discovered first as general information clerk and assistant to the president of a railroad over which traveled the decrepit train known as the " Speed Ball."

It is all about a train that runs between somewhere and Celeryville, consequently, rural locale with sufficient action and comedy to carry the splendid and actually funny sub-titles, responsible for hilarious farce.

Eventually, Casey Jones, Jr., becomes an exective of the road and attempts to improve train service. He does not reckon with the precedents of time, nor the spirit of the train crew. Consequently, laugh provoking situations, lively action, amusing situations follow in close sequence.—LILLIAN GALE.

" Be Yourself " is the title of the Educational-Christie Comedy with Neal Burns, from which the above scene is taken.

" Be Yourself "

(Christie-Educational—Two Reels)

NEAL BURNS is cast as the son of James Gordon (Lincoln Plumer) and at the start it is evident that James, Jr., is addicted to late hours. His father insists upon waking him up at a reasonable time but a servant reports it impossible. So it is discovered James, Jr., has not been home, and permitted a taxi-driver to occupy his bed. Infuriated, father decides to put friend son to work in his factory, and situations that develop thereby, supply the comedy. For this a splendid interior of a factory has been pressed into service, making the comedy more amusing, since the background is realistic, therefore convincing. There are a number of good comedy moments, and a suspicion of a plot. Senior Gordon's partner is father of a beautiful young lady, who takes her place at one of the machines for the purpose of flirting with James, Jr., and in that way prevents his attentions to other girls of the factory. Which results in the uniting of the partners in business by making them fathers-in-law. Charlotte Merriam, the partner's daughter, is both pretty and pleasing, the balance of the cast well selected for the respective roles.—LILLIAN GALE.

" Royal Chinook "

(Kiser-Pathe—One Reel)

THIS might be described as an animated scenic, since it enjoys a background of beautiful country surrounding locations where the salmon industry is carried on. The fish may be seen in the clear waters of the Columbia River, all sizes and weights, the subject being one of considerable interest, carrying information as a side-line. The reel depicts the life of salmon, showing these delicious fish as they live, spawn and die describing their natural propagation, and some modern methods of artificially preserving the race against the onslaught of their use as food. A reel of high-class scenic-educational entertainment.—LILLIAN GALE.

" Mr. Hyppo "

(Roach-Pathe—One Reel)

IN addition to this one reeler being rapid and generally funny, it is also most timely and will afford a good many laughs among patrons who are following the advises of modern mental processes and fads including auto-suggestion. Paul Parrott, in the role of the professional hypnotist is amusing. His partner played by Jobyna Ralston, is pretty and looks petite in velvet knickers, a costume that goes with the "act." The scene is the interior of a theatre. The hypnotist invites patrons to come up on the stage and be convinced of the professor's hypnotic powers, and while things are not going exactly as Mr. Hyppo had hoped, they get suddenly worse when a professor of hypnotism, purchases a ticket at the box office and takes his seat in the audience to witness his ex-student perform. The professor who taught Mr. Hyppo has every hope that his student will fail, since a tuition for lessons is still owing. The older man asserts his hypnotic powers over the subjects on the stage and the subjects get the worst of the bargain. However, Mr. Hyppo and his pretty assistant make their escapes when the noisy protests of the audience bring on a raid. Full of action.—LILLIAN GALE.

" Ouch "

(Educational—One Reel)

UNLESS one is thoroughly sold on slap-stick comedy of a low variety, this offering doesn't stand the best chance in the world to please. It is not unlikely that everyone in an audience at one time or another has suffered from toothache or scare when being obliged to consult a dentist, so that the antics of Jimmie Adams in having a tooth extracted do not serve to more than remind one of something more pleasant to forget. When, after the dentist's efforts fail, having put to use every indelicate method imaginable to complete the extraction of a tooth, the patient flees. Later, the patient tries an old fashioned remedy, that of placing a string around the offending tooth and attaching such weight at the other end as might prove effective, but don't. The entire reel hinges upon the extraction of a tooth, the so called comedy being based upon unsuccessful efforts to relieve the patient. The action is fast; perhaps it is funny. —LILLIAN GALE.

" Entertaining the Boss "

(F. B. O.—Two Reels)

MR. AND MRS. CARTER DE HAVEN have honestly gained a place in their own particular field of comedy endeavor, and in " Entertaining the Boss " they maintain it—indeed, reinforce it. The comedy tells of a young couple who plan to entertain the boss and his wife. Out of a series of perfectly logical circumstances they sit down at the table with all the linen " cribbed " from the boss's laundry and the young chap wearing a shirt embroidered with the monogram of his employer. As a consequence they are discovered. The boss is enraged and dismisses his employee, and one feels sincerely sorry for the young fellow, although one is panting for air and holding to the arm of the seat. If the Carter De Havens produce more like this they will go far beyond another famous couple who introduced " parlor comedies " to the screen.—STUART GIBSON.

Comedies, Short Subjects & Serials

"Via Radio" Reviewed in Science Journal

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, in its January issue, reviews at considerable length Educational's latest special "Via Radio" for the benefit of its many readers interested in the popular sciences. The picture is described as "a single reel film which tells in fifteen short minutes what every person should know regarding present day radio communication."

"It is surprising," says the article, "with what ease an intricate subject can be explained even to the veriest layman by means of motion pictures. 'Via Radio' rapidly unfolds the principles of communication, whether by means of light waves, sound waves, electric waves or radio waves.

"All in all, 'Via Radio' tells the story of radio and tells it well. The action moves along briskly, and at no time is there too much explanation or petty detail."

Radio Announces Music For Bruce Scenic

"The Natural Born Liar," one of the latest of the Robert C. Bruce Wilderness Tales being distributed by Educational, was on the program at the Capitol Theatre, New York, for the week of January 7th.

On the opening night, Sunday, the orchestral music was sent out broadcast by radio. This music included not only the overture, but the accompaniment for the screen magazine and "The Natural Born Liar." When this picture started it was announced by radio that the music which followed accompanied the latest of Robert C. Bruce's Wilderness Tales.

Four Weeks Run for Two-Reeler

Following the news that the Capitol theatre, New York, will run the first of the American Home Life Series, Morris Kashin has booked "This Wife Business," which is the initial release for a four weeks' run at the Rialto theatre, Newark, New Jersey, in conjunction with the special run of Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack" at that theatre. It is the first of the set of "Better Films" from articles in the Woman's Home Companion and the scenario was suggested by a contribution by Alice Ames Winter, president of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs of America.

Four Slapstick Notables in Trimble Cast

Four if the best known "kings" and "queens" of screen slap-stick will be included in the cast of the fourth of the series of two-reel knighthood features starring Arthur Trimble, which are now being sold on the state rights market through the Anchor Film.

Pathe's Jan. 21st Releases Ready

"Border Law" Heads the Program with "Mr. Hyppo" and Six Other Subjects

PATHE'S eight releases for January 21 include a particularly stirring example of the Range Rider Series called "Border Law," presenting Leo Maloney and a capable cast in two reels of a thrilling mix-up with gun runners.

The new one-reel comedy on this list features Paul Parrott, with Jobyna Ralston. It is a take-off on hypnotic exhibitions called "Mr. Hyppo."

"Speed," the Pathe serial with Charles Hutchison, reaches its fourteenth episode, called "The Peril Rider," in which there is a triangular fight between the hero, the witness he so sadly needs to clear himself from a grave charge, and the leader of the conspiracy against him.

There is a Harold Lloyd one-reel comedy re-issue. Pathe News Nos. 8 and 9 picture leading events of the world, and Topics of the Day No. 3 presents choice morsels of wit and humor.

"Cheating the Cheaters" is the Aesop's Film Fable of this issue—a gasconading competition between Henry Cat, Fido Dog and Milton Mouse, whose acts belie their motto of "one for all, all for one," and proves the moral: "It takes a thief to know a thief."

Pathe Review No. 3, besides its "Living Paintings," street scenes in India and Pathecolor gems from a village in Alsace, draws on the New York aquarium for some material called "Fish Faces." Director Dr. Charles H. Townsend co-operated with a realistic reproduction of sea-bottom conditions, in which the moving subjects are seen with wonderful clearness of detail. The screen shows that fish have actual "faces," with real and characteristic expression in them. The European brown trout—a vicious fighter—shows his bulldog jaw. Trigger-fish are seen to have the real "boob face" and the sort of wits that go with it, for they persist in trying to catch and swallow a black spot on the outside of their glass tank. The Queen Trigger-fish uses its eyes in the most approved "vamp" fashion. Shown also is the Pork Fish—well named because it is always hungry. Queerest of all is the Moon-fish, which is like a silver disc, eight inches in diameter and barely half an inch thick.

This issue of Pathe Review presents also a curious and amusing shadow-action picture of a kind called "Silliettes" dealing with grotesque adventures of "The Merrie Huntsman."

Baby Peggy Releases Scheduled

Century and Universal Prepared To Announce Definite Release Plans

AT THE same time Julius Stern returned to California, Carl Laemmle issued an order to rush prints, advertising and exploitation on Baby Peggy Comedies, giving them right of way owing to demands upon the home office of Universal from its exchanges for more of the little star's releases. Both companies, Century and Universal, are now prepared to make definite announcement and to end the inquiries which are reported as having come in from all parts of the country regarding the deferred Baby Peggy releases. Although the first picture is not scheduled for release before March 15, Universal is going to make Baby Peggy's new picture available to exhibitors at a much earlier date. Those who contracted for "Little Red Riding Hood" will be advised that it has been definitely taken off the program due to the series of misfortunes connected with its production.

At a recent conference held between the Stern Brothers and Universal it was decided to put the Baby Peggy pictures back on the regular program, instead of making special productions and selling them as such. The mode of selling will be in blocks of six, to be released one a month.

These Baby Peggy Century Comedies will not be sold individually under any circumstances. They must be sold in groups of six. The word Special is not used in any way and they are released on the regular program as follows: "Peg o' the Movies," March 14; "Sweetie," April 11: "The Kid Reporter," May 16; "Carmen, Jr.," June 13; "Taking Orders," July 18; "Tips," August 18.

As the titles of several of these have been changed the following supplies the authentic title, the principal players and the director.

"Sweetie," made under the title of "Peggy Immigrates," depicts Peggy taking pity on a poor man who drives a grind organ, ending in better times for all.

"The Kid Reporter" was originally titled "The Cub Reporter," showing Peggy as an amateur reporter, who secures a scoop on a paper.

"Carmen, Junior," called "the Senorita" originally, was filmed at San Gabriel mission. It is a story of old Spain, with Baby Peggy in a dual role.

"Taking Orders" (in production) was known as "Peggy's Busy Day," while "Tips" has already been shown at a few first-run houses, but has not been released.

TwoComedies on F.B.O. Schedule for Later Jan.

TWO comedies will be issued by the Film Booking Offices of America during the latter part of the current month. They are a Plum Center Comedy, "Pop Tuttle's Long Shot," produced by the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation, of San Francisco, and "A Ringer for Dad," the sixth of the Carter DeHaven comedies produced at the F.B.O. studios.

"Pop Tuttle's Long Shot" brings the rustic character, interpreted by Dan Mason, to the country race track, where he pilots his famous horse, "Wildfire," to victory The picture was directed by Robert Eddy.

Carter DeHaven has another comedy of domestic life in "A Ringer for Dad." He and Mrs. DeHaven are seen in the leading roles. Among the many comedy scenes is a department store sequence in which Carter suffers a sad defeat at the bargain counter.

New Hallroom Comedy Named "Day By Day"

The first of the Hallroom Boys Comedies written by Jean Havez has been completed, according to word from producer Harry Cohn, and will shortly be released.

Besides the fact that the story is from the clever pen of Jean Havez, it is also distinctly timely, as its title, "Day by Day," will indicate—for Havez has made his subject an angle of the Coué craze. Percy and Ferdie decide to go Coué one better on his day by day stuff—and they do it "in every way" too.

In "Day by Day" five comedians, each one generally featured by himself in comedy releases, are in the cast, namely, Billy Franey, Bud Jamieson, George Williams, Al Alt, and Eddy Barry. Harry Edwards, who directed this release, says that their composite efforts are good for a thousand laughs.

Hurd Finishes Comedy for Burr

Earl Hurd, well known cartoonist, has finished a new comedy for C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc. This is called "Chicken Dressing."

Mr. Hurd has been particularly successful in this latest innovation in screen entertainment through his discovery of a method whereby living actors and his caricatures are combined and act together in his screen comedies. His pictures have had the unusual distinction of running successively in many of the Broadway first run houses.

Mr. Hurd makes six such comedies for Mr. Burr annually.

Egyptian History Disclosed in Pathe News

The most important and richest discoveries shedding new light on the obscure ancient history of Egypt, recently made at Luxor and described in newspaper cables, are exclusively pictured in Pathe News No. 3, released on Jan. 6. Pathe News alone was fortunate in having a cameraman on the scene of the new excavations on the Nile where the tombs of old Egypt's most celebrated kings have been located. The films were rushed to Cairo, and by the first fast steamship to New York.

The newspaper accounts particularly mention the discovery and excavation of the tomb of King Tut-Ankhamen with its unearthed treasures. These are shown in the Pathe News pictures. Tomb and treasures date back 3,000 years, the period when Egypt was ruled by that mighty monarch.

Scenes of the excavations are shown, together with the tomb itself and the entry to the treasure house. American and European archaeologists agree that these discoveries are the most important of their kind yet made.

An Invitation To Directors—

WHAT'S YOUR BIG IDEA?

I believe that every director has a pet hobby—some favorite script or story that he has long wanted to make—one that he has felt sure could be picturized into an excellent attraction.

I feel certain that among these hundreds of ideas there must be many that are really and truly great! If they are, I want to see and hear of them. If they are worth while making, I will help you make them.

So I extend this invitation—if you have any story or theme that you believe could be made into a great picture, let me hear from you. It is possible that your particular hobby may contain enough originality in plot and form to make the very scenario I am looking for. Let me hear from you.

Committee Lauds Educational Films

THE latest report of the Better Films Committee of the Chicago Woman's Aid carries the names of five of Educational's Short Subjects as "especially recommended for the child, adolescent and family group," and also lists a new series of single reel novelty subjects.

The Educational Pictures recommended were the Campbell Comedies "Monkey Shines" and "A Rag Doll Romance"; the Earl Hurd Comedy, "Fresh Fish"; "Crash," the first of the new one-reel Cameo Comedies; and "Man vs. Beast," the two-reel special showing, Louis Shuman's expedition into the heart of Africa. "Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, the novelty series, was also approved.

"Melo Comedies" for Johnny Hines

A new name to designate the particular type of comedy created by Johnny Hines has been devised thanks to Harriette Underhill, motion picture critic of the New Yor Tribune. Henceforth they will be known as "Melo Comedies." Information to this effect left the Burr offices last week to the trade.

Miss Underhill was unwittingly responsible for this creation. While reading her review of "Sure Fire Flint" in the Tribune Mr. Burr was struck by the term which Miss Underhill had thrown in casually in a particularly sprightly sentence of enthusiasm.

"Melo Comedy" will be imprinted on all the advertising matter which has been prepared for Johnny Hines' new picture, "Luck," which he just completed.

Buster Keaton's Next Is "The Balloonatic"

Buster Keaton's initial offering for 1923 is a two-reeler called "The Balloonactic," which will be released by First National late in January. Buster and Eddie Cline, his director, who concocted the story of "The Balloonatic" have put into it some hair raising stunts.

Buster and Phyllis Haver playing opposite him in "The Balloonatic" and of course had to have

"Pest of the Storm Country" Finished

"Pest of the Storm Country," the Mermaid Comedy featuring Louise Fazenda, has been finished, and will be released by Educational in February. Jack White has sent the Fazenda Company to Wilmington, Cal., where the opening scenes for the second picture of the group featuring this popular comedienne will be taken. Bob Kerr is directing, and the cast includes Harry Gribbon and Cliff Bowes.

"Dr. Jack" Bookings Are Being Extended

PATHE quotes telegrams from Portland, Ore., which show that flourishing city literally "obsessed" with Harold Lloyd's "Dr. Jack," at the Majestic Theatre. In wiring the Home Office that the Majestic had just added the sixth week to its original one-week booking, with no signs of a let-up in capacity attendance in spite of continuous bad weather, Branch Manager Samuelson added:

"Majestic announces they will run it all winter if the crowds continue."

In San Francisco the "Dr. Jack" situation is equally flattering, but not so unexpected, as the New Portola's booking was for an extended run, and the house was closed for several weeks in order to prepare for it with $75,000 worth of alterations and new decorations. All reports agree that these preparations have been fully justified.

N. Y. Stock Exchange in Melford Picture

The interior of the New York Stock Exchange has been reproduced on the stage at the Paramount Long Island studio for scenes in George Melford's latest picture, "You Can't Fool Your Wife." Much wild speculating was indulged in by the 168 extra men on the floor of the exchange during the filming of the scene but no money was lost.

Jobyna Ralston Opposite Harold Lloyd

According to a telegram received from the Hal Roach studios by Pathe, Jobyna Ralston has been engaged as leading lady for the Harold Lloyd featuring comedy just now going into production. "Dr. Jack's" successor, called "Safety Last," was completed before Lloyd's recent visit to New York. The title of the forthcoming picture is not yet announced.

For nearly a year past Jobyna Ralston has been steadily winning her way into the affections of picture patrons as leading lady of the one-reel Paul Parrott comedies. She is a Southern girl not yet nineteen years old, born in a little town in the hills of Tennessee. After a year in a New York dramatic school she was "discovered" by Ned Wayburn and appeared in the musical comedy, "Two Little Girls in Blue." Going to California, she was engaged by Max Linder for his burlesque of "The Three Musketeers." Later she was engaged for work at the Hal Roach studios.

Madge Bellamy Feature Started

"The Tinsel Harvest" Is Selected as First of Her Starring Vehicles

PRODUCTION work on the feature in which Madge Bellamy will make her bow as a star is now under way at Culver City, Cal., according to information received in New York by Associated Exhibitors, the organization that is elevating her to stellar position.

The vehicle selected is Harold Shumate's "The Tinsel Harvest," which has been especially adapted for Miss Bellamy. William A. Seiter is directing the production.

John Bowers, who played John Ridd in "Lorna Doone," the Maurice Tourneur triumph in which Miss Bellamy was strongly featured and in which she added materially to her prestige, is to have the leading male role in "The Tinsel Harvest."

The other members of Miss Bellamy's supporting cast, it is declared, were selected with equal care, and all reports are to the effect that the work of production, now fairly under way, gives assurance of an attraction that will prove notable among the coming season's offerings.

The announcement that Madge Bellamy had been secured by Associated Exhibitors was made just following her triumph in the title role of "Lorna Doone," and on the eve of the release of the Thomas H. Ince production, "The Hottentot," in which she is featured with Douglas MacLean.

Since the receipt of details respecting the plans for the first of the six features to be made for Associated, Arthur S. Kane, president of that organization, declares himself more than ever elated over the tie-up and confident that the Bellamy attractions will make a great contribution to the excellence of Associated's program.

Critics Praise Mary Pickford

Chicago Reviewers Commend Star's Work in "Tess of the Storm Country"

WHEN Mary Pickford's new production of her famous "Tess of the Storm Country" opened at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, it met the instant and unanimous approval of public and reviewers and has been doing a big box-office business during an unlimited engagement, according to United Artists. The picture opened during the holidays.

"Miss Pickford offers you, as a gift, her new version of 'Tess of the Storm Country,'" said Mae Tinee, in the Tribune, of this United Artists release. "She had for a long time been petitioned to remake the film, which, at the time it first appeared, was a great favorite. At last she consented, and the result is a de luxe 'Tess' that will surely delight those who loved the 'Tess' that was."

"If you have not always thought so, after you have seen the new 'Tess of the Storm Country' you will heartily agree there never was another Mary Pickford—and probably there never will be another Mary Pickford," was the opinion of Observer in the Herald and Examiner. "She does not look a day older and it does seem as if she grew more beautiful every year."

"Added genius has come into the sun along with Mary Pickford's beauty. Her new 'Tess of the Storm Country' at the Roosevelt theatre is the quintessence of beauty, charm and graciousness—of perfection in the art of the motion pictures—of the excellent qualities that go to make up the sensitive, delicate things of life," said Rob Reel in the American.

"There is something so perfect about everything that Mary Pickford does," said Genevieve Harris in the Evening Post. "Her delicate features are like those painters have given to their Madonnas. Her every gesture is at once expressive and full of unstudied grace. Every expression of her mobile face seems the reflection of a thought or an emotion within—never the conscious

"It was courageous of Mary Pickford to gamble with time as she has done," wrote Virginia Dale in the Journal. "In a sense she risked her present on her past. She has given this second time a character more mellow, lovelier, and with a finer sense of values.

"One Week of Love" Opens in N. Y.

"ONE WEEK OF LOVE," the Selznick special starring Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle, opened at the Capitol theatre, New York City, Sunday, January 7th for a week's engagement.

In the New York dailies the highly melodramatic qualities of the production were stressed, the aeroplane crash and the train wreck being warmly commended.

The engagement at the Capitol theatre will open up the New York territory for the picture which it is said was booked rapidly by metropolitan exhibitors immediately after the special showing at the Ritz-Carlton some weeks ago. The entire Loew and Fox circuits have already scheduled the production as well as most of the big independent theatres in the territory.

Old Fighters Appear in "Fighting Blood"

"Some Punches and Judy," the fifth round of the H. C. Witwer-Collier's Weekly stories, which are now in production for release through the Film Booking Offices of America, will contain a fight scene which will be practically a replica of the famous battle between Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast for the championship of the world, held on July 4th, 1912. The principals of the screen fight will be Rivers himself and George O'Hara, playing the leading role in "Fighting Blood." O'Hara was trained for this fight by Wolgast, so that the famous battle of 1912, which ended in a double knockout, will be reproduced in every detail in "Fighting Blood."

"Remittance Woman" Is Novelized

"The Remittance Woman," an F. B. O. picture starring Ethel Clayton, has the distinction of being the first motion picture to be novelized and carried serially by a motion picture fan magazine. The story is by Achmed Abdullah, and appeared originally in Blue Book Magazine. Movie Weekly has adapted a fictionized version from the motion picture and this has been appearing in the past six issues of that magazine, illustrated by scenes from the production.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GORHAM

Open House Week Held by Universal

HARRY S. BROWN, sales manager of Universal's Washington (D. C.) exchange, this week instituted an innovation in his relationship with exhibitors of that territory when he declared Open House Week and invited all exhibitors in the Washington territory to come to town at the expense of Universal.

The occasion for this special inducement was the desire of Universal officials to greet their exhibitor patrons in their new quarters. The Universal exchange recently moved into one of the best equipped film office buildings in the country.

The novelty of Brown's invitation lies in the fact that the railroad fare of out-of-town exhibitors will be paid by the Universal exchange in cash and not in service, as has been done heretofore under similar conditions.

Chicago Critics Praise "Lorna Doone"

Chicago picture critics paid a fine tribute to Maurice Tourneur after seeing his latest First National release, "Lorna Doone," at the Roosevelt theatre. Genevieve Harris wrote in the Chicago Post:

"The spectacular possibilities of 'Lorna Doone' have been realized by Maurice Tourneur, who has made his picture version of the famous story a vision of beauty from the first scene to the last.

"'Lorna Doone' is a praiseworthy production, a picture which should be seen by all who appreciate beauty. It is also a first class adventure picture."

May Tinee said:

"It seems to me that the director has used excellent discretion and brought the tale to the screen after a fashion that would have pleased the author. I liked the picture. Madge Bellamy, as Lorna, is exquisite and appealing. Mr. Tourneur is a director who knows his business."

"The Eternal Flame" Sets New Record

For the first time in the history of Richmond, Va., a motion picture has had a two weeks' run. The picture was "The Eternal Flame," with Norma Talmadge, and the theatre that broke all Richmond records was the Broadway.

First National Selects Title

Initial Carewe Production to Be Released as "Mighty Lak a Rose"

"MIGHTY LAK A ROSE" has finally been decided on by First National officials as the title for the big picture Edwin Carewe has finished and which is scheduled for First National release next month.

It is called a drama of high society and low society and it is the initial First National attraction that has been produced since Richard A. Rowland became general manager of Associated First National.

"'Mighty Lak A Rose' looks to me like a showman's picture," declared Mr. Rowland. "It has no big stellar names but it has, nevertheless, a strong heart appeal.

"It was not made at an extravagant negative cost, neither was anything left undone to make it a big theatre attraction. It has one of the best exploitation titles that could have been slected for it. Mr. Carewe has made an exceptional exhibitor picture."

It is not a "star" picture, the cast contains names known to thousands of motion picture goers. James Rennie, well known to the stage and who has appeared on the screen with Dorothy Gish in "Remodeling Her Husband" and "Flying Pat" (after which he married Dorothy), has an important role. Dorothy Mackaill, an English girl who won Broadway fame as a Ziegfeld beauty and who was selected as the "typical American girl" in Torchy Comedies, has another leading part. Among the others are Sam Hardy, known both to stage and screen; Anders Randolf, who has appeared in big screen productions for the past five years; Helen Montrose, Harry Short, Paul Panzer, Dora Mills Adams and "Jean Bronte," knowing Collie.

"Mighty Lak A Rose" is an original tale by Curtis Benton, who has already given to the screen several successful pictures.

Pyramid to Extend Cooperation

Will Supplement Exploitation Activities On All Coming Releases

UPON entering its second year of production, Pyramid Pictures, Inc., announces that it has undertaken to effect direct exhibitor cooperation to supplement the exploitation activities of its distributors, American Releasing Corporation, in connection with every Pyramid production.

A campaign in behalf of the five special features already completed and released, namely, "My Old Kentucky Home," "His Wife's Husband," "Queen of the Moulin Rouge," "When the Desert Calls" and "What Fools Men Are," as well as for those Pyramid productions now in work and scheduled for release, some of which are "Wife in Name Only," "Cap'n Eri," "Tatiana," "The Deerslayer" and "Barnum, Jr.," involving an expenditure said to be about $10,000 per month, has already been launched for the benefit of theatres contracted to play these and all subsequent Pyramid productions.

The outstanding feature of this co-operation is the free distribution of handsome, two-color heralds to theatres throughout the country, which is a distinct innovation. In addition to the usual copy, there is printed on the back page of the heralds an offer to the patrons of the theatres receiving same of a free six months subscription to a new fan magazine called "The Pyramid Picture Monthly," published by Pyramid Pictures, Inc.

The initial quantity of heralds being printed for each of these productions is 3,000,000 and those for "My Old Kentucky Home," "Queen of the Moulin Rouge" and "When the Desert Calls" have already been shipped out to all of the exchanges of the American Releasing Corporation for redistribution to theatres.

Adventure Film Draws Interest

"Head Hunters Of The South Seas" As Broadway Attraction Is Approved

THE Associated Exhibitors' feature, "Head Hunters of the South Seas," Martin Johnson's picturization of his thrilling adventures among the wild tribes of Malekula and other unexplored islands, has been the photoplay at B. S. Moss' Broadway (New York) theatre this last week.

"In some respects 'Head Hunters' seems even more interesting than Martin Johnson's two earlier pictures," said the New York Times, "which may be accounted for by the fact that in making it Mr. Johnson had the advantage of his previous experiences and acquaintance with the natives. Considering the difficulties under which the pictures were made, the camera work is remarkably good, too."

"We were rewarded by getting a great shudder out of this picture," said Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune. "One part of the picture shows dwarf men who live in the trees like monkeys. In fact, they are much more like monkeys than like civilized human beings. In one scene the cannibals are snapped at a feast and they parade around flourishing a first joint of Little Eva, or perhaps of old Uncle Tom, as they gobble their goodies."

The scenic effects in the picture also came in for enthusiastic comment from the gatherings at the Broadway during the week, notably the earthquake scene, the eruption of a volcano, and the remarkable shark picture.

Will Reorganize 2nd National Exchange

COMPLETE reorganization of the Second National Pictures Corporation distributing system is under way, according to an announcement by officials of the concern. Dale Hanshaw has been engaged to undertake the work in the field, and following his return to New York he will be connected with the main office.

Mr. Hanshaw left this week for Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and Syracuse, where important changes in the Second National exchange system are comtemplated.

Old exchanges reorganized and new exchanges established, it was stated by Second National, will be instructed to impress exhibitors with the fact that only American made pictures, produced by progressive independents, will be accepted in future for distribution by Second National.

New Exploitation for "Shopgirl"

The C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation has just completed and sent to the territorial holders of their feature, "Only a Shopgirl," a new exploitation accessory, in accordance with the company's plan to give the exchanges something new to work with and build ideas around each week.

This week the exploitation hint takes the form of a sheet on which they have had reprinted all the reviews on this second picture—and, to accelerate co-operation, having also reprinted separately, as suggestions for catch-lines some good descriptive word or phrase about the picture from each review so they may be seen at a glance.

These have been printed up on cardboard, so they may be used to hang in the various offices or as lobby displays or window-cards and also on newspaper stock, so they may be used as mailing sheets and "letter-stuffers."

Will Construct Forest For "Scarecrow"

An entire New England wood is under construction at the Biograph studios for Glenn Hunter's next Film Guild picture, for Hodkinson release. "The Scarecrow," was adapted from Percy MacKaye's famous witchcraft romance by James Ashmore Creelman and Frank Tuttle. A studio built forest was used instead of an actual exterior in order to enable production manager Fred Waller to use a special lighting system which reproduces the leaf and foliage shadows on the forest floor in fantastic, decorative designs.

This is the first time, it is claimed, that artificial exteriors have been constructed in order to secure this combination of realism with decorative, yet natural, designs in light and shadow.

Lichtman Releases Are Near Completion

ONE production has been completed and another is near completion for Lichtman release.

"The Girl Who Came Back," Tom Forman's next production for Preferred Pictures, is near completion at the Schulberg studios in Los Angeles. The picture is based on the popular stage success by Charles E. Blaney and Samuel Ruskin Golding and has in its cast Gaston Glass, Miriam Cooper, Kenneth Harlan, Joseph Dowling and Zasu Pitts. It is scheduled for release through Al Lichtman Exchanges in the early spring.

"Poor Men's Wives," Gasnier's spectacular drama featuring Barbara La Marr, David Butler, and Zasu Pitts has been completed at the Schulberg Studios. The film is now being cut and titled and prints will be in the exchanges of the Al Lichtman Corporation the early part of February.

According to an announcement made by Lichtman the release program of his company has been altered to give "Poor Men's Wives" to exhibitors following Gasnier's production of "The Hero" which is the January release. Tom Forman's production, "Are You A Failure?" which was originally scheduled to follow "The Hero" will be held for the March release following "Poor Men's Wives."

"Alice Adams" Follows Tarkington Book

Florence Vidor has kept her word to picturize Booth Tarkington's prize-winning novel, "Alice Adams," exactly as the author wrote it. This, at least, was the declaration of President Arthur S. Kane and his aides in the home offices of Associated Exhibitors, following the first preview, this week, of the feature.

With such fidelity to the printed page did the Associated Star make her picturization, under the direction of Rowland V. Lee, that the photoplay was described as another and richly illustrated edition of the novel itself.

Claude Gillingwater and Margaret McWade play the roles of the father and mother, respectively; Harold Goodwin is Walter; the brother, "A man about town at twenty"; Vernon Steel has the part of John Russell, and Thomas Ricketts impersonates J. A. Kamb, the great "I am" of the town.

Goodman Selects Equity Title

"Has The World Gone Mad" Chosen After Rejecting Forty Proposed Names

DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN, author and producer of "Has the World Gone Mad?" has again proved his genius in selecting titles of unfailing box office appeal. Mr. Goodman chose the title of this new Equity release after rejecting more than forty proposed names.

When "Has the World Gone Mad?" is screened for exhibitors and independent exchange men it will be seen that this powerful drama is worthy of the big sensational title which has been selected, according to Equity. "I believe," states Mr. Goodman, "that an unjustifiable title is the most pernicious form of motion picture advertising—unjust to the exhibitor, the public and the actors who have worked in the picture. Only a big production is worthy of a big title. I sincerely believe that in 'Has the World Gone Mad?' I have touched upon a theme that will awaken the sympathies of ninety-nine per cent of the picture audiences to-day.

"We have had our stories of the flapper; her excesses, follies and insatiable love of excitement. In my new picture, I try to show that it is not entirely the flapper, but also the flapper's mother, who has become afflicted with the jazz disease of the age. 'Has the World Gone Mad?' preaches no sermon, nor does it attempt to effect any reform among our middle-aged women who grasp frantically and hopelessly at elusive Youth, but it does present for the consideration of the public a species of social unrest which is endangering the nation."

"Has the World Gone Mad?" is enacted by a cast including Robert Edeson, Charles Richman, Hedda Hopper, Mary Alden, Elinor Fair, and Vincent Coleman. Production was recently completed in New York and is now being edited by Mr. Goodman.

Select Executes Unique Stunts

Special Advertising Helps Put Over "One Week of Love" at N. Y. Capitol

IN connection with the presentation of "One Week of Love" at the Capitol theatre the week of January 7, the Select Publicity force promulgated a special advertising campaign which started with the giving of miniature cardboard aeroplanes to all the children attending the Capitol Xmas week. These aeroplanes are equipped with a rubber band to use for impetus and when they are properly folded the planes are really quite practical. They can be made to soar, bank and return to the sender in true boomerang fashion. The imprint reads: "Fly to the Capitol Theatre and see Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle in "One Week of Love."

A large number of window cards were either tacked or placed in prominent windows in the neighborhood of Times Square. These cards read: "We have had Smile Week, Health Week, Safety Week, Let's make Jan. 7-23 One Week of Love."

Twenty-five thousand heralds were distributed, while a combination post card throwaway and stuffer was distributed and mailed out. This card was also signed by the "Society For The Promotion of Universal Happiness" and queries in bold type: "If Love Ruled Your Life"—how much different it would be. Love is the Keynote of the Golden Rule—'Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.' How wonderful would be its application in the daily life of each of us. Let's make next week One Week of Love."

The Select Company states that all of these accessories are included in their regular list of advertising aids and are available to all exhibitors showing "One Week of Love."

Garsson Production Completed

"Success," Directed by Ralph Ince, Finished After Five Months Work

"SUCCESS," the motion picture version of the Broadway stage play of the same name, has at last been completed, according to word from Murray W. Garsson, who produced it.

This photodrama, which was directed by Ralph Ince, has been more than five months in the making and is heralded as an achievement that surpasses anything this director has ever offered.

Brandon Tynan, who played the leading role when the play was given its New York premier, is seen in the same characterization in the screen depiction, it is announced.

"Shopgirl" Included In Better Pictures

"Only A Shopgirl" has been listed on the December list of Better Pictures, issued by the National Board of Review.

Cables Tell Doug. of London Success

CABLEGRAMS received by Douglas Fairbanks indicate that "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," which recently opened in London, will be as much of a sensation abroad as it has proved to be in America.

"Press enthusiastic," cabled C. B. Cochran, British theatrical producer who is showing the film. "Hundreds turned away at each performance."

"Robin Hood beyond wildest expectations," came from Carrol Trowbridge, manager of the London office of Allied Artists, Inc.

"Robin Hood will amaze and delight continental countries," cabled Guy Crosswell Smith, Paris representative of Allied Artists which will handle the film on the continent. "The combination of Fairbanks and the most human spectacular film production ever made," Mr. Smith went on, "will mark new era for films in Europe." And from Henry Edward and Chrissie White who hold a position in the English film World corresponding to that of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford here came this greeting: "Heartiest congratulations. 'Robin Hood' is terrific. Greetings."

Barrymore in Realistic Duel Scene

What is said to be the most exciting and realistic duel ever staged for a motion picture is that fought by Lionel Barrymore and Paul Panzer in "The Enemies of Women," by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, which Cosmopolitan Productions is now picturizing on the same lavish scale as "When Knighthood Was In Flower." This thrilling sword battle was fought this week at International's Jackson Avenue Studio and the realism with which both men flashed their steel weapons as they struck and parried is said to have caused other members of the company to gasp.

James Murray, fencing master of the New York Athletic Club and Columbia University, who supervised the fencing scenes in "When Knighthood Was In Flower," also supervised the direction of this dramatic duel scene in "The Enemies of Women."

In addition to Barrymore, who is featured in the production the cast of "The Enemies of Women" includes Alma Rubens, Pedro de Cordoba, Gareth Hughes, Gladys Hulotte, W. H. Thompson, William "Buster" Collier, Jr., Mario Majeroni and Betty Bouton. Alan Crosland is directing the picture from the scenario of John Lynch.

The Truth About Gorham

Newark Theatre Effects Clever Tie-Up

THE BRANFORD THEATRE, Newark, N. J., recently celebrated its second anniversary by inaugurating what is declared to be one of the best newspaper tie-ups ever secured in the East, staging an interesting prologue and building a unique lobby display in connection with the showing of the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Heroes of the Street," a Harry Rapf production featuring Wesley Barry.

The newspaper contest was unusual in that four little youngsters, possessing voices that blended in perfect harmony, were engaged to sing directly behind the box-office. The youngsters were dressed as newsboys. To the right and left of the box-office were placed two lampposts with letter boxes which were utilized by the Branford patrons to deposit contributions for charitable purposes. As the youngsters sang they sold copies of the Newark Star-Eagle, and the first two purchasers were the Hon. Frederick G. Briedenbach, Mayor of Newark, and Police Commissioner W. J. Brennan.

Barthelmess Will Be Seen in "Fury"

"Tol'able David" was called the best picture of 1922 by the readers of Photoplay Magazine and now Associated First National is releasing another screen play in which Richard Barthelmess is the star and feels that this new release will be praised by the public just as highly as was "Tol'able David." The new picture is "Fury," by Edmund Goulding, who wrote the scenario for "Tol'able David."

"Everyone who has seen 'Fury' believes it is the equal of 'Tol'able David,'" is the statement issued by First National. "It has a fine, well built, dramatic story, sprinkled with natural humor. It is well directed by Henry King. It has a cast of players of well-known ability. Its settings are the sea and the old Limehouse District, London. And the photography is colorful and of exceptional quality. Supporting Barthelmess are Dorothy Gish, Tyrone Powers, Pat Hartigan, Barry Macollum and Jessie Arnold. It was made by Inspiration Pictures, Inc."

Warners Build Real Small Town

Replica of Gopher Prairie Laid Out For Production of "Main Street"

AN exact replica of Gopher Prairie, the small town described in the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Main Street," has been built at the Warner Brothers' coast studios, according to Abe Warner, who recently arrived east after a three months' stay in Los Angeles.

The reproduction of Gopher Prairie is said to have been built at a cost approximating $50,000. Concrete sidewalks, a real bank, small-town stores, a post office, lamp posts, telegraph wires; in fact, everything known to be found on the main street of a small town was constructed on the lot.

With the laying of the cornerstone of the bank the prominent members of the cast, Florence Vidor, Monte Blue, Louise Fazenda, Harry Meyers, the Warner brothers and a group of screen players celebrated the occasion by holding a ceremony on the spot. Harry Beaumont, who has been engaged to direct the production, broke a bottle of muddy water, and Julien Josephson, who is responsible for the adaptation, eulogized the moment as one of the most conspicuous milestones in the history of the Warner organization.

Assistance in faithfully reproducing the small town was rendered by the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce. Literature of every description and photographs of Gopher Prairie in mid-winter, revealing the salient features of the construction of the many homes, were sent to the Warner studios by the Minneapolis officials.

In a recent survey conducted by the literary editors of the New York Times, the Herald and other publications and newspapers "Main Street" was listed as the second best selling novel in the fiction field. This is declared to be a fitting tribute paid to the novel by reviewers throughout the country who, following its publication, predicted a large sale among the reading public.

To interpret the varied roles the Warner Brothers, in addition to engaging Miss Vidor, Blue, Meyers and Miss Fazenda, signed up Noah Beery, Robert Gordon and Josephine Crowell.

This is the seventh and last Warner classic of the screen to be made this season. It is being produced under the direct supervision of Sam and Jack Warner.

"Village Blacksmith" Lauded

TYPICAL of the praise being accorded "The Village Blacksmith," the Fox special, wherever it is shown, is an editorial on a front page of the Denver Post written by Frank E. White in the issue of December 10th, according to the Fox office.

The production which was released January 1, but was viewed at a private showing by Mr. White early in December, is one of the first of the second group of specials which Fox Film Corporation announced for the current season.

The Denver newspaper's comment follows:

"And speaking of blacksmiths: The other day I saw an advance showing on the Fox special, 'The Village Blacksmith.' When it is shown publicly — and it will be within the next month—you will do well to see it. It is a most meritorious picture and quite remarkable, because it is very evidently an effort to copy another picture and succeeds in surpassing its mark. That very seldom happens.

"William Fox, so they say, did not know he had anything more than an ordinary movie when he made 'Over the Hill,' but it turned out to be one of the most successful and biggest money-makers of the screen. Since then there have been several efforts to get another like it, but none has quite hit the mark, though several have shown good profits. So the effort to make another 'Over the Hill' was continued and 'The Village Blacksmith' is a result. It is much superior to 'Over the Hill' as the Longfellow poem is to Carleton's.

"There is too much grief in 'Over the Hill.' The sorrows of the mother seemed to be beyond human endurance, and the audience, while enjoying a good cry, felt that such anguish of soul was a little too much. In 'The Village Blacksmith' there is grief enough and one cannot escape a tear unless his heart is hard 'as iron bands.' But there is comedy relief in greater quantity than in 'Over the Hill.' The smith is a physical gaint and equal to a heavy load. He is a simple, kindly man who is as a child when confronted by vexing problems. He is a man you may have sympathy for, but never pity. The role is beautifully played by William Walling. Indeed the entire picture is well acted, well directed and photographed.

"It struck me as a very good picture, and if you ask me why I can only say it is worthy of the poem and is good for the same reason that Longfellow's poem is a masterpiece."

Mary Pickford Honored by Art League

Having been told that Mary Pickford had gone on record as against any activity which tended to destroy the natural beauty of the film capital, the Hollywood Art Association, through Rita Kissin, asked the film star to accept an appointment as honorary chairman of their city planning committee.

Acting in this capacity, Miss Pickford immediately launched a drive against the destruction of the city's shade trees. Her slogan is: "Hollywood, spare that tree."

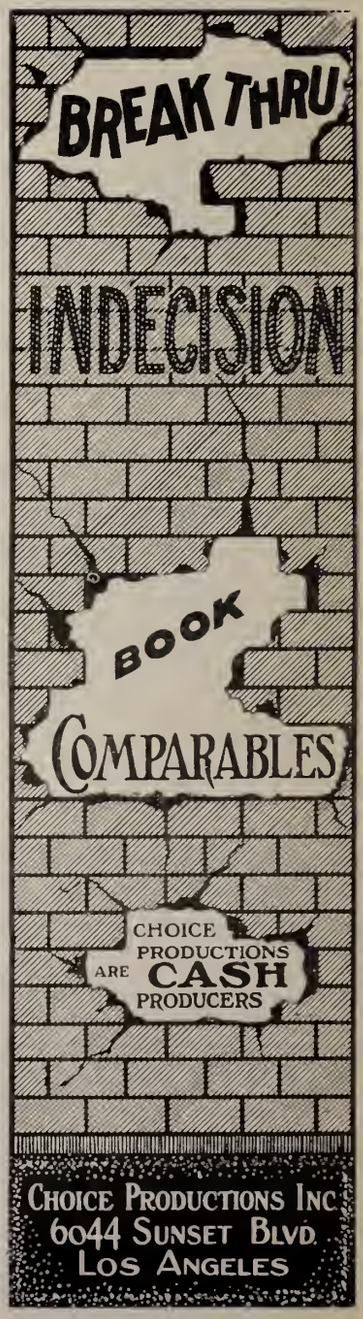
Burr Nickle Announces 1923 Features

BURR NICKLE, head of the Burr Nickle Productions with offices in Los Angeles, announces the names of the first eight of his twelve new features for 1923.

Among the famous authors represented in the list may be mentioned E. Phillips Oppenheim, A. M. S. Hutchison, Thomas Cobb, George W. Dewhurst, R. Temple Thurston and Tickner Edwards.

The first release which has just had its pre-view is called "TANSY," and is a screen adaptation of the novel of the same name, starring Alma Taylor.

Following "Tansy," Mr. Nickle will release "Bargains," "Sunken Rocks," "Once Aboard the Lugger," "The Kindsman," "Cobwebs," "Aylwyn" and "Reputation." Four other equally powerful pictures are scheduled.



C.B.C. Reports Demand for Thimbles

A bigger demand for the aluminum thimbles imprinted "See Only a Shopgirl" has been recorded by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation than for any advertising or exploitation accessory that company has ever supplied in conjunction with the release of a picture, it is announced.

Territorial holders of the feature throughout the country are ordering them and coming back for more—a fact which strengthens more than ever in the minds of the C. B. C. officials that they are on the right track regarding novelties—and that only those that are actually useful and serviceable are sound. The C. B. C. company has tried out all kinds of novelties, from throwaways and novelties that break and tear quickly and are of no lasting service, to those along the lines of the thimbles and celluloid shopping cards they are offering on "Only a Shopgirl" and have found the latter the most basically successful they have ever tried.

Clara Kimball Young Completes Picture

Clara Kimball Young has completed her performance before the camera in the Harry Garson screen production for Metro of "The Woman of Bronze." Miss Young will take a short vacation before starting work on her next picture.

"The Woman of Bronze," directed by King Vidor, is declared by cinema experts who have been at the studios during the filming to be one of Miss Young's finest histrionic opportunities. This is the play in which Margaret Anglin scored a signal success when presented upon the Broadway stage.

Translated from the French of Henry Kistaemaecher by Paul Kester, it was adapted for the screen by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton.

In Miss Young's supporting cast are John Bowers, Katherine McGuire, Edwin Stevens, Lloyd Whitlock and Edward Kimball.

Mae Murray Designing Picture Settings

In addition to enacting the stellar role in her forthcoming production, "Jazzmania," presented by Robert Z. Leonard, Mae Murray is taking an active part in designing the unusual settings for the picture.

Miss Murray's interest in interior decorating has led to her taking an active hand in designing the artistic backgrounds which have been so favorably commented upon in her recent photoplays, distributed by Metro. In the case of "Broadway Rose," Miss Murray and Robert Z. Leonard, her husband and director, gave close consideration personally to each of the settings, often making suggestions which eventually found their way into the photoplay.

"Jazzmania" is said to give Miss Murray a wide range for her artistic ideas. The action of the picture takes place partly in a tiny kingdom in Europe, and thus novelties in setting and in costume are to be expected.

The photoplay was written by Edmund Goulding, and directed by Robert Z. Leonard. The settings were executed by Cedric Gibbons.

Paramount Production Increases

Four Companies At Present Are Busily Engaged at Long Island Studio

PRODUCTION activities at the Paramount Long Island studio for the new year are on the increase. At present four companies are busy on new Paramount pictures, two stories are in preparation for production and two other pictures are in the process of being edited and titled.

George Melford's latest production, "You Can't Fool Your Wife," an original story by Waldemar Young, with Leatrice Joy, Nita Naldi and Lewis Stone in the principal roles, and Allan Dwan's production of Edith Wharton's "The Glimpses of the Moon," with a cast including Bebe Daniels, Nita Naldi, Rubye de Remer, David Powell, Charles Gerrard and Maurice Costello, are now occupying the two large stages at the studio.

Thomas Meighan and a company of players are in Panama making scenes for "The Ne'er-Do-Well" under the direction of Alfred E. Green, while Alice Brady is in the fur country of Canada with Henry Kolker, her director, and a company filming exterior scenes for "The Snow Bride," an original story from the pens of Sonya Levien and Julia Herne.

"Dark Secrets," Dorothy Dalton's latest picture, and "The Leopardess," with Alice Brady as the star, are being finally edited and prepared for the public.

Preparations are now under way for the production of two new pictures, "The Exciters," in which Bebe Daniels will have one of the principal roles, and "Fog Bound," Dorothy Dalton's next picture after the completion of "The Law of the Lawless," which is in production at the Paramount west coast studio. Irvin Willat, who will direct Miss Dalton in this picture, is in Florida now selecting locations for the exterior scenes.

Fox Special Set for February 11

"The Town That Forgot God" Closes B'way Run of 10 Consecutive Weeks

FEBRUARY 11th has been announced by Fox Film Corporation as release date for "The Town That Forgot God," the superspecial production which last week closed a run of ten consecutive weeks at the Astor theatre, Broadway, New York.

This announcement follows closely upon the recent declaration by the Fox organization of its plans to release a group of six additional specials during the current season. The six—"The Village Blacksmith," by Henry W. Longfellow; "A Friendly Husband," starring Lupino Lane; "The Custard Cup," with Mary Carr; "The Face On the Barroom Floor," "The Net," and "Does It Pay?"—which will be rereleased during January and February, follow the list of eight specials originally distributed by Fox. Thus the announcement this week of "The Town That Forgot God" and "If Winter Comes," the adaptation of A. S. M. Hutchinson's famous novel, comes as the third important step in program additions taken by William Fox during the present season of 1922-23.

New York newspaper critics commended particularly the work of Director Harry Millarde in his presentation of what are probably the mightiest flood scenes ever portrayed on the screen. Heading the cast is Jane Thomas. "Bunny" Grauer, a lad in his early 'teens, wins new laurels in this photoplay through his exceptional portrayal of a difficult role. Others in the case include Warren Krech, Harry Benham, Grace Barton, Francis Helay, Edwin Dennison, James De Vine, James Kenny, A. E. Ely and others of equal prominence.

Boston, Washington Praise "Peg"

Laurette Taylor Highly Commended For Work In Her Initial Photoplay

PRE-RELEASE presentation at the Loew theatre in Boston and Washington of Laurette Taylor in "Peg o' My Heart" has evoked from the public and the exhibitors of those cities the same high degree of praise as was expressed recently by the New York daily newspapers and the motion picture trade periodicals, according to the Metro offices.

When the photoplay was exhibited in these two cities the verdict of the spectators was a complete substantiation of the remarkable impression which the picture made in New York. Miss Taylor is "the screen's newest sensation," say photoplay critics of New York, Boston and Washington—the only three cities which have yet been privileged to see the picturized "Peg."

The initial presentation of "Peg o' My Heart" on any screen took place recently at the Hotel Astor in New York, where Miss Taylor was hostess to a group of celebrities, among whom were dramatic critics, writers and players. Their comment, as recorded in the New York press, was uniformly enthusiastic; and Miss Taylor's portrayal invited comparison with the most famous actresses of the screen today. Miss Taylor felt at home in the movies almost immediately, and she failed to register any of the usual symptoms which are displayed in the case of most actresses in their first picture.

Whether Miss Taylor will continue to act before the camera is problematical.

Mammoth Press Book for "Third Alarm"

When "The Third Alarm" is released nationally on January 7th by the Film Booking Offices of America, it will be accompanied by the biggest press and campaign book ever issued on any F. B. O. production. The advertising and publicity department, under N. G. Rothstein, working at high pressure over a period of six weeks, has turned out a full newspaper-size, twenty-four-page press sheet, replete with exploitation ideas, press material and advertising matter.

No attempt was made by Mr. Rothstein to issue a campaign book elaborate in appearance only. More than forty-five separate and distinct exploitation ideas are outlined and illustrated. A big feature of the book is a four-page insert in colors showing the smashing paper prepared by the Otis Lithograph Company on "The Third Alarm."

Feature Bookings Show Increase in Contest

Returns from the sixth week of the Eschmann Sales Contest, Pathe reports, show still further gains in standard feature bookings. A list of fifteen of these productions which have been continuously before the public are noted as showing steadily increasing bookings since the first week of the contest. Several branch managers are quoted as stating in their reports to the home office that many of them easily win exhibitor preference over widely exploited competing new productions.

At the close of the sixth week of the contest the leading branches, with slight changes, were stubbornly holding their own—Portland, Los Angeles and Milwaukee continuing first, second and third, respectively, with Spokane, Newark and Seattle next in line.

Ingram Unit Returns to N. Y. from Florida

Rex Ingram, his company of players and his technical staff returned this week to New York from Miami, Florida, where, for the past three months they have been engaged on the production of Mr. Ingram's latest photoplay, "Where the Pavement Ends," based on a story by John Russell. The film is now ready for final revision and cutting.

The production, hitherto known as "The Passion Vine," has been changed to "Where the Pavement Ends." The present title is the name of a collection of Mr. Russell's short stories, of which "The Passion Vine" was one. The author of the story made the trip to Florida with the company, serving in an advisory capacity during the course of its production.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GORHAM

A realistic glimpse of the reign of terror which overtook Russia following the overthrow of the Czar is shown in "The Enemies of Women," by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, which Cosmopolitan Productions is now making with the same lavishness of production that featured the wonderful "When Knighthood Was In Flower."

Never has there been a more graphic illustration of the devastation caused by the "Reds" than the scene which depicts the destruction of the Russian palace of Prince Lubimoff, the chief character in the story impersonated by Lionel Barrymore, says Cosmopolitan. It is here that Lubimoff stages the wildly extravagant parties, in which beautiful women of different nations predominate, that have made him the talk of all Europe. Following the revolution, however, the Bolsheviks descend en masse upon his palatial home.

Valuable Oil Paintings for "The Net"

One of the scenes in "The Net," the play by Maravene Thompson which William Fox is producing in film form for early release, is the interior of an artist's studio. The studio is a transformed church and contains six different styles of decoration, including Moorish and Italian.

The artist, a man of wealth, is supposed to have lavished a fortune on the rugs, bronzes, marble and tapestries with which the room is decorated. To carry out the impression that the owner of the studio is an artist of unusual merit, the walls were hung with $50,000 worth of oil paintings from the F. A. Lawler Galleries.

Aywon on Lookout for Strong Pictures

Realizing the necessity and great demand for pictures of true merit for the independent market, Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, is on the lookout for such productions which will rank with the very best.

Mr. Hirsh already has completed negotiations for the production of four pictures, which will be released at intervals of one a month. The first of these is "The Purple Dawn." The leading lady is Miss Bessie Love, opposite whom plays Edward Peil and Bert Sprotti.

"The Purple Dawn" is now in its final stage of editing and will be ready for buyers of territorial rights in the very near future.

Henley Gets Production Unit

Director Wins Distinction Because of Success Attained by "The Flirt"

As a result of his excellent direction in making "The Flirt" and the phenomenal success of this Universal-Jewel, all pictures hereafter made for Universal by Hobart Henley, will be featured as "Hobart Henley Production," it has just been announced by Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

Henceforth Henley will have his own producing unit, being supplied with assistants, technical men and other crews especially to him from the forces at Universal City, and will have preferred call on all departments and experts at the big film studios.

His productions will be Universal Jewels of the first water and during the coming year will form the bulk of the Universal's super releases. The establishment of "Hobart Henley Productions" is retroactive, and will include "The Flirt" as well as those which are yet to be released.

Mr. Laemmle's decision to feature Hobart Henley productions followed a report made to him by the executive council of the Universal Pictures Corporation, which acclaimed "The Flirt" the most artistic photoplay ever produced at Universal City. The picture already had been acclaimed by the press and public as the best of the 5,500 pictures made and released under the Universal banner since the producing company was organized.

A new Hobart Henley Production is nearing the screen from Universal City. It is "The Flame of Life," a Priscilla Dean picture adapted from a novel by the popular authoress, Frances Hodgson Burnett. Wallace Beery has the heavy role.

This Jewel has been received in the East. It will be released on the first Monday in February, as Universal's second super-release for 1923.

Henley also is the director of another early Universal-Jewel release, "The Abysmal Brute," a strong picture adapted from Jack London's famous story of that name. Reginald Denny is the star.

Denny is supported to "The Abysmal Brute" by Mabel Julienne Scott, Hayden Stevenson, Buddy Messenger, Craufurd Kent, Fritzi Ridgeway and others.

"Fighting Blood" Trade Showing

First Three Rounds of Witwer Stories To Be Seen in N. Y. January 16

THE industry will receive its first glimpse of H. C. Witwer's "Fighting Blood" on January 16th, when Film Booking Offices of America will present the first three rounds at a trade showing at the Astor theatre in New York. Exhibitors of the Metropolitan territory, trade paper critics and leaders of the industry have been invited to the showing, which will take place at eleven-thirty in the morning.

Production has been completed on the first six of these stories, dedicated by Mr. Witwer to the clean, aggressive youth of America, and work is being rushed on the remaining six. The stories have been published over a period of six months in Collier's, accompanied by an F. B. O. advertising campaign, announcing the transferring of the stories to the screen.

The three rounds to be shown at the Astor are "Fighting Blood," from which the entire series takes its name, "The Knight in Gale," and "Six Second Smith."

The role of "Gale Galen" is played by George O'Hara. Clara Horton plays "Judy," and other characters who appear throughout all of the rounds, are enacted by Arthur Rankin, Kit Guard, Mabel Van Buren, William Courtright, Albert Cooke and M. C. Ryan. Mal St. Clair is directing the entire series of "Fighting Blood" stories.

"Sure Fire Flint" Is Praised

Trade and Daily Press Unanimous In Commending Johnny Hines' Latest

IT IS seldom that critics of the daily press and the trade publications agree so heartily about a motion picture as was the case with Johnny Hines' latest, "Sure Fire Flint," presented by C. C. Burr at B. S. Moss' Cameo theatre, New York, last week.

Among the daily papers of New York City appeared the following notices:

Harriette Underhill in the Tribune said: "It contains only sure-fire stuff, it is a melo-comedy. 'Sure Fire Flint' is the best thing Mr. Hines has done."

Gertrude Chase in the Morning Telegraph wrote: "Johnny Hines has a picture that should always be scored with George M. Cohan music. . . . Johnny Hines is to be congratulated upon his delightful work as well as his picture, which cannot help being a winner."

Quinn Martin, of the Morning World, wrote: "With its ample supply of action views and its names, 'Sure Fire Flint' ought to go well in the film houses of the country." In the Evening World, Don Allen said: "'Sure Fire Flint' is a sure-fire box office attraction.

The Evening Sun said: "It serves chiefly to amuse those who have had a bad afternoon watching other moving pictures."

Nine Months Required To Make "Tansy"

The filming of "Tansy," which is the first release of the Burr Nickle Productions, required nine months in the making, owing to the fact that the theme of the story required the following through of an entire season with a flock of sheep, from the birth of the lambs to their weaning.

"Tansy" is the screen adaptation of the novel by Tickner Edwards, and is the first picture ever shown in which the characters use no make-up.

Three months before the filming of "Tansy" was started, the star, Alma Taylor, was sent to live in a little cottage with a shepherd and his wife so that she might become familiar with the care of sheep.

Pathe Executive Back from Far West

Returning from an extended trip taking in the key cities of the middle west and far western territories, John E. Storey, Pathe General Representative, expressed himself as delighted with the live showmanship displayed by leading exhibitors whose houses he visited. During his stay in the Pacific Coast region, Mr. Storey personally closed first run bookings of "Dr. Jack" in the Portland, Spokane and Seattle branch territories. He was already so favorably impressed with the general advance of exhibitor enterprise that he was not surprised by later information of the attendance records broken there with the latest Harold Lloyd feature comedy, marked especially by the Portland Majestic's one week booking extended week by week, at patron demand, to six weeks of unprecedented business during exceptionally unfavorable weather conditions.

Third Aralma Release Is Completed

Reports from the Estes Studios, New York, where Arthur Zellner of Aralma Film Company is producing the American Home Life Series, state that he has completed the third of the set which is scheduled for release in March.

Twelve of these "Better Film" two-reelers will make their appearance during the year 1923. The cast of number two, "Disposing of Mother," includes in addition to Mary Alden in the mother role, Stanley Walpole, Geraldine Blair, Reginald Simpson and Maud Hill. It will appear in February, following "This Wife Business," the initial release.

Pearl Sindelar Added to Dwan Cast

Pearl Sindelar, who recently appeared on Broadway in the Equity Players' production, "Hospitality," has been added to the cast of "The Glimpses of the Moon," Allan Dwan's production for Paramount which is now being filmed at the Long Island studio.

Miss Sindelar, who is the wife of Charles Sindelar, the artist, has a role in the picture similar to the one she essays in real life, being cast as Mrs. Fulmer, wife of an artist.

Picture Will Appear with Novel

Allen Holubar has adopted a new method of screen procedure. Instead of waiting for a novel to be published and become famous he is making a picture of a novel and will have it on the screen about the time it is offered for sale by the book stores.

The novel is called "The White Frontier," and was written by Jeffry D. Deprend, author of many adventure stories. Deprend read the story to Holubar and the director immediately bought it for a starring vehicle for Dorothy Phillips.

In the cast are Lewis Dayton, George Siegman, Robert Anderson, Mayme Kelso, Ynez Seabury and W. A. Orlamond.

Noted Fashion Designer Joins Paramount

Howard Greer, New York fashion designer, who created the costumes for the last edition of the Greenwich Village Follies, has been engaged by Paramount to create costumes for Paramount pictures, and has left for Hollywood, where he will join the costume department in the Lasky studio under the direction of Mrs. Ethel Chaffin.

Mr. Greer studied designing in Paris for five years, was with Lady Duff-Gordon (Lucille) for two years and also was with Poiret and Molyneux for some time. He has created the costumes of the leading French artistes, including Mme. Cecile Sorel and Mlle. Mastinguette, famous Parisian revue star.

Fox to Release "Face on Barroom Floor"

Included in the six Special Productions announced for January and early in February release by Fox Film Corporation, is "The Face on the Barroom Floor," a melodrama which is said to contain extraordinary entertainment value. Directed by Jack Ford, the cast includes Henry B. Walthall, Ruth Clifford, Alma Bennett, Walter Emerson and Frederick Sullivan. How a man compelled to renounce his love in order to save the honor of his fiancee's brother, gradually loses his hold on all the worth-while things of life and drifts into the depths, to be redemed finally through the love of his former sweetheart, is told in a gripping way.

Will Exploit "Covered Wagon"

Kent Announces Extensive Campaign to Precede Paramount Production

S. R. KENT announced this week that the greatest exploitation campaign ever given a Paramount picture is now in preparation for James Cruze's Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon."

"'The Covered Wagon' is undoubtedly one of the greatest pictures ever made," said Mr. Kent. "I saw it, in rough form, at the Lasky studio, and it more than surpassed our expectations. Our plans for this production call for the most sweeping exploitation campaign ever given any picture. The production will undoubtedly be given special long-run engagements at special key points, like New York, Los Angeles and Chicago, but the campaigns on the picture will not be confined to these centers."

Mr. Kent went on to say that all exhibitors throughout the country, regardless of the whereabouts or the size of their theatres, would be benefitted by the campaign.

In addition to the big display advertisement on the picture in The Saturday Evening Post, there will be a teaser campaign in the Post running over several issues. This campaign will acquaint the general public with the fact that "The Covered Wagon" is coming and that it is the pictured version of Emerson Hough's novel, which ran serially in the Post.

In co-operation with D. Appleton & Co., publishers of the novel, a special photoplay edition, illustrated with stills from the picture, is about to be issued. This photoplay edition will be advertised extensively throughout the country during the coming weeks, each advertisement calling attention to the Paramount picture of Hough's novel.

Probably one of the most extensive billboard campaigns ever given a picture is now in preparation. Starting with a full display of 24-sheet stands in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago territories, the campaign is to be extended over the country as the picture gains momentum.

John C. Flinn, in charge of the advance exploitation of the production, in co-operation with Claud Saunders, A. M. Botsford and Charles McCarthy, is now at work on a tie-up with the Union Pacific Railroad, which follows the general course of the old Oregon Trail, the scene of "The Covered Wagon's" story. Arrangements are being made to have the Oregon Trail marked off by the Union Pacific, with the motion picture theatres along the route used as the stations of the trail.

Other exploitation plans, now in preparation, will be announced later.

Punch Scenes in "When Civilization Failed"

"A photoplay full of punches" was one description by Associated Exhibitors of the forthcoming feature, "When Civilization Failed," featuring Leah Baird, following the first Eastern showing of the picture, a few days ago. Miss Baird herself made the screen adaptation from the moving stage play by Dorian Neve.

There are said to be four big punches: One comes when a somnolent volcano suddenly bursts into eruption. Scarcely less "punchful" are described to be an encounter beneath the surface of the sea between a man and a shark, an actual shipwreck off the coast of South America, and the bursting of a tropical typhoon, with its devastating horrors.

Will Nigh Secures Magazine Story

While details have not as yet been made public it is known that arrangements have been concluded whereby Will Nigh has acquired the screen rights to a national magazine story that has attracted much attention. This is a departure for Nigh as he has heretofore written his own screen stories, and is at the present time declared to be in possession of a large number of screen scripts.

Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, who are releasing Nigh's latest production, "Notoriety," will handle the coming Nigh feature.

Big Program For Marion Davies

Cosmopolitan Star Will Be Presented In Series of Costume Plays

WHAT can justly be called "the cream of the costume plays" have been purchased for Marion Davies by Cosmopolitan Productions. No screen star ever had a more pretentious program planned for her than that which confronts the star of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," according to Cosmopolitan. So tremendous was the success of Miss Davies as Princess Mary Tudor in the latter big production that interest in costume plays was revived all over the country.

Miss Davies is now at work on the first of these forthcoming pictures, "Little Old New York," adapted to the screen by Luther Reed from the stage play by Rida Johnson Young. This portrays New York of a century ago. The settings by Joseph Urban will involve an immense amount of research work as it is planned to make everything an exact replica of the scenes of New York a hundred years ago.

"Alice of Old Vincennes," for which a number of film stars have been eagerly negotiating, will afford Miss Davies a big opportunity. She will play the part of a Revolutionary heroine who later becomes a spy. The story is filled with action and patriotic thrills. It was a great success as a play and had wide success as a novel.

In "The Forest Lovers" by Maurice Hewlett, Miss Davies will have a very novel role and something entirely different from anything she has heretofore portrayed. In this idealistic idyl she will portray a forlorn forest waif, rescued from a hateful marriage by the gay, light-hearted wanderer, Prosper.

In "Yolanda," the Cosmopolitan star will have another colorful historical romance by Charles Major who wrote "When Knighthood Was in Flower." The scenes are laid in 1476 when Louis XI reigned over France.

"La Belle Marseillaise," by Pierre Berton, touches the very heights of fine dramatic acting and gorgeous settings. The Cosmopolitan star will have the role of Jeanne.

Jackie Coogan Hero with London Kiddies

Little Jackie Coogan has made himself a hero with a crowd of kiddies in London and in so doing has made for himself a big place in the hearts of the English nobility that loves and does for these kiddies, for Jackie has received a special invitation to visit London from Her Grace the Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon.

The particular crowd of kiddies that look on Jackie as their hero are four hundred odd orphans in the Foundling Hospital, London. These kiddies saw a motion picture for the first time in their young lives just before Christmas. The picture was "Oliver Twist."

Production Stills Here Of "Common Law"

Productions stills on Robert W. Chambers' "The Common Law," which the Selznick Pictures Corporation are producing at their West Coast studios, are arriving at the Selznick home offices in New York City.

Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle and Elliott Dexter are co-starred in the cast which also includes such notables as Doris May, Hobart Bosworth, Bryant Washburn, Miss Du Pont, Phyllis Haver, Harry Myers and Wally Van.

Financiers

Do not buy things for their cheapness, but for their salability. Evans Individual Attention Prints are salable, reasonable in price, but not cheap because cheapness generally means that the buyer loses.

The plus sales qualities in Evans Prints are due to the "Personal Interest" which is given every foot of film.

Eastman Theatre Monument to a Great Art

Purely Physical Aspects Embodied Are Cause for Wonder

THE purely physical aspects of the Eastman theatre, its size, the artistic beauty it presents and the extraordinary equipment it contains are cause for wonder.

The edifice has a frontage of 367 feet, a depth of 180 feet and is 80 feet in height. The exterior of the building is of simple Italian renaissance design, the facade being of Indiana limestone, the center feature of which is a colonnade of Vermont marble. A wide marquise extends completely over the sidewalk along the entire front, a distance of 367 feet, constituting the largest theatre marquise in the world. Powerful projectors have been placed on this, from which it is possible to floodlight the entire structure on special occasions.

Elliptical Shaped Lobby

The theatre has a seating capacity of 3,600. Entrance from the street is by way of a commodious lobby, elliptical in shape, finished in rich marble and bronze, and lighted by tripod fixtures and illuminated aquariums. An exit vestibule, 12 feet wide and 90 feet in length, accessible from the main floor foyer, is sufficiently removed from the entrance doors to permit patrons to leave the theatre without contact with those entering.

The interior of the theatre is almost triangular in shape, with the stage cutting the apex of the triangle. The mezzanine and grand balcony curve in a broad sweep from wall to wall, projecting midway over the main floor. The weight of both are borne by the mammoth steel roof trusses. This architectural arrangement insures a full view of the stage, unbroken by pillar or post, from every seat on each of the three levels; in fact, patrons can hear and see equally well from any seat in the theatre.

The great auditorium of the theatre teems with exquisite marble, bronzes, beautiful paintings, artistic sculptural relief, rich hangings and rare woods, all contributing to and in keeping with the decorative scheme. On the north and south walls in recesses formed by balustrades are colossal murals, painted by Ezra Winter and Barry Faulkner, both graduates of the American Academy of Rome. These colorful murals, eight in number, depict the various phases of music. Among other masterpieces that will contribute to the aesthetic enjoyment of patrons is an immense example of Maxfield Parrish's romantic fantasies in color. The ceiling is in the form of an immense shallow dome, beautifully decorated by Ezra Winter. The central dome is a great gilded and burnished sunburst. The color scheme of the ceiling is gold, warm grey, blue and terra cotta red.

Decorative Features

The decorative features and art treasures of the theatre are uniform throughout, forming one harmonious whole. They are carried out to the rear walls on all levels. This is true even of the heavy Saxony carpeting, which covers every inch of floor space on main floor, mezzanine and grand balcony.

THE Eastman theatre stands as a monument to motion pictures, an edifice elevating this great modern art to a plane that all may be justly proud; marking again a tremendous stride in the advancement of this industry.

The quiet beauty of this structure leaves a lasting impression. A full appreciation of this is only secured after every feature of the theatre is thoroughly known. No expense or effort was spared in the perfection of each detail. The quality of workmanship from basement to roof is of the same superb quality. The artist of every profession was given free rein to express his skill in its highest degree.

The theatre is owned by the University of Rochester through a gift from George Eastman. The purpose of this theatre is best expressed in an inscription over its portal: "Dedicated to the enrichment of community life." The theatre has additional aims in that it is to serve as a laboratory and clinic through which the problems confronting the purveyor of low priced popular entertainment may be solved to the end that the character of entertainment proffered the masses during its hours of relaxation may be improved and refined.

The program policy is arranged to give emphasis to the value of music in combination with motion pictures. One night each week is devoted entirely to vocal and musical concerts. A noteworthy feature is the admission, the lowest possible charges are made that may be expected to cover the running expenses; an endowment exists to meet any deficits that are encountered.

The general magnitude of this project may be gleaned from the fact that five millions of dollars were expended on the undertaking.

Grand Balcony

These uniform provisions for the cultural enjoyment of patrons regardless of price, are equalled by provisions for their personal comfort and convenience in the way of ample checking arrangements, luxuriously appointed retiring and smoking rooms, etc. For the occupants of the cheaper seats in the grand balcony, all these conveniences are as adequate and as luxuriously appointed as they are for those who occupy the higher-priced seats in the mezzanine and on the ground floor. In fact, the architectural and decorative scheme was especially designed to afford the cheapest seats the best view.

Through mushroom ventilators under each seat, great fans supply each minute 122,000 cubic feet of air that has been washed, humidified and brought to the right temperature. Exhaust fans change the air every eight minutes.

The opening of the theatre marked the end of motion picture presentation in the dark and the attendant hazard of herding mixed audiences under such conditions. The theatre is sufficiently illuminated to enable patrons to find seats without faltering or groping, see the faces of those near them and all objects in the auditorium and to read the ordinary print of newspaper or programme. The method used is an improvement of the indirect lighting system, perfected as the result of months of experimentation and investigation in the research laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company. A magnificent crystal chandelier suspended from the sunburst in the ceiling and which contains thousands of concealed lamps, furnishes the greatest amount of illumination. This is reflected and diffused without glare by the sunburst and light surfaces of the ceiling and is supplemented by cove lighting under the mezzanine gallery and grand balcony. The lights are concealed in cornices and reflectors throw the illumination on the undersurfaces which are architecturally designed and painted to diffuse it to the most remote corners. This degree of illumination, many times greater than has hitherto been used in motion picture theatres, does not destroy the efficiency of projection.

Architects, Engineers, Etc.

In the construction of the building, associated with the architects, Gordon and Kaelber of Rochester, was the well-known firm of McKim, Mead and White of New York City, through which the deft touch of the late Stanford White, as inherited by his son, Lawrence, has been brought into play. Robert E. Hall, consulting engineer of the firm of Russell B. Smith and Company, New York, who has many theatres to his credit, including the Rialto and Rivoli, in New York, was in charge of construction. Professor F. R. Watson, of the University of Illinois worked out the problem of the acoustics.

The music is supplied by one of the largest theatre orchestras in the world, and by a great organ built especially for the theatre. The orchestra, symphonic in character, embraces a personnel of 56, permitting the playing of ambitious symphony compositions. The organ vies with the orchestra in enabling the public to enjoy the best music and develop a greater appreciation for it. It is not only the largest organ in any theatre in the country, but in musical scope, tonal quality and mechanical ingenuity one of the most complete instruments in the world.

Radio Broadcasting

One of the most powerful radio broadcasting sets in the country has been erected in the institution.

Motion picture interests throughout the world are turning their eyes on the new theatre, for they see in the appliance of science to motion picture presentation the possibility of developments of far-reaching character. The theatre, in fact, will be a clinical laboratory in which will be conducted experiments and investigations of a nature that exhibitors operating for profit would find prohibitive from the standpoint of cost.

Perfect Acoustics of the Eastman Theatre

*By F. R. Watson

THE action of sound in a building is much of a mystery to many people. There is a popular belief that wires stretched in an auditorium will be of benefit for faulty acoustics, or, if this fails, that a sounding board over the speaker's head will remedy matters. These popular conceptions are not altogether supported by the facts. People who regard the problem with a degree of seriousness realize that the action of sound is not a matter of chance, but that the phenomena must accord with scientific laws. It is only within the last twenty years, however, that a successful study of the subject has been made, so that the acoustic properties of a room are only slowly being regarded as of equal importance with the lighting, ventilation and heating. The Eastman theatre presents an important and interesting illustration of acoustic design and shows the degree to which the modern science has progressed.

The acoustic properties that must be considered in an auditorium are the reverberation, or prolongation of a sound before it dies out, and echoes, which are set up when sound is reflected in a marked way from certain walls. Other phenomena such as resonance and interference are sometimes present, but they are of minor importance.

Auditoriums with defective acoustics are usually too reverberant, that is, it takes the sound too long a time to die out. Words uttered in succession by a speaker overlap and confuse the auditors who find difficulty in following the sequence of the speech. The correction for the defect lies in the introduction of sound absorbing material to reduce the time of reverberation.

In the Eastman theatre, none of the defects mentioned were present because the acoustic features of the room were arranged when the building was in the process of design. What was desired was an auditorium in which music would be acceptably rendered, particularly orchestra music from a considerable number of instruments.

The results of this study led to the recommendation of certain features for the Eastman theatre. A large volume was decided on, about 800,000 cubic feet, to allow full play for the music and also to accommodate the considerable audience of 3,360 people. The amount of absorbing material necessary to give the proper reverberation was calculated according to Sabine's formula; some of this being installed in the form of hairfelt on selected walls and a considerable proportion in carpets and upholstered seats. The acoustics were thus made quite independent of the audience. When auditors came in they occupied seats, thus substituting their clothing in place of the upholstery to the action of the sound. The absorption was increased somewhat but not to so great an extent as if plain wooden seats were used. The acoustics were thus made satisfactory for rehearsals when no audience would be present, also for finished concerts, with a maximum audience.

The possibility of echoes was investigated carefully. The shape of the room was not rectangular, but somewhat like a megaphone, the vertical side walls spreading out toward the rear. Any objectionable reflection of sound was thus confined to the ceiling. This surface was formed into a shallow dome with

THERE are many unusual features embodied in the Eastman theatre. The projection department is noteworthy in its completeness. Not only was the equipment selected with great care along with much apparatus especially designed for this particular installation, but also every facility was incorporated to insure the personnel of the projection department excellent working conditions. The material and detail in workmanship is of the same superb quality in this department as throughout the theatre proper.

The completeness of this institution is forcibly brought to attention through its dispensary and trained nurse who is constantly on duty for all emergencies which may arise during the course of the entertainment.

Special elevator service accommodates this dispensary and also all those employed in the theatre.

The department for the reviewing of the pictures is complete in all respects. Another room is equipped with a small organ and projector where the accompaniment for the pictures is perfected. This room is also reserved for practice among those who are enrolled in the course of training for theatre organists at the Eastman School of Music.

Ventilating and Heating Systems Efficient

*By Allen S. Crocker

THE ventilation of the theatre proper is by the Mushroom system. This consists of a 6-inch sleeve in the floor under each seat, with a hood over the top of this sleeve raised slightly above the floor. A fan delivers air to a closed space under the floor and this comes out through the mushroom ventilator. The only available space for the main supply fan was over the dressing room section at the left of stage. This placed the fan slightly below the level of the ceiling of the auditorium. The roof of the theatre is trussed and the attic space between ceiling and roof was available for running the metal air distributing ducts from the fan to vertical masonry ducts leading down to first floor, mezzanine and balcony levels.

This fan location had the advantage of taking air at an average height of 65 feet above the street, insuring somewhat cleaner and cooler air for summer than if taken at a lower level.

Air is taken to the fan through an air washer, i. e., a device where the air passes through a spray of water to eliminate dirt. This washer also regulates the humidity in the air delivered to the theatre. On hot days in summer when outside humidity is not too high, the washer has some cooling effect on air delivered. In the winter the air, before reaching the washer, is warmed to about 42 degrees and the washer water is also warmed when necessary. In this way, the air as it leaves the washer is always at the same temperature, about 42 degrees, and has taken up all the water it can carry. This air is then heated to 65 or 70 degrees and at this temperature the relative humidity is the desired amount. If the temperature of the air leaving washer is below 42 degrees the thermostats automatically turn the heat on the coils through which it passes and also turns steam into the washer water. The tuning room for the orchestra is in the School of Music building, and the fan serving this room is also in the School. The same humidity will be carried here so that same air conditions will prevail where instruments are tuned and where the orchestra plays.

Robert E. Hall, Consulting Engineer.
EASTMAN THEATRE

The main supply fan is designed to deliver 122,000 cubic feet of air per minute; this corresponds to about 35 cubic feet of air per minute per person, or to an air change of about every 7½ minutes.

The air is delivered to the basement space under first floor by the vertical masonry duct leading from the attic. Under this first floor are two tile ducts running diagonally across the basement space. The air enters these ducts, and slides located at various points give an even distribution of air under entire first floor, so that each seat may get its proper amount of air.

The temperature of air delivered to the theatre is automatically controlled, and there are three distant reading thermometers located in the theatre, one at first floor level, one at mezzanine level and one at balcony level. The engineer in the fan room can read these thermometers without leaving the fan room.

Two 108-inch diameter disk fans located in pent house above the attic exhaust the air through the theatre ceiling to the attic, and thence from the attic to the outside.

The main supply fan is in a room over the dressing section. This room is adjacent to the attic space over the auditorium ceiling, and a

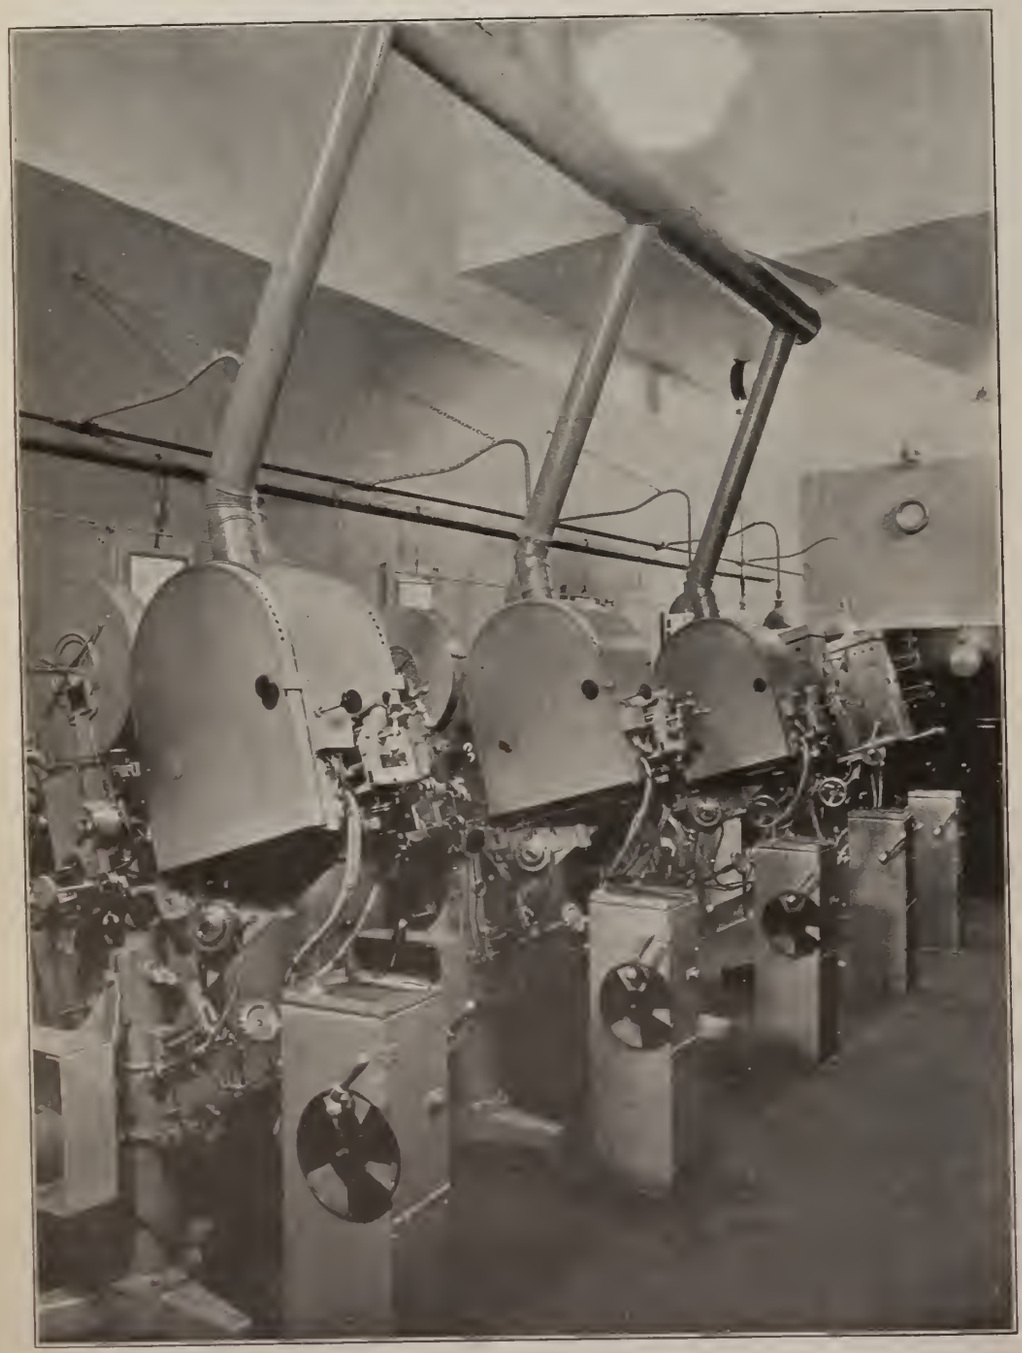
Projection Department of Eastman Theatre

Completely Equipped in Every Respect Insuring Excellent Results and Good Working Conditions

REALIZING the fact that regardless of the entertaining and interesting features of a photoplay such as the story, the cast, etc., the real value of a picture was lost unless properly presented, Mr. Eastman, at the time the Eastman theatre was planned, laid particular stress on the importance of the projection department and engaged the services of J. E. Robbin to plan and execute a projection room. Mr. Robbin has handled the projection engineering of the Strand, the Rivoli the Rialto and the Capitol theatres, New York, and Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915.

It is claimed that the projection installation of the Eastman theatre surpasses that of any other theatre in the world in modern, up-to-date equipment. The projection equipment facilities are divided into three groups, the main operating room of the theatre, the main projecting room and Mr. Eastman's private projection room. The main operating department is located at the rear of the theatre over the balcony and is divided into three rooms, each being separated from the other by fireproof partitions with underwriter's approved fire doors, similarly designed as the bulkhead construction of ship work. The first room upon entrance is the film rewinding and inspection department. In this room are contained a metal bench and cabinet wherein various supplies are kept in different compartments. On the table is a fireproof enclosed motor driven rewind. There is also a special machine built by the Eastman Kodak Company which automatically waxes the edges of the new film so that it will run smoothly through the projector and not cause any gumming on the gate.

A work bench with a complete set of tools is also provided for the projectionist to facilitate making any minor repairs and to allow for the maintenance of the equipment. The main operating room contains three Simplex motion picture projectors equipped with Simplex Sunlight High Intensity arc lamps. The machines are of the latest development and are finished in a light battleship grey enamel and polished nickel. In addition are two Simplex spotlights mounted on pedestals. The spotlights are equipped with dissolvers, color box and fadeout attachments. Directly behind each projector is a specially designed pedestal into which all the conduits enter at the base. All the wiring is contained inside of this pedestal, and mounted flush at the rear are plugs for the electric dissolver circuit, motors, work lights, arc controls, and at the top are two pole 200 ampere switches for the projection machine arc circuits. These switches are operated from either side by large handles, as shown in the accompanying photograph. This pedestal also serves as a tool and carbon table and is a radical departure from other projection room designs. It is claimed that this design has decided advantages from several practical points, the most important being the elimination of the arc switch from the projector. On the front wall adjacent to each projector and directly underneath the look-out port is mounted flush with the wall a control switchboard on which is mounted a dial switch for regulating the intensity of the arc, volt meter and ammeter connected to the arc circuit, a telephone connection, speed indicator, motor ammeter and a signal telegraph indicator.



Main projection room of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., in which are installed three Simplex projectors, equipped with Simplex Sunlight High Intensity Arcs and two Spotlights. Note the neat systematic arrangement of the apparatus and also the individual pedestals for each machine, which contain the wiring, machine switches, etc.

Signal System

Each projecting machine is equipped wth a Robbin cinema electric speed indicator, with one indicator mounted on the panel, which in turn is connected to the stage director's control board and also on the orchestra leader's stand. After the program is pre-arranged and the music synchronizes to the proper picture speed, the projectionist simply starts the motor of the projector and regulates the speed by his indicator, thus enabling the orchestra conductor to play to the correct tempo to synchronize to the picture.

Each rheostat has a maximum capacity of 150 amperes and is controlled from the control panel board located along the sides of the machine; in other words, a remote control. On the control panel in front of the room is a volt meter and ammeter connected in each circuit which indicates at all times the voltage across the arc and the current consumption in amperes. This enables the projectionist to adjust the intensity of each arc so that when dissolving from one picture to another the same intensity of light may be maintained.

The power service to the operating room consists of three wire 110-220 volt direct cur-

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

Question on Motors

Dear Editor:

I have a question I'd like to have you or some of the brothers answer. That is, when you find a motor with a rating of one horsepower and 110 volts how do you find out how much power it takes. I mean how many watts and amperes. Maybe this question doesn't come right in with the N. A. M. L. Forum, but I'd like to get this information if it isn't too much bother.

The N. A. M. L. is certainly doing some wonderful work now and I find that it helps keep the film in better condition. I don't believe there is anything going on in this industry that helps to get people to like pictures better than keeping the film in good condition as the fellows do in the N. A. M. L.

Here's hoping all the projectionists in the country join the League.

Yours truly,
JOHN SHEPARD,
Hutchon, Ore.

Solution

The question concerning the method for figuring out the power in watts consumed by a motor and also the ampere rating is one that should be of interest to all projectionists and therefore will be answered through these columns.

It will be necessary to make a few assumptions in offering a solution, namely that all the information available is that a motor is rated at one horsepower (1 H.P.) operated at 110 volts. As it is not stated specifically in the question whether an A. C. or D. C. motor is meant, both will be assumed.

One horsepower (1 H.P.) is equivalent to 746 watts of electrical energy. But the rating of the motor at 1 H.P. is the output and not the input (input is the power supplied the motor to operate it to get 1 H.P. of work out of the motor). Most motors operate at rated load (in this case 1 H.P.) at about 80 per cent efficiency. Then 746 watts (1 H.P.) equals 80 per cent of the power necessary to drive the motor or 100 per cent equals $\frac{746}{80} = 932.5$ watts.

The input necessary to operate the motor is 932.5 watts or in round figures 930 watts. To get the amperage on D. C. at 110 volts divide the watts by the voltage $\frac{930}{110} = 8.46$ amperes.

Differs for A. C.

However, for an A. C. motor, the amperage cannot be determined in this simple method due to what is known as power factor. The Power Factor is the phase relation between the current and voltage.

In general, to determine the amperage on a single phase A. C. motor the following formula is used:

$$\frac{\text{watts}}{\text{volts times power factor}} = \text{amperes.}$$

In the case of a two phase motor the line amperage is found from

$$\frac{\text{watts}}{\text{two times volts times power factor}}$$

For a three phase motor, the line amperage equals

$$\frac{\text{watts}}{\text{1.73 times volts x power factor}}$$

In case the motor is operated under or over the rating the current input naturally varies. Ordinarily in the case of the A. C. motor it does not vary in anything like direct proportion due to the variation in the power factor.

Motors usually operate with the greatest efficiency at full load.

Dear Editor:

Enclosed you will find my application for membership in the N. A. M. L. I think it is just what we need and I believe all operators will join sooner or later. I agree with the other boys about the punch mark artists and think they should be done away with. In all my two years as a projectionist, I have never used a punch. I wouldn't allow one in my booth. I always inspect my films and take my change over cue from the action of the players and make a note of it, and have a perfect change over without the screen being lit up with spots, scratches and punch marks. I have two Simplex machines and mercury arc rectifier. I will come again soon and tell you about my booth equipment. Find enclosed 25c. for button and send me labels please.

Yours for better projection,
CHAS. RUSSELL CRANE,
Odeon Theatre,

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find my application for membership to the League. It is the greatest scheme I have ever heard of. I have intended joining for some time but have put same off. I have been reaping the benefit of the work of the League members and although not a member I have done everything to help. I want to tell them that I am with them and am doing all I can to help improve film service.

Very truly yours,
A. E. RAWL,
Batesburg Theatre,
Batesburg, S. C.

Dear Editor:

Just a few words to let you know that we are always strong for the N. A. M. L. and your department is eagerly sought for, for it is digestible. The pictures we are receiving now are in the best of condition, which perhaps is due to the fact that N. A. M. L. members are pretty thick in this part of the country. We would like to have one of the new membership buttons hence enclosed find 50c. to cover two.

We are, yours for better projection,

Gentlemen:

I am enclosing herewith membership blank and 25c. in stamps for which please enter me as a member to your League. I will be only too glad to comply with your rules as I believe that every projectionist should do all that he can to make the picture business a success. Wishing the league the best of luck and that I will soon be enrolled,

Very truly yours,

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

rent service of three No. 500,000 mil cables and a three-wire 300,000 mil cable 220 volt three-phase sixty-cycle alternating current. Both of these come direct from a power house about three-quarters of a mile away. These services are run into the rheostat room to the main switchboard, which contains compensare, switch, volt and ammeter pilot lights and a four pole double throw switch which is connected between the generator control board and the main operating room switchboard.

Rewind, inspection and maintenance repair room in the projection department, Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

This switch changes from a three-wire to a two-wire circuit so that either lighting service or the generator may be used at will. The G .E. motor generator set weighs over three tons and consists of a 100 horse power three-phase A. C. motor directly connected to a 125-volt, 65-kilowatt direct current generator.

The main switchboard of the operating room is placed in the rear wall between the main room and the rheostat room and is of the dead volt type. This board contains two direct current wattmeters, 200-ampere switches for each projector and spotlight and switches for controlling the ventilating fans, machine and rewinding motors and lighting system. All switches and fuses are mounted at the rear of the board and are operated by handles on the face of same. On the front of the board is mounted heavy receptacles which are connected to each arc circuit motor. The line from the switch on each machine is run through the switchboard and connected to a special type of plug. Each plug is inserted in one of the receptacles on the face of the board. By this system, should a fuse blow out or something on this particular circuit on the No. 1 machine go wrong, it is only necessary for the projectionist to pull the plug on the face of the board and insert same in another receptacle, thus avoiding delays. By the general wiring plan, if the inevitable should happen, that is, for some unknown reason all the rheostats excepting one should become short-circuited, it would still be possible to operate all machines in the booth from the one good rheostat by this interchangeable system.

The distance from the lenses on the projection machines to the center of the screen is 173 feet, the projection angle being 14 degrees 41 minutes. The projection screen itself was prepared especially by Mr. Robbin, being made of special woven canvas of one piece and laced to a frame with ropes on all four sides to insure a uniform tension. The frame itself is 26 feet and 6 inches by 20 feet and 6 inches. The size of the picture was decided upon after careful consideration of the visual angles from all parts of the house. The actual size of the projected picture is 21 feet by 16 feet.

Emergency System

A special circuit for emergency lighting is installed in the rheostat, operating and film rooms. This circuit is operated on a 12-volt battery system. The system carries an automatic charger and control panel and is automatically operated by the fire shutters. In case of accident, at which time the battery lights become illuminated, the orchestra is given a signal and the manager's office notified.

Ventilating System

The ventilating system of the projection department consists of large grills in the ceiling of the rheostat, film inspection and projection rooms which are connected to three vent fans in the ceiling. Each projection machine lamp house has a special ventilating fan. The vent fans have sufficient capacity to change the air once every minute. The entrance to the projection department is effected by a staircase and also by an automatic electric elevator. All that is necessary to operate this elevator is to step in and press the button designating the floor desired.

Private Projection Room

There is a private projection room used by Mr. Eastman which contains two Simplex projectors finished in gray enamel and nickel and equipped with Mazda lamp apparatus. Also additional equipment such as ammeters, speed indicators, signal telegraph and loud speaking telephone are installed. The speed indicator and telephone apparatus are connected from the review desk directly in front of the booth. The screen in this room is 8 feet by 6 feet.

Every possible facility and convenience has been incorporated in the design of this projection department, thus insuring the very best of projection. The following projectionists are in charge of the complete department: L. M. Townsend, chief; F. J. Britt, assistant chief; G. H. Brophy, Calvin Bornkessel, William Holmes, C. J. Redfern.

Lewis M. Townsend, chief projectionist of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

New Type Arc Lamp

The Economy Projection Lamp is the latest on the market. It is an American made product manufactured in New York by the Economy Projection Lamp Company, Inc., which claims it will reduce the operating cost in the projection room from fifty to eighty per cent.

It is asserted that it fits any lamp house, operates on from fifteen to twenty-five amperes and eliminates condensing lenses. It is also said to effect a saving of fifty per cent on carbons; that each one and one quarter inches of carbon will project 10,000 feet of film under perfect projection. No heavy cables or fuses are necessary: it is easily installed and simple to operate.

The manufacturing company is now demonstrating the lamp. Offices of the concern have been established at 220 West Forty-eighth Street, New York City.

Advantages

Westinghouse Two-Arc Multiple Motion Picture Motor-generator Equipment is not only a dependable source of direct current for the projection machines, but more—it provides for operating the projection machine, stereopticon, and a spot or flood simultaneously. This is one reason why the Palace Million Dollar Theatre in Dallas, and hundreds of other first-class theatres, use Westinghouse equipment.

Motion Pictures Shown on the Streets By Means of Truck

AND now it's traveling motion picture shows, via truck!

Industrial Displays, Inc., of New York and Boston, have succeeded in adapting motion picture advertising to the outdoors by means of a truck and a specially designed apparatus which shows the films in three places at the same time—on both sides of the truck and in the rear.

Panels on the sides and one in the rear are the "screens" of this traveling picture show. Properly illuminated, and with the "show" in progress, crowds gather at any street corner where Industrial Displays, Inc., are staging a "performance."

This is one of the most interesting combinations of two modern forces—the motion picture and the truck—that has been perfected.

There is a 32 volt, 250 ampere storage battery, charged by a 2 kilowat universal motor generator. Two hours of daily running are required to charge the battery for a five-hour operation of the show at night.

The three displays of the films at three different points at the same time is attained by means of a triple projector feeding automatically. Due to the ample radiator capacity of the Garford truck in which the "show" is mounted the generating plant is efficiently cooled; this saves the necessity of a separate cooling plant.

Much ground is covered by this movie-truck show. This facility of movement is one of the chief advantages of this new idea in advertising. The entire outfit, storage battery, motion picture machine and the control of these devices, is mounted inside the truck closed body. In any weather this "show" can pick up and move along to its next scheduled stop without difficulty. The total mileage in a season to be covered by each of these "movie" truck units will be extraordinarily high. Industrial Displays, Inc. have adopted Model 725 Garford, with its 168" wheelbase, as the standard truck unit for this newer form of motion picture entertainment.

Showing the interior of the Garford "Motion Picture Show" conducted by Industrial Display, Inc. Battery, motion picture machine and all controls are safely protected inside and truck

THE profits you take out of your house depend upon the highlights you put into your pictures. After all, you have but the one thing to sell—pictures in light. Inferior lighting degrades the best picture in the world to worse than mediocrity; an ordinary good reel, it reduces to a fizzle. The most you give your patrons for their money—what you provide to interest, to amuse, to educate, to thrill—they get through their eyes! And they won't keep coming back to see dark pictures. Poor lighting makes every picture poor, and will work more to keep people out of a theater than any other factor in the industry. The direct road to bright, brilliantly highlighted pictures is—Columbia Projector Carbons.

On Direct Current: Columbia Silvertip Combination Carbons present richer color values; and the narrow diameter of the silvertip negative lower permits it to burn to a sharp point, holding the arc steady and also keeping the shadow off the lens and screen.

On Alternating Current: Columbia White Flame A. C. Special Carbons yield a sharp and pure-white light, steady, brilliant, absolutely silent.

Use Columbia Projector Carbons to double the enjoyment of what you are showing and keep the profits of your house up to where they belong.

Columbia Projector Carbons are the most satisfactory source of motion picture light in the world!

The Criterion of Neighborhood Playhouses in the New Chaloner

At the expense of about $500,000 John Armstrong Chaloner erected one of the most beautiful neighborhood theatres in the world. The Chaloner theatre on 55th Street and Ninth Avenue, New York City, is of Roman Architecture, contains 2000 seats and the interior. with its massive columns follows the lines of the ancient Coliseum. The decorations, however, make it ultra-modern in appearance. The theatre was designed by Mr. George Keister, and built by Shroder & Koppel, Inc. The engineer is Victor Mayper and the interior decorations were created by Winter & Raub.

Mr. Chaloner's associate in this enterprise is William Yoost, President to the Ninth Avenue Amusement Corporation and who operates a string of motion picture theatres in the district. Mr. Yoost is thoroughly familiar with the management of a theatre, and is thoroughly enough acquainted with the wants of his neighbors to know exactly what kind of entertainment to give them.

The Chaloner will show only first run pictures and furnish music with a fifteen-piece Symphony orchestra, as well as other high class entertainment. and has been thrown open to the public at prices ranging from ten to thirty cents.

That the entertainments provided in the "Chaloner Theatre" will be on a par with those at the larger Broadway houses is assured by the fact that the builders have installed a multi-color lighting and dimmer system which will permit of many beautiful electric effects for the staging of prologues, dance ensembles and other features. The acoustics of the theatre are rendered perfect by the fact that the golden dome is like a large inverted bowl and is augmented by one of the largest sounding boards ever installed in any theatre. A large pipe organ will be operated in conjunction with the orchestra.

Reports Installations of Ticket Registers

The World Ticket and Supply Company reports the following intallations for Simplex Ticket Registers Haring & Blumenthal's Gem theatre, New York City; Consolidated Amusement Ent. Ideal theatre, New York City; Weingarten's Whitney theatre, Brooklyn. N. Y.; and Bustanoby's Grottoland Dance Palace, New York City.

It is also reported that Mr. Lamm of that company, who has been in the West since the first of the year, has been awarded for his efforts in the installation of four ticket registers in the Trianon Ballroom. It is claimed that this ballroom is the largest of its kind in the world. In addition to these installations, the Ballaban and Katz Roosevelt theatre has installed two of these latest designed registers, as well as the Capitol theatre, Rainbow Gardens and Imperial theatre, Chicago.

The Simplex Ticket and Supply Company have increased their staff and office space.

Representative of Chinese Corp. Visits U. S.

Harry Grogin, who left New York City December, 1921, to organize the China Film Productions, Inc., a Chinese producing and distributing company, is returning to the United States, leaving Shanghai on board the S.S. "President Taft," sailing on December 30, 1922. Grogin came to China with Z. L. Loo, who is now at the head of the China Film Productions, Ltd., who organized the Chinese company and who already has established a studio including several producing units producing Chinese comedies, dramas and educationals. The purpose of Mr. Grogin's trip is to dispose of negatives produced under his direction and photographed by himself. During his stay he will purchase a studio lighting equipment and laboratory equipment, purchasing independent releases for distribution in China.

Concerning Grauman's San Diego Theatre

According to more definite information concerning the new house which Robert E. Hicks, owner and manager of the Cabrillo theatre, San Diego, Cal. and Sid Grauman of Los Angeles are building, the theatre will occupy a ground space 100 x 150 at the southwest corner of 4th and E Sts., San Diego, and the estimated cost of the structure approximates $600,000. It will be built of steel and concrete, will be called "The Balboa" and the architecture will be Spanish Renaissance. The house will seat 2000 and plans call for a balcony and a mezzanine floor, the latter to have a plaisance 25 x 60, furnished as a lounging room. A $50,000 pipe organ is one of the features in addition to which there will be a symphony orchestra.

Plan $1,000,000 Theatre at Portland

Announcement was made of plans for a $1,000,000 moving picture theatre for Portland to be erected at Congress and High Streets. The Famous Players Film Corporation is backing the enterprise and the theatre will open next Fall. William T. Gray of Lewiston, one of the backers, says he will make it the finest house in New England.

Harry M. Crandall's new Tivoli theatre at Fourteenth Street and Park Road, N. W., Washington, D. C., which will cost $650,000 and upon which work has been started. The Tivoli will be ninth in the Crandall Washington chain and fourteenth in the Washington territory under his ownership. It was designed and is being built by Thomas W. Lamb of New York

Reduces Your Power Bills and Makes Better Pictures

Motion picture projection in theatres the country over has greatly improved since the perfection of TransVerteR—the original series arc M-G outfit, which set a new standard for the entire industry.

TransVerteR changes alternating current into direct current which is more suitable for projection arcs. It automatically supplies only such voltage as is needed for the arc, and no wasteful, current consuming ballast is used. It uses less current than any other device, and is therefore more economical to operate.

It is easily adjusted for light and dark portions of film. TransVerteR gives the projectionist perfect arcs, clear-white, steady light that is easily directed and controlled. It makes possible the projection of clear, sharp-lined pictures which patrons appreciate and come again to enjoy.

Little Stories of Successful Exhibitors No. 1

Adolph Zukor

Mr. Zukor, whose position in the world of motion pictures has won him fame as well as fortune, was born in Hungary in 1872. He came to America when a young man and learned the fur business, but fur was not to be his field of success. In 1912—only ten years ago—he started with one theatre and practically no capital. Today he is a leader in the producing as well as the exhibiting field and is the largest employer in the industry.

Mr. Zukor is head of the organization which controls that well-known trio of New York City theatres—the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion. No detail has been overlooked which will add to their efficiency and each has its equipment of GOLD SEAL Automatic Ticket Registers which altogether sell and register a total of millions of tickets every year—mile after mile of GOLD SEAL tickets are used in these three theatres—enough in one year to stretch from New York City to Philadelphia—and then some!

GOLD SEAL Automatic Machines and Tickets go hand in hand with SUCCESS.

Linwood Theatre, Kansas City, Opens

The Linwood theatre, practically rebuilt and now one of the largest and most modern houses in Kansas City, opened its doors to patrons. The new theatre, located at Thirty-first Street and Prospect Avenue, will seat 1,100 persons, including more than 100 loge seats which may be reserved. The interior decorating is in polychrome effect, with gold, rose and blue tints predominating. Foyer drapes and curtains are of old rose. A new $25,000 Hope-Jones pipe organ has been installed with Ted Meyn as organist. W. O. Lenhart has been appointed as manager of the Linwood, which is one of the houses purchased by the Capitol Enterprise Company, of which Samuel Harding is president. This is the fifth neighborhood theatre the Capitol Enterprise Company controls, the others being the Benton, Gladstone, Roanoke, and Summit. The company, which recently was organized and incorporated for $1,000,000, is purchasing theatres in Kansas and Oklahoma also.

B. F. Shearer Equipping Two Local Houses

Contracts for work on two small town houses in the local territory that are being remodeled and repaired, were announced last week by the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle.

A new Gardiner velvet gold fibre screen has been sold to Ed Dolan for his Weir theatre in Aberdeen. The screen will be installed by the Seattle company about December 10 or 15.

Mike Barovic's Stewart theatre in Puyallup is being remodeled and entirely reseated by Manager D. Constantis. Three hundred fully upholstered Heywood-Wakefield opera chairs are being furnished for this house and will also be installed by the Shearer organization.—Prager.

Carr and Schad Purchase Lyric

Carr & Schad Inc., Reading's enterprising amusement firm, has purchased entire interests in the Lyric Theatre. The Lyric will be completely renovated, one of the big features will be the installation of a new ventilating system. The booths will be fully equipped with the latest motion picture projecting machines. New Features will be added to the pipe organ and a new electric sign with changeable letters will add materially to the exterior. The Lyric is the seventh link in the Carr & Schad chain of silent drama theatres.

Keasre Theatre, Charleston Opens

The new Kearse theatre, Charleston, W. Va. opened recently as West Virginia's newest and finest theatre. It seats 2250 people and is equipped to handle road shows as well as pictures. Eugene Quigley, a showman of wide experience is the managing director, at one time connected with Ascher Brothers of Chicago.

Kentucky House, Lexington, Opens

The Lafayette Amusement Company, Inc., announce the opening of the Kentucky theatre Lexington, Ky. Messrs. Fred Levy, President M. Switow, Vice President and W. M. James Vice President are the officials of the corporation.

Springfield Theatre Has $20,000 Fire Loss

Damage estimated at more than $20,000 was caused recently by a fire on the third floor of the Fox Theatre Building. Most of the damage was caused by the tons of water which seeped down through the offices to the stores on the first floor and into the theatre. The blaze was discovered about a half hour after the evening performance and the theatre was empty except for a few employees at the time

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

Universal City

Hobart Henley will complete "The Abysmal Brute" with making of retakes this week.

Stuart Paton and his company are at Truckee for two weeks, making scenes for the picture originally entitled "The Attic of Felix Bavu."

Wallace Worsley is making Fifteenth Century court scenes for "The Hunchback," with Patsy Ruth Miller the central figure. There are three hundred extras in use, among whom are some well-known character players.

Harry Pollard has created a mid-winter baseball season at Washington Park, Los Angeles, for making "His Name," to embrace an all-star cast.

Philo McCullough has been added to the cast of "Trimmed in Scarlet," under the direction of Jack Conway.

Nick De Ruiz has been added to the cast of "The Hunchback," in which he will play the role of the executioner.

Bob Hill is beginning a new serial, titled "The Phantom Fortune," starring William Desmond. Esther Ralston has been cast for the lead, Lewis Sargent for the juvenile role and George Nichols the father.

The Browning-Dean "Drifting" company is working in Killer Canyon.

R-C Production Notes

Margaret Clayton has been engaged as lead for Harry Carey in "The Man From the Desert," from a magazine story by Wyndham Martyn, combined with an original story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Filming begins Wednesday.

Johnny Walker has made final retakes for "The Fourth Musketeer."

Ethel Clayton's "The Greater Glory" is finished.

Century Cut-Backs

Continuity on the Buster Brown comedies is now being prepared. These will star Brownie, the dog, as "Tige." Pinto, cartoonist of United Features Syndicate has been engaged as gag man.

Buddy Messinger's third comedy is being cast. Jackie Earle, Jack Cooper, Harry Archer, Lois Boyd and others have already been engaged.

East and West with Fox

The scenario of "The Net," Maravene Thompson's stage drama which has been done into picture form by Fox Film Corporation, was written by Olga Linek Scholl. The screen version has been elaborated by the addition of a prologue, an epilogue and the introduction of several southern scenes.

Howard Irving Young has written the scenario for "Does It Pay?" the William Fox screen play in which Hope Hampton, Robert T. Haines, Florence Short and Peggy Shaw have the leading parts.

On the Goldwyn Lot

Clarence Badger has been engaged to direct "Red Lights" from the play "The Rear Car," to be a Marshall Neilan Production.

King Vidor will direct "Three Wise Fools" and is now at work on the continuity with June Mathis.

Richard Day, art director for "Foolish Wives," has been added to Von Stroheim's staff, at Goldwyn.

With Paramount Units

"Bella Donna" and "The Tiger's Claw" have both been completed. "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," however is still in production, with "Prodigal Daughters," "The Law of the Lawless" (Dorothy Dalton) "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" (Mary Miles Minter) and "Grumpy" (William De Mille production) still in the process of making.

Cecil De Mille left Tuesday for a six weeks' cruise in the South Sea Islands aboard his privately owned yacht.

Alma Tell, Louis Wolheim, star of "The Hairy Ape," and Elizabeth Murray, vaudeville headliner, have been added to the cast in support of Marion Davies in Cosmopolitan's "Little Old New York."

William Sistrom, Western production manager for Cosmopolitan Productions, returned to California this week after several days in New York. Shortly after his arrival on the Coast work will be started on two new Cosmopolitan Productions, "The Love Piker," by Frank R. Adams, and "Mother McGinn," by Jack Doyle.

Christie Comedy Bits

Al Christie will complete the editing of "A Hula Honeymoon" this week.

Charles Christie announces Hazel Dane placed under contract to be featured and the engagement of Duane Thompson for a long-time contract, to play leads.

Babe London, heavyweight girl, will continue under Christie banner for some time.

Here and There

William Seiter has completed the first Madge Bellamy subject for Associated Exhibitors, which was made at the Ince studio. It is temporarily titled "The Tinsel Harvest."

J. L. Frothingham is preparing to produce an original story titled "The Dice Woman," by Harvey Gates. He will also produce a well-known play in films and later make an original story starring William V. Mong.

Selznick announces the addition of Theodore Von Elz and Lillian Lawrence to the cast of "The Common Law."

Louis J. Gasnier is in New York.

Victor Schertzinger is beginning his last Katherine McDonald subject, entitled "Chastity," by Ernest Pascal. The continuity was prepared by Eve Unsell and Joseph Rothman. For the cast Huntley Gordon. Edythe Chapman, Frank Truesdale, Lew Mason, Gordon Russell and Gunnis Davis have been engaged. The story has to do with a stage girl overcoming temptation and winning success.

John S. Robertson, who is directing Richard Barthelmess in the Joseph Hergesheimer story, "The Bright Shawl," is at work with his star and company in the Tilford cinema studios in West Forty-fourth street, New York City, where Spanish sets were found awaiting the recent return of Director Robertson from his Cuban locations.

Edward J. Montagne, who has just completed writing the screen version of "Rupert of Hentzau" and "The Common Law," feels that he has earned a rest and has settled upon Catalina Island as a good spot for a few days' vacation.

Richrd Walton Tully will sail within the week from Paris, where he has been photographing atmosphere scenes in the Latin quarter for his next picture, "Trilby."

Allen Holubar and his star, Dorothy Phillips, have returned from Truckee to the United studios, where they are busily working on a Canadian cabin set for "The White Frontier."

Maurice Tourneur's staff of research experts and the mechanical department of the United Studios have finally finished building the twenty ancient, barnacled vessels, equipped with ancient weapons and other paraphernalia, for the Sargasto Sea sequence of "The Isle of of Dead Ships."

Stephen Goosson, who is art director and designer of all sets for "Rupert of Hentzau," which Victor Heerman is directing, has been engaged by Myron Selznick to serve in a like capacity for the screen version of Robert W. Chambers' novel, "The Common Law," now being filmed by Director George Archainbaud.

Hobart Bosworth has completed the continuity of "The Silent Skipper" from the original story by E. C. Maxwell and plans to produce the tale of the Gloucester fisher folk, following the production of "The Blood Ship," by Norman Springer.

Around Metro Studies

A special production to star Viola Dana is now being selected, during which procedure the star is taking a vacation. The production will start February 1.

The following players have been added to the cast of Louis Burston's subject, "Desire:" Edward Connelly, Walter Long, Ralph Lewis, Noah Beery, Joseph Dowling, Hank Mann, Chester Conklin, Ruth Hill Hutton.

The final editing of the Sawyer-Lubin subject, "Your Friend and Mine," has been completed. There is one more subject to make under the present contract with Metro.

The first Buster Keaton five-reel comedy will be directed by Eddie Cline. Margaret Leahy, an English girl, will play the lead. Jean Havez, Thomas Gray, Joseph Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman are preparing the story and continuity.

Julie Herne Added to Dwan's Staff

Julie Herne, author and scenario writer, has been added to Allan Dwan's technical staff in an advisory capacity for the production of "The Glimpses of the Moon." Miss Herne will assist in the direction of the picture which calls for much of the purely feminine in many of the scenes. She is a daughter of the late James A. Herne, of "Shore Acres" fame.

Emergencies

A SUDDEN emergency is the real test of any organization. Then is when efficiency combined with technical skill counts most. Goldwyn's brought the negative of "The Christian" to THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES for release prints. They wanted a sample the next day. They got it, without haste, without delay. It was a typical Standard Print, retaining all of Maurice Tourneur's artistry and all of the scenic beauties for which he took a company to England. We are making more than a million feet of release prints for "The Christian" on the strength of that performance.

YET the capacity of THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES and the possibilities of our organization are such that this emergency didn't affect in the least the service we are giving many of the foremost producers of the West. These producers have learned that they have the equivalent of a laboratory of their own with none of the attendant worries; that our daily service saves them time, trouble, and money; that Standard Prints look better and wear longer; and as Goldwyn's did, that we can always be depended upon in an emergency.

A Paramount Picture

THE oldest thing in the world makes the newest thing in screendom.

Human passion, older than time, is treated by DeMille in a way that makes "Adam's Rib" the one genuine novelty of the screen.

Have ten thousand years of civilization changed the real nature of men and women? Was Eve the first flapper? Just how "modern" is the modern girl?

Those are some of the questions asked and answered in "Adam's Rib"—a tale of the youngest flapper and the oldest sin.

Why talk about the DeMille magnificence? The public will do that.

(Some of the big scenes are illustrated at the right.)

FAMOUS PLAYERS LASKY CORPORATION

The prehistoric vision, staged in the largest set ever built, showing the life of the caveman.

The revolution and destruction of the King's palace, spectacular and thrilling.

The Natural History Museum, the most unusual set ever made; filled with skeletons of prehistoric monsters.

The Chicago Board of Trade, exactly reproduced in every detail.

The grand ball scene, made with the latest developments of color photography.

BOOTH TARKINGTON'S Famous Novel of American Life Made into a Remarkable Motion Picture Featuring a Great All Star Cast

This screen classic has already won stupendous praise from the public, news and trade press while being shown at the RIALTO, New York, and other great first-run houses throughout the country. Its place as one of the year's outstanding box-office successes has been firmly established.

A HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTION

THE FLAME OF LIFE

Starring

PRISCILLA DEAN

Such enthusiastic praise as was received by this amazing melodrama from the trade press has been given few productions in the history of the cinema! You will find the flashing Priscilla Dean in a dramatic role in which all her fiery emotional talents are unleashed—in the telling of a brilliant story of romance, love and thrills.

The Supreme Epic of The Blue Ridge. A Picture You Will Not Want to Forget

With an Extraordinary Cast Including Chas. Mack (courtesy D. W. Griffith) Burr McIntosh, Eleanor Fair and others

This picture will be one of the most talked-about releases of the year! In few productions have cast, director, settings and story so combined to bring forth the sweepingly original dramatic tenseness as in this unusual picture!

A CHARLES BRABIN PRODUCTION

The ABYSMAL BRUTE

Starring

REGINALD DENNY

In sheer depth of dramatic power, few writers have equalled the late Jack London's literary productions. On the screen, "The Abysmal Brute," one of his most famous stories, is even more powerful, more gripping, more human, than the story. The popular Reginald Denny in the star's role, supported by a great cast, makes this an attraction every exhibitor will want to show.

The Trade Press

"'Conquering the Woman' has been produced in popular style. Settings, characters and direction are of a nature that caters to generally approved standards. There are picturesque shots of the sea, a yacht race and a thrilling rescue. Florence Vidor plays in charming style."—Moving Picture World.

"'Conquering the Woman' is the sort of film which will find favor with a majority of movie fans and ought to score creditably from a box office angle. Florence Vidor plays with dash and dramatic skill."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

(The publication of these two reviews makes unanimous the vote of the trade magazines on the entertainment and box office value of "Conquering the Woman.")

The Exhibitor

"Conquering the Woman," with Florence Vidor.—A real good picture with plenty of action, new and novel situations, and a pleasing story and finish.—Davis & Walter, Grand Theatre, New Castle, Ind.—General patronage.

(From "What the Picture Did For Me" department of Exhibitors Herald.)

The Newspaper

"Henry C. Rowland's novel has been made into a wonderfully delightful production, effervescing with good humor, bubbling with subtle comedy and joyous satire, and having numerous tensely dramatic scenes and thrilling touches as well. The photography is perfection itself and the settings are marvels of beauty.

"Florence Vidor, one of the greatest beauties of all filmdom, is most attractively gowned and gives her role an interpretation which proves her really extraordinary cleverness as an actress. She is aided by an excellent cast."

Invention Forecasts Important Changes in Production

By ROGER FERRI

BOSTON—(Special).—This article is being written in the city that prides itself with being the home of culture. Incidentally, local newspapers are advancing another claim, namely, that of having furnished the inventor of what gives every evidence of developing into a flawless color process for injecting human life into American pictures. And, after all, this claim is a logical one, for Professor Daniel F. Comstock of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a gentleman who has accomplished

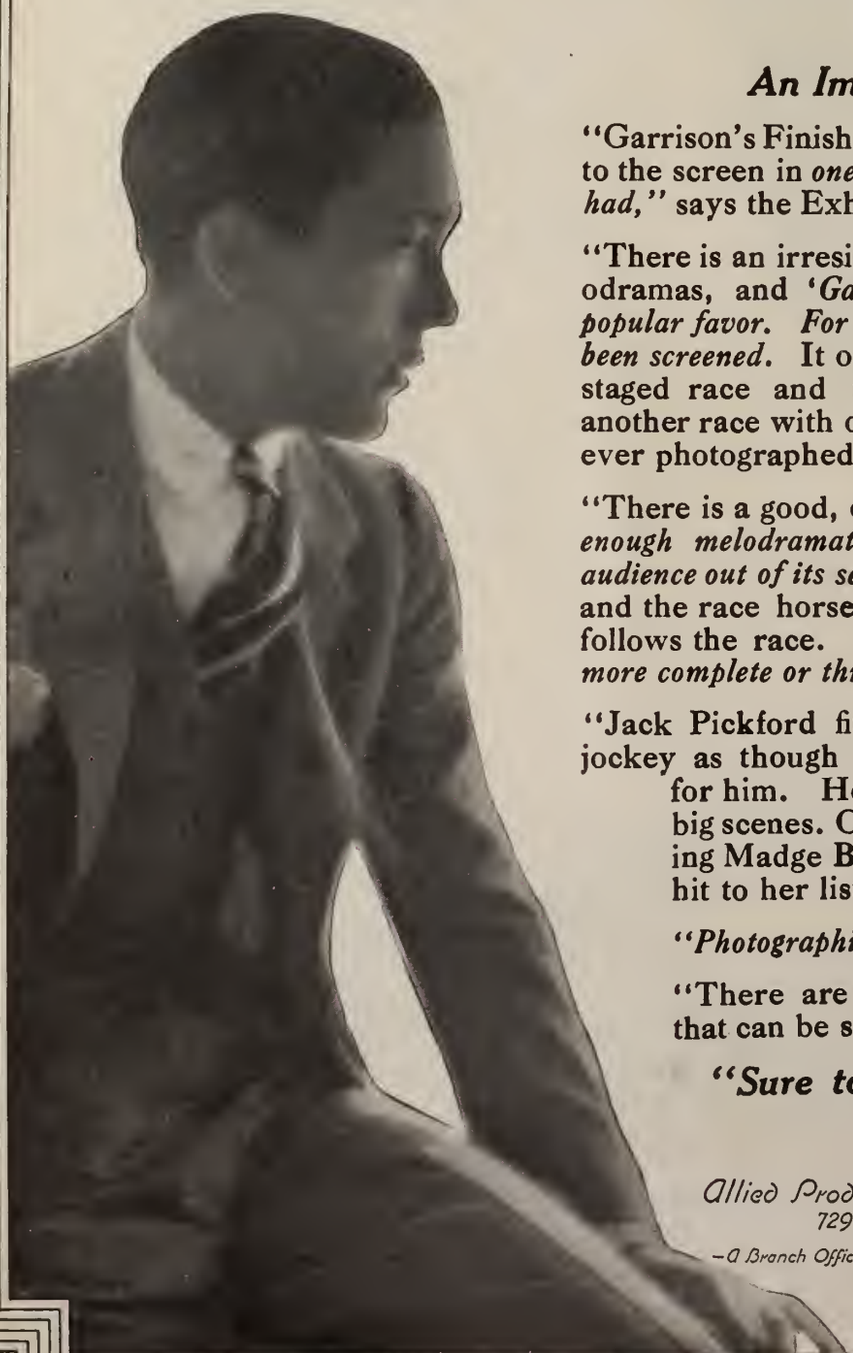
"GARRISON'S FINISH"

Based on W. B. M. Ferguson's novel of the same name
Supervision and screen version by Elmer Harris
Direction by Arthur Rosson · Photography by Harold Rosson



An Impartial Verdict!

"Garrison's Finish" marks Jack Pickford's return to the screen in one of the best vehicles he has ever had," says the Exhibitor's Herald.

"There is an irresistible appeal about racing melodramas, and 'Garrison's Finish' is sure to meet popular favor. For it is one of the best that has ever been screened. It opens with an exciting and well-staged race and the concluding reel pictures another race with one of the most exciting finishes ever photographed on a track.

"There is a good, consistent plot to the tale and enough melodramatic situations to fairly raise an audience out of its seats. The escape of the jockey and the race horse from a burning barn. Then follows the race. And such a race! Never has a more complete or thrilling event been screened!

"Jack Pickford fits into the part of the little jockey as though it had been specially written for him. He is natural and effective in the big scenes. Opposite him appears the pleasing Madge Bellamy who has added another hit to her list.

"Photographically the picture is perfect.

"There are a great many unique stunts that can be staged to put this picture over."

"Sure to meet popular favor!"

GLENN HUNTER
as
Jim Bradley—"Second Fiddle"

He Always Played "SECOND FIDDLE"

Herbert Bradley arrived home from college, handsome, polished, and possessing all the social graces. His awkward brother, Jim, who had always been regarded as a "Second Fiddle," was relegated to the background.

Herbert immediately took possession of Jim's room and threw out all his belongings, to which Jim said nothing.

Jim permitted his automobile to be monopolized by the egotistical Herbert, who utilized it to take Jim's sweetheart driving.

Finally, Herbert tried to steal Jim's sweetheart.

BUT—the worm turned!

Just how Jim finally asserts himself and proves his manhood in a crucial test, and wins the girl of his dreams, is told in this enthralling and gripping film drama.

He took his room—

he took his machine—

and finally took his girl!

The Critics Like it!

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Second Fiddle" may be put down as a likely attraction.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: This is a feature that should please every class of patrons. It has heart interest, thrilling suspense, and Glenn Hunter in a most appealing role. It is a superior attraction that promises satisfaction to the box-office.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: There is no doubt in our minds that it will be well received wherever shown.

MORNING TELEGRAPH: Glenn Hunter does his usual splendid work as Jim Bradley, the "second fiddle." He is an actor who possesses unusual charm, rare intelligence and an acute sense of comedy.

EXHIBITORS HERALD: "Second Fiddle" has the appeal of a well-told story, natural and picturesque New England scenery, and it will please the majority of picture-goers.

FILM DAILY: Has elements that will appeal to a good majority. Contains effective thrills, enough action, a first-rate atmosphere and a cast that does very good work.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: "Second Fiddle" is so well handled, and so appealing in its humanness, that it is a thoroughly pleasing offering. Glenn Hunter does good work; the same is true of Mary Astor.

"In 'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera,' H. A. Snow poked his camera right up under the noses of the wildest animals of the African jungles and came away with pictures of the whites of the beasts' eyes. This is an extraordinary film."—Quinn Martin, N. Y. World.

"A picture which thrilled, delighted and entertained us as much as anything in years. It is absolutely fascinating from the opening shots of over a million penguins flying into the ocean to the closeup of a giant African elephant charging into the camera. All in all we consider this the best film entertainment in New York today."—P. W. Gallico in Daily News.

"The most complete—which means the most instructive and the most thrilling—motion picture of wild animal life ever made. The beautiful, the ugly, the swift, the ungainly—they are there, singly and in herds, at water holes and darting across the plain or diving into the jungle undergrowth. Comedy is introduced to relieve the tense action."—J. O. Spearing, N. Y. Times.

"Most satisfying pictures of wild animal life yet taken."—Don Allen, Eve. World.

"More drama in a single reel than in a bale of Hollywood productions."—N. Y. Tribune.

"By all means see this picture and take the children, for if you don't they'll never forgive you, if they ever find out about this show."—
Daily News

"All the excitement, thrills and chills of 'Hunting Big Game in Africa' are there. No one between the ages of seven and seventy should miss this picture."—N. Y. Eve. Post.

"A marvelous panorama of wild life."—Evening Mail.

"No Zoo in the world is able to produce as large a number of wild animals as these pictures show."—Louella O. Parsons, Morning Telegraph.

"A vivid record of the thrills and chills of the jungle."
—Rose Pelswick in N. Y. American.

"In the midst of most exciting adventures one suddenly realizes that during all this hazard the camera man was there bravely cranking, cranking, cranking."
—N. Y. Evening Journal.

"The most fascinating animal picture ever seen. It even exceeds in entertainment power Paul J. Rainey's classic. It is exciting and humorous. Crashes between the Flivver and wart hog are funnier than the antics of Lloyd or Chaplin."
—N. Y. Sun.

"An example of the cinema at its best. A more uniformly interesting and sensationally thrilling set of pictures has not been shown on Broadway in many a day. It crowds more real drama into its ten reels than 90 per cent of so called super-specials."—E. V. Durling in the Globe.

"The flat statement predicting a long showing for 'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera' is based on a number of things, foremost of which are these:—Tense, thrilling moments, punctuated with mirth provoking scenes and great lessons from nature."
—Eve. Telegram.

"'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera' has virtually swept the town off its feet. The press went wild over the picture and stated it was the biggest entertainment in New York."—Variety of January 12th.

What You Get for Your Money is the only way to size up any commercial proposition.

From Motion Picture News

you get more for your money than from any other publication in the field and that's not bunk but a plain statement of fact

The News Covers the Field

Motion Picture News

Unity

NOT long ago Adolph Zukor made the emphatic statement that this industry suffered more from insufficient capital than from any other one cause.

That statement holds good today; it is still more pertinent, in fact, and it will be increasingly so as the industry grows larger and capital fails—if capital should fail—to meet the heavy requirements brought about by expansion.

* * *

It isn't necessary to dilate here upon such a subject.

Every business man knows that credit is the oil of industrial machinery—that in a new and suddenly big industry like this it is the first of all requisites.

Every exhibitor, distributor and producer knows well enough what capital—banking capital—means to his successful operation.

We introduce the subject here merely to speak of a banking expert and the impression he got of this industry after a keen look at its inner recesses.

Everyone will be inclined to weigh this impression with the utmost seriousness—and perhaps act accordingly.

* * *

"The most disquieting fact I find," said the banker to the writer, "is the enmity that exists within your ranks—the enmity between individuals all along the line and—more importantly—the discord that exists between the big branches of the industry. If your own spoken and printed words are to be taken literally, there are no reliable men in your ranks and a sort of civil war exists between your industrial branches.

"Capital shies at a house in disorder. That's obvious. The deduction is simply this: if you don't trust each other how can you expect outside capital to trust you?"

* * *

The writer argued that the industry's family squabbles were the result of economic faults. Take credit for instance. Lack of capital has made the producer lean upon the distributor and the latter upon the exhibitor in the way of the exaction of advance deposits. No credit facilities have ever existed between distributor and exhibitor. Then the selling system—a poker game species of price-fixing—has of itself bred distrust and discord.

* * *

"These faults can be corrected," said the banker, "Capital will do its share in correcting them.

"We are not afraid of these disorders. We realize of course that your business is a most remarkable one to live through them so successfully.

"We know, too, that overproduction exists; that the cost of distribution is, in most instances, outrageously high, that the country is, in spots, overseated.

"But again, these situations are common to new industries made hurriedly big by popular demand. They work themselves out and capital can often short-cut the process.

* * *

"Capital however relies—must rely heavily—upon men; new enterprises and the rehabilitation of old ones must be built about men.

"They must be big men. And big men don't engage in ruthless competition; they don't knock each other; they don't incite one industrial branch to destroy another; they don't build for the day, but rather for the future; they don't get blinded by greed, passions and prejudices.

"They know, above all else, that the branches of an industry are partners, and that not one of them can successfully fight another; that all must succeed together by intelligent co-operation.

"Let capital know that you have men who believe in these principles and can execute them: capital won't come to you until you do."

* * *

As we say, everyone will weigh these words thoughtfully.

The banks are ceasing to buy bonds and capital is going back into business. The outlook is good. This industry needs capital to take care of the better business promised.

Let's turn a fairer face—the face of intelligent unity toward the outside world.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

VOL. XXVII JANUARY 27, 1923 NO. 4

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

NAT ROTHSTEIN and his able staff of "publicity getters" stood in the lobby of the Astor theatre on Tuesday morning at eleven thirty, shaking hands and welcoming guests invited to witness the showing of the first three of F. B. O.'s new "Leather Pushers" Series, adapted from the popular stories by H. C. Witwer.

Nat and his men hoped everybody, including the critics from the trade and daily press, would enjoy the pictures. Judging from the hearty laughter heard and general interest shown, everybody did.

"There's a Reason"—that being because these two-reelers are well made, well played and full of "punch." George O'Hara, as the young athletic hero who trains to become a prize fighter, was a happy selection for the part. He looks it, he plays it and his appeal serves to remind us that there WAS a famous pugilist known as "Gentleman Jim." Jim was a prize fighter first and a gentleman all the time. O'Hara, like Corbett, seems to be thoroughly aware that while he is developing as a pugilist, in the pictures, he must hold tight to a strong appeal, making himself liked as well as "felt." He will win, of course, as the fighter—and we feel safe in laying a bet that he will also win a permanent place for himself, as a screen favorite.

* * *

THAT little rival of John D., Henry, and Pierpont, namely Jackie Coogan, is coming to New York in the near future. Jackie knows the theatres are around Times Square and in the forties and fifties, but isn't it possible that he will spend a good deal of his time in Wall Street buying copper, oil and steel instead of theatre tickets?

* * *

SPEAKING of banks and bankers, Motley Flint, head of the Los Angeles Savings & Trust Company, is in New York on business and pleasure. Hotel? The Belmont.

* * *

WITH many film executives returning from the Coast, John C. Flinn of Famous Players has turned his face toward the setting sun. He left this week for Los Angeles to confer with Lasky regarding "The Covered Wagon." Mr. Flinn will return some time in February with the first print of the historical film which is being completed by James Cruze, the director.

* * *

HOLLYWOOD was represented for the first time in the tournament of roses at Pasadena New Year's Day. And May McAvoy was the screen city's representative. The float which carried her, incidentally, won one of the prizes for this annual event.

* * *

JACK LEO, vice-president of Fox, arrived at the Fox West Coast studios on Wednesday, and "Winnie" R. Sheehan was due to arrive there today, to lay plans for future production activities at the western plant.

* * *

IF you remember Lois Wilson in the title role of "Miss Lulu Bett," you will appreciate that this actress, who has won beauty prizes, has no scruples about appearing in characters which efface her charming personality. Miss Wilson is to play in the celluloid version of "Only 38," and while she is a long way this side of the age of the title role, her ability to enact young-old women establishes her as an ideal choice.

It's very seldom that the good lookers of the screen will submerge their personalities in roles which call for colorless characterization. All praise to Lois Wilson in placing her art above the marcel wave, the curling iron, the mineralava bath and other equipment of the beauty parlor.

* * *

IT looks as if Lon Chaney will have the biggest opportunity of his busy and varied career to show his skill at characterization when he comes forth as the hunchback in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," an adaptation of Victor Hugo's classic. It will appear under the Universal banner. Chaney will have good support, too—Raymond Hatton and Ernest Torrence are in the cast.

* * *

FLOWERS, telegrams of sympathy and other tokens of affection are being heaped upon Marguerite Courlot by her friends in and out of the industry—the reason being her confinement in a Newark hospital, to which she was hurried the other night to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

* * *

SAM GOLDWYN has arrived in New York with the signed contract of Frances Marion, who will do the continuity for "Potash and Perlmutter," in co-operation with Montague Glass, the playwright and author of the P. & P. series. Goldwyn has affiliated himself with George Fitzmaurice and wife, Ouida Bergere ,to make a series of George Fitzmaurice productions. The first of these will be a film version of a well-known play, the title of which has not been announced.

* * *

FRANK E. WOODS, the "daddy" of motion picture scenarists and production supervisors, is back on the West Coast, where he is proceeding with plans for the production of Associated Authors pictures, in conjunction with Thompson Buchanan and Elmer Harris. Space has been leased at the Thomas H. Ince studios. According to word from the coast, the first picture is to be ready in April and it is understood that United Artists distribution has been arranged. Three pictures are being planned at present. Some interesting things are to be looked for from this organization. Woods, through his long association with Biograph, D. W. Griffith and Famous Players, knows production as few men know it, and now that he is to be able to carry out his own ideas freely, some worth-while pictures should result.

* * *

WHEN the jury in the case of Dr. John G. Massie, Belleville, Ill., physician, on trial in the Circuit Court there on a charge of working a confidence game in selling stock in an oil company, voted unanimously to attend the Washington theatre Saturday afternoon, Bailiff Ahrens discovered that the feature was "Back Home and Broke," in which the hero loses all his money in fake oil stock. So he decided to take the jury to another show.

* * *

JEANIE MacPHERSON, who writes the scripts for Cecil B. De Mille, is enjoying a brief vacation in New York. The scenarist, now that "Adam's Rib" is out of the way, will resume work on "The Ten Commandments," when she returns to California.

* * *

D. W. GRIFFITH is firm in the belief that his production, "The White Rose," which brings Mae Marsh back into the fold, will be appreciated as one of the best celluloid documents which he has ever sponsored. Picture-goers will see a new D. W. star in Ivor Novello, whose work has been keenly enjoyed upon the English stage and screen. Mr. Novello, incidentally, is the author of the song, "Keep the Home Fires Burning," which achieved great popularity in England and America during the war. He is a member of the firm of Novello and Sons, music publishers of London, and is said to be a very accomplished musician.

ROBERT C. BRUCE, whose Wilderness Tales embellish the program, has reason to feel highly elated over his newest canvases, "Jenkins and the Mutt," "By Lantern Light," and "Moonblind," three widely different studies which not only carry neat little stories but are rich—unusually so—in moving pictures. "Moonblind" is exceptionally appealing. Some day when Mr. Bruce gives up his quest of Nature's handiwork we would like to see his impressions gathered in a richly illustrated book. We would turn the leaves and be carried away to the far-off places.

* * *

IT certainly pays in every way to get your name in the paper.. The disciple of auto-suggestion, Emile Coué, who is now in this country lecturing and holding clinics on how to get better and better, has been offered a proposition by Al Lichtman to play in a film demonstrating his methods of helping people to help themselves. It is said that the little Frenchman has not decided whether to accept the proposition or not. In the event that he does accept it, he will use the snug salary toward establishing a permanent clinic. Will Rogers says Henry Ford is the author of auto-suggestion, the automobile man making a synopsis several years ago.

* * *

TOM HAMLIN, formerly a member of the editorial staff of EMPY NEWS, and later managing editor of Motion Picture Journal, is getting on in the world. Tom resigned the other day from the Journal, after a service of three years, to devote all his time to Tom Hamlin, Inc., an advertising agency serving the eighteen regional film trade journals of the United States and Canada.

* * *

EDITH STOREY is returning to the screen after an absence of three years. Her presence upon the silversheet will be hastened by suitable material.

* * *

ARTHUR H. SAWYER is in San Diego, where he will supervise the construction of the first stage of S. L. Studios. When the studios are completed they will embrace fourteen working stages, both open air and enclosed. Sawyer will return to Los Angeles at the end of the month to begin work on a forthcoming picture, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," an adaptation of Robert Service's poem which every vaudeville patron knows by heart. Lon Chaney, Willard Mack and Barbara Le Marr will play the important parts. We, for one, would like to know who's going to play the ragtime kid. Mr. Sawyer has just completed "Your Friend and Mine," with Willard Mack, Enid Bennett and Allene Ray as the featured players.

WOULD you be interested in knowing that the National Motion Picture League endorsed every feature playing the big houses on Broadway during Christmas week? The pictures were "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Dr. Jack," "The Headless Horseman," "The Flirt," and "Back Home and Broke."

WE can't tell you the name of the church which furnished its Sunday school class for a group picture exploiting "Lorna Doone"—but, according to the photograph, they take religion and motion pictures seriously in Huntsville, Alabama. The boys, young and old, are grouped in front of the Grand theatre and there must be two hundred of them.

HORACE JUDGE who presides over that portion of First National's publicity department which specializes in press matter for use by the newspapers, has called around with an armful of clipping bureau evidence that proves last week's editorial contention, in one instance at least, is a matter open for argument.

Mr. Judge has clippings enough from newspapers in various parts of the country to convince us that he isn't the kind of a press agent we complained about.

There were plenty of yarns that contained real meat, good enough for any editor, as is proven by the fact that they had been used.

All of which is concluded with the statement that if any other publicist has documentary evidence of a like nature, we will be pleased to inspect his exhibit and give credit where credit is due.

Better Films Body Seeks Members

National Committee Launches Campaign for Extension of Movement

AN invitation is extended to every movie fan in the United States, according to an announcement of the National Committee for Better Films, which is affiliated with the National Board of Review at 70 Fifth avenue, New York City. It is extended likewise to every person who is not a movie fan but wants to learn about and patronize the best films; it is extended, moreover, to every exhibitor who wants to exhibit them, and to every producer who wants to produce them.

The National Committee for Better Films asks all these people to help it in its work of furthering the Better Films Movement by joining as associate or co-operating members under its new plan of membership. All members are supplied monthly with the committee's three major services: Photoplay Guide of Selected Pictures for the family group and special young people's entertainments; "Film Progress," the committee's organ of the Better Films Movement, and "Exceptional Photoplays," critical reviews of the finer productions, issued by the National Board of Review. Members also receive a certificate of membership and the Membership Creed, to which it is believed everyone joining will be heartily glad to subscribe.

It is the committee's contention, which has been tested and proved by experience in Atlanta, Cleveland and other cities, that a marked influence can be exerted on the character of local motion picture entertainments by community co-operation in support of the good films. When the good films are well supported, the exhibitor is led to book more of that kind. Investigation shows, conversely, that in many communities the exhibitor is discouraged from booking the unusual and artistic film because when he has ventured to do this, his regular audience has on the whole been unable to appreciate it, and the very people who would have gone out of their way to see it had they known about it, have stayed at home.

It is the object of the National Committee through its membership to create a nucleus of seriously interested, energetic people in every community whose attendance and influence will make the honest, worth-while, artistic picture pay.

Applications to join the National Committee for Better Films should be addressed to the Committee at 70 Fifth avenue, New York, and may be accompanied by a check for Associate Membership, dues $2.00 for the calendar year 1923 or for Co-operating Membership, dues $10.00.

City to Play Pictures to Reduce Prices

DURHAM, North Carolina, with the evident solid backing of its newspapers is up in arms against alleged "high cost of the movies" in their town, according to newspaper announcement to the effect that the city fathers have decided to spend several thousand dollars to equip the old municipal theatre there so that it can be operated as a city owned motion picture house. It seems that quite an agitation has been going the rounds regarding the prices charged at the local theatres, of which this is the ultimate outcome.

The house owned by the city will seat about 1,500, and, according to the plans that have been mapped out, will show the very best pictures obtainable at low prices. W. F. Freeland, former manager of the Academy, will have charge of the house, and city manager R. W. Rigsby has been authorized to go ahead with tentative plans. The local theatres, The Paris, Savoy and Orpheum, are controled by the Durham Amusement Company, of the Pryor-Leitch interests, Don Nichols being resident manager.

M.P.T.O. Missouri Counsel Tenders Resignation

Lawrence E. Goldman, secretary and counsel of the M. P. T. O., Missouri, who has been one of the most faithful workers of the organization since its formation, has resigned. His loss will be greatly felt by the Missouri body. For about a month Mr. Goldman has delayed his resignation because of efforts made by the M. P. T. O. M. to prevent his withdrawal as secretary. Mr. Goldman also has been considering an offered appointment as assistant county prosecutor in Kansas City, but this offer also was declined. Mr. Goldman, who recently has won recognition as one of the Democratic leaders in Kansas City, is being mentioned as county counselor.

Since the organization of the Missouri body in 1920, Mr. Goldman has been one of the most conscientious workers in the association. He relations as counsel for the organization will not be entirely severed, as he has extended an offer to serve in any legal capacity whatsoever.

Three constructive plans are outlined in Mr. Goldman's resignation: plans which in all probability will be adopted. They consist of the appointment of a directorate, composed of seven members, the appointment of a business manager and the establishment of a semi-monthly confidential bulletin.

Indiana Legislature Gets Censorship Bill

A bill providing for motion picture censorship, identical with the one defeated in Indiana two years ago, was introduced in the Senate of the Indiana State Legislature, January 12. This started a fight which is expected to be one of the most important of the session, which has almost two months to run.

At the outset it does not appear proponents of the bill have a great many chances for victory. Two Indianapolis newspapers, the Indianapolis Star and the Indianapolis Times, have openly shown censorship to be ridiculous. The Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays, absolutely opposed to censorship, can be counted upon for tremendous influence with their boards in every city of any consequence, made up of highly respected women.

The bill, introduced by Senator Claude S. Steel of Knox, Ind., would create a censorship board of three members, the chairman to receive $3,000 a year and the others, $2,500. All films shown in the state would have to be licensed, the commission being empowered to make such changes or remove such parts as it saw fit. Examination of films would cost producers $2 for the first reel and $1 for each additional reel of the picture.

Wallace Reid Dead After Valiant But Vain Fight

WALLACE REID passed away at Hollywood, Cal., at 1.30 p. m., Thursday, January 18th. Despatches, received from the West Coast at time of going to press, announced that his death followed a nervous breakdown brought on by his heroic determination to overcome the narcotic habit by a complete abstinence from all drugs. Mr. Reid was taken seriously ill four weeks ago, following his renunciation of all narcotics, and has been fighting a valiant but losing battle against death since then. His wife and children were with him at the time of his passing away.

Censorship Fight Is On in Missouri

With the arrival in Jefferson City, Mo., Tuesday, of the Rev. Howard Billman, assistant secretary of the St. Louis Church Federation, who lost no time in "billing" himself, the fight for and against Missouri censorship in the state legislature began. A censorship bill is now being prepared and will be introduced early in the session, the reformers have announced.

It is understood the proponents of the censorship law will use the Arbuckle case as their argument in favor of state regulation. Mr. Billman, in outlining the proposed censorship bill, says that the censor board will include two men and two women. The board would be given free power to cut objectionable sections from films or to reject them entirely. The cost of censorship would be met by a footage tax, Mr. Billman asserts.

An effort to draw Kansas City civic organizations into the fight thus far has failed. Kansas City exhibitors, with the inglorious fate of the last censorship bill still fresh upon their memories, have little fear that censorship will be adopted in the state. The Missouri Sunday School Association is said to have sent out letters urging the support of the censorship bill. M. P. T. O. M. officials are inclined to discredit this report.

Picture Legislation Due in Pennsylvania Assembly

PROPOSED legislation affecting the motion picture industry that will be offered to the Pennsylvania Assembly which held its first business session on January 16, when Governor Pinchot was inaugurated, already is beginning to take form.

One of the measures that it is learned will likely be introduced early in the session is one proposing that heavy tax be placed on advertising bill boards along public highways. Such a law was urged at a convention of the members of the City Planning Commissions of Pennsylvania Cities of the Third Class, held in Harrisburg, the capital of the state.

The plan was advocated by J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association in an address before the convention. Similar measures have been introduced at previous sessions of the Pennsylvania Legislature, but have gone down to defeat, having met with opposition from motion picture exhibitors and other theatrical men.

Regulations on Film Shipments Are Revised

Maximum of 8 Reels in I. C. C. No. 32 Can Among Changes Ordered by Bureau of Explosives

A LIST of revised regulations appertaining to the shipment of films between states of the Union or to foreign ports has been issued by the Bureau of Explosives. The revisions include some important departures from the standards in the original schedule. The most radical of these changes applies to the transportation of exposed film in the I. C. C. No. 32 outside metal container. While it has been heretofore possible to ship as many as twelve reels in the I. C. C. No. 32 container under the former rules, the Bureau of Explosives now restricts the maximum number of reels that may be shipped in I. C. C. No. 32 to eight reels. The alternative of packing exposed film in the wooden outside containers, I. C. C. No. 19, provided each reel is placed in a tightly closed inside metal container and the gross weight of the package does not exceed 200 pounds, still remains in force.

Another departure from the original regulations calls for the depositing of all advertising matter, accompanying the films being shipped, inside the outside metal or wooden container enclosing the film. The revised regulation specifically points out that shipments of motion picture film "with advertising matter attached to the outside container" must not be submitted to carriers for transportation.

The announcement of the revised list of regulations carries with it the notice that the revisions are effective from January 1, 1923.

Following are the more important paragraphs of the list of revised regulations just issued by the Bureau of Explosives:

"The sections of the revised regulations applying to motion picture films by express are as follows:

"Paragraph 12. All shipments of articles subject to these regulations offered for transportation by express carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce must be properly described by the shipper, and the proper and definite name of the dangerous article as shown herein must be plainly marked on the outside of the package, in addition to the labels required herein.

"Paragraph 17. Containers used more than once (refilled and reshipped after having been previously emptied) must be in such condition, including closing devices, cushioning materials, etc., that they will protect their contents during transit as efficiently as a new container. Repairs must be made in an efficient manner and parts that are weak, broken, or otherwise deteriorated, must be replaced. Tests as to efficiency must be made and complied with as prescribed herein.

"The list of principal dangerous articles other than explosives, accompanying paragraph 76, now shows Motion-picture Films instead of Moving-picture Films, as in the past.

"Paragraph 81 requires that containers used hereafter for the shipment of dangerous articles other than explosives must have been made and marked in accordance with the requirements of the approved specifications as prescribed, or of the previous issues of the specifications effective at the date of manufacture of the container.

"Paragraph 81(b). In addition to standing the tests prescribed, the design and construction of packages must be such as to prevent the occurrence in individual packages of defects that permit leakage of their contents under the ordinary conditions incident to transportation. The results of experience gained by an examination of damaged or broken packages on arrival at destination must be reported to and recorded by the Bureau of Explosives, to the end that further use of any particular kind of package shown by experience to be inefficient, may be prohibited by the commission.

"Paragraph 102(a). Motion-picture films must be packed in spark-proof metal cases or trunks complying with specification No. 32: Not more than eight reels (approximately 1,000 feet each) may be packed in one such outside container, or

"(b). Motion-picture films must be packed in outside wooden boxes complying with specification No. 19, provided each reel is placed in a tightly closed inside metal container. The gross weight of such a package must not exceed 200 pounds.

"(c). Unexposed motion-picture film in tight rolls must be packed in interior metal cans not to exceed approximately 3,000 feet in one inside can; the cover of each inside can must fit tightly and be held in place by a strip of adhesive tape or paper; the interior cans must be securely packed in outside wooden boxes complying with specifications No. 19. The gross weight of one outside container must not exceed 200 pounds.

"(d) Slow-burning (noninflammable) motion picture films may be accepted without other restrictions when securely packed in strong packages of sufficient strength to carry to destination without rupture or leakage of contents; each outside container must be plainly marked MOTION PICTURE FILMS and, in addition, must be marked NO LABEL REQUIRED, as prescribed by paragraph 76 (c).

"(e) When noninflammable motion picture films are packed in the same outside containers with inflammable motion picture films, the outside packages must bear the yellow label and the total contents of the outside container must not exceed the quantity or gross weight permitted for inflammable films.

"(f) Shipments of motion picture film with advertising matter attached to the outside container must not be offered for shipment. Shippers desiring to include advertising matter with their shipments of motion picture film must place the advertising matter inside the outside box containing the film.

"Paragraph 150. All packages containing . . . . . dangerous articles other than explosives, for which labels are prescribed herein, must be conspicuously labeled by the shipper. Labels should be supplied when practicable to that part of the package bearing the consignee's name and address. Shippers must furnish and attach the labels prescribed for their shipments.

"Paragraph 161 (a) Labels must conform to standards as to printing, color, size and shape, and must be free from all advertising or other matter. The prescribed labels must not be printed in with nor form part of any other shipping label or printed matter. Samples will be furnished by the Chief Inspector of the Bureau of Explosives on request.

"Note to paragraph 166. Labels which conform to the requirements of the regulations effective September 1, 1918, may be used until further notice.

Baggage Regulations Effective January 1, 1923

"Paragraph 8 authorizes the transportation as baggage, under these regulations, of motion picture films bearing Yellow Labels.

"Paragraph 9 (a) Inflammable (nitrocellulose) motion picture films must be packed as follows:

"(1) In spark-proof metal boxes or cans, or trunks, complying with specification No. 52. Not more than eight reels (approximately 1,000 feet each) may be packed in one such outside container, or

"(2) In outside wooden boxes complying with specification No. 19 provided each reel is placed in a tightly closed inside metal container. The gross weight of such a package must not exceed 80 pounds. Boxes must be equipped with handles, and covers securely fastened by metal hasp and staple with a strong lock or other efficient device.

"(b) Slow-burning (noninflammable) motion picture films must be packed in packages complying with specification Nos. 19 or 32, and each outside container must be plainly marked MOTION PICTURE FILMS and in addition, must be marked NO LABEL REQUIRED.

"(c) When slow-burning (noninflammable) motion picture films are packed in the same outside containers with inflammable motion picture films, the outside packages must bear the yellow label, and the total contents of the outside container must not exceed the quantity or gross weight permitted for inflammable films. (See par. 9 (a).)

"(d) Shipments of motion picture films with advertising matter attached to the outside container must not be offered or accepted for transportation. Shippers desiring to include advertising matter with their shipments of motion picture films must place the advertising matter inside the outside box or can containing the films.

"The label required for baggage shipments of motion picture films is identical with the label required for express shipments, and for both express and baggage shipments the shipper's name must appear thereon."

A note appended to the list of revised regulations advises that "the type of standard label required by the Bureau of Explosives has been changed." Announcement is made that samples of the new standard label may be secured at the Bureau of Explosives, 30 Vesey Street, New York City.

Nominating Committee of Wampas Picks Ticket

ACCORDING to a wire from Los Angeles this week, the nominating committee of the Wampas, the western branch of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, reports the following ticket:

For president, Joseph Jackson of Goldwyn; for vice-president, Harry Wilson of Principal Pictures; for secretary, Howard Strickland of Metro; for treasurer, Pat Dowling of Christie.

The election is to take place next week. It is reported that another ticket will be named.

The Reader Has His Say

IN an editorial in the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS of January 6, William A. Johnston asked the question, "What do pictures lack?" The editorial was prompted by results from queries on the "Hall of Fame" contest conducted by MOTION PICTURE NEWS and by a somewhat scathing criticism of pictures in the New York World.

Mr. Johnston stated that while pictures today are decidedly better than ever before, they are, as a whole, hitting far short of their true mark; that they are failing to get to the heart of the American public.

That editorial is responsible for the following two letters:

"Mr. Wm. A. Johnston,
"MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
"729 Seventh Avenue,
"New York City, N. Y.

"My Dear Mr. Johnston:

"In your editorial of January 6, 'What Do Pictures Lack?' you say that 'while pictures today are decidedly better than ever before, they are, as a whole, hitting far short of their true mark.'

"There can be only one motive of a constructive criticism coming from a friend of the industry such as you.

"However, whenever the efficacy of the motion picture is brought up in open meeting I never fail to think—at least to myself—one thought. I'm taking this occasion to think it out loud. Here's the thought:

"'Compared with other forms of art, motion pictures are not doing so badly!'

"There are pictures and pictures made every year, and a great many of them—far too many—fall short of any mark worth aiming at. There are also books and books written every year, pictures and pictures painted, songs and near-songs composed.

"How many pictures were painted last year that caused any great publicity ripple in New England? During 1922 how many minstrels burst forth into a song that found a responsive chord on the heart strings of the Mississippi Valley?

"Now let's compare motion pictures with the most common form of artistic expression—literature. Of the thousands upon thousands of books that consumed valuable white paper last year, how many will live five years? How many deserve to be classed as literature; how many as litter? How long has it been since a book came out that thrilled the nation as universally as did 'The Kid'? What was that book's name? As a masterpiece how does Jackie Coogan's 'Oliver Twist' compare with Dickens' book? And speaking of classics, how does Fairbanks' 'Robin Hood' line up with one of Scott's novels?

"Considering the number of books printed and the number of films laboratoried during 1922, I should say that in proportion there have been as many great pictures as masterpieces made immortal through the medium of printer's ink.

"Nope! In view of the fact that those other forms of art have had a few centuries' start of the movies, the writer opines that our industry is not doing so badly.

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER,
"President Rothacker Film Mfg. Co."

And the following from John C. Flinn of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation:

"Mr. William A. Johnston,
"Editor MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
"729 Seventh Avenue,
"New York.

"My Dear Mr. Johnston:

"In your editorial under the heading of 'What do Pictures Lack?' in the January 6th issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS you make the following statement:

"'Save for the war period when pictures did rise to their opportunities, we have had no great pictures, great in concept, since "Intolerance."'

"I have not as yet personally seen the Paramount production, 'The Covered Wagon,' which is being completed at the Lasky studio in Hollywood. Regardless of its pictorial value, which the industry and the public will be able to judge after its first presentation, I do know, from conversation with Mr. Zukor, Mr. Lasky and Mr. James Cruze, the director, that it certainly is 'great in concept.' No phase of American history or American development offers greater material for the motion picture than the period of 1848-49.

"Emerson Hough, the author of the novel, 'The Covered Wagon,' which was published serially in the Saturday Evening Post, has imparted through his book something of the urge that led men and women already frontier folks in the great territory of the Mississippi Valley, to leave their new found homes and push further westward into a land of promise. Mr. Hough's book was the inspiration for a motion picture which, from all accounts, actually visualizes the great drama of the west.

"Those who were charged with the responsibility of the picture have had a full realization of their opportunity to record indelibly a phase and period of American life which is fast becoming extinct. It is doubtful if such a picture as 'The Covered Wagon' could be adequately made a score of years from now. Timeliness is one of its greatest points of interest, for the reason that the Ford car, the Packard Twin-six and the ever-present Buick have not yet completely displaced on the plains the draft horse, the oxen and the primitive means of transportation.

"'We made ten miles today' is a sentence which is written on the whitened skull of a buffalo found on the plains years after one of the great wagon trains passed the spot westward-bound. And ten miles in one day for a great caravan of three hundred wagons, two thousand men, women and children, a thousand head of cattle and hundreds of horses, was a record march between dawn and night.

"There is scarcely a family in America living west of the Alleghenys but that may point with righteous pride to some grandfather or great-grandfather who participated in one of the greatest racial migrations known to history. My own grandmother with three small children and without masculine assistance, took her family, her household goods, a few chickens and a litter of kittens by wagon on a three days' journey to a farm which she had purchased near Peoria, Ill. It was, after all, but a few years ago.

"The human incidents occurring by the minute in a group of two or three thousand persons who made up the famous wagon trains, beset with dangers on all sides, are the elements which will make 'The Covered Wagon' a picture 'great in concept.'

"It is true that a fortune has been spent in the making of this production. Indians were transported hundreds of miles from reservations in Wyoming to participate in some of its scenes. For a period of several weeks a frontier encampment was maintained by the Paramount organization under the most advanced rules of supervision. Nothing has been left undone that could be done to fulfill the opportunity of recounting a great epoch of American history. Surely such an effort may rightly demand from the industry in which it has its birth a hopeful and optimistic encouragement. In my eight years with the Paramount Company I never have experienced throughout our organization such keen anticipation over any picture.

"Your editorial which I have just read had prompted me to attempt to impart to you something of what we all are feeling and living over here, so, if this letter has been unduly long you have only yourself to blame.

"Yours very truly,
(Signed) "JOHN C. FLINN."

Two Censorship Repeal Bills in Albany

UP to the present time two bills have been introduced in the New York State Legislature, now in its second week, calling for the repeal of the Motion Picture Censorship Commission. Members of the Legislature apparently realize that there is a popular demand for the repeal of the statute, and that they will be the gainers politically if able to introduce a bill which will find favor and quick passage bringing about the elimination of the obnoxious law.

The first bill was introduced by Assemblyman Cuvillier, of New York, and this was quickly followed by another almost identical in wording, introduced by Assemblyman Miller of Brooklyn, a theatrical booking agent.

Principal Pictures Takes Over King Vidor Studio

THE KING VIDOR studios in Hollywood have been sold to the Principal Pictures Corporation. Extensive alterations are being planned by the new owners. The purchase and cost of remodelling will approximate over a quarter of a million dollars, it is announced. Vidor made the sale direct with Sol Lesser, Irving M. Lesser and Michael Rosenberg, who represent Principal Pictures Corporation.

The studio covers over fifteen acres with an exceptionally valuable frontage on Santa Monica Boulevard. Provisions are being made in the plans for alterations to accommodate independent companies desiring to lease space. A complete fire department is one of the features of the big plant. A huge motor generator is also to be installed.

Principal Pictures have been heretofore headquartered at the United Studios. Three units will be set to work on the new location as soon as the studio is ready for occupancy.

Principal Pictures contemplate the making of twelve feature productions at the newly acquired plant during the coming year. The first is to be a picturization of Harold Bell Wright's "The Recreation of Brian Kent."

Ohio Exhibitors in Convention at Columbus

Sydney Cohen and Chas. Pettijohn Advise M.P.T.O. to Launch Speedy Action on Censorship

"I WOULD advise that the Ohio Motion Picture Theatre Owners submit censorship to a referendum at the earliest possible moment," was the advice given by Sydney S. Cohen, national president at the banquet of the Buckeye State exhibitors, which was held Tuesday evening at the Chittenden Hotel, Columbus. C. C. Pettijohn, who attended the convention as a representative of Will Hays, carried such a tenor in his speech when he declared that "Censorship of any form of human expression is a dangerous thing," and that "the industry is just getting its house in order."

Approximately 250 Ohio exhibitors were present for the first business session of the convention, which was held at the Chittenden Hotel, January 16 and 17. The opening session was started with a welcoming speech by Mayor Thomas on Tuesday. M. J. O'Toole, of New York, and Sidney S. Cohen, national president, were the speakers at this meeting.

At the speaker's table during the banquet sat Martin S. Smith, Ohio state president, who opened the banquet, C. C. Pettijohn, Sydney S. Cohen, M. J. O'Toole, toastmaster; Mrs. O. J. Gurwell, of the Cleveland Cinema Club, and Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh.

Other prominent members, state and national, present during the opening day were Gus Sun, Max Stearn, William M. James, W. A. True, Arthur Ryan, Sam Bullock, J. C. Dennison, John F. Kumler, Henry Eger, and H. M. Richey, Michigan.

Treasurer John F. Kumler, Toledo, informed the convention at the opening afternoon meeting that the Ohio Motion Picture Theatre Owners were at present 433 strong.

Unprecedented harmony reigned among the committees, members of which went into session at the Chittenden hotel, early Wednesday morning. The general assembly meeting was called at 11 a. m.

The nominating committee took but a few minutes to nominate back to office the entire list of state officers. Their election followed immediately at the general meeting. They are Martin S. Smith, president, Toledo; A. G. Hettersheimer, vice-president at large, Cincinnati; and the vice-presidents, William M. James, Columbus, James P. Dunley, Akron and Dave L. Schumann, Cleveland; John F. Kumler, treasurer, Toledo; A. F. Kinzeler, secretary, Dayton; and the members of the executive committee, G. H. Foster, Marion; Wesley H. Price, Norwalk; Henry Biberson, Jr., Delaware; Fred N. Tynes, Portsmouth; John F. Schwalm, Hamilton; and Joseph W. Trunk, Youngstown.

Of the resolutions suggested to the general committee, and among those which were passed was the pledging of unstinted support in every manner to the national organization in its fight to eliminate the music tax evil. A resolution was also adopted decrying the practice of distributors in selling to non-tax paying organizations films of a theatrical nature. A resolution that received hearty support and which passed quickly, was that introduced commanding exhibitors not to buy from a distributor a picture that has more than a four week protection guarantee. Appreciation of the untiring and profitable efforts of Martin S. Smith, high in its praise, was one of the first resolutions passed.

Fred Harrington, of Pittsburgh, a member of the ways and means commitee, which reported at the Wednesday afternoon closing session delivered an address that contained fire, brimstone and sulphur. His denunciation regarding the attitude taken by the majority of the members of the Ohio organization in sitting by and watching it function on little more than nothing brought happy results. Twenty minutes after he had delivered his speech, John F. Kumler read a tabulation of contributions which made the treasury richer by $2,125.

W. A. True, the later part of the Wednesday afternoon meeting explained to members present the manner in which the theatre owners' distributing corporation is being operated. Exchange men, of which there were several, were requested to leave the meeting room during the talk by Mr. True.

All in all the second annual convention held by the motion picture theatre owners of Ohio was a decided success in that there was ever present a note of harmony in the proceedings and suggestions and speeches contained much that will benefit the organization.

Late News Notes from the West Coast by Wire

A RESOLUTION was this week introduced into the Los Angeles city council for an ordinance preventing the exhibition of Arbuckle's pictures or any film "showing anyone who might have a demoralizing or degrading effect on the audience." The resolution was tabled after a short, spirited debate, but will come up for reconsideration within two weeks.

Henry McRae has organized the Oriental Cinema association with Robert Perry Kerr as co-director, Dal Clawson, cinematographer and Edward Bermundy assistant director. The party leaves for China on the "Empress of Australia" on the 18th. Exteriors will be made for a series of Oriental pictures, interiors to be made on the coast on their return.

Harry Drummond, who has been supervising Wesley Barry's vaudeville tour, has been appointed exchange representative for Warner Brothers and is now on his way to New York.

Grauman's Metropolitan theatre opens Jan. 26 with "My American Wife." Jeff Lazarus is on the coast from New York in charge of exploitation and publicity.

R. A. Walsh has been engaged to direct Douglas Fairbanks in an original story temporarily titled "The Black Pirate."

Jess Robbins has made a contract with Edward Horton for his exclusive services for a period of three years and options for additional time. By the terms of the contract Horton gives up his speaking stage work entirely, except for an Orpheum circuit tour which will be under the supervision of Robbins.

The officers of the organization who will be feted are as follows: John C. Flinn, President; Victor M. Shapiro, Vice President; Horace Judge, Treasurer; Horace D. Wiley, Secretary, and the following members of the Board of Directors: Chas. W. Barrall, Arthur Brilant, Arthur Dietz, P. A. Parsons, and Nat Rothstein.

Bronx Exhibitors Association Elects Officers

The annual election of officers of the Bronx Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, New York, was held at a regular meeting on Thursday, December 28th, 1922. The following officers were elected for 1923:

President, John J. Wittman; vice-president, John C. Bolte; executive-secretary, Henry Cole; treasurer, Henry Suchman; sergeant-at-arms, William Wilson; trustee, Morris Ginsberg. The election of Mr. Wittman marks his eleventh term as president. Henry Cole is now serving his tenth term as executive-secretary. The other officers are now in their third term in their respective offices.

The eleventh annual installation of officers and banquet of the Bronx Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association will be held at Daubert's clubrooms, Grand Concourse and Fordham Road, on Monday evening, January 22nd, 1923, at 7 p. m. Prominent city, county and judicial officials and representatives of the motion picture industry will be present.

This dinner is an annual institution and is always largely attended. The B. M. P. T. O. Association is 100 per cent representative of the Bronx motion picture theatres.

Washington Houses Asked to Improve Ventilation

Last Friday the proprietors and managers of thirteen Washington theatres were asked by Dr. William C. Fowler, District Health Officer, to take immediate steps to improve the quality and purity of the air in their amusement houses. In notifying the theatre men, Dr. Fowler said that tests in their houses had shown the carbon dioxide content of the air to be above the maximum for good air. His assistant, Dr. T. M. Price, district chemist, has completed the tests on eighteen of the theatres, including the thirteen unsatisfactory houses. Tests made last summer when the Typhoon and other systems were in use, showed only one out of eighteen to be unsatisfactory. "This time we took the tests at night, and they will continue until every theatre in Washington is visited," the doctor added.

New Hodkinson Managers at Buffalo, Pittsburgh

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation to the effect that Mr. G. R. Ainsworth becomes branch sales-manager of the Pittsburgh, Pa., branch, replacing Mr. A. W. Carrick, who has been transferred to the Buffalo branch as branch sales-manager.

Dr. Klein Talks Before Adv. Commission

Douglas D. Rothacker, of the International Advertising Clubs, head of the Screen Departmental of the National Commission and president of the Screen Advertisers Association, was one of the big figures of last week's gathering in the Hotel Washington, Washington, D. C., of the Advertising Commission.

Since the reorganization which he was asked to handle some time ago, Rothacker has devoted considerable time, effort and money to making the screen departmental a success. He now sees his efforts crowned with triumphant achievement, and is busily planning an intensive membership drive, in which he and his associates can hand-pick the membership from users and manufacturers of industrial film.

To secure better circulation and more efficient distribution, eliminate misrepresentation, and work out a better type of circulation is the kernel of Rothacker's interest in the Departmental.

Dr. Julius Klein, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, told of the advertising methods of the First National Bank of Boston in Buenos Ayres, and the service they give Americans and Argentines; of the first popcorn machines there and their success with the Latins, instantaneous, and how the place of advertising in the foreign and domestic economy of the United States was established. He showed the need of balancing distribution, sales and transport costs against the smaller items of production. He intimated that a fact finding and business data compilation unit was to be built up in the Department to aid business in planning advertising and sales campaigns. "In some sections of China," Dr. Klein said, "movies are essential to sell your article to the Chinaman. It is up to you as to whether you can stand the expense of the film. We tell you the conditions in our weekly bulletins."

Pettijohn Plans Support on Missouri Censorship

C. C. Pettijohn, in St. Louis during the week to confer with exhibitors and exchange men on the censorship situation, departed for Omaha, Neb., confident that Missouri will escape from the clutches of the reformers. He told the local film men that he had studied conditions in Jefferson City during his recent visits to that city, and is certain that a censorship bill will not pass the Missouri house and senate.

However, Missouri picture men are not sleeping on their guns. They realize that they have a fight on their hands; have mapped out a pretentious campaign and are moving forward.

Rev. Howard Billman, assistant secretary of the Church Federation of St. Louis, and others of the "blue nosed" contingent reached Jefferson City last week to start their lobbying for censorship.

A.M.P.A. Planning "Naked Truth" Dinner

The third annual "Naked Truth" dinner of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers will be held at the Hotel Biltmore Saturday evening, April 28.

This is the occasion when the advertising and publicity men in the motion picture industry play host to the film magnates. Committees are already at work preparing the dramatic bill of fare under the direction of the president of the association, John C. Flinn.

Wisconsin Exhibitors in Convention

A MID-WINTER state convention of over 300 members of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' Association was held in Milwaukee Thursday and Friday. National officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were in attendance, prominent among them being Sidney S. Cohen, A. J. Moeller, M. J. O'Toole, Wm. A. True, and W. D. Burford.

The legislative committee of the state association is preparing for activity, as the state legislature just convening will shortly take up matters concerning taxation, blue laws, and censorship. Two bills regarding censorship are now being drafted, it is understood.

Mr. F. J. McWilliams, Madison, is president of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' Association, and Wm. Baumann, Milwaukee, secretary. Headquarters for the convention are at the Hotel Wisconsin.

Free Theatres, Barbecue for Governor

For the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that all theatres were thrown open to the public free in any city or town in the world, was in Oklahoma City, Okla., January 10th, 1923, when the entire populace and visitors attending the inauguration of Hon. J. C. (Jack) Walton were the invited guests of Gov. Walton. It is estimated that 100,000 people attended the theatres and were given a free barbecue and free eats and drinks, including coffee made in the world's largest coffee pots, four in number.

Over three hundred head of cattle, including large quantities of buffalo, deer, chickens, rabbits and opossum were barbecued and given to the people, together with bread, pickles, onions and everything necessary for a square meal, and enough to last for two days, and no one denied a second helping. Open air vaudeville, carnival shows, square dances, fiddlers and a grand ball, all free, helped to proclaim the Honorable Jack Walton as the most popular Governor in the United States.

Conference Is Held on Federal Control

The national conference on federal control (CENSORSHIP) of motion pictures was held at the New York Avenue Presbyterian church in Washington Thursday. Addresses included "Possibilities of the Motion Picture," by Canon William Sheafe Chase, D. D., of the Protestant Episcopal Church; Senator Henry L. Myers of Montana on the "Need of Congressional Investigation of the Motion Picture Industry," and Reverend Clarence True Wilson, D. D., Washington, D. C., general secretary, board of public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Addresses also were delivered by Rev. Dr. H. L. Bowlby, secretary of the Presbyterian committee on Sabbath Observance, "Motion Pictures and the Sabbath"; and Rev. George J. Becker of New York, secretary American Sunday School Union, "Motion Pictures and the Sunday School"; Dr. Ellis P. Oberholzer, Pennsylvania board of censors, and Rev. Dr. Clifford Gray Twombly of the Lancaster, Pa., Protestant Episcopal church, on "Prohibition and Motion Pictures."

National Body Tells Stand Against Arbuckle

The National Committee for Better Films, which is affiliated with the National Board of Review, at the regular monthly meeting of its executive board, held January 11, formally ratified the following statement prepared by a special committee to define the position of the National Committee with reference to the Arbuckle films. The policy of the National Committee is therefore as expressed in this statement:

"The character of the private life of the motion picture actor is not usually taken into consideration by our reviewing committees, since naturally in most cases they can have little authentic information about it. When, however, offensive incidents in the life of a screen star have been so widely published that an unsavory odor has been attached in the public mind to the actor's very personality, then such incidents become an element in the moral influence of a film and can no longer be overlooked. The wave of public resentment which has greeted the suggestion that Roscoe Arbuckle be allowed to resume his occupation as a motion picture actor is evidence that this is a case in point. The National Committee for Better Films therefore will not recommend or place on its selected lists, issued to committees, exhibitors, and others, for entertainment purposes, any films with which Mr. Arbuckle is publicly identified. Although it has in the past listed many of this actor's films as being amusing and free from objectionable features, any films which have been so listed but which have not yet been publicly exhibited will be removed from our lists. The lists containing the older Arbuckle pictures already exhibited, of course, cannot be recalled."

Many Companies File for New York Business

Motion picture companies entering the business in New York state and filing papers in the Secretary of State's office during the past week show the following capitalization and directors: Lejaren Hiller Studios, Inc., $20,000, R. H. Taylor, Nutley, N. J.; M. B. Wilson, N. E. Williams, New York City; Rosehill Amusement Co., Inc., $20,000, M. Guttman, L. Guttman, Tarrytown; H. Goldstein, New York; The Playball Company, Inc., $500, Joseph Quittner, Arnold Furst, Philip Krimko, New York; Madison Producing Corporation, $500, Ira Funkenstein, B. J. Longstreet, M. Kelly, New York; Efde Corporation, $500, Anne Eichel, M. Elkin, L. I. Fink, New York; Corinne Griffith Productions, $1,000, Edward Small, C. R. Rogers, Edward Mackay, New York; Harry Lyons Realty Corporation, $10,000, L. C. Whiton, Florence Block, Pauline Berger, New York; Miracle Theatre Corporation, $10,000, Joseph and Abraham Jame, D. Goldstein, New York.

Film Players' Club Holds Annual Bal Masque

This week at Terrace Garden, New York City, the sixth annual bal masque of the Film Players' Club, Inc., took place. This affair had been looked forward to for some time and was a bigger and better event than any of the five preceding years.

The club is trying to establish a fund to furnish their new quarters at 110 West 44th street, also a benevolent fund to help motion picture players who through sickness or other causes have met with reverses.

Paramount Closes Contract for Zane Grey Novels

THE current and future works of Zane Grey, the prominent author of Western novels, are to be produced as Paramount pictures. This announcement was made at Hollywood Tuesday by Jesse L. Lasky, who stated that under the contract just signed Mr. Grey will collaborate actively in the screen production of his stories.

The first picture to be produced will be "To the Last Man," the author's latest work, and will be directed by Victor Fleming, Mr. Lasky said. This will be followed by "The Heritage of the Desert" and "The Wanderer of the Wasteland."

Mr. Grey will work hand in hand with Lucien Hubbard, one of the production advisory editors at the Lasky studio and Mr. Hubbard will collaborate with Doris Schroeder in writing the continuities.

It is planned to produce the Zane Grey pictures on their exact locations, the first in Arizona, the second in Utah, and so on. The production of "To the Last Man" will be started early in the Spring.

Release Dates Set for Two Fox Specials

Announcement of release dates for "The Net" and "Does It Pay?," two special productions on the newly announced 1923 program of Fox Film Corporation, were made this week at the New York headquarters of the organization.

The dates are: "The Net" February 25, and "Does It Pay?" March 4.

J. Gordon Edwards, who directed "Nero," the Fox special of last year, is now in Florida screening the final scenes of "The Net" which is an adaptation of Maravene Thompson's emotional drama that has to its credit a long and successful engagement on Broadway.

The cast includes such names as Barbara Castleton, Raymond Bloomer, Albert Roscoe, Peggy Davis, Arthur Gordoni, and Claire De Lores.

"Does It Pay?" features Hope Hampton and was directed by Charles Horan. Among the members of the cast in addition to Miss Hampton, are: Robert T. Haines, Florence Short, Walter Petri, Peggy Shaw, Charles Wellesley, Mary Thurman, Claude Brooks, Querre Gendron, Marie Shotwell, and Bunny Grauer.

F.B.O. Buys Broadway Stage Success

Emil Offeman, production manager at the R-C Studios in Los Angeles announces two further purchases of screen material, effected with the cooperation of the Eastern Scenario Department, headed by John Brownell. This makes a total of eight new stories acquired by the Film Booking Offices of America in the period of three months.

For the first time since the organization of the Film Booking Offices, a successful Broadway stage play has been bought for screen interpretation. The play is "Lights Out," a comedy-drama by Mann Page and Paul Dickey which was produced recently at the Vanderbilt theatre.

The second recent purchase of F. B. O. is "Knight of the Range" by William Wallace, a unique Western story which appeared as a novelette in Top Notch magazine.

Scenes from the Cosmopolitan production "The Enemies of Women," directed by Allan Crosland, with Lionel Barrymore, Wm. H. Thompson and Pedro Cordoba in the leading male roles.

Universal Plans Sales Cabinet

Sales Chiefs Located in Territories to Have Final Say on All Contracts

PLANS for the most far-reaching sales reorganization ever undertaken by the Universal Pictures Corporation, and which may establish precedents in the motion picture industry, have been drawn up by Carl Laemmle, president of that company, and will soon be put into effect. The new policies are promised to be epoch-making in furthering closer relationship with Universal's exhibitor patrons.

In the first place, according to a statement just issued from the Universal home office, Universal sales affairs hereafter will be regulated by a sales cabinet, to consist of Art Schmidt, general sales manager, and a group of assistant sales managers. This cabinet will have four regular meetings a year and will operate exactly as an important political cabinet, in handling and passing upon the sales policies of Universal.

The assistant sales managers will not be stationed in New York but each will have a territory or division in which he is the supreme sales head. Each division will include a number of Universal's branch exchanges for which the assistant sales manager of that territory will be responsible. These men will, in a way, take the home offices to the door of every exhibitor.

As officials of the Universal home offices, it will be their chief duty to maintain constant touch with all exhibitors in their territories, by personal contact, and to get first hand information and suggestions that will help Universal to make the right kind of pictures and to provide the best possible distribution service.

The most striking feature of this system will be the fact that the assistant sales managers will have the final power to pass upon contracts in their respective territories. This means the saving of much time and money, both to Universal and to the individual exhibitors, and also will mean a vast increase of good-will between exhibitors and the Universal sales force in the field.

The Universal chief is now prepared to take definite steps to avoid a situation where contracts have to be passed upon by the home office, whatever may be the facilities of the home office for keeping in touch with the field. It is felt that a territorial manager, constantly in touch with the exhibitors and conditions of his territory, and at the same time in full knowledge of national policies, is the logical man to determine the fitness of any contract made in his territory.

Lichtman Offers Dr. Coue Picture Contract

Al Lichtman, president of the Al Lichtman Corporation and vice-president of Preferred Pictures, Inc., has written a letter to Dr. Emile Coue, originator of the Coue system of self-healing and self-control, in which he offers the noted savant $5,000 a week to appear in a motion picture.

After receiving the letter, Dr. Coue was quoted by the New York newspapers as saying that he had the offer under consideration and that if he did accept it the money would be turned over to his clinics in New York. Incidentally, it developed that Coue is a motion picture "fan."

Should Film Vary from Its Source?

Carl Laemmle Says "Yes" and Defends Practice as Needed for Screen Technique

CRITICISMS leveled at the screen adaptation of Booth Tarkington's book "The Flirt" because the screen version varied from the literary work, has brought a response from Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation. The response has taken the form of a letter addressed to photoplay editors and reviewers all over the country.

Mr. Laemmle defends the practice of introducing changes in the film adaptation of a book or a play as a necessary factor to produce suitable screen entertainment. Moreover, he forecasts variations from the original that will be incorporated in the coming picturization of Victor Hugo's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and offers the following explanation:

Victor Hugo wrote "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for an age "which licked up red meat. So he packed his story full of lust and blood and thunder, and gruesome, grisly, ghoulish, to say nothing of gory, stuff."

The public today "still likes dripping red meat in its literature and even on its stage but not on its screen." The problem to be faced is to make a motion picture which will not be offensive, which will conform with today's screen taste, and which at the same time will "retain all the power and virility of Hugo's masterpiece." To realize this objective, if the story is to be screened at all—and it will be—departures must be made from the original. "It is better to present a classic in a palatable form than in an undigestible mass."

Mr. Laemmle continues as follows:

"It is high time that intelligent people recognized the fact that the art of the screen is distinct in itself, and that it has its own technique. There are very few books, and fewer plays which can be translated to the screen in the exact form in which they originally appear. The only two stage plays which I can recall to mind at this moment which were absolutely suited to exact screen treatment were 'The Storm,' and '23½ Hours Leave.'

"This seldom occurs, however. If books and plays were screened exactly as they are written or acted, the result would be a lot of piffle which nobody could keep awake through.

"The sooner reviewers and the public at large realize that a perfect picture is the sole end of the screen art, just as a perfect painting, a perfect melody, book or play are the ends of other various arts, the less carping criticism there will be over inconsequentials and the more enjoyment there will be over screen achievement.

"Let me cite a specific instance of great import. Shakespeare adapted many of his plays from other men's plots—from plays and stories which in some instances were well known to Shakespeare's contemporaries. Did this make Shakespeare's plays any less perfect or popular? Did it keep his plays from being recognized as outstanding examples of stage craftsmanship?

"Then why should the craftsmen of the screen—a new art—be howled down for treating material in the way necessary for the production of perfect pictures?

"I, for one, am going to stand on my rights as a screen producer—and make pictures according to screen principles—pictures that will please and entertain screengoers—not pictures to cater to the quibblings of minutia mumblers."

Strongheart to Feature in London's "White Fang"

"White Fang," one of Jack London's best-known stories, has been selected by Jane Murfin and Lawrence Trimble as the next story in which the dog Strongheart will be featured. "White Fang" will be a First National release. Director Trimble has already begun "shooting" in Bamff, Canada. An added attraction in the new production will be the appearance of "Lady Julie," bought by Mr. Trimble and Miss Murfin from Bruno Hoffman of the Princeton Kennels, White Plains, N. Y., at a cost reported at $8,000. "Lady Julie" captured every prize in her class at the recent dog show in Rye, N. Y.

Scenes from "The Bohemian Girl," an American Releasing Corporation offering. Produced by Harley Knowles.

Scenes from "Hunting Big Game in Africa."

"Wandering Daughters" Is Young Assignment

"Wandering Daughters," Dana Burnett's story, published in Cosmopolitan Magazine, will be Director James Young's initial picture for First National release. The deal for the story was made through the courtesy of Arthur Jacobs and Frank Borzage, now associated in their own productions.

Mr. Borzage was the director of "Humoresque" and other notable successes. Sam Rork represented Mr. Young. The announcement of the deal was made through the offices of Associated First National. "Wandering Daughters" will be made at the United Studios at Hollywood.

Director Young will make a series of James Young Productions for First National. However, after he has finished "Wandering Daughters" he will return to the Richard Walton Tully fold and direct "Trilby" for Mr. Tully.

Fox's Releases for Week of January 15th

FOX FILM CORPORATION releases for the week of January 15 include a William Russell feature, an Al St. John special two-reel comedy, a Sunshine Comedy and a Mutt and Jeff cartoon.

"Man's Size" is the title of the William Russell production which is a story of the Canadian Rockies. George Schneiderman, the cameraman, is said to have incorporated many shots of rare scenic beauty in the filming of the story. Howard M. Mitchell is the director, and Alma Bennett plays the feminine lead opposite the robust star. Others in the cast are Stanton Heck, Charles K. French, James Gordon and Evelyn Selbie. The story is by William McLeod Raine, and Joseph Franklin Poland is credited with the adaptation.

Al St. John appears in comedy, "Young and Dumb," which is declared to be one of the finest bits of fun-making on the actor's record.

"The Wise Cracker" is the Sunshine Comedy, and "Down in Dixie" is the title of the reel that exploits the capers of Bud Fisher's pen and ink comedians, Mutt and Jeff.

M. P. Salesmen Elect Phil E. Meyer President

AT a meeting of the Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc., held last Saturday at Hotel Astor, New York, Phil E. Meyer, of the New York sales branch of Associated Exhibitors, was elected president for the coming year.

The organization, which is maintained for social and benevolent purposes, is composed of practically all the picture salesmen in the metropolitan area, including Greater New York, Northern New Jersey and Western Connecticut. There are now about 175 names on the membership roll. Mr. Meyer is one of the best known salesmen in the country. Motion Picture Salesmen, Inc.,, voted also to hold their annual dinner at the Hotel Commodore, February 17.

Anthony Paul Kelly to Do Script for Meighan

Anthony Paul Kelly, author of "Three Faces East," the dramatic success of three seasons ago, has been engaged to write the continuity for "White Heat," the story which was written for Thomas Meighan by R. G. Kirk, the Saturday Evening Post writer of dramatic tales laid in steel mills.

"White Heat" will follow the completion of "The Ne'er-do-well," on which he is now working in Panama under the direction of Alfred E. Green.

Change of Title for Ruth Roland's New Serial

Pathe announces change of the title of Ruth Roland's next serial release from "The Riddle of the Range" to "Haunted Valley." The Roland serial is scheduled to follow "Plunder" with Pearl White which will be released on January 28.

Goldwyn Announces Policy Change

Unit System to Be Installed to Give Free Rein to Leading Directors

AN important change in production policy was announced this week by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Hereafter the unit system will be employed in making the big feature pictures to which the company has committed itself.

Each director will have his own staff and will be given every facility in putting into his productions his own individuality and personality. He will have the cooperation of the department heads of the Culver City studio, but each unit will be separate unto itself.

The announcement was made by Abraham Lehr, vice-president in charge of production, following conferences with President F. J. Godsol and Vice-President Edward Bowes, both of whom have just returned to New York after spending several weeks at the studio.

"Great motion pictures cannot be made by the factory system," said Mr. Lehr. "We have on our directorial staff men of outstanding accomplishment. Their ability is unique and individual, and we mean to give full play to their special gifts."

Marshall Neilan recently transferred his whole staff to the Goldwyn studios and is releasing his pictures through that company. The personnel consists of Frank Urson, associate director; Leeds Baxter, business manager; Tom Held, assistant director; David Kesson, chief cinematographer; and D. J. Gray, film editor. Howard Higgins has just been engaged as production manager. Mr. Neilan is now producing "The Eternal Three," an original story from his own pen.

Eric von Stroheim, who recently signed a long-term contract with Goldwyn, will have Ernest Traxler as production manager and Ben Reynolds as first cameraman. Mr. von Stroheim is now in San Francisco writing the scenario for Frank Norris' great novel, "McTeague," which will be his first picture under his new affiliation.

Rupert Hughes is now writing, directing, titling, and editing his own productions.

Under his new long-term Goldwyn contract, King Vidor will make a series of special productions, the first of which will be adapted from the famous stage play, "Three Wise Fools."

Clarence Badger, specially engaged to direct "Red Lights," will have Charles Hunt for production manager.

Great interest attaches to Goldwyn's mammoth production of "Ben-Hur." June Mathis, editorial director of the studios, is putting the finishing touches on the scenario for Gen. Lew Wallace's immortal story.

Katherine Hilliker and H. H. Caldwell, who were recently placed under contract as associate and title editors, are editing and titling "Mad Love," a stupendous production starring the dashing Pola Negri in the role of a seductive siren. The photoplay was written by Dimitri Buchowetzky, a Pole.

Bob Wagner Made Director For Paramount

BOB WAGNER, noted American humorist and author of numerous stories and articles based on studio life; artist and once mechanical engineer and for the past year a member of the Titling department at the Lasky studio is to be a Paramount director, according to an announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky at Hollywood. His first picture will be from an original story by Walter Woods, and Walter Hiers will star in it. Work will start March 25 and meanwhile Hiers will make another picture, "Seventy-Five Cents An Hour."

The quality that Rob Wagner hopes to introduce into his pictures is one of whimsical humor. It's the way I look at life," he observes, "from the side lines, as it were. This quality of whimsical humor in photoplay it seems to me ought to prove a welcome note. I do not expect to create roars of cataclysmic mirth, but hope to make the audiences purr, so to speak, throughout the length of the picture.

Belasco Indentified with Industry

Great Producer Will Aid Warner Bros. in Screen Productions of Stage Successes

DAVID BELASCO has at last been induced to enter the picture industry. After numerous attempts on the part of producers to secure co-operation of the foremost of all theatrical producers in the making of motion pictures it remained for the progressive Warner Brothers to conclude the deal.

This announcement was made from the Warner offices at the end of last week. With it came the announcement that three of the Belasco stage successes would be produced by Warner Brothers. They are "The Gold Diggers," by Avery Hopwood, which enjoyed one of the longest runs on record along Broadway; "Debureau," by Sacha Guitry, in which Lionel Atwill enjoyed a long, successful Broadway run, and "Daddies," by Lessing Hubble, also a past hit on Broadway.

It is understood that an advance royalty of $250,000 in addition to a percentage arrangement on the profits of the productions concluded the deal.

The arrangement personally identifies Mr. Belasco with the picture industry for, according to Abe Warner, the famous producer will have supervision of the selection of the casts, will aid in the preparation of the scenarios, will suggest in the cutting and titling and place his stamp of approval on the finished productions.

Warner Brothers will produce the three plays at their West Coast studios and in all likelihood Mr. Belasco will go to Los Angeles the latter part of this year to supervise the making of the pictures, though the latter is not an assured fact.

Abe Warner, when seen at the Warner offices in New York City, had the following to say regarding the Belasco deal:

"We feel that in closing this deal with Mr. Belasco we have accomplished a great achievement and one of which we are very proud. Mr. Belasco has assured us that he is as anxious as we are that these three plays when produced on the screen be as great successes as they were on the stage.

"The money involved is not a serious consideration with Mr. Belasco. He thinks more of the art and the proper dramatic touch and there is no one better qualified to see that just the proper dramatic appeal is transposed to the screen.

"Unfortunately, Mr. Belasco cannot give all of his time to the production of these pictures, but by the time he has supervised the preparation of the scenario, the cutting and titling and the securing of proper equipment these will virtually be Belasco productions.

"We intend to follow every suggestion made by Mr. Belasco just as far as possible and we further intend that no expense shall be spared in the making of these pictures. We are not in a position to say yet just what stars will appear in the productions, but we hope where possible to secure the services of those who helped make them tremendous stage successes."

"The Gold Diggers" is the first play scheduled for production and from present indications it will be completed and released next fall. "Debereau" and "Daddies" will follow in the order named.

Goldwyn Buys "Captain of Souls"

Edgar Wallace's "Captain of Souls" has been purchased for screen production by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. It is a novel for the occult with a vein of mystery shot through it and should make ideal screen material. It is far different from the ordinary novel and Goldwyn expects to make of it one of the most unusual pictures ever produced.

Scenes from Warner Brothers' new offering "Little Church Around the Corner."

Scenes at top and bottom from "Carmen, Jr.," starring Baby Peggy. The center view shows the tiny star as she appears in the Century comedy, "Sweetie."

"The Bohemian Girl" Will Tour the Dominion

Basil Horsfall, Canadian operatic impresario, has entered into an arrangement with American Releasing Corporation whereby he will present Harley Knoles' production of "The Bohemian Girl" in conjunction with a presentation of the opera from which the picture is taken.

For this purpose he is organizing a company of singers who will enact the principal scenes to give way, at intervals, to the motion picture in the same manner popularized by George Beban and "The Sign of the Rose." The company will tour the Dominion.

Two Paramount Releases Due January 22

PARAMOUNT will release two pictures on January 22, Jack Holt in "Making A Man," and Alice Brady in "Missing Millions." Oddly enough, both pictures were directed by the same man, Joseph Henabery, and both scenarios were written by Albert Shelby LeVino.

"Making A Man" is from an original story by Peter B. Kyne and is the second of that author's tales in which Jack Holt has been starred during the past year.

Eva Novak plays opposite Holt, while Bert Woodruff, Frank Nelson, Robert Dudley, J. P. Lockney and Kalla Pasha are in the cast.

"Missing Millions," which is Alice Brady's second picture of the current season is an adaptation of one of Jack Boyle's Boston Blackie stories and is a crook melodrama. Miss Brady plays the part of the crook heroine and David Powell has the role of "Boston Blackie," her partner. The cast includes Frank Losee and William B. Mack.

Private N. Y. Showing for "The Christian"

THE world premiere of Goldwyn's screen version of Sir Hall Caine's famous novel, "The Christian," produced by Maurice Tourneur, will be held at the Capitol theatre, New York, before an invited audience on Tuesday morning, January 23 at 10.15 o'clock. "The Christian" will be shown with a Rothafel presentation.

Interest in this photoplay on the part of exhibitors is said to be unusually keen and many of them will be present at the invitation showing, not only from the territory served by the New York exchange but from the territory embraced in surrounding branch exchanges.

Canada Firm to Handle Lichtman Specials

Al Lichtman, President of Al Lichtman Corporation, which handles the output of Preferred Pictures, Inc., announces that Famous Players of Canada have closed a deal by which they will handle four of the Preferred specials. These are "Shadows," "The Hero," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" and "Are You a Failure?"

The Dominion Films, through the Famous Players of Canada, is now handling "Rich Men's Wives" in the Canadian territory. "Shadows" will be released in Canada within the next two weeks.

"Her Reputation" Rapidly Nearing Completion

Production is progressing rapidly toward completion at the Thomas H. Ince Studios, Culver City, California, on the picture, "Her Reputation." The leading role in this story of newspaper life is portrayed by May McAvoy, supported by Cullen Landis. The production is made from an original story by Bradley King, under the direction of John Griffith Wray.

Scenes from "The Love Nest," starring Richard Travers and Jean Scott, a Producers Security release.

Scenes from the forthcoming Selznick production, "The Common Law," from the story by Robert W. Chambers. Co-stars Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle and Elliott Dexter will be seen

Conditions Abroad Are Improving

First National Foreign Manager Says Big American Specials Are in Demand

E. BRUCE JOHNSON, foreign manager for Associated First National, who has just returned from a three months' trip in Great Britain and the continent, reports picture conditions improving in all countries except the Central Empires. This, he declares, is particularly true of the market for American screen product.

"The backbone has fallen out of Italian and German production," says Mr. Johnson. "Exhibitors who have been depending on cheap German and Italian pictures have found that they must have the high-class American production despite the higher cost of such productions. But it is only the high-class pictures that are being demanded. Ordinary American screen plays are lucky to get by because foreign countries can usually supply ordinary pictures from their own market. But with the super productions made in America the exhibitors can afford to pay a price commensurate with the production costs because the people in foreign countries are as anxious to see such pictures as are our own.

"In Scandinavia, Italy, France the local producer has an advantage over us because the theatres will take in more money with the ordinary home product than it will with the ordinary American production, and the local picture cost only about $10,000 to produce.

"Italy shows a marked improvement in all lines of trade since the Fanscisti movement has brought into power some of the best men in Italy, and pictures are getting and will continue to get their share of the general improvement.

"England is doing well. The exhibition of pictures has improved greatly and exploitation is now being done along the lines in vogue here. Some very nice theatres have been built in the suburbs of London and other cities."

"Souls for Sale" Will Have Star Cast

Rupert Hughes is going to have an all-star cast in "Souls for Sale," his next Goldwyn picture. Here is the list: Richard Dix, Frank Mayo, Lew Cody, Mae Busch and Barbara La Marr. And the leading feminine role will be played by Eleanor Boardman.

Highly interesting is the announcement that Mayo, who has been a Universal star for three and a half years, is about to finish his contract. This made it possible for him to accept the engagement with Goldwyn in the screen version of one of the most widely read novels of the year.

Dist. Managers to Sit in With Home-Office Staff

WITH a view to improving the efficient relations between the home office and the field forces, each of the First National district managers will spend at least a month at the New York headquarters, familiarizing himself with the work of the various distribution departments, assisting in the administrative and sales promotion work, and suggesting improvements that may occur to him from the angle of the man in the field. The plan is to be put into effect at once by F. M. Brockell, manager of distribution for Associated First National Pictures.

H. A. Bundy, of the Central District, will be the first district manager called to New York under the new plan.

Sees Our Films in France Waning

Westerns Lapsing Especially, States Official of Goldwyn's French Agent

SOME interesting lights on conditions in the French motion picture field, especially with respect to American-made screen productions were revealed this week by Jacques Edelsten, general manager of the Film Erka, which distributes the Goldwyn product in France. The French visitor is at present in New York on a business trip. M. Edelsten's observations were presented in a statement from the Goldwyn home office. That American motion pictures have lost some of their former popularity, the westerns falling off especially; and that American producers would find it to their advantage to film literary and dramatic works with which the peoples of Latin extraction are familiar—were two of the points made by M. Edelsten. He also declared that 400 picture houses in France are now closed due to the excessive government tax, which ranges from 46 to 51 per cent., and that French theatre managers and exhibitors are seriously contemplating closing every amusement house in France sometime in February as a measure of protest. The statement from the Goldwyn home office follows:

"American films are not as popular in France at present as they were a few years ago, according to M. Edelsten; our Western pictures have fallen off decidedly in the past six or eight months. What the French, and particularly the Parisian, public wants is films which tell sentimental stories—such as 'Madame X,' with Pauline Frederick, which has been one of the biggest American successes in France and all over Europe. 'The Old Nest' and 'The Penalty' have also scored in France as have 'The Woman and the Puppet.'

"Thirty per cent. of American photoplays are not shown at all in France," according to M. Edelsten, "because American films are made for home consumption and not for the Latin field in Europe. If American producers want a big and increasing demand for their product in France they must make a higher grade product than they have been doing in the past pictures that appeal to the intelligence as well as to the emotions," he declares. "A fertile field for American pictures in France," according to Mr. Edelsten, is the filming of novels, plays and stories with which Frenchmen and other peoples of Latin extraction are familiar. The American version of 'Monte Cristo,' 'Orphans of the Storm,' 'The Three Musketeers,' 'Les Miserables,' etc., all enjoyed wide popularity in France. Four hundred motion picture theatres in France are now closed because of the government tax of from 46 to 51 per cent. It is planned to close every picture theatre, music hall and regular theatre in France, sometime during February," Mr. Edelsten stated, "as a protest against the confiscatory tax.

"France is much agitated against German films, and a movement is on foot for a law to prevent the importation of any films made in Germany."

Norma Talmadge's Support in "Within the Law"

Jack Mulhall, Lew Cody, Eileen Percy, Joseph Kilgour, Helen Ferguson, Tom Ricketts, Warde Crane and De Witt Jennings are among those who have been selected to support Norma Talmadge in "Within the Law," which this popular star has begun making on the Coast under the direction of Frank Lloyd for First National release.

Jack Mulhall will have the leading role opposite Miss Talmadge. Lew Cody will play the part of Joe Garson. Eileen Percy will appear as "Aggie Lynch." Kilgour will be "Edward Gilder." Tom Ricketts will be "General Hastings," and De Witt Jennings will be "Burke." Both Jennings and Ricketts were in the stage production. Frank Ormstrom is engaged as art director.

Balaban and Katz Buy Goldwyn Pictures

Balaban and Katz have bought for Chicago Goldwyn's two new productions, "The Christian," produced by Maurice Tourneur, and "The Strangers' Banquet," Marshall Neilan's first picture made in association with Goldwyn.

The first run of these two pictures in Chicago will be at the Balaban & Katz Chicago theatre. James R. Grainger, who is in that city on his swing about the Goldwyn branch exchanges, has closed the deal and telegraphed its conclusion to the home office.

The play date for "The Strangers' Banquet" at the Chicago theatre will be either February 12 or 19, while "The Christian" will be screened at that house on March 12.

New Lichtman Franchise Holder in Denver

Announcement has just been made by Al Lichtman that Harry T. Nolan, of Denver, has become a franchise holder in the Al Lichtman Corporation and will handle the product of Preferred Pictures, Inc., of which B. P. Schulberg is president.

Mr. Nolan has taken charge of the Denver territory for the Lichtman Corporation, succeeding E. J. Drucker. He has been in the motion picture business for sixteen years.

"A Pauper Millionaire" Is Set for Feb. 11th Issue

Playgoers Pictures announces for release on February 11th "A Pauper Millionaire," which is described as "a rollicking light drama" with a highly original plot and some appealing situations.

Jackie Coogan Signs with Metro

Child Star's Distributing Alliance Definitely Settled; Terms Announced

JACKIE COOGAN'S future productions will be distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation. A definite announcement to this effect was made early this week by the Metro home-office in New York, thus setting at rest last week's conflicting reports of alliances on the part of the child-star with various important distributing companies. The most emphatic of these reports had Jackie lined up with United Artists, but later word from the coast received after going to press conveyed a denial of this statement. MOTION PICTURE NEWS' coast representative sends the following wire in confirmation of the announcement from the Metro headquarters in New York:

Jackie Coogan, who becomes a Metro star

"Jackie Coogan's father and mother have signed with Joseph Schenck and Metro for four productions. Consideration announced as five hundred thousand dollars cash bonus for signing and split of sixty-forty on gross bookings. Father leaves for New York this week to complete arrangements for story."

The statement issued by the Metro home-office this week reads in part as follows:

"Metro has emerged the victor in the most spirited and stubborn bidding contest the motion picture industry has ever known to be held for the services of a star. Jackie Coogan has been signed.

"For some time within photoplay circles there have been constant reports of new affiliations for the boy star. When it was learned that his present contracts had expired, practically every photoplay company of any standing presented unusually attractive offers.

"Unlimited possibilities are presented to the child star through his affiliation with Metro. The company that at the present time releases motion pictures of the importance of the Rex Ingram productions as well as those of Fred Niblo and Reginald Barker, has ample resources to surround the talented star with a complete staff and equipment.

"No director has yet been engaged to take charge of Coogan's forthcoming productions, although it is known that several of the most prominent men who are by experience qualified to assume responsibility for the unique actor's films are at the present time being considered.

"Jackie Coogan's popularity in the screen world has been one of the most amazingly rapid and successful careers of any star in motion pictures. Comparatively unknown at the time, he appeared with Charlie Chaplin in 'The Kid' and his work was commented upon at even greater length than that of the more illustrious Chaplin. His remarkable pantomimic ability and his unusual intelligence won for him the greatest popular favor. The promise that was so fully evidenced in his first important production has since been augmented. 'Peck's Bad Boy,' 'Trouble,' and 'Oliver Twist'—the latter his most recently released production—have won for him a place in the affections of photoplay patrons that is truly unique."

May McAvoy Queen in Pasadena Fete

At the recent annual Tournament of Roses in Pasadena, Cal., May McAvoy, Paramount star, was honored by being elected Queen of the Motion Picture Industry and given the throne on a beautiful float representing Hollywood.

Among the many beautiful floats, some valued at nearly ten thousand dollars, that representing Hollywood won fourth prize. Simplicity was embraced in the motion picture entry. In front of Miss McAvoy two tiny picture tots, Billy Lord and Baby Peggy, posed as cameraman and actress, respectively.

Scenes from "Truston King," the George Barr McCutcheon story, directed by Jerome Storm, starring John Gilbert, produced by Fox.

Pugilistic bouts in "The Champeen," one of the "Our Gang" series, Pathe.

W. J. German on 5-Weeks' Trip to West Coast

W. J. German, general manager for Jules E. Brulatour, has left for the coast on a combination business and pleasure trip to cover a period of five weeks. He will make his headquarters at Mr. Brulatour's West Coast branch, at 6700 Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood. He will be accompanied by George Blair of the Eastman Company.

Fairbanks Will Use Color Photography in Next

Color photography will be employed in Douglas Fairbanks' forthcoming pirate photoplay, which is scheduled to be put into production very shortly. Two different processes are now being investigated for the purpose. No vivid colors will be used, reds and greens appearing only in relative colors, declares Fairbanks, who explains the departure from black and white photography as follows:

"My reason for deciding to use color photopography is simplicity itself. All the pirate pictures I ever have seen were disappointing because they were in black and white, while color is the very theme and flavor of piracy. We had hardly begun our research for production when it came to me that the picture absolutely demands color."

Arrow Installs Exhibitor Service Department

Arrow Exchanges, Inc., of New York, announces an innovation in the way of an exhibitors' service department. Not only aids and accessories but entire publicity campaigns are to be handled by the new department. Harry Thomas, general manager of the exchange, has appointed R. J. Deursen to take charge of the new department. Mr. Deursen was formerly with the Fox theatrical circuit.

Charles Giblyn Back from Location in Holland

Charles Giblyn, director of "The Hypocrites," has returned from Holland where he spent the past two months in making this film in which Wyndham Standing is starred.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

Around the Exchanges

W. F. WENDELL has taken over Universal's booking department and the short service department, which he has been handling, will be managed by Mr. Neilson in addition to his present duties. Mr. Wendell had many years experience as booker with Paramount and is popular with exhibitors throughout the Chicago territory. Raymond Eddy, assistant to Publicity Director Hill, of Universal's Chicago exchange, has been promoted to salesman and will cover northern Illinois territory. The Universal's employes are planning a banquet and dance, which will be held at the Hotel La Salle on February 3rd. This event will mark the first anniversary of the local exchange's aid society.

A trade review of Priscilla Dean's newest feature, "The Flame of Life," taken from Frances Hodgson Burnett's "That Lass O' Lowries," was held at the Universal projection room this week. Miss Dean is well cast in this picture, one of the important Universal releases.

I. L. Lesserman, of Universal, reports that "The Flirt" is going over big throughout the country territory, all key center houses having booked this feature. The first of them will start playing it next week.

Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiteer, donned his heaviest heavies, borrowed a fur overcoat and departed for Duluth this week in answer to an emergency call for aid in putting over "When Knighthood Was In Flower," which opens in the northern city next week.

Sam Shurman, sales manager of Goldwyn's Chicago exchange, has been named manager of the new Milwaukee exchange which this company will open on January 28th, temporary headquarters having been secured in the Toy Building. Rube Leventhal will be booker of the new exchange.

J. J. Clark is a new member of American Releasing Corporation's sales staff and will cover country territory. Mr. Clark has been associated with Paramount's Milwaukee exchange as a salesman. Miss Elsie Waddell is another addition to the American staff, having taken over the duties of booker. She is well known in Chicago film circles, having been connected with the Educational exchange for some time past.

Frank Young now is covering city territory for Goldwyn, H. E. Schottemueller, country territory, and Ira Firman has arrived from New York to take over the position of sales manager, made vacant by the promotion of Sam Shurman.

Jimmy Grainger, vice-president and general manager of Goldwyn Pictures, stopped over in Chicago en route from the coast to his home office in New York and while here addressed a meeting of salesmen. From Chicago, Mr. Grainger went to Detroit and was to be in New York early this week. M. N. Gottlieb, manager of this company's Minneapolis exchange, was in Chicago for a conference with Mr. Grainger and accompanied him to Detroit.

Vice-President Jack Leo, of Fox, accompanied by his family and party of friends, stopped over in Chicago Monday, en route from New York to the west coast studios of his company, where he will remain for some weeks.

Matt Cavanaugh, assistant manager of Fox, journeyed to Boston, Mass., this week, where he will be one of the principals in a marriage ceremony. Congratulations, Matt.

Among the Trade

S. S. HUTCHINSON, of American Film Company, is due back at his Chicago headquarters this week after a brief visit to London, England.

135,182 persons saw "Broken Chains" the week it played at the Chicago theatre, according to Publicist Nealand of Goldwyn. The popularity of the picture was also proved by the fact that the attendance on closing day at the Chicago was 20,058.

W. D. Burford and John A. Silha attended the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, which was held at Columbus, Ohio, this week. Sidney Cohen and a number of national officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were on the list of speakers at this meeting.

At a meeting between theatre owners and officials of the Motion Picture Operator's Union on January 10th, a new wage scale was entered into for the year ending January 10th, 1924. The theatre owners granted the operators a wage increase of three dollars a week, which brings the new scale to $52.50 in the outlying theatres and $83.00 per week in the de luxe houses. According to Thomas J. Reynolds, president of the union, the latest increase makes the Chicago motion picture theatre operators the highest paid in the country. The agreement does not cover working conditions and demands of the operators for change in these conditions will be taken up later, the agreement on the wages having been arrived at just in time to prevent a threatened strike of the operators on the night of the expiration of the former agreement, January 10th. Among those present when the new wage scale was agreed upon was the committee of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, including Samuel Abrahams, L. Siegel, M. Siegel, Sydney Selig and Jake Cooper, as well as representatives of the large circuits, including Sam Katz, Barney Balaban, Nate Ascher, Aaron Jones and Fred Schaefer, and the following members of the union, Thomas J. Reynolds, president; Thomas E. Malloy, business agent; Hal Johnstone, J. W. Sloneker and Frank H. Clifford.

E. M. Carrol has purchased the Star Theatre at Willow Grove, Illinois, from C. Morrison.

C. F. Shere has opened the Opera House at Tampico, Illinois, which he will operate as a motion picture theatre.

C. A. Burlingame has leased the 250 seat Tolleston Theatre at Gary, Indiana, which has been closed for some time past. Mr. Burlingame is a well known theatre owner but has been out of active business since last fall when he sold his South Bend theatre.

Don Lee, of Biggsville, has taken over the Alamo Theatre at Dixon, Illinois.

The Avon at Decatur, one of the theatres operated by Harry Grampp, recently broke all house records with "The Hottentot," the laugh getting feature comedy released by First National.

The 2,700 seat Tivoli Theatre at Michigan City, is rapidly nearing completion and it is planned by Wallestein Brothers to open it about February 1st. The new theatre, it is said, will be one of the handsomest, best equipped and furnished houses in the state.

Brunhild & Young are planning a handsome and large theatre, which will be added to their string of houses, which now includes the Shakespeare, Rogers, New Era and Emmett Theatres, by the end of the year. A 100 x 175 foot site at 6906-16 North Clark Street, was purchased last week by Attorney Leo L. Brunhild, a member of the firm, from Joseph A. Golde, Maurice and Ralph Goldberg and Architect Henry L. Newhouse has been retained to design a theatre of more than twenty-five hundred seats, which will be built on this location. The present leases on the property expire next September, but it is the hope of Brunhild & Young that these leases may be abrogated so that work may start on their big house before that date. It is understood that Managing Director Julius Lamm will personally manage the new house when it is completed.

Grace Cunard, who has finished her work depicting life at Moosehart, is rehearsing for a vaudeville act with which she intends to go on a tour shortly. Miss Cunard expects to return to moving pictures later in the season.

Manager Delly of the Edward Theatre, 2419 Wentworth Avenue, has sold his house to Sam Levine, owner of the Crystal Theatre on 63rd Street. The Edward is a three hundred seat house.

Will Hirschberg has purchased the Rainbow, formerly the Leida Theatre, in Pullman. Mr. Hirschberg is also owner of the Orchard Theatre.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Kick In—
A box office knock-out. Packed with thrills and capably acted. Excellent business despite bad weather. (East.)

A Daughter of Luxury—

Back Home and Broke—
A real attraction. 100% entertainment value. Everybody liked it. Full house every performance. Meighan a great favorite. (Middle West.)

Went over great, playing to big houses all week. (Middle West.)

Thirty Days—
Everyone having a hand in the producing of this one deserves "thirty days." Business off. (East.)

When Knighthood Was in Flower—
One of the great features of the year, backed by heavy advertising; went over big. (Middle West.)

Still holding on to a long run. Draws like wildfire. (West.)

Outcast—
A very good picture in every way. Receipts excellent. (Southwest.)

To Have and to Hold—
An excellent picture. My people liked it and sent their friends. (West.)

Art ad on "Omar the Tentmaker," drawn by J. L. Johnston, for the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Ore.

Making a Man—

FIRST NATIONAL

Fury—
Some of the women didn't like this one—said there was too much rough stuff. Generally, however, it was well received; good press reviews. Business pretty good. (Middle West.)

Audiences declared they liked it best of anything Dick Barthlemess has done. He has following here. (West.)

Good attraction. People came and went away pleased. (West.)

Oliver Twist—
Best picture Jackie Coogan has made. Held over for second week. (Middle West.)

The Dangerous Age—
The S. R. O. Sign was hung out every evening on this one. Enthusiastically received by press and public. (East.)

PATHE

Dr. Jack—
Attracted capacity business for a seven day run which would have been extended could bookings have been arranged. (East.)

Fine picture, played to big houses during two weeks' run. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

My Wild Irish Rose—
They liked it and we played to good houses during run. (Southwest.)

The Little Wildcat—
A nice little picture with a star who is growing in popularity. Did well. (Southwest.)

UNIVERSAL

The Flirt—
Business so pleasing that this one was held for a second week, something decidedly unusual for this house. (East.)

Forsaking All Others—
Title did not appeal to my patrons, consequently, business not good. (West.)

The Flaming Hour—
You can use this one; drew nicely and patrons pleased. (Southwest.)

Thriller and pleased those who want to be thrilled. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Big business with this. Title seemed to attract them. (West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood—
Best picture for a run I have ever played. (West.)

Don't go wrong—Doug is "there" in this one. (West.)

Tess of the Storm Country—
Remarkable picture; played to 30,000 during the first two weeks in a small house, and turned thousands away. (Middle West.)

Still running and still drawing them in. (West.)

One Exciting Night—
Great audience picture. Critics lavish in praise. Patrons delighted; tremendous crowds. (Middle West.)

A Tailor Made Man—
Star in wrong role. Not much to it. Drew fairly well. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

One Week of Love—
Good—played to as many people as the house could hold. Plenty of pep in it. Interesting plot, well acted. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Broken Chains—
Did fairly well with it. (Southwest.)

Well done, but somewhat gruesome feature. Played to average business. (Middle West.)

METRO

Trifling Women—
The best box office attraction in several weeks. (Middle West.)

FOX

The Lights of New York—
Simple tale, but interestingly told. Not lacking in drama, either. Business fairly good. Stars not as generally known here. (Middle West.)

Catch My Smoke—
Mix had all his old tricks and Tony did the acting, but it went over to excellent business. (East.)

Silver Wings—
Mary Carr has considerable prestige here and the picture did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

The Fast Mail—
Good drawing card. Went over well. (West.)

Art ad on "My Dad" at Mister Smith's theatre, Indianapolis

AL LICHTMAN

Shadows—
Wonderful feature which shows Chaney at his best. Holding it for a second week. (Middle West.)

Thorns and Orange Blossoms—
Some interest incited by interest in the novel. Not enough to make business rushing. But it maintained a fair average. Cast seems to draw. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROTHERS

Heroes of the Street—
Business reported very fair. Hokum in this film seemed to find good effect or was good naturedly accepted. (Middle West.)

Not as good as some previous Barry pictures, but went over in good shape. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Flesh and Blood—
A good audience picture that ranks better than average. Good business. (East.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Head Hunters of the South Seas—
This one attracted public interest and did a good business for a week's run. (Middle West.)

AFFILIATED

Sure Fire Flint—
Good amusement value with lots of laughs and thrills. Business good. (Middle West.)

Attracted better than average business, but story coming out that house is soon to close, hurt box office. (East.)

Valuable Information About Electric Display Signs

IN this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, on Page 485 of the Technical Department, is a comprehensive article on electric display signs for motion picture theatres that is worthy the attention and perusal of every exhibitor.

This article touches upon the salient points which enter into the selection of the most effective electric sign for the theatre, the relative brilliancy of various types of lamps, color effects that may be gotten, and the like. Proper understanding of these matters makes it possible to select a sign of maximum effectiveness and attraction value for a given theatre and location.

A great many theatres fail to get the utmost value out of this element of their display, which plays a highly important part in the appearance of the house at night, through the use of signs of improper design and construction.

This matter bears a close relation to exploitation and front display, and the Exhibitors' Service Bureau urges every exhibitor to read the article in question, that he may profit by the authentic information presented in it.

Makes "Oliver Twist" Posta's Sound Like Replies

Meriden, Conn.—Poli's theatre put an unusual amount of reader interest into its advance notices of "Oliver Twist" by making the postcards sent to the mailing list read as if they were replies to an inquiry.

The postcards were sent not only to the usual mailing list but to many other names culled from the city directory. In each case they were worded as if answering an inquiry made by the addressee as to when "Oliver Twist" would be at Poli's.

To what extent interest was aroused, due alike to the arresting make-up of the card and the unusual method of presentation, was evidenced by the fact that the theatre received about 300 replies to its "replies." In each case the writer stated that there must have been a mistake, as he had never written the house about the coming of "Oliver Twist." Many of them were gracious enough to add that they were glad to be advised of the forthcoming run.

Speeders Sentenced to See "Manslaughter" by Judge

LA PORTE, Ind.—An unexpected bit of exploitation was obtained for "Manslaughter" here through the fact that the mayor of La Porte is also judge of the speeders' court.

When the "Manslaughter" print arrived in town, Manager O. K. Reddington of the New Century theatre and Bill Danziger, the cub Paramount exploiteer, gave him a pre-view.

The latter was so impressed that he decided to sentence all traffic violators to see the picture at their own expense. However, Mr. Reddington wanted to do his bit for the great cause, so he gave the mayor a pad of passes.

This made a great story for the police reporters attending the trials, and the papers carried a list of the "convicted" violators.

"Face in the Fog" Frame-Up Is Put Over on Lawrence

Lawrence, Mass.—Manager Fred Demara, of the Palace theatre, had the whole town out looking for Boston Blackie, Peter the Red and Count Ivan, characters in "The Face in the Fog."

Demara got John P. McConville, Paramount exploiteer, to send a message from Boston to the chief of police and the mayor telling them to be on the lookout for the famous crooks, and "if you see or hear anything of the 'Face in the Fog' that's the clue. Watch out."

The police suspected a hoax but played safe, put out detectives and gave the story to the newspapers. McConville called on the editors, placed an ad giving the stunt away, and put over copy linking the picture and the theatre with the police story.

The police were sore at first, but Mr. Demara gave each officer a pass, and now they're laughing about it. The chief came through with a published endorsement.

Finds Camel to Use as Street Ballyhoo on "Omar"

Davenport, Iowa.—Manager John Loveridge, of the Capitol theatre, when starting his campaign on "Omar the Tentmaker," sent the exploitation agent out to find a camel.

He spent weary hours looking for the rare beast. The only one outside of a zoo within the radius of a hundred miles was one that had been given to the Shriners by B. J. Palmer, chiropractor and head of the school which is located in Davenport. By the time the exploitation agent had located this animal he knew what they meant when they said: "I'd walk a mile for a camel."

The veiled figure on the two-backed animal was labeled as "One of the Shah's prospective brides," and urged people to see "Omar the Tentmaker" and find out what happened to her.

The usherettes at the Capitol were dressed in the Near East garb of habitues of a Persian harem. Enhancing this atmosphere, one of these girls was stationed at a table in the lobby every evening to give out figs and dates.

The traffic "scare" novelty was used, large envelopes being distributed to motorists with the sign: "New Traffic Rules," and the question: "Do You Think This City Should License Drivers?"

Inexpensive and striking "flash" in lobby of the Rialto theatre, Macon, Ga., on "Broadway Rose," prepared by Manager E. C. Kingman. The board on which the stills are mounted was done in old rose

Cuts Down Hold-Out Crowd by Seating from the Front

Jamaica, L. I.—A simple and practical aid to the solution of the seating problem has been found by Fred V. Greene, Jr., managing director of the Rialto theatre.

When the former Paramount exploiteer took over the Rialto a few months ago, he had the chairs so re-arranged that each seat has a good vantage of the screen. However, the prejudice against front seats in a picture house still persisted.

For the run of "The Young Rajah" he announced that the most desirable seats would be filled from the front instead of from the standees. With this system he is able to get a hundred or more additional admissions into his house.

Capitalizes Accident to Front on "The Old Homestead"

Washington Court House, Ohio.—Manager George Rea of the Colonial theatre, capitalized on his misfortune when his compo board "Old Homestead," in his lobby, was demolished by the wind.

He simply took a newspaper ad and announced that:

"Here's a proof. There's only one real 'Old Homestead.' That's Paramount's. You know the Colonial erected an imitation on the sidewalk and along came a puff of wind and, zowie, the whole works blew down. But in the Paramount picture, 'The Old Homestead' survives the most terrific cyclone ever filmed."

Good Real Estate Tie-Up on "Man Who Saw Tomorrow"

HOUSTON, Tex.—Manager Charles A. McFarland of the Queen theatre tied up "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" with a local real estate company.

This real estate company paid for the necessary advertising and there appeared in the newspaper on two consecutive days editorial ads.; first, advertising "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," second, "The Man Who Didn't See To-Morrow."

Beaver Board Hut in Lobby for "Broken Silence"

ATLANTA, GA.—As exploitation for "The Broken Silence," Manager G. M. Phillips, of the Strand theatre, arranged an attractive lobby which was not expensive.

A large cut-out of a beaver-board Eskimo hut, very realistically painted, was placed over the entrance of the theatre. Entrance and exit of the theatre was made through the open doors of the hut. On the sides of the lobby were cut-outs on the same material of stills from the picture.

Double Truck Tie-Up Ad Gotten Through "Trouble" Contest

BINGHAMPTON, ALA.—The management of the Symphony theatre, through a tie-up with the Binghampton Sun, got a two page tie-up on a Jackie Coogan contest on "Trouble." The page brought in a majority of the automobile agencies in the city.

Manager David Cohen, of the Symphony offered eighteen prizes, to be awarded to the people who could give the names that had been left blank of the make of automobile in each advertisement. The only space the theatre had to take was two inches across the top. The announcement of the two page truck was given free by the paper. The campaign brought interest in automobiles, was tied up definitely with "Trouble" and won the good will and active co-operation of the newspaper for the theatre.

Man in Cap and Apron Exploits "Brothers Under the Skin"

Wichita, Kans.—A simple and effective street ballyhoo for "Brothers Under the Skin" was used by the Miller theatre. A man was engaged to dress up in apron and cap and go about the streets and stand in the lobby. In his hand was a large feather duster. A double placard was hung about his shoulders, making a sandwich man of him.

The placard in front read, "Should husbands do the work?" The sign on his back read, "Don't get married until you see 'Brothers Under the Skin.' Miller theatre."

A furniture van was engaged and loaded with furniture. On each side was a huge cloth sign reading, "This furniture is being returned for non-payment of weekly installments. Don't get married until you have seen 'Brothers Under the Skin.' Miller theatre, now showing."

Varied Exploitation Campaign Used for "Knighthood"

St. Louis, Mo.—Herschel Stuart, managing director of the Missouri theatre; Ed Olmstead, publicity director, and Oscar A. Kantner, Paramount exploiteer, executed one of the most varied exploitation campaigns ever seen in St. Louis for the showing of "When Knighthood Was in Flower" at the Missouri.

The Kirland Piano Company got up a special four-page herald drawing attention to Victor Herbert's score for the picture and the fact that much of the "Knighthood" music was available in player-rolls.

St. Louis, because of its location as the gateway of the Southwest, has a number of Marine recruiting offices, all of which have A-boards on the sidewalks. Kantner drafted this tie-up poster:

"Not since 'Knighthood Was in Flower' has the young man been afforded greater opportunity than is offered him in the United States Marines."

These were placed not only on the boards but on the stands in different parts of the city, positions never before possible for theatre advertising.

A private showing was arranged for the board of education, the editors of the three largest newspapers and a few of the prominent citizens and members of the civic clubs.

"Kick In" Teaser Card Brings Many Phone Calls

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Manager L. R. Towns used a very successful teaser card recently on "Kick In." Two thousand were sent out, regular postcard size.

On the white background, center of card, was printed in bold face type the two words, "Kick In." In small type, in the upper left hand corner was printed: "Telephone Main 8694 before you——"

It was something unusual and the theatre received about 750 phone calls, when of course they took advantage of the opportunity to "sell" this show.

Sends 400 Wires to Prominent Citizens on "Sonny"

York, Pa.—Manager M. E. Kelly, of the Orpheum theatre, sent out 400 wires in exploiting "Sonny," and his chief problem was to send them where they would do the most good and start the most word-of-mouth publicity.

The wire repeated the old formula: "Am coming home. Meet me at Orpheum theatre tonight. Sonny."

The first wire was sent to the girl who had recently been elected the most popular sales girl in a contest conducted by various stores. She had a host of admirers. The second went to the president of the Lions Club, in time to reach him at meeting time as the Lions were in session. The same procedure was followed with the Rotarians and members of the Kiwanis Club.

Part of "Smilin' Through" Run in Front of Theatre

Chatham, England.—Manager E. H. Tremain, of the Invictatheatre, tied up traffic in front of his theatre with a stunt which he worked on "Smilin' Through," that of running a portion of the picture on a screen outside the house.

The strip was supplemented by the announcement that it would be run again in half an hour; but by that time the original crowd had gone inside.

"Under Two Flags" Tied Up to Tobacco Company

Baltimore, Md.—When Priscilla Dean's "Under Two Flags" played at the Century theatre, one of the Whitehurst chain here, a series of tie-ups with cigar stores, book stores, music stores and Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company provided a vigorous exploitation campaign. The scheme was worked out by Thomas D. Soriero, general manager of the Whitehurst theatres, and Miss Hattie K. Morrill, exploitation "man" for Universal.

Forty cut-outs from three-sheets were used by the tobacco company in the windows of cigar and confectionery stores in the city, several of them being placed on principal shopping streets. In addition, the company donated 300 packages of cigarettes which were distributed at the door of the theatre on Monday with small tags mentioning that they were presented with the compliments of Priscilla Dean.

Window Style Show Used to Put "Eternal Flame" Over

Grand Rapids, Mich.— Different gowns, one each day, appeared in the window of Wurtzberger's department store for two weeks preceding the showing of "The Eternal Flame" at the Isis theatre. A card announcing the showing was the only other object in the window.

It may have been a byplay on women's love of finery. The fact remains that the department store had a style show all its own through the tie-up with the title that attracted thousands. It was more effective because it wasn't all over in one evening. The wax model had it on living models because it didn't cost the management as much to keep the show running for two weeks, and it drew crowds for that length of time.

A special play was made on a beautiful red silk dress which was called "Eternal Flame Silks—the Season's Most Popular Find."

The Isis theatre is under the management of Sid Lawrence, formerly First National exploitation agent at Detroit. When he was laying out exploitation himself he was, by the unwritten rules of the organization, barred from receiving any publicity or credit himself. Now that Sid is loose in the field he is providing his own ammunition to see that the Isis theatre is kept regularly before the trade papers.

Unique Safety First Circular for "The Unknown"

WASHINGTON, D. C. — When "The Unknown" played at the Cosmos theatre, an unusual safety first circular was used which was worked out by Leo Garner, exploitation and publicity man for Sidney Lust.

On the outside cover the copy read: "Don't get hurt. Read inside how to avoid accidents."

Inside, it continued: "1. When crossing street look to the left, then to the right. 2. Watch motorist's hand signal to learn whether he intends to turn right or left. 3. Go to the Cosmos theatre and see Richard Talmadge in 'The Unknown.' It is filled with wonderful, thrilling, death-defying stunts and he doesn't get hurt."

Silhouette Contest is Stunt to Exploit "Shadows"

Chicago, Ill.—Foster Moore, special exploitation representative of the Al Lichtman Corporation, staged a successful campaign for the showing of "Shadows" at Barbee's Loop theatre, which included a silhouette contest.

He plastered the downtown district with billboard advertising. He began a lively newspaper campaign, and rigged up some striking window displays. Then he "sold" the editor of the magazine page of the Chicago Journal the idea of running a "Shadows Contest" on that page. The idea of the contest was to publish, in the Junior Journal columns, on the magazine page, the silhouettes of four of the principals in "Shadows" under the heading, "Who cast these shadows?"

The terms of the contest were that readers were to write the names of the players under the silhouettes and send them to the Journal. The first prize offered was $10, with four prizes of $5 each, and the names of the winners were to be announced at a special showing of the picture under the auspices of the Journal on Saturday morning. In addition to this, the thousand best and neatest replies entitled those sending them in to tickets for the special showing.

Important Newspaper Tie-Up Is Made on Barry Pictures

New York, N. Y.—A tie-up with the entire group of Hearst newspapers, several thousand music dealers and merchants has been made by the Warner Brothers publicity staff on "Heroes of the Street" and "Rags to Riches."

The Hearst tie-up is a full page announcement showing Barry playing a Hohner-Sax, a new article in the music field being utilized as a circulation builder throughout the country. This announcement is being run daily in all the Hearst newspapers, and it will be carried on indefinitely.

In connection with each announcemet the name of Warner Brothers, Barry and the pictures is prominently displayed, serving as an added asset to the exhibitors who have booked the attractions.

Several thousand music dealers are said to be carrying full window displays of Barry playing the Hohner-Sax, thousands of other merchants are using specially devised cut-outs available with both pictures, and a series of special photographs is being syndicated to leading newspapers.

Mayor Takes Part in Campaign for "Oliver Twist"

Kansas City, Mo.—Mayor Cromwell's popularity with the youngsters of Kansas City was made secure recently by the part which he played in the extensive exploitation campaign on "Oliver Twist" at Sam Harding's Liberty theatre, in which His Honor represented the little star in an Old Clothes campaign. The annual drive of the Associated Charities was on. Jackie's wire from Hollywood to His Honor read:

"Will you be my partner for two weeks? I know there are lots of kiddies in Kansas City that won't have warm clothes for this winter. Let's you and I put on a big show, using my new picture, 'Oliver Twist,' and charge each kid a pair of pants, a dress or something to get in; then give all the clothes to little fellers who need them this winter. My dad says I can go fifty-fifty with you on expense. If you will go with me on this I'll be tickled to pieces. Please answer, Jackie Coogan."

Mayor Cromwell's instant acceptance of the proposal and the heart interest of the story of partnership with Jackie Coogan furnished abundant publicity. The fact that His Honor worked up interest in the Warm Clothes Showing by going around to public school playgrounds, was recorded in a motion picture.

Children's Version of Story Used on "Oliver Twist"

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Manager Edgar Weill of the Strand theatre, felt that the children's business was worth going after on "Oliver Twist," so he planned an appeal which would reach them.

The newspaper furnished the natural outlet and this could be effected best by the fictionized version of the photoplay.

With a clever journalist wielding the pen the fictionized version of "Oliver Twist" was rewritten in "kid" language. In this form it was published by the Syracuse Herald and made the foundation for a special appeal to children.

Special Slides Give Novel Aid to "The Storm" Showing

Colorado Springs, Col.—A novel and effective prologue was used by the Tompkins theatre when that house ran "The Storm." It was arranged by Frank W. Thomas, organist, Thomas designed seven slides descriptive of an organ piece of his own composition entitled, "The Passing Storm." Each slide contained a simply painted scene and a verse describing some phase of the storm depicted in the music. The slides then were thrown on the screen during the playing of the storm music, thus adding mental perception to the rousing effect of the music.

Letter to the Editor Is Space Getter for "Grandma's Boy"

Jersey City, N. J.—A. S. Rittenberg, advertising and publicity director of the Fulton theatre, engineered a publicity stunt on "Grandma's Boy" that awakened considerable interest.

He got a prominent citizen to write to the Jersey Journal, saying that he had seen "Grandma's Boy" in New York; that he heard it was to be shown in Jersey City at $1 and $1.50; and that he thought this was an outrage, as it was such an excellent comedy that everyone should see it. The paper printed it conspicuously under Letters to the Editor. The next day the theatre took space to confirm all the writer had said about the comedy's excellence, but emphasizing that it would be shown at regular prices.

Poster Contest in Schools Is "Rags to Riches" Aid

San Diego, Cal.—Richard A. Addison, publicity director of the Pickwick theatre, put across a poster contest on "Rags to Riches" which netted 216 columns of publicity and built up a tremendous good will for the theatre. The poster contest, in itself, is not new but this one was conducted on an unusually effective basis. Mr. Addison says:

"We first interested the art teachers of the Junior and Senior High Schools in the giving away of $100 in prizes for the best conceptions of what constitutes 'riches.' After they 'fell' we used their endorsement as a lever on the superintendent of schools, and although the schools are not permitted to participate in any private enterprise, we succeeded in 'selling' him and obtaining his sanction to distribute 5,000 cards through the art teachers of the schools.

"Next, in order to get publicity on the stunt, we tied up with a local newspaper. A paper, by the way, which has never before been connected with any motion picture exploitation stunt. The fact that our contest had the sanction of the art directors and the superintendent of the schools, went a long way in 'selling' this particular newspaper.

"During the run of 'Rags to Riches' the entries on the contest were placed in the theatre lobby, which by the way, gave us one of the best 'stopper' lobbies we have had in some time. The entries were all numbered and voting was done by number.

Window tie-up with Broadway shoe-store on "Lorna Doone" obtained by the New York Mark Strand theatre, New York City

H. B. Clarke, manager of the Strand theatre, Memphis, Tenn., arranged this miniature display on "Burning Sands." The rear drop is a transparency, and light shining through made it most effective

Special Newsboys' Matinee Is "Sherlock Holmes" Stunt

Fargo, N. D.—Manager McCarthy, of the Orpheum theatre, got excellent results with a special newsboys' matinee on "Sherlock Holmes."

A tie-up was arranged with the Courier-News of Fargo by which its newsboys were admitted free to a matinee performance. The newspaper, of course, carried special stories on its front page that its carriers would be the guests of the Orpheum management and recounted the plot of the photoplay.

Mis-spelled Words in Page Ad Used for "Dr. Jack"

Jersey City, N. J.—A full page hook-up ad was used by the Fulton theatre recently for its showing of "Dr. Jack."

Catchlines such as: Dr. Jack says, have your prescriptions filled at Taube's Drug Store; Dr. Jack says, if it's right, the Manhattan shop has it; Dr. Jack says, Mrs. Jack is better clothed and for less, since the Myrtel Shop came to Jackson avenue; and the like. The heading over the page was "Dr. Jack's on Jackson Avenue," this being the theatre's location.

Ten passes were given to each merchant on the page. A word was misspelled in each ad and the first ten persons noting the error and going to the merchant received one of the passes.

Offers $1,000 Reward, Proof of Newness of "Tess"

COLUMBUS, Ohio. — The management of the Majestic theatre wished to emphasize the fact that the "Tess of the Storm Country" which they were playing was a brand new version, so to emphasize this their advertising carried this copy:

"Note—The management of the Majestic theatre offers a reward of $1,000 to any person who will be able to prove that the 'Tess' now playing at the Majestic, was ever exhibited in Columbus before."

Stickers on All Mail Used to Exploit "Bulldog Drummond"

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Taking advantage of the exploitation stunt originated by the home office advertising department on "Bulldog Drummond," the management of the Electra theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., pasted the sticker reading, "Get Bulldog Drummond Dead or Alive" on every letter and postcard sent through the mailing list.

It was a clever idea, inasmuch as many people saw the envelopes beside the one to whom they were addressed, stirring up widespread curiosity.

The management made use of the stickers in other ways. Small boys were used as the medium for getting these curiosity teasers into many strange places.

Costumed Ushers Attend Ball to Boost "East Is West"

LYONS, ILL. — Manager Frederick, of the Peverly theatre, in exploiting "East Is West," took advantage of a masked ball held during the run, and had his Chinese costumed ushers take an hour off from the theatre and enter the ballroom in their Oriental masquerades. They devoted sixty minutes to distributing literature and exploitation material advertising "East Is West" and returned to the theatre in time for the next performance.

The idea was an afterthought to a campaign that included the distribution of a large amount of window cards and came as a stroke of opportunism when Manager Frederick heard of the masquerade.

Extensive Campaign Put Back of "Lorna Doone"

New York, N. Y.—When "Lorna Doone" played the New York Mark Strand theatre, of which Joseph Plunkett is managing director, an exploitation campaign was put over which utilized every possible aid.

Six husky riders in buckskins and armor made a daily appearance on the streets. They enacted the part of the outlaw Doones on a foray. "The Ride of the Doones" was advertised by the banners they carried and covered the Post Office substations where they helped in Army Recruiting and the Wall Street district where they made a raid on the subtreasury.

At 6:45 on the opening Sunday night, when Broadway was as quiet as it ever is, a six-piece brass band suddenly began to pour forth a tornado of sounds from the office buildings directly above the Strand theatre. Every other interest lagged. From apparently empty buildings and streets people swarmed forth. Crowds filled the sidewalk across the way, anxious to know the reason for an oldtime band concert on Broadway. A cameraman opposite the Strand theatre gave the crowds the scare of a full tray of flashlight powder. Finally a sign announced that the next selection would be the "Lorna Doone" ballad and the mystery was explained.

Ellsworth Hamer, manager of the Strand theatre, Lansing, Mich., arranged this display in his lobby for "A Tailor Made Man"

Lobby display at Ascher's Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, for "The Sin Flood." The cut-out letters stood out from the background, as did the city sky-line

Miniature Candle Put on Card for "The Eternal Flame"

Sandusky, Ohio.—George Schade, owner and manager of the Schade theatre, lived up to his reputation for unique novelties in a mailing card which he sent out on "The Eternal Flame," which combined folder, card and novelty.

The folder, in three colors, contained an outline of the story, the beauty of production and the magnificence of casting. The card announced that "The Eternal Flame" was coming to the Strand on Thanksgiving Day.

The novelty was a small candle stuck in a metal holder. The candle was an inch and a half long and the holder an inch. They were tied to the card by a string with a space for the bottom of the holder to fit into the card. The candle, card and folder were all clasped together and mailed out to patrons as an indication of the attraction that was coming.

Attractive "East is West" window display obtained by the Rivoli theatre, La Crosse, Wis.

Bank Puts in Window Display On "Light in the Dark"

SHARON, PA.—Several thousand dimes, placed in the window of a local bank, exploited "The Light in the Dark" when that attraction played the Liberty theatre. This display was put in the McDowell National Bank with which a tie-up was made by the theatre. The card read: "Come out of the dark and into the light, open a savings account and start the New Year right by seeing 'The Light in the Dark' at the Liberty theatre."

The day before the picture started a dime was placed in each of 25 boxes buried all over the city. One of the boxes carried a five dollar gold piece in addition as a capital prize. The Sharon Herald sponsored the stunt.

Health Board is Excited Over "Dr. Jack" Advertisements

Cincinnati, Ohio.—A series of teaser ads for "Dr. Jack" at the Strand theatre gave the Cincinnati Board of Health considerable concern recently in view of the obligation on its part to protect the public.

"Dr. H. Jack, Specialist," advertised, to begin with, that he knew he was liable to expulsion from the American Medical Society, but he was ready to dare everything to give people the benefit of "nature's finest remedy."

In his second announcement "Dr. H. Jack" said that Dr. Simon Flexner, of the Rockefeller Institute had investigated his claims regarding "Nature's finest remedy" and agreed that "It will cure the sick and the near sick, and the healthy." Then came "Dr. H. Jack's" printed announcement that he was sending a letter to every doctor, dentist and nurse in town—and giving his address, 531 Walnut street, where he would be located "on or before December 31."

Health Commissioner Dr. William H. Peters put on his hat and wended his way to "531 Walnut Street," where "Dr. H. Jack's" neatly designed letterhead said he would be, with "Office hours 10 a.m.—11 p.m., Daily and Sunday." Pursuit of that street number led him straight to the Strand theatre, with its posters and lobby announcing, "Harold Lloyd in 'Dr. Jack.'"

Elaborate Campaign Put Over for "Knighthood" Showing

Seattle, Wash.—"When Knighthood Was in Flower" was given one of the most elaborate presentations seen in this city during the current season when it was played by Manager H. B. Wright at the Strand theatre recently.

For many weeks before the arrival of the picture, it was advertised on billboards, in show-windows, in newspapers, and in the columns of the Jensen-Von Herberg house organ, "Screenland." The story of the photoplay ran serially in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, which co-operated with the Strand in all the items of the presentation.

First came the group appeals. Special announcements were made of "society" performances, "school" performances and showings for other definite groups. Society, art, music and dramatic groups were part of this program.

The decorations of the lobby and theatre also tied up with the picture. The theatre was transformed for the showing into a Tudor castle. The outside lobby represented the outer walls, and they were covered with coats of arms and various medieval insignia. The whole street was decorated in this manner.

Fire Department Aids Campaign on "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

Owensboro, Ky.—The campaign of the Grand theatre on "Quincy Adams Sawyer" was marked by co-operation from the fire department, the street railways and other agencies, combined with extensive newspaper advertising.

One of the largest automobiles in Owensboro's fire-fighting fleet carried a huge sign announcing the coming of "'Quincy Adams Sawyer,' the greatest of all super-pictures," to the Grand.

The assistance of the street railways company was no less important. On each car was fastened one of the one-sheet posters of this production, and window cards were also freely used.

Another effective device was the use of an old shay, similar to that in the picture. Signs, announcing the presentation of the picture, were pinned to the sides and the shaft of the carriage.

All of the leading newspapers carried large advertisements about the photoplay well in advance of its first presentation. These announcements emphasized the fact that the showing was among the earliest held anywhere, and G. M. Pedley, manager of the theatre, gave his personal guarantee to his patrons that the photoplay was certain to win their approval.

Ladder and Cut-Outs Novel "Anna Ascends" Display

GALVESTON, Texas. — Manager Charles E. Sasseen of the Tremont theatre conceived a novel lobby display idea for "Anna Ascends." In the center of the lobby he placed an ordinary step-ladder. At the top of the ladder was seen a cut-out of Alice Brady showing the star expensively dressed and looking very beautiful. Then at the foot of the ladder was another cut-out showthe same girl dressed in rags.

Between the two cut-outs on several steps of the ladder were placed cards that carried lines to this effect: "Love, Faith and Perseverance lead to success."

"Dr. Jack" Print is Given Police Guard to House

NEWARK, N. J.—Manager Kashin, of the Rialto theatre, worked the police guard stunt to good effect just before the opening of "Dr. Jack."

He obtained the co-operation of the police department and when the "Dr. Jack" print arrived in town, he was given a motorcycle policeman to convoy him to the theatre. Kashin and "Dr. Jack" rode in the side car.

The stunt was amply publicized and helped to impress the citizens of Newark with the fact that the print was altogether too valuable to take any chances with.

"The Third Alarm" Is Given Official Co-operation

JACKSON, Mich.—The first example of official co-operation from a fire department on "The Third Alarm" was given here during the run of the picture at the Majestic theatre.

The fire chief of Jackson showed his willingness to co-operate with the Majestic management by placing a special fire prevention card on all the alarm boxes and fire hydrants in the city. This card carried his name and was left undisturbed during the entire run of the picture.

Exploitation Stunt Is Brought Back for "Minnie"

Burlington, Iowa.—It is not often that an exploitation stunt can be brought back and used repeatedly in the same town, but L. P. Blank, manager of the Palace theatre, accomplished it successfully on "Minnie."

On two previous pictures he has used the automobile red envelope with the outside cover reading: "New Traffic Rules." Both times it went over so well that he tried it again when he played "Minnie." The story from Burlington states that scores of motorists, who had left their cars parked at the curb would open the red envelope that greeted their return from the store and peruse amusedly the inside folder to "beware of the extra heavy traffic around the Palace theatre while 'Minnie' was the attraction."

As a special exploitation idea, girls who could identify their first names as Minnie were admitted free.

Thirteen restaurants put in rush orders for 10,000 paper napkins that contained a "mash note" from "Minnie." This was written in red and followed out the lines of the trade paper advertising done on this picture. "Minnie" declared that any one who wanted to fall in love with a homely girl could find her—and they might be fooled about the homeliness—at the Palace theatre.

Pearl White's "Plunder" Looks Big

Many New York Exhibitors and Their Guests Applaud Fast Action in First Three Episodes of the Patheserial

Pearl White still packs a wallop in that good right mitt of hers. A thousand exhibitors and their friends who filled the seats of Loew's New York Roof on the afternoon of Friday, Dec. 1, saw and applauded that fistic prowess as they followed the continuing of the first three episodes of "Plunder," the Patheserial which will be released Jan. 28. And it's a title of strong chapters, beyond any doubt.

"Plunder" is a tale of New York City—at least, the opening so indicates, but advance announcements state that the locale will shift temporarily to Kentucky and South America. The basis of the story is a battle for treasure hidden under one of New York's skyscrapers—or rather for treasure that three centuries previously had been buried deep in ground that later supported a great skyscraper, the Central Building. Pearl Travers, the heroine, is one of the stockholders in the company owning the building.

The scenario was written by Bertram Millhauser and George B. Seitz, with the latter officiating as producer and director. Warren Kreech has the role of Mister Jones, the mysterious young man who continually puts in appearance when the heroine is in greatest danger. Harry Semels is Jude Deering, the chief malefactor.

The first chapter is "The Bandaged Man." It is filled with the same speedy action that marks the progress of the succeeding two episodes. The second and third chapters are entitled "Held by the Enemy" and "The Hidden Thing." Very likely an incident in the third episode will make an unusual impress upon the average beholder—from the standpoint of thrill the case of some, from that of horror with others. Pearl, carefully making her way through a house of which she has no previous knowledge, comes face to face with a figure in the form of a great ape, and if your patrons inquire if it is a man or an ape and you reply that you don't know there is better than a colorable reason for so stating.

The serial gives promise of unusual speed, and in view of the high mark being set these days and weeks by serial makers "unusual speed" is no mean compliment to hang on the hook of any production that alone continues to "photograph like a million dollars." She is in her manner the same Madame Don't Care, she approaches what looks like danger anyway with the same abandon as of old. All signs point to "Plunder" as a regular serial. C. B.

"Plunder"

(Eighteen Episode Serial—Pathe)

THAT Pearl White would return to the serial field under Pathe banner, in a chapter-play out-thrilling those responsible for her popularity in this class of motion picture, was not only hoped for but expected. "Plunder," a thrill-a-minute" story by Bertram Millhauser, directed by George B. Seitz, serves the purpose with gratifying results and, judging from the first three episodes, will prove to be absorbing to the very end. It is endowed with all the serial requisites, action, speed, cast, production and moves just as a George B. Seitz production might be expected to move, with characteristic skill—gradually gaining in tempo until the end of each episode leaves curiosity at the boiling point with a desire to go in quest of one's lost breath. Granting that Pearl White carries honors as the star, the supporting cast deserves due credit for splendid work and the cameramen for unusual effects.

Pearl Travers, much sought after heiress, owns controlling stock in the Century Building, New York. It has been discovered by an unscrupulous few that the building was created upon a site, where, three hundred years before, a treasure chest was buried. In this was the plunder of successful pirates, who brought their spoils to the shores of Manhattan Island, but were interrupted when attempting to bury it, by invading Indians. In order to maintain control and guard her fortune, Pearl survives various encounters which complications lead up to. A plot necessary to provide enough of these to hold through eighteen episodes is laid in the first three, and "on the go," "Plunder" is all that could be desired as a serial photoplay.—LILLIAN CALE.

"Plunder"—Pearl White—Pathe

Type of production.. .. .. 15 episode serial

Pearl White, the first to create the vogue of serial pictures, with "The Perils of Pauline," "The Exploits of Elaine" and numerous others, has come back in this Pathe serial, "Plunder." And all the regulation serial stunts are there, together with the scheming black-moustached villain and the tall good-looking hero. If your folks like serials at all, they will surely be pleased with this one. The stunts come thick and fast and the action is speedy, in the extreme. Plausibility of story there is none. But that is not to be expected in serials. The plot in the main deals with the discovery of buried treasure of colossal value underneath a big building in New York City. The villain, Deering, played by Harry Semels, learns of the treasure and attempts to buy the outstanding stock, some of which Pearl owns. She is about to sell her interest when a mysterious young man who goes by the name of "Jones" steps out of the wall and warns her not to sell. Jones is played by Warren Kreech, who fills the role of the enigmatic hero very nicely. Shortly after, Pearl is lured to the home of Richard Gale, one of the stockholders. After a struggle, she rushes to the roof and leaping over a wall erashes through a skylight in another house. Making her way to the street and grabbing a taxi, she finds Deering inside the cab with her. Again and again she escapes and "the villain still pursues her."

The story written by Bertram Millhauser closes each episode at an exciting moment. George B. Seitz has directed and produced the serial, which affords plenty of thrills and then some. A good deal of money seems to have been spent on the production and there are some good interiors. Altogether, a good serial.

'Snub' Pollard Comedies

Two reels each

" Hook, Line and Sinker "

(Pollard-Pathe—Two Reels)

A COMEDY that is actually funny and introduces some new twists. It will surely draw a broad smile from every man who ever held a fishing rod over the water, and is likely to send him into a hearty laugh. The angle is a travesty upon a fishing tournament, which every man is more than the rest because the recognition of a pretty girl is at stake. At the crack of the pistol all contestants make for the dock, where they begin fishing. And while the hero's catch is enviable the rival for the girl has cut the bottom of his "catch basket" with the result that the fish go right back where they came from, through a hole in the landing. In this one the comedy is rapid and while it borders on the ridiculous, is sure fire for those who go to a picture show with the hope of seeing something to laugh at. In addition, this is the best piece of work Pollard has done in a long time. A comedy that is also comparatively clean and not over-done in slap-stick—LILLIAN GALE.

TRADE MARK

J. M. Edgar Hart, manager of the Palace theatre, El Paso, Texas, prepared this special art lobby for "Burning Sands." The centre setpiece is in a sand-box and steam came up through the sand. A spotlight on a flasher was turned on it

Style Show Furnishes Prologue for "Other Women's Clothes"

Seattle, Wash.—A special showing of the latest styles in women's clothes, put over in the form of an elaborate fashion revue, was used recently by Manager Frank Edwards, of the Winter Garden theatre, here as a prologue for his showing of "Other Women's Clothes."

One of the largest women's attire stores in the city was eagerly willing to tie up with Mr. Edwards and furnish the models and clothes that were displayed. The prologue was presented at the beginning of the picture, and served as a novel introduction for the feature. The advertising of the theatre announced the style revue, and a large attendance of women at all performances resulted.

Aside from the fact that they furnished the prologue for the Winter Garden, the store emphasized the picture, "Other Women's Clothes," in its window displays. Cut-outs of the star, photographs of scenes from the picture and advertising matter regarding the style revue were used to bring out the point that "Other Women's Clothes" was playing at the Winter Garden theatre, and that an elaborate fashion revue was being presented in conjunction with it.

The Blue Mouse theatre, Portland, Ore., prepared this lobby on "What's Wrong With the Women?" from stock paper

Novelty Silhouette Effect Obtained on Pianists

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—A novel lighting effect for a musical number was obtained recently by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, during the engagement of a piano trio.

Three transparent windows masked with a plush drop made a dainty frame through which the figures of three pianists and the outlines of their instruments glowed. The pianists playing at the same time were shown thus in silhouette.

Orange floods came through the transparent windows while blue and orange spots were on the pianists. For the second number overhead spots were played on the pianists in flesh pink.

Huge Phonograph Lends Mystery to "Burning Sands Stunt"

Twin Falls, Idaho.—Manager Joe Madsen, of the Idaho theatre, and Kenneth Renaud, Paramount exploiteer, put over an effective tie-up on "Burning Sands" recently.

They got a large motor truck with a flat body, on which they placed a piano borrowed from a local music store. The theatre had a carpenter build a compo-board Victrola body, which was stained mahogany on the outside. It was three feet square and eight feet high, large enough to encase a man. This fake Victrola was placed on the truck with the piano.

Madsen and Renaud secured the co-operation of the Idaho theatre organist and a male singer employed by the music company, which is also the local Victrola agency. The singer stayed inside the fake talking machine with the doors closed and through a megaphone sang the song, "Burning Sands," to the accompaniment of the pianist.

The song was rendered at each stop. At the finish the singer stepped from his box, throwing back the flap doors, which were painted with advertising matter announcing the run of the picture at the Idaho.

Envelope Teaser Stunt Is Used on "Don't Doubt Your Wife"

Reading, Pa.—Particularly appropriate use of the envelope teaser stunt was made by Wilmer and Vincent, of the Hippodrome theatre, on "Don't Doubt Your Wife."

Small envelopes were distributed in mills, factories and clubs, and on the streets. On the front of these envelopes was printed:

"'Don't Doubt Your Wife.' She's as good a pal as there is. Just to prove it we dare you to hand her this unopened."

Every wife whose husband took the dare found in her envelope a card bearing this message:

"Dearest—You and I haven't been going out together as much as we should lately. Let's get dolled up tonight and go see our old screen favorite, Leah Baird, in "Don't Doubt Your Wife,' at the Hippodrome. They say it's a great picture!"

Safety Signs Used in Campaign on "The Dangerous Age"

Indianapolis, Ind.—The management of the Circle theatre effected a tie-up on "The Dangerous Age" with officials of the Hoosier Motor Club, whereby that organization utilized the production title in a safety and membership drive. The drive was necessarily limited in scope because of the press of legislative business, the entire organization being active in the preparation of new bills and the review of those already on the statute books. However, it did gain for the production 200 half-sheet cards placed on the rear dash of all city trolley cars, having the following specimen text:

"Drive sensibly. This is 'The Dangerous Age.' Hoosier Motor Club. Joined Yet?"

The club maintains a towing and wrecking service, consisting of three huge trucks, each equipped with a crane. These were bannered. Moreover, for two hours each day, one hour at or near noon and the other about 4 p.m., one of the tow cars picked up a wrecked machine from the "Bone Yard" and hauled it through the downtown streets. Both tow car and wreck were bannered.

"Clarence" Impersonator Is Used to Exploit Picture

GADSDEN, ALA.—Manager A. L. Snell of the Imperial theatre made effective use of the impersonation stunt in exploiting "Clarence."

Mr. Snell announced that on opening day Clarence would arrive on the 11:15 train from Birmingham. A local ex-service man, who owned a saxophone and could play it, impersonated Clarence. This man was dressed in uniform, wore large horn rimmed glasses and had the word, "Clarence" painted on his saxophone case. Also he is very popular locally and when he got off the train and started through town it was almost a riot. He strolled around town for a while, stopping on every corner to play a solo. Then he went to the theatre and played a solo twice daily as a prologue.

Gadsden being a small town, this stunt depended greatly on the personality of the man chosen to impersonate "Clarence."

Stick Candy Attests Sweetness of "Peg o' My Heart"

SANDUSKY, OHIO—George Schade stressed the "sweetness" angle when he played "Peg o' My Heart" at the Schade theatre.

Schade distributed striped stick candy. Each stick was carefully wrapped in oil paper and contained a slip of paper stating:

"Be sure to tell mother, father, brother or sister that 'Peg o' My Heart' is sweeter than this candy. At the Schade theatre — three days — starting New Year's Day."

"Fast Mail" Ballyhoo Gotten Without Cost by Tie-Up

DULUTH, Minn.—The management of the Zelda theatre, by tying up with an automobile agency, got the use of a car and operator for a street ballyhoo on "The Fast Mail" without cost.

Prominently displayed on the body of the rubber tire of the locomotive was advertising for the melodrama at the Zelda. The direct tie-up with the automobile company read "Rosendahl's Oakland Car and Service—Speedy as 'The Fast Mail.'" This car was operated through the principal sections of the city.

Extensive Campaign Put Over for "Lights of New York"

Indianapolis, Ind.—The management of the Apollo theatre, with the co-operation of a Fox representative, put over a varied campaign on "The Lights of New York."

One of the salient features of the campaign was the distribution of ten thousand match boxes with advertising for the picture. These were distributed the week before the opening in cafes, restaurants, hotels and cigar stores in all sections of the city. Both sides of the wooden match boxes carried the billing for the picture.

Two large banners, twenty feet long and ten feet high, were painted for use on a special trolley car for three days before the showing of the picture.

One sign read: "Bagdad on the Subway is what they call the City of 1001 Modern Arabian Nights. 'Lights of New York' at the Apollo Christmas Week." The reverse carried the following message: "The Bread Line or the gold line? To which do your New York friends belong? 'Lights of New York,' starting Christmas at the Apollo."

Tie-Up with Packer's Tar Soap Executed on "East Is West"

Waco, Texas.—Following the campaign staged on "East Is West" for its run at the Strand theatre, First National has made public a tie-up which it has been operating in all parts of the country on this picture with the Packer Tar Soap Company, based on the episode in the picture showing Miss Toy getting a "'Melican hair wash" and mentioning a tar soap without specifying any names.

For organization reasons First National has made no mention of the tie-up or the success it has achieved in different key cities; but with the consummation of the Waco campaign the veil of secrecy has been lifted. The Packer Tar Soap people originally entered into the tie-up in the belief that such drug store and retail store advertising in connection with "East Is West" would build up sales, and their belief has been more than justified. The contest centered around an essay on "Why do you like Packer's Soap?" In accordance with instructions from New York the drug stores in every city that co-operate in the movement are being supplied free of charge with the window display samples of Packer's Soap and Liquid Soap and also with the prize awards.

For the theatre it has resulted in numerous window tie-ups and advantageous displays that would not otherwise be available, to say nothing of reader interest aroused through newspaper co-operation in the essays.

The Strand theatre had the distinction of getting displays in 18 out of the 20 drug store windows in the business section of the city. The Waco Times-Herald co-operated.

Arthur Swanke, advertising and exploitation manager of the Mission theatre, El Dorado, Ark., prepared this appropriate "30 Days" front

Novel Tie-Up With Taxi Firms Made On "Oliver Twist"

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Circle theatre took a long chance in exploiting "Oliver Twist" and won out. Two weeks before the picture opened it advertised the fact that if it should rain between 7 and 9 on the opening night patrons would be conveyed to the theatre by the cars of two taxicab companies with whom a tie-up was made, without charge. For two weeks every cab operated by these two companies carried this sign on "Oliver Twist" and the Circle theatre. It was tremendous advertising for the picture that was doubly as effective as an ordinary tie-up on windshield signs because of the element of chance that went with it.

It supplemented a comprehensive campaign that embodied many features.

"Broken Chains" in Chicago Is Given Smashing Campaign

Chicago, Ill.—One of the most thorough and diversified exploitation campaigns ever staged in Chicago was put over for the showing of "Broken Chains" at the Balaban and Katz Chicago theatre by Eddie Bonns, home office exploitation manager, George A. Hickey, district supervisor and Walter D. Nealand, Chicago Goldwynner.

First of all it was the prize winning scenario, and was awarded the $10,000 first prize offered by the Goldwyn Corporation in conjunction with the Chicago Daily News. Eddie Bonns, exploitation manager, made a hurried trip from New York and arranged the campaign in conjunction with George A. Hickey, district supervisor. They arranged with Walter Strong, business manager of the Daily News to sponsor the Chicago showing, with the gratifying result that the News gave the Goldwyn concern, eight full pages, three half pages and six quarter pages of display advertising, besides many reading notices, cuts and stills galore and other advertising matter besides mailing invitations to the 26,000 contestants in the contest to attend during the week and witness the photoplay on the screen.

Nealand engaged Nimmo Black, noted war aviator, who made daily flights for five days over Chicago in his aeroplane, dropping twenty thousand dodgers per day.

Newlyweds Night Is Feature of "Mrs. Bellew" Campaign

Lawrence, Mass.—Manager Fred Demara, of the Palace theatre, reasoned that newly-married couples would think a picture of faithful love "great stuff," so he established a Newlyweds' Night for "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

With the co-operation of John P. McConville, Paramount exploiteer, a list of the month's marriages was secured from the county clerk, numbering 104. Passes were sent to all of them and 97 showed up at the box office, according to McConville.

Fake Airplane Delivery Is Aid to "Young Rajah" Campaign

Charlotte, N. C.—Manager Ray Beall of the Imperial theatre got a great deal of publicity out of a fake aeroplane delivery that he pulled the day before the picture opened. Some distance out of town a man had an aeroplane. Mr. Beall made the necessary arrangements with this man, then announced that at a certain time the print of "The Young Rajah" would be delivered from Atlanta by aeroplane. At the appointed time the plane flew up, circled the city and made a landing.

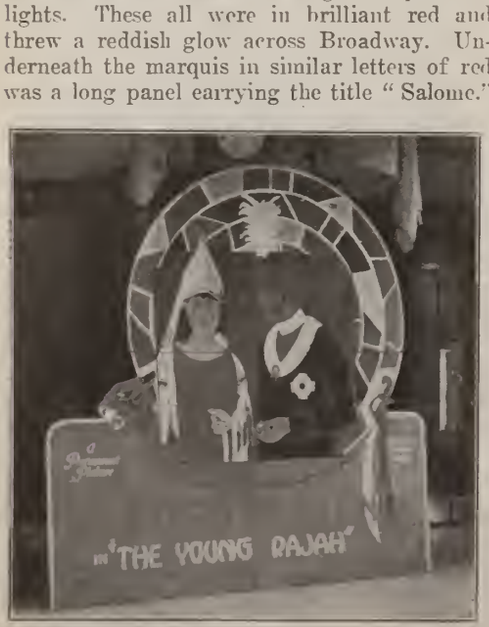
"Salome" Strongly Exploited for Broadway Premiere

New York, N. Y.—An example of what may be done in exploiting a picture through high class lobby and theatre front display has been given in the campaign recently put over in New York for the premiere on Broadway of "Salome" at the Criterion theatre.

Following an extensive advance campaign in which a large mailing list was covered and exceptional newspaper publicity obtained, a gorgeous display of posters and lobby cards was put on at the Criterion. These posters, designed by Vyvyan Donner, after the style of Aubrey Beardsley, who illustrated the original Oscar Wilde text of the drama, covered all the big scenes in the picture, were of regulation poster size, and stood out as attention attracters of unusual beauty and eye-catching strength.

In addition to this phase of exploitation the manager of the campaign, S. Edward Manson, arranged for unusual electric display. Above the marquis the electrician had put in the word "Nazimova" in letters some six feet tall and in the center of a great square of lights. These all were in brilliant red and threw a reddish glow across Broadway. Underneath the marquis in similar letters of red was a long panel carrying the title "Salome."



Manager Ollie Brownlee of the Palace theatre, Muskogee, Okla., prepared this pleasing cut out on "The Young Rajah"

Jury Scheme Helps to Sell Two Pictures at Once

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Butterfly theatre put over a jury stunt that helped to sell both "Thirty Days" and "To Have and to Hold."

During the run of the Reid picture, R. C. Gary, Paramount exploiter, drafted an ad asking that 1,500 people volunteer to judge the merits of "To Have and to Hold." This panel would be taken from the audience witnessing the last performance of the run of "Thirty Days." The folks were to sit in their seats when the show closed at 11 o'clock and see the feature for the next week. They were then to tell the management what they thought of it. No additional admission was charged.

It created a lot of talk and Gary secured enough quotations from the audience to furnish advertising copy for a week with a local angle.

"Pride of Palomar" Letter Is Given Personal Touch

Baltimore, Md.—The New Metropolitan theatre, one of Baltimore's most recently opened neighborhood houses, started off right by applying a personal touch to its advertising for the opening.

Leslie F. Whelan, Paramount exploiteer, wrote the letter, signed "Marjorie Daw," the leading lady of "The Pride of Palomar," the christening picture, praising the theatre and the picture.

"Miss Daw's" letter went on chatting about her movie work and "its never-ending study and effort to entertain and please you."

Neat, tasteful letter-heads were printed up and the letters were dated and post-marked New York City. Although they were prepared in Baltimore, Whelan shipped them to New York, where they were dropped in the mail slot.

Effective Campaign Is Staged on "Heroes of the Street"

Toledo, Ohio.—Publicity Manager "Billy" Exton, of the Temple theatre, put over an excellent campaign on "Heroes of the Street," aided by Miles Goldberg, of Skirboll Gold Seal Productions. In writing of this campaign, Mr. Exton says:

"In the very first scene of the attraction is a shot of police officers leaving their station for duty, and we cut this out and had a local shot made of our own police department, which created considerable comment, and results were very noticeable.

"With one of the daily papers we started an autographed photo campaign in which anyone who mailed in a coupon clipped from the paper would receive a personally autographed photo of Wesley Barry.

"In addition to these stunts, we used a street ballyhoo, which consisted of an auto truck bearing a large banner with two policemen cut-outs, and with a few catchy phrases such as, 'Who guards our street crossings? 'Heroes of the Street.' 'Who braves danger for our safety?' etc.

"Wesley Barry was making a personal appearance in Cleveland and Mr. Goldberg and myself made a special trip there and secured several personal letters to various Toledo people in addition to photos of Barry and myself, also a trailer of both, which was used in newspapers and trailer in the theatre, showing Wesley Barry busy autographing photos."

Regional News From Correspondents

Seattle Jottings

Councilman and Mrs. E. L. Blaine and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Gellerman, of the Puritan Theatre Company, of this city, have recently been made defendants in several complaints filed in the Superior Court. Mr. Blaine is president of the company and Mr. Gellerman is secretary. The theatre cited in the complaints is the Neptune theatre, in the University district, acquired several months ago by the Jensen-Von Herberg Circuit from the Puritan company.

Dean Fred E. Bolton, of the University of Washington faculty, and Miss Bertha Hegman, public school teacher, are each suing for $500. They assert that they each bought stock to this amount upon being assured by the defendants that it would be redeemed upon thirty days' notice. According to the complaint, Blaine and Gellerman have refused to redeem the stock.

The Seattle Title Trust Company is suing the theatre company, and Sam and Mary E. Fried, who leased the ground on which the theatre stands to the company, for a foreclosure of a $55,000 mortgage. In another complaint the G. & G. Theatre Company is suing the Puritan Theatre Company for payments on the projection machine and rest room furniture formerly used in "Ye College Playhouse" and purchased by the Puritan company when the latter theatre was closed, it is stated. The third complaint was filed by W. F. Jahn & Co. for $1,504.76, charged to be due on the plastering bill for the theatre.

Gene O'Keefe, former house manager of the local Blue Mouse theatre, has returned to this city after a short business trip to Billings, Mont., and is connected with the general offices of the Blue Mouse circuit. Hal Degler has succeeded Mr. O'Keefe as manager of the theatre here.

William Cutts, formerly manager of the Columbia theatre, and more recently Eastern manager of all Universal theatres, has been spending the past few days in the city. Upon his arrival here during the early part of January it was expected that he would stay for about a week or ten days before returning to the South.

As part of his holiday greeting to his patrons, Manager Frank Edwards, of the Winter Garden theatre, recently presented each lady patron at every matinee during the week with a decorated art calendar for the year 1923.

Girl cashiers and ushers at Manager Leroy V. Johnson's Liberty theatre are now attired in Spanish toreador costumes, with knee breeches of black silk and many-hued waists and vests, to carry out the Spanish effect given to the theatre when it recently underwent $20,000 worth of decorating, remodeling and refurnishing.

With Seattle Branch-Offices

OFFICERS for the year 1923 were elected by the Northwest Film Board of Trade at a recent meeting in this city. The men who will be in charge of the organization this year are G. F. Mavarre, manager of the Fox Film Exchange, president; Al Rosenberg, manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, vice president; J. L. Schlaiffer, manager of the Universal Exchange, treasurer; E. A. Lamb, of the Select Pictures Corporation Exchange, executive secretary; H. A. Black, manager of the Vitagraph Exchange, trustee, and J. A. Gage, manager of the Educational Pictures Corporation Exchange, trustee. The Northwest Film Board of Trade is allied with similar organizations in Salt Lake City, Denver, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

L. K. Brin, president of the L. K. Brin exchanges, recently returned from a road trip of about three weeks, and after a few days in his office left for Los Angeles, where he expected to stay for several days. While in Los Angeles Mr. Brin was to confer with members of the Warner Brothers' organization in regard to their pictures for 1923, which are being handled in the four Northwestern states by the Brin exchanges.

Louis Amacher, manager of the local American Releasing Corporation Exchange, left the city recently for a business trip into Southern Oregon. Mr. Amacher expected to be gone for about three weeks.

"Broken Chains," Goldwyn's picturization of the scenario which won the Chicago Daily News $10,000 prize has been booked with the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit by the local exchange and will probably be shown at Manager Frank Steffy's Coliseum theatre.

J. M. Linn, G. M. Ballentine and Harry Landstrom, salesmen for the local Fox Film Corporation Exchange, left the city recently after having spent the holidays here. During their recent stay, G. F. Mavarre, manager of the Fox branch, staged a miniature convention for his staff, and exhibited prints of four new Fox pictures that have just been received. These are "The Town That Forgot God," "Paradise Road," "The Village Blacksmith" and "The Face on the Barroom Floor." Mr. Linn went to Oregon, Mr. Ballentine to Spokane and Southern Idaho and Mr. Landstrom will work Washington north and south of Seattle.

"No Luck," the latest Lloyd Hamilton comedy, has just been received by J. A. Gage at the Educational exchange here. The picture was given a pre-release showing the day after it arrived at Manager H. B. Wright's Strand theatre midnight matinee on New Year's Eve, where it was well received by the crowd. "The Man with the Twisted Lip," another Educational release, was also given a first-run showing on the same bill.

Charles Stillwell, motion picture man of Spokane, was a recent visitor on Seattle's film row, where he spent several days at the various exchanges making plans for films to be exhibited in his houses during the year. Mr. Stillwell is president of the Stillwell Theatre Company, owning and operating the Casino, Unique and Class A theatres in Spokane.

In Everett, Wash., a city of 35,000, President Pilce, of the Everett Theatres Company, has engaged George E. Bradley, late of the Seattle Universal exchange, to handle exploitation for the Everett and Orpheum theatres and in Tacoma, General Manager E. J. Myrick, of the Rialto and Colonial theatres, has added Charles J. McManus to his staff.

E. C. Christensen, a live wire advertising man of Olympia, Wash., a city of 10,000 population, is also a recent addition to the Northwest exploitation field, assuming the responsibility for exploitation at the Rex and Ray theatres of the Capital City the first week in December.

In St. Louis' Branch-Offices

THE St. Louis Paramount office is to obtain a new publicity man. Oscar Cantnor was transferred last week to Atlanta, Ga., to handle exploitation and publicity for Paramount in that district.

Clyde Eckhardt, assistant to Fox's general manager, spent two days in St. Louis.

Maurice Aaron is now travelling in Southern Illinois for Hodkinson, while Walter Light has been assigned to the Indiana territory. Aaron has travelled out of St. Louis for several companies, including Realart, United Artists, Select, etc., while Walter Light for several years was city salesman for Fox, but more recently was with F. B. O.

C. D. Hill, local Hodkinson manager, has placed "The Kingdom Within" and "Headless Horseman" with the Brentlinger circuit in Indiana.

Enterprise has secured six William S. Hart re-issues for which new titles and paper have been selected. The first is "The Last of the Stage Coach Bandits."

It has been moving day in the 3300 block on Olive street lately. Milton Simon, St. Louis manager for F. B. O., opened his new offices, 3312 Olive street, on Monday, January 15. The Film Board of Trade is just getting settled into its new headquarters over the F. B. O. exchange, while the Exhibitors' League of St. Louis and Eastern Missouri held the housewarming for their new offices, 3306 Olive street, on Tuesday, January 9.

St. Louis Brevities

The beautiful new Capitol theatre, Benton, Ill., owned by the Reed, Yenn & Hayes circuit, has been opened.

The St. Louis Amusement Company, which operates fourteen neighborhood and second-run houses in St. Louis, has closed contracts for "Robin Hood" and "One Exciting Night." This company ran the first runs on those pictures at the Pershing theatre, Delmar boulevard, west of Hamilton avenue.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of St. Louis and Eastern Missouri are boosting the $88,000,000 bond issue to be voted on by the people of St. Louis February 9. The exhibitors decided that anything that will build up the town should benefit them.

Arthur Robinson, proprietor and manager of the Hickory theatre, Hickory street, near Jefferson avenue, and his porter, Frank Winstead, 18 years old, 2215A Chouteau avenue, were arrested on January 8, following a fire in the theatre. Captain John P. Dorkin of Engine Company No. 10 reported to the Police Department Arson squad that he found evidence that oil had been poured on the theatre floor and also a five-gallon can that had contained gasoline in the rear of the theatre. The fire caused a loss of $1,000. Questioned by the police, Robinson and Winstead denied having any knowledge of how the fire started.

Central Pennsylvania Notes

C. Floyd Hopkins, manager of ten Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and Reading, Pa., is convalescing after an illness from which it was for a time feared he would not recover. Mr. Hopkins, who is a director of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania, and one of the most prominent exhibitors of Central Pennsylvania, was suffering from grip and other complications, including toxic poisoning. His physicians now say he is past the crisis and on the road to recovery.

Manager Quirk, of the Family theatre, Shamokin, Pa., has adopted a policy of introducing vaudeville in addition to motion pictures, in his house, following the example of the Strand theatre in the same city, which recently adopted a similar policy.

A new theatre is to be built on the present site of the Lyric in Minersville, Pa. Ground has been broken for the building, which will have a seating capacity of 830, including a spacious balcony. W. H. Lee, a Philadelphia architect, has designed the building, which will be known as Shugar's theatre.

Western New York News

Louis Eisenberg, manager of the Columbia for several years, has succeeded Elmer Winegar as manager of the Elmwood, Buffalo's big neighborhood theatre. Mr. Winegar has resigned to enter the industrial film business. C. R. Higgins, formerly at the Colonial, will succeed Mr. Eisenberg at the Columbia and Joseph A. Schuchert, Jr., will be manager of the Colonial. J. A. Schuchert, father of the new Colonial manager, has bought out Frederick Ullman's interest in the Columbia and Colonial. The changes become effective Monday, January 22.

The new Palace theatre in Jamestown, N. Y., will open Monday evening, January 29, according to an announcement by Peterson & Woods, who are building the house.

Walter Bengough, well known local film salesman and at one time assistant manager of the Strand, has been appointed manager of the Jefferson theatre in Auburn, N. Y., succeeding John J. Breslin who has joined the Schine theatrical company.

Charles Jenkins has taken over the Strand Theatre in Tonawanda, N. Y., from J. Spievack, who has become a Wurlitzer organ salesman.

Loew's State and the Lafayette Square have both boosted their admission prices five cents all around. Shea's Hippodrome has raised its balcony price 10 cents and the Elmwood, a neighborhood theatre, has increased its admissions slightly to meet the added cost of an augmented orchestra, a big Wurlitzer organ and special music acts.

C. Sharp-Minor has dropped off the map. The Lafayette-Square organist disappeared last week. William O'Neil is taking his place.

Kansas City Jottings

With the opening of the Kansas State Legislature next week, the M. P. T. O. Kansas will maintain an office in the National Hotel, Topeka, for the purpose of keeping exhibitors throughout the state posted on the activities during the legislative program. C. E. Cook, business manager of the Kansas organization will be in charge.

The following changes in management of theatres in the Kansas City district have been announced during the last week:

Pastime theatre, Ottawa, Kas., purchased by Scott and Goodell from R. E. Lawrence; Strand theatre, Kansas City, purchased by Arthur Crone from Robert Leonard; Rowley Wilson has succeeded Horace Ulrich, who resigned as manager of the Orpheum theatre, Joplin, Mo.; H. Beckley has succeeded George Cruzen as manager of the Cozy theatre, Topeka, Kas., Cruzen having been transferred by the Hostettler Company to the Plaza theatre, Sioux City, Ia.; Mozart theatre, Kansas City, reopened by the Central Amusement Company.

Exhibitors of Kansas City, Kas., are planning a rabbit dinner for all film salesmen of Kansas City. The problem of the whole affair, however, according to "Bones" Smith, the 220 pound showman of Kansas City, Kas., is "who is going to catch the rabbits?"

Around the Buffalo Exchanges

BOND PHOTOPLAYS CORPORATION is getting away to an auspicious start. The Strand has just completed a run of "Sure Fire Flint." The Lafayette Square has booked "Notoriety" and is this week showing "Enter Madame." Shea's Hippodrome has signed up for "Shadows." Fred M. Zimmerman has closed Salamanca, Elmira, Olean, Batavia and other Western New York towns 100 per cent. Sydney Samson is going after the local houses. Everything is now running fine at the exchange in Franklin street.

E. J. Hayes, manager of the First National Exchange and the members of the local sales staff journeyed to Albany last week end for a sales conference, presided over by R. H. Clark and attended by employees of the New York, Buffalo and Albany offices. Ellis Redden, of the home office, visited the Buffalo exchange this week. H. L. Beecroft was at a party one evening last week at which he acted as cook.

John A. Byowski, formerly assistant booker at the Paramount office, has succeeded George Canty as booker at the Fox Exchange. Ray Powers, assistant manager of the Paramount office, is so busy these days that he is going around looking like one of the head hunters of the South Sea Islands. He doesn't get time to shave, he explains. Allan S. Moritz, branch manager, had a conference with Harold P. Dygert and Mayor MacFarlane, of Associated Theatres, Inc., last Saturday afternoon. Probably put over a big contract on the "39."

Henry W. Kahn claims that he is so pestered by exhibitors rushing to sign up Metro productions that he had to run away and hide last week. He went to Binghamton.

Harry Walsh, shipping clerk at the Pathe exchange, is passing around stogies. Why? Stork left a baby girl last week. Oh, you Harry!

Ernest Williams, formerly with Nu-Art Pictures Corporation and Paramount, has succeeded Johnny Regan as assistant booker at the Universal exchange.

The First Graphic exchange is now releasing all the features formerly handled by Niagara Pictures Corporation. Harry Marsey, former general manager for Niagara, has become interested in a store on Main street.

Barrett C. Kiesling, personal representative of Cecil B. DeMille, was in town last week in the interest of "Adam's Rib," Paramount's big special. He made a tour of the newspaper offices in company with H. L. Royster, exploitation representative at the Buffalo exchange.

There was an offensive of officials at the Vitagraph exchange this week, when C. R. Cullingworth, special representative in the sales promotion department, G. A. Balsdon, assistant general manager, and Mr. Morrison, auditor, came to town to visit Manager C. W. Anthony. Mr. Anthony announces "My Wild Irish Rose," signed up for presentation at the Palace theatre January 21 to 27.

Frank Moynihan, of Select, has signed up everything with Harold P. Dygert for showing in the dozen or so Associated Theatres, Inc., houses. M. J. McDermott, traveling auditor, visited Manager Harry E. Lotz last week.

Along Kansas City's Film Row

WALTER HIERS, Paramount comedian, was a visitor in Kansas City Wednesday. He was en route to Syracuse, N. Y., where he is to marry Miss Ada McWilliams. The wedding was scheduled for Christmas day, according to Walter, but was postponed because of unfinished work on the production, "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," in which Hiers plays the leading role intended for Wallace Reid.

Dan L. Martin, who formerly operated a chain of theatres in Kentucky, has succeeded Bert L. Mendelson as manager of the Kansas City Associated Exhibitors branch office, the latter having been called to the New York office Saturday without knowing what was in store for him.

J. A. Gribble, formerly a salesman with the First National branch at Pittsburgh, now is with the First National Exchange in Kansas City.

Col. "Bill" Yoder, southern division manager for Pathe, who spent last week in Kansas City again is predicting "big years" as usual. No sooner had Mr. Yoder arrived in town than he called a sales meeting and proceeded to preach a "pep" screen.

Once again the Kansas City F. B. O. office has come through with flying colors, having won the salesmen's contract during the month of December.

Lew Nathanson, who formerly operated the Gem Theatre at Topeka, Kas., has turned film salesman, having been assigned to the city territory by the F. B. O. office.

In Des Moines' Branch-Offices

SYMPATHY is expressed for Miss Rose Browder, in charge of the poster department at the Pathe exchange, Des Moines, on the death of her mother who made her home in Des Moines.

Mr. Plues, manager of the Pathe exchange, has returned from a trip into the territory.

Kennebeck, of Famous Players exploitation, is expected back Saturday evening from Omaha.

Roland McCurdy, feeling rather embarrassed in a new suit and hat, said good bye to the staff of the Universal exchange office last week and set out for Buffalo, N. Y., where he is to have charge of Universal publicity.

Des Moines Chatter

At the Strand theatre, Des Moines, a stunt which amused the audience greatly was a song, "Stories," sung by one of the orchestra while the words were flashed on the screen. Where the singer was seemed to cause much interest. At the end of the song the spot was flashed on the bass viol player.

Santa Claus presented C. E. Ross, Garden theatre doorman, with an extra set of teeth. Now you should see Mr. Ross' Teddy Roosevelt smile!

Mr. and Mrs. Rice of Algona, managers of the Opera House, were visitors at the Pathe exchange last week.

Emmetsburg was represented among the Des Moines visitors at the exchanges last week.

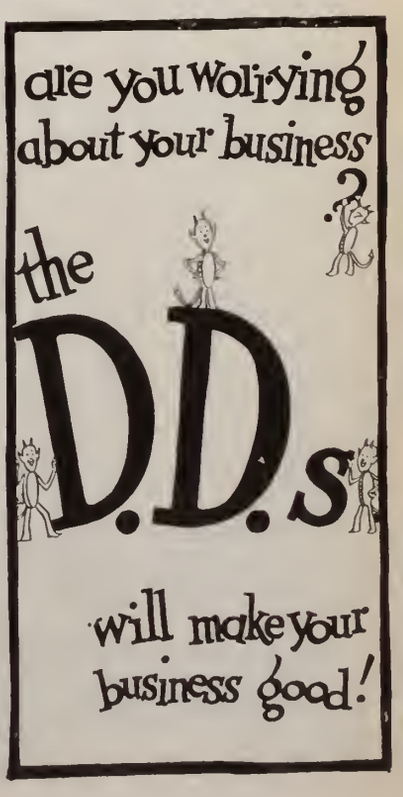
As a publicity stunt for "Burning Sands" which is on this week, 5,000 copies of the song were given out at the Strand theatre, Des Moines, last week, and the song will also be given as a special musical number by organist and orchestra.

Indianapolis Snapshots

The Keystone Amusement Company of Indianapolis has filed final certificate of dissolution.

Nothing was heard from the several Sunday movie squabbles going on in Indiana cities in the last few days. Movie troubles appeared to have been shifted to the State Legislature where the censorship bill pended.

Miss Julia Landers, head of the visual education department of the public schools and Mrs. Henry E. Hayward were appointed on a committee to co-operate with film distributors in the showing of educational and health pictures Saturday mornings and afternoons each week for school children. The appointments were made by the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays. The shows are held in the auditorium at the public library. There are twelve members on the committee.



News of the Carolinas

Secretary H. B. Varner is making a strong drive for a hundred per cent membership for the North Carolina M. P. T. O. Martin Goldsmith, representing the Paramount Publicity Corporation, is in the state making a drive to tie up the exhibitors with their slide proposition which automatically makes them members of the state organization. It is hoped to get one hundred additional members by this drive.

Several elaborate electric signs which formerly adorned the front of the picture theatres of Durham, N. C. are now reposing in the cellars, owing to the passing of a city ordinance condemning the use of electric signs over the sidewalks in the city business section.

Jack Reville, of the Broadway, Richmond, Va., spent several days in Greensboro the past week. He reports good progress being made in the construction of Pryor Bros. new theatre in Richmond, which will be their finest house.

The Palace, Morehead City, owned and operated by R. T. Wade, was destroyed by fire during the past week.

W. L. Lassiter is opening a new theatre in Dunn, N. C.

W. E. Atkins has opened the old Messenger Opera House at Goldsboro with first run pictures.

Butte Brevities

Merle Davis, general manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company and president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Montana, new unit of the national organization, is spending a few days in Anaconda in connection with his office as president. Mr. Davis reports the new unit is meeting with hearty approval from all the important theatre centers of the state. He is in receipt of numerous letters that indicate enthusiasm as well as approbation of all exhibitors. There is every indication that the Montana unit will be one of the leading units of the west.

An interesting experiment was tried recently by the People's theatre of Butte. Universal's "Foolish Wives" had been shown for a week at advanced prices in a first run house, The People's booked it for a second run and advertised a nine-day showing with a graduated scale of prices. First four days, 30c.; next two days, 20c. and last three days, 10c. Good crowds attended each day and the run was finished with a satisfactory profit to the house. The slogan was "A price for every pocketbook." It was the first time any picture ever ran for nine days in Butte and the result from day to day was watched with much interest by the film exchanges and other exhibitors.

This graduated scale of prices was so effective in getting good box office receipts that the management expects to repeat the experiment in the near future.

A fierce snowstorm accompanied by a blizzardy wind rushed into Butte on Sunday evening and played havoc with the Rialto electric sign.

Charlotte's Film Row News

THE week-end brought the usual gang to the O. Henry, Greensboro, N. C. the favorite stop-over for Sunday for Carolina salesmen. The following were registered there: E. E. Heller and George V. Atkison, Pathe, Charlotte; Bryan Craver, First National, Charlotte; J. B. Horton, Universal, Charlotte; Mr. Trueblood, Vitagraph, Washington; C. L. Tyler, Fox, Charlotte.

M. A. Levy, of Chicago has assumed management of the Charlotte Fox office, succeeding W. J. Kupper, who has received a promotion to the management of the Pittsburgh office. Kupper has made many friends in the Carolina territory since coming to Charlotte.

E. E. Heller, of Pathe, Charlotte, is on the road again hitting the big spots while the office is temporarily in command of southern division booker-inspector George E. Ebersole, one of the veterans of Pathe service in this territory.

The impression around Charlotte's film row is that no changes in the personnel of the Charlotte office of Southern Enterprises will be made under Famous players management. As far as can be ascertained unofficially, manager C. E. Peppiatt has received no advice along this line.

Much interest is manifest here in the purchase of Enterprise Distributing Corporation by Wm. K. Jenkins and John W. Quillian, one of their seven exchanges being located here. Jenkins is very well known and highly esteemed among Charlotte's film colony.

Louis Ingram is covering the Carolina territory for Al Lichtman Corporation.

The appointment of Dan Micholove as general manager of the Southern Enterprises theatres here and elsewhere has been learned with extreme satisfaction by his many friends in the Carolinas. He began with the Lynch enterprises in Asheville, N. C. fifteen years ago when merely a boy.

W. C. Calloway, district manager of First National spent several days in the Charlotte exchange the past week.

I. P. Stone, of the Atlanta Vitagraph office, is arranging key city dates on "The Ninety and Nine" in the Carolinas.

Rudolph Lehman is making Carolina towns with a portfolio for Southern States Film Company.

Around Butte's Branch Offices

C. M. VAN HORN, manager of the Spokane Branch of the Pathe Exchange is spending the week in Butte attending to business in connection with the Pathe office. Mr. Van Horn is the chief executive of this office.

E. J. McIvor and M. J. Felin of the Film Booking Office of America from Salt Lake City registered last week at the Grand Hotel.

E. E. Harris invited a number of newspapermen and their wives with all the theatre men to a preview of "The Third Alarm" at the American theatre, Saturday, Jan. 6th. According to exploitation representatives it promises to be one of the big features of the year. It will be shown here in the near future.

Jack Rue, manager of the Universal Exchange of Butte, is touring Montana to book "The Flirt" for an early showing in the big first run theatres of the state, while Marshall Taylor is doing a lot of publicity work in the Butte and Spokane territory.

John Rugar, manager of the Vitagraph Exchange of Salt Lake City, is calling on local theatre managers in Butte and is contemplating a trip through the state in the interests of his company.

C. P. Redick of New York City is in Butte this week engaged in auditing the books of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Butte is the chief shipping office for the state.

With Washington's Exchanges

Manager W. F. Ballinger, of the Washington office of Federated Films of Baltimore, announces that Maynard Madden, formerly with Reelart, has taken the position of booker, succeeding Miss Matthews, who is to take similar duties in D. M. Thomas' Strand Film Service. Jennings Brewer, one of the pioneers in the film game here, is to be foreman of the shipping department of the Federated, and Joe Walsh has left the organization.

Walter Lusk, new manager of First National, was under the weather, following his taking over the local exchange, and has just returned to his desk, where the many girls that enliven the office had a floral tribute all ready.

Johnnie Bachman, of Educational, says that at the last meeting of the F-I-L-M Board new bylaws were adopted, and some things affecting the welfare of the industry in nearby States served by the exchanges here were brought up. The get-together will be held later on. Satisfactory functioning of the board is now looked for, and the hiatus since the Hoy system evaporated is over for the present at least.

Washington Close-Ups

Douglas D. Rothacker spent several days of last week at the Washington Hotel here as one of the leaders of the Screen Departmental and National Advertising Commission of the International Advertising Clubs of the World. Later he went to New York.

After several days here, in the interests of Al Lichtman and Thomas Ince, V. P. Whittaker, has left on his new schedule as a special representative for the home office and studios of Preferred Pictures, Al Lichtman, B. P. Schulberg, et al.

Harry Crandall has returned to Washington after his two weeks trick at the home office assignment in First National, New York City.

Fallas Brouche, whose late assistant manager in the Metropolitan, William Vernon Broyles, has taken over the management of the Crandall Central, announces the appointment of Ashley Abendschein as ass.stant manager. Abendschein was on the house staff at the Metropolitan, under Mr. Brouche.

William C. Ewing, Crandall staff artist, returned last Tuesday from a week-end with his parents in New York City. Through a confused identification, Ewing was erroneously reported by wire to have been seriously injured and in a New York Hospital.

Mrs. Locher of the Crandall staff has been ill for the past two weeks, and her office has been in charge of her secretary, Mrs. Grace Woodburn.

Tiffany Talhafer, theatre operator, was a Washington visitor from the rural metropolis of Roanoke. Tiffany is finishing a new colored photo-play house whose name is to be decided by contest. The Hampden will then become a vaudeville and road show for the Roanoke brunet elite.

The new picture palace, The Chevy Chase theatre, is expected to open the first week in February.

James H. Depue, retired clergyman, indicted on the charge of using the mails to defraud, and who failed to get the government to pay the expense of subpoenas of witnesses, now asks that the press agent for Charlie Chaplin, screen comedian, be summoned to testify for him. The press agent, referred to, is L. Monta Bell, a former editor of the Washington Herald. Depue says that Bell can prove the preachers assertion that his civil service correspondence school course was endorsed by senators, including Capper of Kansas, Elkins, W. Virginia, and former senator Hoke Smith of Georgia.

Florida Slants

C. D. Cooley, manager of the Strand Theatre, of Tampa, has donated the theatre every Sunday morning for the use of the Down Town Bible Class. The Class was organized on Sundav, Jan. 7th with a good number of charter members. New members are being listed daily and it is anticipated the classes will be well attended.

E. J. Walton, manager of the Rivoli theatre in Ybor City, is going to give away a "Baby Limousine." It is a nifty little car and every kid in Ybor is crazy to be the one who will handle the steering wheel.

A. Juran, manager of the Casino theatres, in Ybor City and West Tampa, brought The Four Horsemen back for a return date, playing it three days in each of his houses at 25c top. The business was immense as the film had been shown at a dollar on its first visit.

The report comes from Fort Pierce that the long looked for steel, to be used for the roof of the new Sunrise Theatre, has arrived and the work of completing the building will be rushed.

New England Brevities

A small audience in the Music Hall theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., went into a panic last Wednesday when a strip of film in the operating booth broke, exploded and started a fire that resulted in damage of $500. The fire was confined to the booth, but three children fainted in the rush for exits. Owen M. Reddy, manager of the house, said that the fact that only 150 were present at the matinee saved a more serious stampede. John Butler, an operator, and the only one in the booth at the time, was badly burned about the hands in fighting the fire. Manager Reddy obtained new films and the evening performance went off without a hitch.

Under the auspices of the Theatrical Stage Employees of Boston, Mass., the third annual theatrical ball will be held in Mechanics Building, Boston, on January 30. The grand march of stars, in accord with time honored custom, will start at midnight. A number of film and stage stars will come on for the event. Johnson's Symphonic Orchestra of fifty pieces will furnish music.

The new Rialto theatre in Leominster opened last Monday night with gala attendance. All city officials headed by Mayor and Mrs. Henry S. Sawtelle, attended the opening night performance. The theatre is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. McEvoy. The opening feature was Thomas Meighan in "Back Home and Broke," and, despite the severe storm that raged that night, the house was packed. The owners' son, Arthur B. McEvoy, is manager of the house, and also runs the Gem. The opening was heralded by a full-page tie-up with leading merchants and firms, with the "Come to Leominster" type of appeal.

Milford, Mass., got all "het up" when it was announced that Anna Q. Nilson was to appear personally at the Opera House, managed by Joseph M. Hurl. Mr. Hurl thought she was the bona fide star; she convinced the police that she was when they investigated, after complaints; and when the management refused to prosecute, the case was turned over to the Commissioner of Public Safety, Colonel A. F. Foote. The woman had taken no money for the appearance, and so no charge was brought against her. She finally was identified as Mrs. Blanche Anderson, 12 Cochituate street, Natick, the mother of four children. The resemblance to the star is extraordinary.

Connecticut is taking no chances of theatre disasters from overloaded roofs. Superintendent Robert T. Hurley, of the State police, has issued orders to all theatre owners of the State that they must hold no performances in their houses until they are sure that not only the roofs are clear of snow and ice, but also the fire escapes and passageways.

Olymuia Theatres, Inc., of Massachusetts, the circuit of which Nathan Gordon is president, has declared a dividend on both common and preferred stock, payable the 15th of this month. They are paying 25 cents a share on common, and 1¾ per cent on preferred.

Glen R. Cooke, a student at the Boston Conservatory of Music, has been awarded a $100 prize recently offered by Hodkinson in co-operation with Jake Loury, manager of the Beacon theatre, Boston. The prize was offered for the best cue sheet of incidental music to go with the "Headless Horseman."

Nathan and Samuel Goldstein, of Springfield and Longmeadow, Mass., respectively, have been active of late. They have incorporated the Pittsfield Palace, motion picture theatre company, for $50,000, and immediately put through the purchase of the Majestic theatre from the company of that name. They also own the Colonial, another Pittsfield, Mass., motion picture house. The Majestic selling price was $317,500.

Canadian Bulletins

An important recent development in moving picture theatre circles of Canada has been the appointment of Mr. Ray H. Leason, of Toronto, as district manager of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation for the theatres of that company in Manitoba and Northern Ontario. Mr. Leason, who has had 10 years' experience in film theatre work, particularly in the presentation of program specialties, will have supervising charge of the Capitol and Providence theatres in Winnipeg and of the corporation's houses in Fort William, Port Arthur and other cities of the Middle West. He will make his headquarters in the Winnipeg Capitol but will spend much time in visiting various houses.

With the appointment of Mr. Leason, the selection of a new house manager for the Winnipeg Capitol has also been made, the appointee being John T. Fiddes, of Montreal, a pioneer exhibitor of Canada and a former resident of Winnipeg. Mr. Fiddes took over his new duties on January 15 after which Mr. H. M. Thomas, director of theatres for Famous Players Canadian Corporation, returned to Toronto and thence to Montreal to resume the personal management of the Capitol theatre in Montreal. Mr. Thomas was accompanied by his wife, who is well known in music circles as Miss Leila Auger. She appears in many operatic scenes, prologues and other numbers at theatres of the corporation.

The Montreal Women's Club, probably the most influential women's organization in that city, has placed a formal request before the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors that the ban against Arbuckle pictures be maintained in the Province of Quebec.

The executive of the Saskatchewan Social Service Council at Regina, Sask., has forwarded a resolution to Will H. Hays which is a protest against the re-introduction of Arbuckle pictures in Canada.

Some sort of protest against moving pictures in which Fatty Arbuckle is starred has been made in every Province in the Dominion of Canada. No attempt has yet been made to show an Arbuckle picture since the bans were first established.

The managers of three leading theatres of Toronto co-operated in the presentation of a special benefit performance in Massey Hall, the large local auditorium on Friday evening, January 12, the proceeds of which were turned over to the use of destitute veterans of the Great War. Those who promoted the big show included Manager J. Shea, of Shea's Victoria Street theatre; Manager J. Bernstein, of Loew's theatre, and Manager N. K. Miller, of Pantages theatre, each of whom supplied various features for the special program, as well as musicians from their own orchestras. The opening number on the bill was a new film release, "Kings of the Forest," the use of which was donated by Canadian Universal Films, Limited, through the kindness of Clair Hague, general manager of Canadian Universal.

John V. Ward, manager of the Province theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, for some years, has been appointed manager of the Allen theatre at Stratford, Ontario. Mr. Ward had charge of the Winnipeg Province while it was controlled by Jule and J. J. Allen. The Province was recently taken over by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation.

Harry Hurwitz, of Boston, Mass., has become manager of the Monarch theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, by Henry Morton, proprietor of the theatre, who is his uncle.

Walter Dolman, one of the best known theatre organists of the Canadian West, has been appointed organist of the Starland theatre, Winnipeg. Mr. Dolman first became known as a musician in Burton-on-Trent, England, and went to Winnipeg four years ago when he became organist of the Province theatre. During recent months he had been at the College theatre, Winnipeg.

A visitor in Toronto has been John Hazza, of Calgary, Alberta, district manager for the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, having supervision of theatres in Calgary, Edmonton and other cities. Mr. Hazza has been conferring with officials of the company at Toronto headquarters.

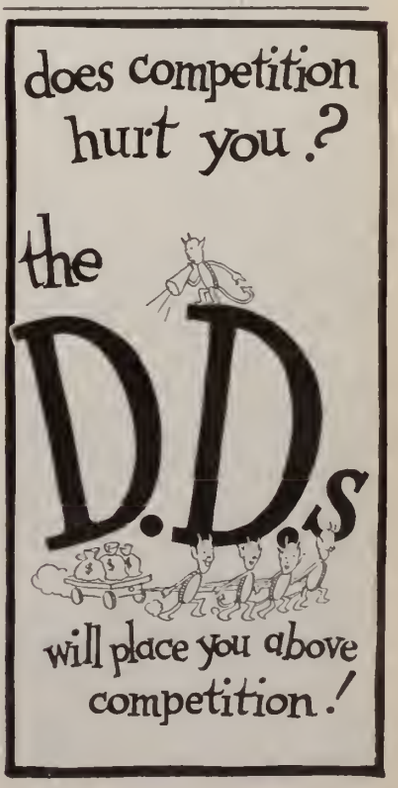
Robert E. Hicks, proprietor and manager of the Cabrillo Theatre, who is planning the early construction of a new theatre to be named the Balboa, states that Sid Grauman of Los Angeles, who has been mentioned as being interested in the project, will not be connected with it in any way. Plans call for the razing of the present old frame structures on the new theatre site within the next sixty days.



Eastern New York Items

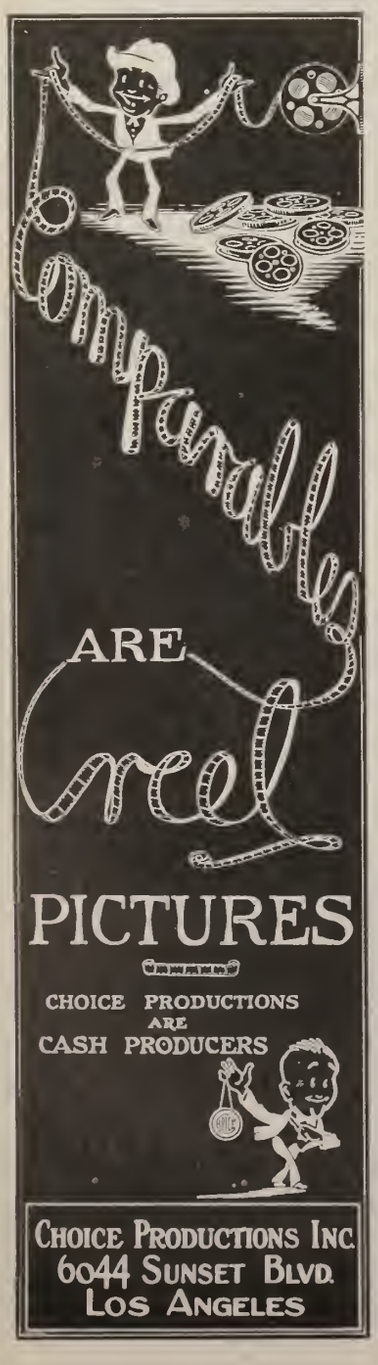
Matters have adjusted themselves in Schenectady, among the many motion picture theatres of that city, the owners of which were fearful of a bad slump coming with the opening of the State, a 2,200 seat house of the Strand circuit. According to many of the managers, the only slump occurred during the opening week.

In Schenectady, motion picture theatre owners declare that this year is running far ahead of last, and that last November and December panned out the biggest two months in the last five years.

The American in Schenectady has decided to cut out matinees, except on Saturday and Sunday.

William Shirley, of the Strand in Schenectady, spent a portion of last week in New York.

Fred G. Smith, an operator at the Strand in Schenectady, has hit upon the use of slides in connection with the regular shows, and is scoring quite a hit. Mr. Smith not only makes his own slides, but also devises the text. They are in the nature of a series of historical events. The slides used on January 17 called attention to the fact that Benjamin Franklin was born on January 17, 1706. The slide carried the following words, in addition: "No man was ever glorious who was not laborious."



Proctors theatre put on a special bill the past week in Albany in the ninth anniversary of Mr. Proctor's ownership of the Grand.

Milwaukee Flashes

A much coveted honor in sport circles has come to Ralph A. Wettstein, manager of the Merrill theatre, in his appointment to the Wisconsin Athletic Commission by Governor Blaine. This commission deals with all professional athletics, particularly boxing, and Mr. Wettstein's appointment covers a period of five years, succeeding C. M. Morter.

Mr. Wettstein has long been identified with the motion picture industry. He was with Paramount-Artcraft from the time their Milwaukee office was opened until it was closed by order of the War Board as a non-essential. He later established the Midwest Distributing Company, leaving them two years ago to become manager of the Merrill.

Harry Hart, manager of the local branch of the Film Booking Offices of America, has just been awarded a $1,000 prize for a showing made in December. Competing with branch offices everywhere, Mr. Hart showed the greatest volume of business for the month, the Indianapolis and Kansas City branches ranking second and third, respectively.

Rhode Island Notes

The Strand and Modern Theatres, Providence, R. I., this week presented "When Knighthood was in Flower." An extensive advertising campaign was employed to put it across and indications on opening day were that the houses would reap the harvest of a well directed plan of exploitation.

The Victory Theatre, Providence, R. I., this week in presenting "Garrison's Finish" staged actual horse races on the stage, two high bloods being used in the "extra added feature."

For several years past, bills have been presented in the Legislature seeking Sunday moving picture shows. It is announced that the theatre men themselves will make no attempt to have such a law enacted this season.

San Francisco Briefs

Maude McFaul, local pianist, was the soloist for the January bill at the Sequoia Little Theatre. 1725 Washington street which was opened Saturday evening, January 6th, with a group of "Quaint Comedies From Four Different Nations." The musical program was carried out to harmonize with the atmosphere of the play, selected from both modern and the older composers of the four nations.

G. Ormay, who assumed charge of the New Portola Orchestra when the theatre opened several weeks ago, has won many admirers, together with Charlie Pincus, for the manner in which he handles motion picture music and the way Pincus manages the house.

To stimulate interest among San Francisco musical artists, and to give young musicians of recognized merit an opportunity to establish themselves before an audience, the California and Granada theatres have inaugurated a series of Sunday concerts.

They are to be called "Discovery Concerts" and are to be held simultaneously at 12:30 every Sunday, at the California and Granada. Five young artists will be presented each Sunday at each theatre, according to present plants of Managing Directors Roth and Partington. These theatre men have been holding tryouts one night each week for a number of years and during these tryouts, have discovered a large number of young musicians whom they believe are ready for public appearance. As an added feature of the concerts, the Granada Theatre will present Oliver Wallace in an organ recital, and Paul Ash and his syncosymphonists in their regular weekly concerts. At the California, Falvey will be presented at the organ, and Ben Black's Band will present its regular weekly concert.

Lionel H. Keene, chief man for Loew on the Pacific Coast, has recently received from many patrons of Loew's-Warfield in San Francisco compliments for the special attractions he has shown at that motion-picture house and for the special ideas he has shown. One of the ideas that brought letters of approval was the window displays shown adjoining the theatre. Each week he displays in that window some scene from the motion picture play and, as the people consider them very attractive, the window is crowded each day. As that window is close to the box office, many purchase tickets after they are attracted by the window display.

"Fury" Still Attracts Attention

The stills of the big German square rigger used in "Fury," a First National January release, have attracted wide attention since their publication in the rotogravure sections of newspapers throughout the country. The latest request for copies of these stills has just come to First National from the National Geographical Society in Washington for publication in its monthly magazine.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"The Girl I Loved"
Charles Ray-Allied-Dis't.—Six Reels
(Reviewed by Carl Jessen)

CHARLES RAY has returned to the type of production which established him as a star in "The Girl I Loved," an adaptation of James Whitcomb Riley's poem of the same name. Since the Hoosier poet's works are widely read, there is no question that the star has a vehicle here which will be well patronized. There isn't much substance in the poem insofar as suggesting any dramatic flavor. Rather is it a character sketch which carries homespun humanities—which tugs at the heart with its sympathetic appeal—and which will conquer the spectator because the figures are humanized in a lifelike manner.

The role is one with which Ray has long been familiar. As a result he can portray the type better than anyone else. We see him as the shy barefoot kid who learns to love a little orphan his mother adopts. After a lapse of time he is the lover, too bashful to plead his suit and procrastination proves the thief of time—Willie Brown, the rival swain, asks the girl for her hand in marriage before our timid hero musters courage to do the same.

The story as prepared for the screen gives Ray wonderful opportunities for his character sketches. In a highly artistic manner, he portrays the suffering of the love-sick youth who is too proud to let anyone know that he is being tortured because his sweetheart is to wed another. In two instances, this is accomplished by visions, both of which are too lengthy, while one ends with his threat to end his life with a big revolver placed at his head—which will, no doubt, give the censors something to work on.

There are four important roles, the youth played by Ray, the rival by Ramsey Wallace, the girl by Patsy Ruth Miller and the mother by Edythe Chapman. Miss Miller makes a charming orphan and enacts the sketch in a delightful manner. A number of the scenes by Ray are truly works of art and will go a long way toward placing him back in the top-notch position he once held among film stars, provided, of course, that the scissors are held here and there.

The Cast

John Middleton.....Charles Ray
Mary.....Patsy Ruth Miller
Willie Brown.....Ramsey Wallace
Mother Middleton.....Edythe Chapman

Adapted from poem by James Whitcomb Riley. Scenario by Albert Ray. Continuity by Harry L. Decker. Directed by Joseph De Grasse. Produced by Charles Ray Productions. Released by Allied Distributors.

The Story—Treats of a love-sick youth who is too proud to let anyone know that he is being tortured because his sweetheart is to wed another. Rival proposes marriage before bashful youth musters courage to do the same.

Classification—Picturization of Riley's famous poem. Character sketch similar to star's early vehicles, rich in pathos and romance.

Production Highlights—The opportunities given the star to display his original character sketch—that of a small town or farmer type of youth. The artistic production. The able direction. The good work of the supporting cast. The atmosphere. The romantic appeal and the tug for sympathy.

Exploitation Angles—This presents excellent angles for exploitation. Why not put over a campaign with book-dealers on a picture version of book—with illustrations by Christy? Play up that Ray has role which made him a star. Play up atmosphere, and dress your lobby accordingly. Put on a prologue suggestive of the atmosphere.

"Hunting Big Game in Africa"
Eugene H. Roth—Ten Reels
(Reviewed by L. C Moen)

THIS picture, to our mind, must go on record as one of the best pictures of its kind yet made. It has the lure of travel, scenic beauty, thrills, humor, adventure and every quality needed to make such a picture interesting.

Just as "Nanook of the North" was the story of the Esquimaux, "Hunting Big Game in Africa" is the story of Darkest Africa. It lacks the compact structure and unified story that "Nanook" possessed, but it amply compensates for this with its endless variety of subject matter.

The picture is an ever-changing panorama of African scenery, rare wild creatures, tropical perils, thrills and here and there a bit of spontaneous humor. As a result, interest holds up well throughout the ten reels.

The photography is better than some that has come out of the tropics, owing to the excellent camera work and to the fact that the film was developed at the time it was taken, instead of being stored away for development at a later time, which inevitably results in some deterioration in photographic quality.

The picture develops its really great interest when the wild animal hunt starts. We see the little band of explorers starting into the wilds. Encounters with wild animals develop, with admirable close-ups of these savage beasts.

When the party reaches the tse-tse fly region, the oxen are unable to withstand the attack of these poisonous insects and the party transfers to automobiles, gasoline for which was transported into the interior with great difficulty.

This feature of hunting big game in a flivver is new in such a picture, as far as we know, and gives a distinctly novel angle to the hunting episodes. Some excellent comedy results, too, when the animals turn and attack the flivver, which pursues them all over the veldt.

The wild animal scenes in themselves are admirable. Some fifty types are shown, many of them new to the screen. Close-up effects are frequent. There are real thrills here, since every scene bears the stamp of reality. The closing portion of the picture, in which the party is attacked by a herd of wild African elephants, is superb, and carries the real "wallop."

H. A. Snow, the hunter and Sidney Snow, the photographer, deserve great credit for the manner in which the entire filming has been handled. The titles are informative and carry the picture along in an informal way.

Classification—Travel and adventure film, depicting wild animals and savage tribes of Africa.

Production Highlights—Scenes at the waterhole, showing rare wild animals. Lion hunting. Attack of the wild elephants. Chasing big game in a flivver. The excellent photography. Close-ups of wild beasts. The wide variety of animals. The African village scenes.

Exploitation Angles—Tie-ups with schools, travel clubs, scientific societies, and the like. Displays of stuffed animals, animal pelts, hunting equipment, and the like. Send an old battered flivver around town with a sign "See how this flivver chased wild animals in Darkest Africa," etc. Jungle effect in lobby. Strong publicity campaign. Special showings to prominent people of the town, educators, etc.

Drawing Power—Suitable for a wide variety of houses, properly exploited.

"Dark Secrets"
Paramount—Six Reels
(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

DR. COUE and Auto-Suggestion. Dr. Lorenz, the Austrian miracle man and his gifted hands. Both of these men and their wonderful work are on the tongues of everyone. Here's a picture whose theme follows along the teachings and work of both these men of the hour. The heroine is supposedly made a cripple for life when she is thrown from the back of a high spirited horse. A mysterious Egyptian promises to cure her when all others have failed. He accomplishes the cure with auto-suggestion and "laying on of hands" stuff. What could be more opportune?

"Dark Secrets" has a decided appeal because it is different. It has a story that is off the beaten path of screen literature. It is enacted by a cast notable for its fine types rather than the popularity of the individual players. Miss Dalton as Ruth Rutherford has an appealing role and she makes the most of it. The star is attractive at all times, even when confined to the invalid's chair. She lives the part or at least gives one that impression. The rest of the cast is adequate.

The production is well supplied with dramatic situations. These come fast and often. The falling of Ruth at the horse show is the first. Another comes when Ruth is cured by the mysterious Egyptian. Another when the Doctor sneaks into the heroine's room to claim her as his reward for curing her. Another when Biskra stabs him as he is about to collect that reward. So on and so forth down through a long list of spine coolers.

The Cast

Ruth Rutherford.....Dorothy Dalton
Mrs. Rutherford.....Julia Swayne Gordon
Earl of Wallingford.....Robert Ellis
Mildred Rice.....Ellen Cassidy
Dr. Mohamed Ali.....Jose Ruben
Biskra.....P. Hartigan

By Edmund Goulding. Directed by Victor Fleming. Photographed by Hal Rossom.

The Story—Ruth Rutherford, a wild untamable creature is thrown from the saddle while going over the jumps and crippled. Knowing that she will be a cripple for life, she breaks off her engagement to Wallie, who returns to Cairo, where he sinks to the depths of degradation. Hearing of his plight, Ruth decides to go to him. In Cairo, she again meets Dr. Ali, a famous surgeon, who promises to cure her—for a price—herself. She is cured and her faithful servant, Biskra kills the doctor just as he is about to claim his reward. Ruth and Wallie are reunited.

Classification—A dramatic story of a girl's struggle between love for her sweetheart and the strange power of mysterious Egyptian surgeon.

Production Highlights—The scene in which Miss Dalton determined to conquer a wild Arabian steed, is thrown as she goes over one of the jumps and is made a hopeless cripple, it seems. The colorful settings which convey the atmosphere of Cairo to the screen. Some very elaborate interiors. The tense moments surrounding the curing of Ruth and her walking again.

Exploitation Angles—Connect up with the present wave of interest in the auto-suggestion theories of Prof. Coue. The story deals with this idea very elaborately. Dorothy Dalton is a big favorite. Play her name up big. Dress a man up as an Arabian and put him on the streets with appropriate signs.

Drawing Power—O. K. anywhere and especially timely. Should entertain any audience.

"While Paris Sleeps"

Tourneur-Hodkinson—4850 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is a suggestion that this lurid melodrama of vengeance as meted out by a rejected suitor was made several months ago since Lon Chaney has an unimportant role insofar as making his presence in the action felt to any degree. The picture is bald melodrama, highly improbable, yet carrying an adventurous line of incident once it gets started. One cannot accept it as a slice of reality in view of the fact that the theme is based upon the mad scheme of a sculptor whose unrequited passion for his model inspires him to avenge his hatred upon the successful lover, an American youth.

Maurice Tourneur has done as well as possible under the circumstances to intrigue the imagination. Doubtless he realized the shortcomings of the plot which is unwholesome in most of its footage, by giving it a realistic production. Certainly he has not erred from the technical side. His Latin Quartier atmosphere is finely suggested with a few of the scenic effects inviting comparison with the best of the high class pictures. Indeed the production is far superior to the story.

Lon Chaney doesn't have much to do. True he starts the melodramatic wheels revolving, but with the exception of a few scenes he is absent from the action. We first discover him registering jealousy because his model refuses to entertain his advances. She gives her love to an American tourist whose father strongly rebels against the boy's affair. Then the story hinges upon a triangle with the girl promising to withdraw from the scene. She allows herself to be compromised and the youth misunderstands the situation. He is kidnapped by a crazy keeper of a wax museum—a keeper working in sympathy with the sculptor. What follows are some scenes revealing a chamber of horrors with the hero in the clutches of the villains. He is rescued in the nick of time and the father consents to the betrothal of the sweethearts.

The plot suggests the familiar "penny dreadfuls" of a bygone day. It does not look like good picture material to us aside from the idea that it offers some adventurous action. Doubtless the sponsors saw the element of suspense in it.

The Cast

Henri Santados.....Lon Chaney
Bebe Larvache.....Mildred Manning
Dennis O'Keefe.....Jack Gilbert
His Father.....Harden Kirtland
Father Marionette.....Jack F. MacDonald
Georges Morier.....F. Farrell MacDonald

By "Pan." Directed by Maurice Tourneur. Photographed by Rene Guissart. Released by Hodkinson.

The Story—A sculptor in the Latin Quarter of Paris harbors an unrequited passion for his model. The latter meets young American tourist and they become infatuated. The youth's father pleads with girl to give him up and she agrees if she may be permitted to have one evening of happiness during the Mardi Gras festival. The jealous sculptor enlists the aid of half-crazed keeper of wax museum to dispose of American youth. The boy is kidnapped and tortured but rescued in the nick of time. The young people finally receive the father's blessing.

Classification—Melodrama of intrigue and jealous passion.

Production Highlights—The remarkable atmosphere. The first rate scenic effects. The good work of well balanced cast.

Exploitation Angles—Might stage a bit of atmosphere suggestive of Latin Quartier of Paris. Bill it as adventurous melodrama. Play up cast, mentioning that Lon Chaney is in cast.

Drawing Power—Best suited for downtown houses catering to daily change of program. Will probably draw better in small town than in cities.

"Leather Pushers" Series—First Three

("Fighting Blood"—"The Knight in Gale" and "Six Second Smith"—Two Reels Each—F. B. O.)

SOMETHING to look forward to is the promise that there are to be nine more rounds in the "Leather Pushers" Series, two reelers full of action, humor and impregnated with human interest. Nine more as good as the first three is no small order, for the samples are "all wool, a yard wide and true blue to life" screen entertainments.

The initial offering is "Fighting Blood," introducing George O'Hara in the role of Gale Galen, athletic hero, otherwise an ambitious young man, perfect specimen of American youth who might serve to illustrate a slogan "live right, think right, do right and look like this." The newcomer in a small town is also endowed with good looks and appealing personality, so that all he lacks is what he is after, a complete education.

Finding his friend, whom Galen seeks in the village, gone, the traveler secures his friend's old position of soda clerk in a drug store. There are incidents leading up to Galen being forced to deliver ice cream to the home of a village belle who is giving a party and has refused to allow her girl friend to ask the soda clerk to come as a guest. It happens, however, that just as Galen is leaving he sees his girl being annoyed by an outsider, known to the sporting world as K. O. Kelly, champion welter weight. One blow from Galen and out goes Kayo, which interests Kayo's manager to the extent that he keeps an eye on Galen, with a purpose.

In the second "Knight in Gale," Galen is rescued from jail, where he was sent, unjustly, for beating up his rival, not on account of the girl, altogether, but for cruelty. Nate Shapiro, the promoter, pays Galen's fine on condition that the boy train to fight. The punishment Galen takes before he feels at home in trunks and gloves, keeps the interest boiling. When he finally discovers his opponent's skill is founded on brute strength rather than brains, Galen lands a swing, supplying the picture, also with "punch." His reputation travels and soon Galen answers to the title of "Six Second Smith."

In the third, his professional bout terminates in knocking out a pugilistic terror in the first round. Later, Galen's mind acts as quickly as his fists, when he saves the populace, attending a church bazaar, from "hold up" men, and makes himself solid with the preacher.

There are some important characters besides that of Galen, skillfully played by George O'Hara. This young man has made a start in life as a screen actor. In addition, there is Clara Horton as Judy Wilcox, the "girl"; Rags Dempster, Galen's rival, which Arthur Rankin plays well, although his personal appeal may be a bit too marked; K. O. Kelly, played by Kit Guard, a "knock out" in the part, even if as a fighter he succumbs to youth and brains; the proprietor of the drug store, Ajariah Stubbs, splendidly played by William Courtright, and as Nate Shapiro, the fight promoter, Albert Cooke breaks a record for combination of type and ability.

Speed, speed and just enough "fight" to keep one alert, amused and entertained. Splendid direction, photography and logic; sub-titles that do a noble bit in keeping the humor as fast as the action. There is nothing offensive, on the contrary, these fight pictures carry a moral and embrace sufficient love interest and human-interest touches to make them ideal screen offerings.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Lost in a Big City"

Arrow—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Ray Gallagher)

THE producers of "Ten Nights In A Barroom" have scored again. This looks like a box office winner. It is the kind of picture that should bring them in and send them away thoroughly satisfied. Blazed Trail Productions seem to have acquired the knack of producing money-makers. Their productions are of a type containing a wealth of exploitation possibilities and at the same time do not overlook the artistic side.

"Lost In A Big City," is well made and sustains the interest from beginning to end. It is a fast-moving melodrama carrying much action punctuated with romance, pathos, adventure and good comedy relief. The shifting locale permits of some strongly contrasting scenes. New York's East Side slums, Broadway and finally the Adirondacks serve, as a background for the enactment of the story. It is well assembled, the scenes coming in logical sequence—at one moment you feel a tug at your heart strings, then comes a laugh followed by a thrill.

L. Case Russell is to be complimented on the screen version of N. S. Wood's famous old stage success. Director George Irving has taken advantage of every opportunity in putting over many exciting moments and realistic adventures and yet has managed to keep it entirely within the bounds of possibility.

The star, John Lowell, whose fine work in "Ten Nights" created a legion of admirers, again bids fair to add to that list by giving a sincere and capable characterization as the brother bent on vengeance on his sister's bigamist husband, who has deserted her and her little blind daughter to marry a society belle. Lowell's sincerity inspired the other members of the well-balanced cast and they in turn play their respective parts in a natural and praiseworthy manner. Joseph Settle is responsible for the excellent photography.

The Cast

Harry Farley.....John Lowell
Florence, his niece.....Baby Ivy Ward
Helen, his sister.....Jane Thomas
Sidney Heaton, alias "Richard Norman..Charles Beyer
Blanche Maberly.....Evangeline Russell
Simeon Maberly, her father.....Charles Mackay
Dick Watkins.....James Phillips
Salvatori.....Edgar Keller
Guboni, his nephew.....Whitney Haley
Trooper Ned Livingston.....Edward Phillips
Mrs. Leary.....Anne Brody
"Raisin" Jackson.....Charles A. Robbins
Jasper.....Jules Cowles

Adapted by L. Case Russell from N. S. Wood's stage play. Directed by George Irving. Photographed by Joseph Settle. Produced by Blazed Trail Productions. Released by Arrow.

The Story—Harry Farley returns from Alaska and learns that his sister has been deserted by her husband. He finds her in New York with her little blind daughter. A short time later the unfortunate woman dies. Farley takes care of the youngster and vows vengeance on his sister's worthless husband. His search for the man brings him through a series of conflicts and adventures in the slums and fashionable section of the city. He finally locates him in the Adirondacks with a band of bootleggers. After a fight they are captured and the villain is killed.

Classification—Fast moving melodrama, carrying much action and heart interest.

Production Highlights—The handling of the story. The work of the star. The direction. Auto wreck scene. The rescue from the blazing building. The effective double exposures. The thrilling melodrama.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the fact that it features the star of "Ten Nights In A Barroom." Great opportunity for street ballyhoos. Also affords chance to tie up in a publicity campaign with institutions like the Bureau of Missing Persons and Travelers' Aid Society. You can get up throw-aways which show principal points of interest in your city in the form of a map on one side and selling copy on the picture on the reverse side.

"The Pilgrim"

Chaplin-First National—4300 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WE will advise you right from the start that Chaplin's latest is not another "Shoulder Arms," nor can it be mentioned in the same breath with "The Kid." And we feel safe in saying that our opinion will be upheld by the great army of fans who storm the box-office to see what the gifted comedian offers in "The Pilgrim." Don't misunderstand us. We don't mean to infer that the picture is of an inferior quality. Far from it. It possesses a succession of highly amusing gags indicating that Chaplin has not gotten out of touch with what constitutes amusing burlesque.

The Chaplin of "The Pilgrim" is the Chaplin of old. By that we mean that he employs some of his funny slapstick ideas of his Essanay days. To be truthful we would say that he uses more familiar gags than original ones. Yet he is so much the artist that one stays to laugh. It may be that the clergy in some instances will voice their disapproval of burlesquing the cloth. Yet Chaplin's picture will be accepted by the majority of clergymen as sheer burlesque, enacted with a fine sense of the ridiculous. He plays an escaped convict here—who disguises himself as a minister when the good man leaves his clothes behind him while taking a swim.

The Chaplin feet are much in evidence and so are all his quaint mannerisms. There is low comedy and high comedy, all of which is pretty well balanced. There is a well established touch of pathos because certain incidents reveal lifelike slices of everyday existence. Chaplin fills a vacancy in a church and the subsequent scene is excruciatingly funny. His text is on "David and Goliath," but the sermon is principally pantomime. When he is finished he bows and makes his exit in genuine vaudeville fashion, returning for applause and making his bow.

Another high spot shows him being entertained at the girl's home. The family album scene is a nifty and the gags which introduce the "give and take" play between an old-fashioned visitor and the parson are sure of uproarious laughter. The mother admonishes her terrible kid to "go play with the gentleman," while Chaplin advises the youngster to "go play with mama." Here is the comedian at his best. When the mother is out of sight, the kid gets a vigorous Chaplin kick. The closing scenes represent some familiar touches—the derby hat being carved at the dinner—to mention one—and some amusing by-play with a thug. We'll put it down as sure-fire.

The Cast

The Pilgrim	Charles Chaplin
The Girl	Edna Purviance
Her Mother	Kitty Bradbury
The Deacon	Mack Swain
The Elder	Dash Loyal
The Boy	Dinky Dean
His Mother	Mae Wells
Her Husband	Sydney Chaplin
The Crook	"Chuck" Reisner
The Sheriff	Tom Murray

Written and directed by Charles Chaplin. Released by First National.

The Story—Escaped convict steals parson's suit of clothes and disguised as minister accepts vacancy in Texas church. Doesn't know how to put over a sermon except in vaudeville style. Is entertained at dinner and finally exposed as impostor and crook. Sheriff takes him to boundary line and turns him loose.

Classification—Comedy filled with many new gags and a few old ones. Conceived and directed by Chaplin.

Production Highlights—The moments when Chaplin calls upon his art to register pathos. The scene when he is in the pulpit. The comedy antics with the little boy.

Exploitation Angles—Here is Chaplin and of course he will draw the crowds. Might use stills of him. Play his name—that is sufficient.

Drawing Power—Not another classic like "The Kid," but star will pack 'em in everywhere.

"Fury"

Inspiration Pictures, Inc.—8709 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

DICK BARTHELMESS has left the Blue Ridge for the blue waves and it is a welcome change. As "Boy" in this intensely interesting story, Mr. Barthelmess adds another laurel to his histrionic wreath, as the critics say. "Fury" is one of the most colorful sea dramas ever put on the screen.

The picture has a big appeal because it is "different" in mounting and scenic background. The producers have been unusually successful in transferring the atmosphere of London's Limehouse district to the screen, while the marine end of the production is good because the company has "shipped" on a regular old sailing schooner. Another feature worth mentioning is the artistic as well as literary titling. These titles add much to the entertaining quality of the picture. From a photographic viewpoint, also, "Fury" is a notable work. The cast is one of uniform excellence. The care with which the personnel was selected is evident. No finer actor could have been found for the role of "Dog" Leyton than Tyrone Power. Dorothy Gish as Minnie, a waif, is a delight and recalls her character work in "Hearts of the World." Dorothy is a real asset to this offering. Pat Hartigan in the heavy role of Morgan is convincing at all times as a rowdy of the seas.

Not since "Tol'able David," has Dick had a chance to put up such fistic battles as he presents in this vehicle. His fights with Morgan are the last work in realism. The picture opens with a thrilling battle between two terrible looking brutes. These scenes drag the audiences to the edge of the seats and we predict that most folks will remain there most of the time this one is unwinding. While the action is tense the picture is not without its comedy relief. "Fury" is well worth while. It is fine screen entertainment.

The Cast

"Dog" Leyton	Tyrone Power
Morgan	Pat Hartigan
"Boy" Leyton	Richard Barthelmess
Looney Luke	Barry Macollum
Mr. Hop	Harry Blakemore
Yuka	Adolph Milar
Zece	Ivan Linow
Miss Matilda Brent	Emily Fitzroy
Tillie	Jessie May Arnold
Minnie, a waif	Dorothy Gish
Mrs. Ross	Lucia Backus Seger
Looney Luke's Girl	Patterson Dial

By Edmund Goulding. Directed by Henry King. Photographed by Roy Buerbough.

The Story—In spite of his father's treatment of him and his hatred of women, "Boy" Leyton continued to love his parent. "Boy" is in love with Minnie, a slavey at the boarding house. Morgan, the villainous first mate also wanted Minnie, who consented to run away to Glasgow with "Boy." Morgan tells the father of the boy's intentions. The father launches into an attack on the name of the girl and is delighted when "Boy" wants to fight him. The father, dying, confides in "Boy" that his mother had run away with another man and makes him swear to "get" that man.

Classification—A thrilling drama of the sea, abounding in melodramatic situations.

Production Highlights—The characterizations offered by every member of the cast, especially Barthelmess, Tyrone Power, Dorothy Gish and Pat Hartigan. The realistic mounting given the picture, a real old windjammer being used for most of the exteriors Some more of those "Tol'able David" kind of Barthelmess fistic fights. Henry King's direction. The success with which the atmosphere of London's Limehouse district has been transferred to the screen.

Exploitation Angles—Try and build a "sea" atmosphere into your lobby by the use of life preservers, ropes, oars, a man dressed up in oil skins, etc. Barthelmess and Gish are popular names. Play them up. Tell the folks of the thrilling fights and the fine sea scenes. This one will stand up under your best plugging.

Drawing Power—Suitable for audiences most anywhere

"Nobody's Money"

Paramount—5576 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

IN this picture Jack Holt leaves the field of heavy character portrayal and jumps into a comedy drama role in "Nobody's Money," which was one of last season's stage hits in New York. It is a story that lends itself admirably to picturization. Two newspaper men have written a book which becomes immensely popular. They have given a fictitious name to the author. Suddenly this "author" is wanted by everybody—by the government to explain his income tax, by the governor to explain a certain libelous article. The newspaper men are quite perplexed as to how to produce the writer, when along comes Holt in the character of a book agent with his safe-blower friend. Holt consents to impersonate the author for a consideration—all the money the newspaper men have to their credit. In his new role, the book agent becomes acquainted with the governor's daughter and eventually becomes the brains of the governor's campaign for re-election. Holt is given many opportunities for bringing laughs from the audience, especially in his efforts to keep his pal from carrying off everything but the governor's home.

The settings are attractive, those in the governor's home being quite lavish. One of the big moments of the picture comes when Drisco brings the editor of the local sheet to the governor's home and dares him to open a safe in which, Drisco charges, reposes some $20,000 in graft which he alleges he gave the governor. The safe is opened, but the money is gone. Our safe-blowing friend has beat them all to it. It later develops that the maid was bribed by Drisco to plant the coin. No one will claim the money, so it becomes "nobody's money." Hence the title. The coin is used by the book agent to finance the governor's campaign.

The Cast

Mrs. Judson	Josephine Crowell
Carl Russell	Robert Schable
Frank Carey	Walter McGrail
Martin Miller	James Neill
John Hamilton Webster	Jack Holt
Eddie Maloney	Harry Depp
Grace Kendall	Wanda Hawley
Aunt Prue	Eileen Manning
Governor Kendall	Charles Clary
Annette	Julia Faye
Burt L. Drisco	Will Walling

Adapted by Beulah Marie Dix from the play by William Le Baron. Directed by Wallace Worsley. Photographed by C. Edgar Schoenbaum.

The Story—A book entitled "The Breathless Bridal," having attained unprecedented popularity, the authors find that they must produce the fictitious author. An income tax man promises jail for someone unless this demand is met. Along comes a supposed book agent. He assumes the role of the author and makes his pal, his secretary. Becoming acquainted with the governor's daughter, when she visits him to get a retraction of a libelous article about her father written under the name of the famous author. The book agent gets in solid with the executive and eventually manages his campaign for election.

Classification—A comedy drama based on a well received New York stage success. Woven against a political background.

Production Highlights—The scenes in which the book agent is persuaded to assume the role of the famous author. Jack Holt's work as this book agent. The fine cast. The reception in the governor's home. The barbecue to boost Candidate Dubb. The political parade and the scenes in which the book agent swings the enemies over to the side of Governor Kendall.

Exploitation Angles—The title should suggest various tie-ups with banks.

Drawing Power—A good program picture that should find a welcome place on any screen.

"The Ghost Patrol"

Universal—4228 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE cop stories are rapidly becoming favorites with screen producers if one may judge from the epidemic which has spread over the screen of late. Take "The Ghost Patrol," for example. Here is a tale by Sinclair ("Main Street") Lewis—one of his short subjects—and while it isn't especially strong with dramatic material it manages to entertain through the wealth of human interest and the characterization.

The producers were wise in making a short feature of it in view of the fact that its plot revolves around a pair of lovers whose romance is meeting with interference, and the humanitarian work of the aged cop on the "beat." His patrol is in a tough neighborhood and through years of experience he has learned that the voice with the smile wins. In other words he performs deeds of kindness instead of using strong arm methods.

The picture develops two separate lines of action—the scenes which present the cop and his heart stuff, and the romance of the young tough with the delicatessen dealer's daughter. The girl's father objects to the youth because he's been a rotter. He defends himself in a saloon brawl and is sent up for a prison term. Meanwhile the cop is dismissed from the force because of his age—the new commissioner believing thoroughly in youth and new uniforms. But the old man refuses to put away his uniform. He wears it around the neighborhood, being careful, however, to keep out of sight of the new cop. In the end he rescues the hero from the pavement after he had been waylaid by a hired gangster and later acts as peacemaker—so that the girl's father consents to the courtship.

Then comes a little surprise. The commissioner comes to the cop's house ostensibly to upbraid him for his deception, but remains to make him a captain. There it is—a snug heart interest drama, obvious all the way, and exceedingly slight, yet it will get over because of George Nichols' fine study of the cop. He hasn't the opportunities he had in "The Flirt," but he manages to put his latest expression over because of his sincerity. Ralph Graves mugs too much as the youth, depending a great deal on a huge dental smile. Besides he is not a good type for the tough. Bessie Love is adequate as the girl. The atmosphere is good.

The Cast

Michael McManus.....Wade Boteler
Commissioner Manning.....Melbourne MacDowell

By Sinclair Lewis. Scenario by Raymond Schrock. Directed by Nat Ross. Photographed by Ben Reynolds. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Policeman has "beat" in tough neighborhood and wins affection and respect through his humanitarian manner. Attempts to fix up the love affair of two young people. The boy is sent to prison and the cop is dismissed from force for being old. So he returns to neighborhood and wears his gray uniform, being careful to avoid the new cop. Eventually his work is appreciated and he is returned to force as a captain.

Classification—Heart interest drama revealing romance and melodramatic incident.

Production Highlights—The fine work of George Nichols. The atmosphere of tough neighborhood. The patrolling of "beat" by dismissed cop. His reward.

Exploitation Angles—Play up George Nichols and tell that he continues his good work so evident in "The Flirt." Mention that story is written by Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," and "Babbitt." Story and characterization suggest atmospheric ballyhoo stunts and prologue.

Drawing Power—Good for any downtown or neighborhood house catering to daily change of program.

"The Custard Cup"

Fox—6166 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a mother love story of an orthodox design—showing as it does Mary Carr carrying on the maternal spark which featured "Over the Hill." The theme is the same, the only difference being the setting. It's a story crammed with human interest, slightly overdone in this respect, and balanced with a vein of hectic melodrama having to do with the plotting by a gang of counterfeiters and their subsequent capture by the forces of law and order.

The title has its meaning in the oval-shaped row of tenements which are managed by the woman blessed with the spark of motherhood. In payment for her work as caretaker, the owners allow her to live in a made-over barn where she presides over a group of three adopted orphans. They sleep in big dry goods' boxes and cut up capers around the house while the "mother" listens to their troubles and scatters sunshine.

It's a picture made to order for the neighborhood house which caters to a feminine clientele. The heart touches are fairly well conceived, although the director, in our opinion, has given too much stress in playing up the irrepressible children. Miriam Battista has altogether too much footage for her antics. The melodrama seems like an afterthought, added to spice up the gentle mother love theme. Close at hand the counterfeiters are engaged in their nefarious enterprise and it is broadly planted in the opening scenes that the "mother" will be accused eventually as a member of the gang. Why not? Doesn't the feminine accomplice of the tricky villain (an antiquated type of Desperate Desmond—this fellow) secrete some phony bills in the mattress of the elderly woman's bed?

Then to the fire scene—which is the best touch in the picture—the real thing, incidentally. The neighborhood takes an excursion trip on a steamboat, and the villain—to escape the clutches of the law—burns his fake bills. And the fire spreads, destroying the boat, although the passengers are all saved. The "mother" is accused when the law is hot on the trail of the crooks, but a secret service agent provides an alibi. Let it be mentioned that the children aid in capturing the criminals. Fair entertainment—this picture, on a theme which is becoming somewhat shopworn. Mary Carr manages to be convincing. The atmosphere is adequate.

The Cast

Mrs. Penfield ("Penzie").....Mary Carr
Gussie Bosley.....Myrta Bonillas
Lettie.....Miriam Battista
Crink.....Jerry Devine
Thad.....Ernest McKay
Lorene Percy.....Peggy Shaw
Mrs. Percy.....Leslie Leigh
Perennial Prue.....Emily Lorraine
Jeremiah Winston.....Frederick Esmelton
Frank Bosley.....Henry Sedley

By Florence Bingham Livingston. Scenario by G. Marion Burton. Directed by Herbert Brenon. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Woman who manages tenements for the owners lives in a made-over barn. She has adopted three children and acts as the "mother" of the neighborhood. Close by are housed a gang of counterfeiters who impose on the woman. During a steamboat excursion a fire breaks out and all are rescued. Eventually the counterfeiters are captured, but the secret service agent saves the woman from prison by proving her innocence.

Classification—Human interest story based upon mother love and melodramatic incident concerning a gang of counterfeiters.

Production Highlights—Brenon's atmosphere. The capable work of Mary Carr. The steamboat fire—the real thing. The melodramatic climax when the crooks are caught.

Exploitation Angles—Title suggests a tieup with restaurants. Play up Mary Carr, making it plain that she is ideal type for mother roles.

Drawing Power—Best suited for neighborhood houses.

"Bell Boy 13"

Thomas H. Ince Production—First National

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

IT is unfortunate that "Bell Boy 13" should come so close on the heels of "The Hottentot," Douglas MacLean's last comedy drama, because this newest comedy suffers in comparison with the rollicking story of the boy who is forced to become the champion steeplechase rider. Not that "Bell Boy 13" is without its humor, because there are a number of amusing situations, but rather because it hasn't the originality, the spontaneity of "The Hottentot." "Bell Boy 13" is really much ado about nothing.

One of the most humorous situations in the picture is that in which the hero endeavoring to escape from the house to meet an actress with whom he is about to elope, is forced to remain and listen to the Rev. Fish's daughter, Angela, sing "Fly, Birdie, Fly." As Angela sings "in High," our hero imitates a birdie flying and tries to fly out of the house, but his efforts are in vain. There's more fun when he stages a fake fire and jumps into a net as the fire department answers the alarm. There's some thrilling stuff as Elrod dashes through the streets in the fire chief's auto, hat and all and has a number of hair breadth escapes.

Cut off by his rich uncle and told by his bride to be that he must go work before she will appear before the altar with him, Elrod accepts a position as a bell boy and it is in this role that MacLean is able to get over a number of laughable situations, especially when he calls out all the help on strike and only sends the workers back, when the uncle consents to his marrying the actress.

In a way this is a comedy of hats. MacLean wears a large variety of them, none of which fit but all of which are calculated to add to the general merriment. "Bell Boy 13" should go over because there is a scarcity of good comedies. Folks want to laugh more. Therefore all praise to Douglas MacLean for his efforts in this direction.

The Cast

Harry Elrod.....Douglas MacLean
Ellery Elrod.....John Steppling
Kitty Clyde.....Margaret Loomis
Rev. Fish.....William Courtright
Angela Fish.....Emily Gerdes
The Nut.....Eugene Burr

By Austin Gill. Scenario by Violet Clark. Directed by William Seiter. Photographed by Bert Cann.

The Story—Disinherited by his rich uncle and thrown down by his girl because he won't go to work, Harry Elrod grabs the first job in sight—a bell-boy. The uncle sees him and is embarrassed. He decides to have him fired if he has to buy the hotel. Harry is fired, but starts a strike. All the hotel employes quit. Harry consents to call off the strike if his uncle will consent to his marrying an actress. He does. He weds the actress.

Classification—Straight farce with a goodly quota of amusing situations.

Production Highlights—The scenes attending Harry's efforts to get out of the house to elope with an actress, especially the moments with Angela Fish as she sings "Fly, Birdie, Fly." Harry's fake fire scare, his jump into the net and his dash through the streets in the chief's auto and wearing a big white fireman's hat. The amusing moments supplied by MacLean as a bellboy and his calling of the strike.

Exploitation Angles—The title. The cast with its well known players. Put a boy on the street in a bright colored bellboy uniform with appropriate advertising. There's also a chance for a tieup with the fire departments: Invite all the bellboys in town to the show one night and reserve a section for them. Tell the newspapers about it.

Drawing Power—A good program picture. Will probably be liked by most patrons. Good for second class downtown houses and the community theatres.

Comedies, Short Subjects & Serials

"Hodge Podge" Series Booked by Capitol, N. Y.

THE CAPITOL THEATRE, New York, which recently showed "King Winter," the first release of Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, has signed up for the rest of the twelve pictures in this new series of single-reel novelty subjects being released by Educational Film Exchanges.

"Sea Elephants" is the second of this group of pictures presenting unusual scenic shots, trick photography, clever animation, etc., and it is to be on the Capitol program in a few weeks.

"Via Radio" Enjoying Special Campaign

Educational's exploitation campaign on the special "Via Radio' is showing fine results which will be of benefit to exhibitors. Many of the trade magazines devoted to radio have reviewed this picture, and some of them, among which is the Radio Merchandiser, contain practical suggestions for radio dealers to co-operate with exhibitors in exploiting the picture, and theatre owners should have no trouble enlisting the support of the radio dealers.

As many broadcasting stations are owned by large manufacturers and dealers in radio equipment, it is to be expected that the ether will carry much good propaganda on this picture.

"The Cavy and the Rat', Is Urban Classic

"The Cavy and the Rat," next of the Urban Popular Classics, to be released by Vitagraph, describes cavy, a South American earth burrowing rodent which resembles a guinea pig. The motion pictures were taken and arranged by Prof. F. P. Smith, noted naturalist of London. Following the pictures of the cavy, his second cousin, the black rat is shown, and this is a comedy in rodent life. The animals are remarkably well trained and the courtship, marriage and the rearing of the little ones is a comedy novelty for laughing purposes. One of the naughty youngsters sips a little too deeply of the remains of the master's synthetic liquor and after roistering about is rescued by his mother who carries him safely to the parental roof, meaning the cage.

Editor of "Daily Movie Service" Pays Short Subjects High Tribute

JAMES W. DEAN, editor of the "Daily Movie Service" of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, whose reviews and comments are published in hundreds of newspapers throughout the United States and Canada, pays high tribute to Educational pictures in a review of the best Short Subjects of 1922, sent to the subscribers of the N. E. A. a few days ago, and now being printed in these newspapers.

In his list of "twelve best short subjects," Mr. Dean includes four pictures distributed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., "And Women Must Weep," first of the Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, heading the list.

Besides "And Women Must Weep," Mr. Dean's list of what he considers the twelve best Short Subjects of the year includes "Poor Boy," a Mermaid Comedy, featuring Lloyd Hamilton; the Educational Pictures Special, "Man vs. Beast," the sensational two-reel African hunt picture, and the Christie Comedy, "That Son of a Sheik," one of the series of satires produced by Christie in which he pokes good-natured fun at the hokum of the screen.

This list is followed by a list of twenty-three subjects, "worthy of mention," in which Mr. Dean includes these Educational subjects: the Christie Comedy, "In Dutch," featuring Bobby Vernon; the Special, "Via Radio," "Cold Feet," the Earl Hurd Comedy, "Railroading," and the Mermaid Comedy, "Look Out Below," a Jack White Production; the Tony Sarg's Almanac, "The First Flivver," the Torchy Comedy, "Torchy's Ghost," featuring Johnny Hines, and another of Robert C. Bruce's Wilderness Tales, "My Country."

"A review of the achievements of the screen in 1922 would not be complete without consideration of the short subjects," writes Mr. Dean. "Many of the one, two and three-reel pictures contribute more to the program's entertainment than the feature pictures; many of them have contributed as much to the advance of the photoplay as an art as the longer films.

Important Pathe Releases Jan. 28

Program Includes "Plunder," "The Champeen" and Usual News Numbers

Pearl White's new serial, "Plunder," is announced by Pathe for release on Jan. 28. "The Champeen," inaugurating the second series of the Hal Roach "Our Gang," 2-reel comedies, heads the program of nine other releases for that date—including Pathe News Nos. 10 and 11 and Topics of the Day No. 4.

Review of "Plunder," seen at trade showings given in many of the bigger cities. have been widely published, together with synopses of the early episodes of the thrilling story writtn by George B. Seitz and Bertram Millhauser dealing with mystery and perilous adventures into which a rich and beautiful New York girl is plunged beginning with the first hundred feet of the first episode.

In "The Champeen," the talented but otherwise entirely normal youngsters in Hal Roach's celebrated Our Gang unit are lured by Sunshine Sammy into staging the most astonishing "prize fight" in the history of the squared circle.

Paul Parrott, with Jobyna Ralston playing opposite, is reported at his best in the one-reeler, "Don't Say Die." Obstacles to immediate matrimony drive him to attempt every known kind of suicide, with laughable lack of success.

"Speed," with Charles Hutchison, shows its final episode, in which the hero is exonerated and the smooth villain's guilt established in the tensest dramatic scenes of the serial.

"A Fisherman's Jinx," the Aesop's Film Fable of this program, shows Farmer Al Falfa on land and sea, and at the bottom, in desperate combats with all sorts of finny monsters.

Pathe Review No. 4 illustrates verses from William Cullen Bryant's famous poem, "The Death of the Flowers." There is an interesting funeral scene filmed at Canton, China. "Art a La Mode," is a camera interview with Bonnie McLeary, sculptress, who models as she talks. The Aquarium studies continue with "The Bluffers."

Screen Snapshots No. 18, in a variety of unconventional scenes attractively presented, pictures many Film Colony favorites with results easily accounting for the wide public appeal of this reel.

Bobby Vernon Featured in "Second Childhood"

"Second Childhood," a Christie Comedy featuring Bobby Vernon, supported by Babe London and Charlotte Stevens, is nearing completion at the Christie Studio under direction of Harold Beaudine. It will follow "Be Yourself" on Educational's release schedule.

Two Burr Comedies for Early Release

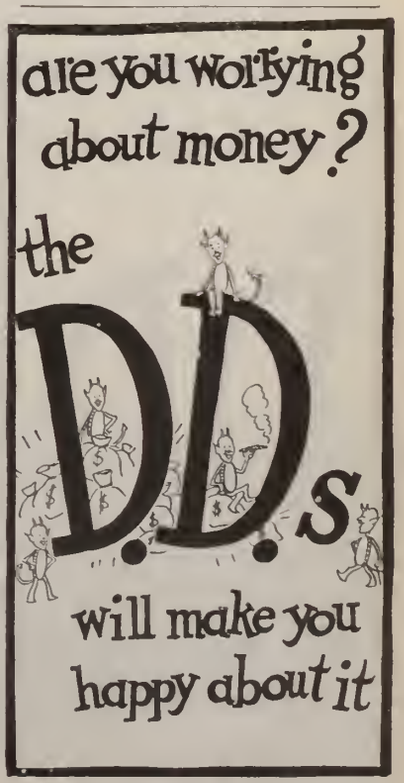
TWO C. C. Burr All-Star comedies will be released shortly by W. W. Hodkinson Corp., the distributors. "Four Orphans" will be released on January 28th and "The Fatal Photo" just finished, will be released February 25th.

A new C. C. Burr comedy is now in the making under the direction of Gregory La Cava at the Glendale Long Island Studios of the company. It should be ready within the next several weeks.

Pathe Will Release "Plunder" Jan. 28

With heavy pre-release bookings on "Plunder," Pathe's fifteen episode serial starring Pearl White, the date of release has been set for January 28.

Newspapers as well as trade publications, have announced through their columns that "Plunder" is Pearl White's farewell to the screen. Pearl White herself, according to Pathe, is authority for the statement that not only to serials, but as an actress of the screen, "Plunder" is her final triumph. The star has returned to Paris, there to resume her stage career abroad which started before she agreed to return to America to appear in "Plunder." It is also said that Miss White acclaims the picture as the best of the long list of serials in which she has starred, and admits that in it she has done the best work of her career.



"The Mystery Box" Receives Endorsement

Owing to the widespread interest in radio, Bray's "The Mystery Box," the first of the series of Bray Romances, which deals with the subject of radio, and which is being released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, was shown at the banquet of Mechanical Engineers held in Buffalo, N. Y., on January 9th.

This one-reel feature, which shows with the aid of cartoon drawings and animated characters, the scientific development of ether currents and explains the working of a modern radio set, was used as an illustration to a lecture on Radio delivered to members of the Mechanical Engineers by Mr. Bucheron, president of the Radio Corporation of America.

Inasmuch as the subject of Radio is of interest to millions of people in the United States and the World, the Hodkinson officials believe they have an entertainment of unusual interest and one that should prove a decided attraction for the exhibitors.

Third Bray Comedy Given Appropriate Title

Bray Productions, Inc., are putting the finishing touches on the third Bray Comedy, which is to be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation February 11th. The working title is "Colonel Heeza Liar Turns Detective," for, as usual, the celebrated Colonel is a hero.

"Colonel Heeza Liar Turns Detective" out of sympathy for a sorrowing chicken fancier who has lost a ten-thousand-dollar rooster. Upon the return of the stolen chicken, she runs all around the screen, and finally lays an egg as a reward for its rescuer, to the great disgust of the owner who didn't know he had bought that kind of a chicken.

New Series of "Our Gang" Inaugurated

Beginning with "The Champeen," announced for release on Jan. 28, the new "Our Gang" comedies will go to exhibitors accompanied by the exploitation paper and accessories. They will, in fact, be handled like features, with a specially designed 24-sheet. Cuts, mats, lobby displays, five black and whites and a stock slide are supplied for "The Champeen" and forthcoming pictures in the Our Gang second series. "The Champeen"—presenting the prize ring and its traditions from the "Our Gang" juvenile angle depicts Sunshine Sammy, as promotor and highly sophisticated manager; Mickey (Freckles) Daniels and Jackie Davis, as the battling Romeos; tousle-headed Jackie Condon, Little "Farina" and the full strength of "Our Gang" are active participants.

"Boy Scouts of America" Wins Praise

National headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America has sent a letter to Pathe reporting that its film, "The Boy Scouts of America," was shown at the Blue Ridge Conference before several hundred executives "and met with overwhelming approval."

The Lyric Theatre, Wooster, Ohio, is this week screening the Pathe film, "The Boy Scouts of America." Extremely favorable comments have been received at the local office from persons who, previously, seemingly were not particularly interested in Scouting.

Musical Setting to Go with Trimble Comedy

Arrangements with Olive Miller, a Los Angeles music composer, to write the music cue sheets for the series of two-reel features starring little Arthur Trimble have been made by the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., which is releasing this series.

This is the first time that a short subject will be distributed with a complete musical setting as part of the accessories equipment, states Morris R. Schlank, president of Anchor.

Attractive Issues of "Snapshots" Listed

"Screen Snapshots" reels giving intimate views of favorite stars have made such a wide appeal to all classes of picture patrons, says Pathe, that the producers, Jack Cohn and Lewis Lewyn, are responding with more and more effective arrangements of the scenes in which individuals and groups of these celebrities are pictured. It is announced that the four forthcoming issues, beginning with No. 17, released on Jan. 14th, hold special attractions of the sort referred to.

The Truth About Gorham

Selznick News Gets Pictures of Hermine

Princess Hermine, the German lady who got her name in the newspapers by taking a matrimonial chance on the ex-Kaiser appears in Selznick News No. 1107. A cameraman, dispatched to Holland especially to take the picture, waited for several weeks before he obtained them. Both the ex-Kaiser and his bride are camera-shy, but the cameraman finally caught the Princess Hermine as she walked through the village accompanied by two of her children.

Beautiful pictures which have been received from the Near East are contained in Selznick News No. 1108. These scenes, filmed in Athens, show 12,000 Armenian and Greek orphans in the asylum offered to them by some wealthy and patriotic Greeks. One particularly beautiful scene shows the children in their playground, in the background of which is the Acropolis and the ancient Temple of Jupiter.

Albert Austin to Direct Bull Montana

Albert Austin has been engaged to direct Bull Montana in the fifth Hunt Stromberg comedy for Metro release, "Two Twins." This will follow "Rob 'Em Good," which has just been completed.

Austin came to this country from England in the same vaudeville company with Charles Chaplin, with whom he has been associated for the past several years. He not only served as associate director with Chaplin on "The Kid" and many of his successes prior to that time, but also appeared in many of these comedies. Recently he directed Jackie Coogan in "Trouble," considered one of the most successful of the Coogan features.

Christie Comedies Add Two New Leading Women

Hazel Deane, formerly with Mack Sennett comedies, has been engaged by Al Christie to play leads in several new Educational-Christie Comedies, work on which is to be soon started.

Another leading lady has also been signed by Christie—Duane Thompson. She is already at work, playing the lead with Neal Burns in a new comedy being directed by Harold Beaudine.

"The Ex-Kaiser in Exile" Ready

Hodkinson to Release Picture of Former Ruler in Exile at Doorn

Motion pictures of the former Kaiser in exile at Doorn, Holland, and scenes in his twenty-acre "empire," will shortly be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

"The ex-Kaiser in Exile" is the title and the production is credited to Fred E. Hamlin, a New York newspaperman, although the film was obtained through German noblemen, once intimate friends of the fugitive war lord.

Using scenes of the former Emperor in his other days of pomp and when he dreamed vainly of world conquest, the ex-Kaiser is shown now to have been crushed and thoroughly whipped. His empire of millions of people, great armies, and a world under his iron rule, dwindle to a twenty-acre estate of exile with Dutch guards at his heels, barbed wire fences making a cage of his place and a handful of attendants and servants as the last of the faithful.

The film, even before it was built up to a dramatic production by the use of the contrast scenes of his other days, was a gripping human interest document of incalculable historic value. It is the only film taken of him and the scenes behind the barbed wire cage at Doorn. Cameramen have been trying for four years to get a "shot" of him, but their efforts, whether by trickery, bribery or otherwise have all failed.

At the wedding in November, all the camera men could get were a few scenes at the gate entrance of the exiled fugitive's "empire."

His once intimate friends, during a three days' visit, were allowed permission by the ex-Kaiser to make the first photographs of his castle and grounds. While they were at their task, they used the camera on their former emperor.

One of the German noblemen who visited the ex-Kaiser, brought the film to the United States and a production arrangement was effected with the producer, a newspaper man. It was privately shown to the Newspaper Club of New York City, to the National Press Club in Washington and to 1,500 or more Congressmen and others of official life in Washington at the dedication of Harding Hall.

The patriotic appeal has not been overlooked in building up the production in cooperation with the W. W. Hodkinson staff.

Newspaper Man Joins Fox Forces

Edwin C. Hill, of N. Y. Herald, Becomes Director-General of Fox News

EDWIN C. HILL, lately of the New York Herald, has been appointed director-general of Fox News, according to announcements from Fox Film Corporation. Mr. Hill has been known on Park Row for years as "the best reporter in America." The men "in the game," newspaper editors and reporters, rarely agree on anything, nevertheless they conceded to Mr. Hill an honor which meant a tremendous lot to those who so thoroughly comprehend what qualities were required to make even a moderately competent reporter. To the men who make the newspapers of New York and the rest of the country the title won by Mr. Hill was more illuminating than a volume of biography. In five words were contained a schedule of assets which included alertness, energy and first rate intelligence in getting news, sure instinct for searching out the most compelling feature of any news story (however trivial it might seem at first glance) and remarkable power of putting the news into such style of English that readers could not fail to get the thrill, the humor and the pathos of the story.

Fox News is a "newspaper" of the ultra-modern kind, a vital, living journal of the interesting and amusing occurrences of the whole world presented in pictures and words instead of its mere words. The qualities which win success in the field of the oldtime newspaper, which gain much recognition as Mr. Hill received, are even more indispensable in the field of the new style journal. Recognition of this principle led to the appointment of Mr. Hill as director-general of Fox News.

Many of the biggest stories of national and New York State politics published by the Sun, the Sun-Herald and the Herald were written by Mr. Hill. At the national political conventions in 1920, of both the Republican party, at Chicago, and the Democratic party, at San Francisco, Mr. Hill was in complete charge of the large Sun and Herald staff covering these dramatic assemblies.

Roughly estimated the quality of his newspaper work, he puts the number of stories that have been written by him and published at 15,000, and that the number of words would run probably to about 15,000,000, or enough to make more than 100 large sized books.

Comments by Rogers In Selznick News

The Selznick News folk are quite proud of the exclusive feature which they have been running for for some time by arrangement with Will Rogers, famous American humorist, through which they are able to use in each issue a number of the witticisms which Mr. Rogers is using in Ziegfeld's Follics and otherwise to establish himself as one of the greatest stage entertainers of modern times. A group of Rogers' "wise cracks" appear in one of the recent issues of Selznick News.

International News Shows Russian Exlies

How 2,500 unfortunate Russian exiles were saved from certain death by American and Allied aid is shown in the current issue (No. 4) of International News. The Turks had reached an agreement with the Soviet Government to surrender these refugees for return to Russia, where they would face execution. But American and Allied warships spirited the unfortunates away from Constantinople to safe refuge at Bulgarian ports.

This reel also shows pictures of Dr. Emile Coue, the world's famous "miracle man," arriving in America. Other features of the same reel include striking views of the Atlantic Fleet leaving New York for Southern waters to engage in winter maneuvers with the Pacific Fleet; pictures of famous speed boats, San Francisco and "shots" of thrilling winter sports at Lake Placid, New York.

Program of Short Sbnjects Proves Popular

Advices from Winnipeg indicate that the All Short Subject program recently introduced in Canada at the Cum-Bac theatre, Montreal, is meeting with popular favor in other parts of the Dominion.

The All Short Subject program used at the Cum-Bac theatre, composed entirely of Educational Pictures, broke several house records, and many other theatres in Canada have followed suit and booked Short Subject programs from the Canadian Educational Exchanges. The latest theatres to book these novel programs are the Gem theatre, Prescott, Man.; and the Regent, Wonderland, and Gaiety in Winnipeg.

Educational Output for Ascher Circuit

The Ascher Circuit of Chicago, with ten theatres, will show throughout this string of houses practically all the one-reel subjects on Educational's third year schedule. Sixty-nine of these short subjects including comedies and novelties have just been contracted for.

This means that virtually every picture on Educational's schedule for the year will be shown in the Ascher theatres, for the two-reel comedy subjects, including Hamilton Comedies, Christie Comedies and Mermaid Comedies, are now running in the Ascher theatres.

Production-Distribution Activities

Ragland Off to Confer with Producers

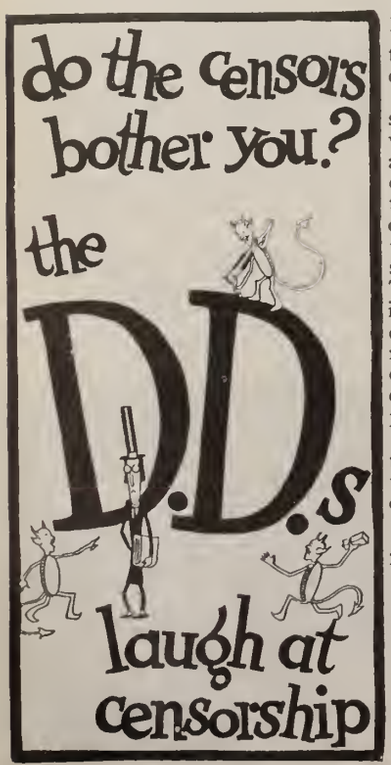
J. C. RAGLAND, secretary of Associated Exhibitors, left this week for Los Angeles, on business connected with the organization. He expects to be away at least two months.

Before leaving New York Mr. Ragland stated, in fact, that not only had he made arrangements to confer with a number of independent producers, with some of whom he has been in correspondence, but that he is prepared to meet any maker of independent productions who is ready to talk business.

The Associated secretary will confer also with producers who already are making pictures for release by this organization, and the players who are starred or featured in these productions. Not only will he receive from these first hand information regarding conditions on the West Coast, and production plans, so far as formulated, but will advise them concerning the wants of the public, and aid in the selection of vehicles for future use.

"The Ninety and Nine" Booked in Boston

"The Ninety and Nine," the first of the twenty-four specials scheduled for release this season by Vitagraph, booked for two weeks, with an option on an extension of the run, at the Tremont Theatre in Boston.



Big Reception For "Third Alarm"

Showing at New York Astor Brings Unstinted Praise of Reviewers

THE summing up of the first two weeks of the indefinite run of "The Third Alarm" at the Astor theatre, New York, is ample proof that the picture is living up to the claims of F. B. O.

The Emory Johnson production proved its value as a box-office attraction by holding the capacity audience to which it opened on January 9th during the entire run to date, according to F. B. O. Its reception by the New York press was big.

"It has a reality," stated the New York American, "that cannot fail to quicken the pulse of even the most blase motion picture fan. For thrills it equals, if it does not exceed anything Broadway has ever seen since the ride of the Klansmen in 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

Don Allen, in the Evening World, concluded his review of the picture by saying, "There is a fire—well, go see 'The Third Alarm' and you'll both laugh and weep. It is truly a thriller."

"'The Third Alarm' lifts you right out of your seat onto your toes," wrote the Evening Journal critic.

Harriet Underhill in the Tribune summed it up by saying that the people "went out at the end of the show with tears on their cheeks and gladness in their hearts." The Evening Mail declared that "those who like heart throbs may get them to their heart's content."

The trade press was no less enthusiastic in its commendation of the production. The Exhibitors' Trade Review described it as a "stirring melodrama replete with heart interest, whirling action and stark realism."

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS stated: "A picture which will undoubtedly go down in film history as containing the greatest fire fighting scenes ever staged for the camera. The climax of this picture should pull every mother's son, yes, and daughter, right to the edge of their seats."

The Exhibitors' Herald called it a splendid audience picture and a box-office attraction.

Paramount Effects Book Tie-up

Will Cooperate with Publishers in Exploitation of "The Covered Wagon"

FOR the exploitation of "The Covered Wagon" James Cruze's production of Emerson Hough's epic of the Great West, Paramount has just effected with D. Appleton & Co., publishers of the book, the biggest co-operative tie-up that the company has yet accomplished.

Last week fifty of the field representatives of the Appleton company were in convention in New York, and when they departed Saturday each one carried a portfolio of material by the aid of which the cooperation of every seller of Appleton books in the country will be secured, according to Paramount. The Appleton salesmen will work in conjunction with the Paramount exploitation representatives in their respective territories, planning window displays and local advertising campaigns for both the Paramount picture and the book.

In addition to complete descriptive material on the Cruze production, the portfolio includes proofs of the Saturday Evening Post advertisements which are to appear just before the release of the picture, photographs of model window displays, a set of stills from the picture, copies of the Paramount News Bulletin which has been issued on "The Covered Wagon," and which is now being distributed for posting in every city booking the picture; copies of the various trade paper advertisements and copies of the special three-colored jacket which is to be used on the photoplay edition of the book.

This book jacket, which is illustrated with a scene from the picture, is the handsomest that has yet been made for any Paramount photoplay edition, and should not only provide an effective display of the volume, but, used by itself, it makes a most attractive window card.

As a centre for the proposed window displays, a striking oil painting has been made by Charles Lennox Wright, who was specially engaged by J. Albert Thorn, manager of the Paramount Poster Art Department. A thousand copies in color of this painting have been ordered, and will be distributed by the exploitation men and the Appleton representatives.

"Love Nest" Filmed On Maine Coast

"The Love Nest," a Producers Security release, filmed on the Maine Coast, is said to contain besides striking photographic effects scenes also of rare quality.

Not a scene is studio made. The interiors are all taken within an old fishing shack, where the company housed during a terrific blizzard remained twelve days. The exteriors were made in one of the oldest and quaintest villages on the coast. Even the schooner on which much of the action is placed is an antiquarian.

London Society Sees "Lorna Doone"

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S "Lorna Doone" received a fine preliminary send off in England, according to First National, when it was shown at the Hyde Park Hotel, London, in aid of "The Cedar' Scholarship Fund" to endow "The Princess Mary's Scholarship for Blind Girls." This showing was held under the patronage of H. M. Queen Alexandria and H. R. H. Princess Louise, and under the chairmanship of Her Grace the Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon.

London society was out in force to help the fund. After the showing of "Lorna Doone" a reception and ball was held. Ralph J. Pugh, managing Director of Associated First National Pictures, Ltd., of England, was a member of the general committee and council of the fund.

"Lorna Doone" will be released to British exhibitors early this year.

Drawn Illustrations in New Press Book

Goldwyn has made another departure in its exhibitors' press and service books with the one issued for "Lost and Found," an R. A. Walsh production of life on a South Sea island, made from an original scenario by Carey Wilson. Instead of using the customary half-tone pictures in the newspaper advertisements which are reproduced in the book, the illustrations have been drawn by such popular artists as Will Crawford and Ted Ireland.

Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity, and Hal Burrows of the art department decided to give a greater pulling power to the advertisements by getting away from the routine treatment. All of the ad illustrations are drawn from the single column two-inch ad to the full page one.

Eileen Christie Makes Picture Debut

Eileen Christie, well known on the musical comedy and dramatic stage, is making her motion picture debut in Cosmopolitan Corporation's production of "The Enemies of Women," under the direction of Alan Crossland. She is playing the role of Tionette.

Sawyer and Lubin Issue Book of Reviews

In line with the co-operative promotion work which S. L. Pictures has been doing in connection with their Metro releases, this producing organization has issued a Booklet of Reviews on "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the all star production recently released. This booklet is in two colors and contains full page reproductions of the criticisms of all of the motion picture trade papers, as well as clippings from practically all of the newspapers which reviewed "Quincy Adams Sawyer," during its run in New York and San Francisco.

In each instance, the best line from each review is featured in a circle, apart from the body of the criticism. In addition to this material, a page is devoted to a photograph of the prologue which S. L. Rothafel created for the picture during its Capitol engagement together with a description of the prologue and the Lyrics used by the performers, and a layout embracing photos of every member of the all star cast.

Alice Calhoun Feature in Exchanges

Alice Calhoun's newest feature, "One Stolen Night" has been shipped to the Vitagraph exchanges. It is a striking story of the desert, but far from the usual "sheik" type of drama. It provides Miss Calhoun with a new character and gives a chance for a transition from a society girl of puritanical ancestry to an Arabian girl fired with love of romance.

Artistic Press Book For Trimble Series

A four-page press and exploitation booklet, size 9 by 12 inches, including a clipping sheet, to be used in connection with the exploitation campaign by the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., in furthering sales and exhibitions of the Arthur Trimble two-reel feature series, is just off the press, according to Anchor's publicity department.

Unbiased Jury Lauds "Success"

Murray Garsson Exhibits Production Before Experts Who Commend It

INDICATIVE of the confidence held by Murray W. Garsson in the exceptional merits of "Success," the special production upon which Ralph Ince and a cast of sterling artists were engaged for five months, he exhibited the finished production at a private showing before qualified critics last week, with no purpose other than obtaining such criticisms and suggestions as would tend to render the spectacle "audience-proof."

Mr. Garsson, determined to obtain unprejudiced viewpoints, invited two people to the showing: George D. Gould, formerly Managing Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The showing was held with the production as yet without the "finishing touches."

George D. Gould, now syndicating picture news in over three hundred leading newspapers in the country, commented:

"It would hit them hard even in its rough form. Personally, I rank it among the three best pictures I have viewed in the past eight years —and I have seen most of them. Title, director, story, cast and execution lend to a production which is going to hold any audience every minute—and send 'em out talking to bring in other crowds."

Following the constructive criticisms made by those called in to view the production, prints are now being prepared of the finished picture for view by distributors.

"Our Gang" Series Acclaimed

Pathe's New Comedies With Johnny Jones Get National League Indorsement

TWO comedies of the 2-reel Our Gang series released by Pathe were marked for special praise in connection with Christmas week showings. Of "Saturday Morning" at the Capitol theatre The Evening Globe reported that it "took all the picture honors." The Evening Sun said: "'Saturday Morning' is a hilarious outpouring of youthful mirth." Evening Telegram: "'Saturday Morning' is one of the funniest and best of the Our Gang Series. It will please grown-ups to see as well as the children."

Apropos, Pathe quotes the following letter dated December 27, from Adele F. Woodward, president of the National Motion Picture League:

"Kindly accept the sincere appreciation of the National Motion Picture League for the loan of the picture entitled 'The Firefighters' for their entertainment on December 9 at the Children's theatre.

"In our children's matinees we have played to many thousands of children in all parts of the country, and have yet to find a more entertaining picture. The walls of the theatre rang with the hearty, spontaneous laughter of children and adults at the funny antics of children and animals as they, in a perfectly natural manner, went about 'havin' fun.'"

"Town That Forgot God" For Early Release

"THE TOWN THAT FORGOT GOD," a Fox special production that comes to exhibitors fresh from a ten-week run on Broadway, is soon to be released to exhibitors.

Eastwood Lane, noted music composer, has written his highest commendation of the musical score which Erno Rapee prepared for "The Town That Forgot God."

New Fictionization of "Plunder" Ready

SINCE Pearl White publicly announced that "Plunder" was her farewell to the screen, Pathe reports the receipt from magazine and newspaper publishers of pressing inquiries about the customary Patheserial fictionization. These inquires are further stimulated by news of the nation-wide, pre-release bookings of "Plunder," together with the broadcast publication of scenes from the earlier episodes.

In response to these inquiries Pathe announces that the fictionization of "Plunder" from the pen of Herbert Crooker, is written with the same grasp of incidents and critical dramatic scenes which have characterized his widely-published serial stories adapted from previous Patheserials.

As in previous instances, many theatres playing "Plunder" will run a slide calling attention to local publication of the novelization, while the latter will print a list of the houses in its territory, where the serial is being played.

"Grandma's Boy" Shows at Beverly Hills

"Grandma's Boy" was one of the principal attractions on a special screen program arranged for exhibition at the Beverly Hills residence of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks on the evening of December 21st, according to word from the Associated Exhibitors' home office. The showing was in the nature of a Christmas entertainment arranged for friends of the stars.

"Secrets of Paris" Has Big N. Y. Week

"SECRETS OF PARIS" presented by C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., did the biggest business in many months at the B. S. Moss Cameo Theatre, New York, the week of January 7th, according to the Burr offices.

It was beaten by only two pictures since the house was opened, "Peacock Alley" and John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes" and in the case of "Peacock Alley" it came within $160 of the world's premiere of that pictrue at which Mae Murray personally appeared, the date also being the opening of the theatre.

"Secrets of Paris" brought more money into the Cameo box office during its run there than any picture that has played the house in months, it is claimed. At the opening on Sunday, January 7th, the theatre was literally jammed and the entire lobby crowded with those waiting to get in to see the film. This also happened several times during the week and to even a greater extent on Saturday, the closing night.

Ray's Latest Approved at Pre-View

"In 'The Girl I Loved' Charles Ray has proved himself a supreme artist of human emotions, in the history of a human soul," said a reviewer for the Los Angeles Express following a recent pre-view of Mr. Ray's second big photoplay feature for United Artists Corporation, scheduled for early release.

"'The Girl I Loved,' a screen version of the James Whitcomb Riley classic poem, marks another epoch in the artistic career of Charles Ray. To Patsy Ruth Miller also was accorded the opportunity to distinguish herself almost equally with the star, a remarkable generosity in such a production. Miss Miller appreciated her chance, although she might easily have overlooked it.

"Whether Mr. Ray knows it or not this new picture has helped to strengthen his pictures measurably, in preserving the illusion of reality."

"Thru the Flames" Is Completed

The completion of the big fire Special, featuring Richard Talmadge, which will be released under the title of "Through the Flames," is announced by Phil Goldstone.

The picture was directed by Jack Nelson, and the cast includes Charlotte Pierce, Chas. Mailes, M. Geary, S. J. Bingham, Edith Yorke, Fred Kohler, Ruth Langston, Taylor Graves, George Sherwood and Pal, the Dog.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GORHAM

Claim Record for Indoor Set

Battery and Bowling Green are Reproduced for "Little Old New York"

WHAT is claimed to be the largest and most remarkable indoor set ever used in a motion picture, has just been completed for Marion Davies' next Cosmopolitan super-special, "Little Old New York." It is a reproduction of the Battery and Bowling Green as it looked a century ago, during which picturesque period scenes of "Little Old New York" are laid.

No studio in the world is big enough to hold this imposing set, which measures 300x200 feet, and covers a floor space of 60,000 feet. The only kind of structure with sufficient floor space, was an armory. But to get possession of one, many difficulties had to be overcome not the least of which was a tenancy of more than a month.

Finally, through the cooperation of Colonel Thomas Fairservis, commanding officer of the famous 106th Infantry, the 23d Regiment Armory, at Bedford and Atlantic Avenues, Brooklyn, was secured. Upon the drill floor, which measures 350x250 feet, a remarkable replica of Bowling Green and the Battery has just been completed.

Some idea of the magnitude of this wonderful set may be had from a comparison with the famous "Streets of Paris" set in Marion Davies' present release "When Knighthood Was in Flower." This latter set, the biggest ever constructed up to that time, required 28,000 square feet of floor space, to the 60,000 for this gigantic one for "Little Old New York."

To properly light this set presented a great problem which was finally solved by the Brooklyn Edison Company, which provided special generators capable of furnishing 1,250,000 watts. The immense set is now being illuminated by 45 sunlight arcs, of 1,000,000 candle power each; 24 domes, or overhead "hard" lights; 36 banks, or side lights; and 30 spotlights. This enormous candle power will make the most remote recesses of the armory glisten as with dazzling sunlight.

Bowling Green in 1807, was the most exclusive residential district of New York. There were located the homes of the Schuylers, the Delevans, of the first John Jacob Astor, the first Cornelius Vanderbilt, of the De Puysters, and the Livingstons.

Joseph Urban designed this remarkable set from historical data gathered by experts during the past three months.

Theatre Club Gives Endorsement

Officially Approves Associated Exhibitors "A Bill Of Divorcement"

THE unofficial endorsement given the Associated Exhibitors feature, Constance Binney in "A Bill of Divorcement," by 400 members and guests of the Theatre Club, Inc., of New York, following the special showing in Hotel Astor, December 26th, was reinforced by action taken officially by the organization at its first January meeting, this week.

The entire session was devoted to a consideration of this picture, a general expression of opinion being invited. A large number of women spoke and their opinions were unanimously favorable. Mrs. William J. Gaudineer, of 115 West 120th Street, who is well known in the intellectual and women's club life of New York, was one of several to declare the picturization better than the play, which ran at the Times Square theatre during the entire season of 1921-22, and ever since has been repeating its metropolitan triumph elsewhere in the country.

"I saw the play last season," said Mrs. Gaudineer, "and can truthfully say that I enjoyed the picture more. In the play the husband is supposed to be suffering from shell shock. No woman who had a boy in the late war could countenance a divorce obtained under these conditions. But in the picture the affliction of the husband is hereditary. Hence, the picture is more satisfying than the play. It was indeed a very entertaining and interesting feature, wonderfully well acted and abounding in lovely scenes. In seeing it we had a rare treat."

Mrs. Laura F. Bardwell, chairman of the club's motion picture committee, also approved the omission of the reference to shell shock, declaring that in the picturization the force of the sacrifice made by the daughter, who dismisses her fiance in order to devote her life to her father, is strengthened greatly.

Mrs. James Barr, 557 West 148th Street, another leader, said: "The official acknowledgment of the club will hardly convey to Associated Exhibitors the very great appreciation of the club as individuals, not only of the great merit of the production, but of the organization's extraordinary generosity in supplying this high class entertainment for us."

New Title Announced By Arrow

The Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., announces that its first of a series of features starring Hobart Bosworth will be released under the title of "The Man Alone," instead of "The Law of the Sea."

"The Man Alone" is a Gold Seal production. It was produced by the Motion Picture Utility Corporation of San Francisco. William H. Clifford directed from the continuity prepared by Clarence Badger.

New Exploitation Aids by Goldwyn

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION through its exploitation department, recently inaugurated a new system of exploitation aids that should help the exhibitor sell the picture to the public. Eddie Bonns, manager of exploitation for Goldwyn, has gotten out these booklets with aid of W. R. Ferguson, Goldwynner at headquarters. This is in addition to the pages in the press and service book devoted to exploitation. It is based largely upon exploitation stunts that have already been tried out.

The most recent issue of these Exploitation Aids is devoted to Marshall Neilan's production, "The Strangers' Banquet," and consists of thirty mimeographed pages. The booklet is sent to each Goldwynner and to each salesman at all of the branch exchanges.

Novarro Is Signed for Metro Releases

Ramon Novarro signed this week a long-term contract to appear in photoplays released by Metro Pictures Corporation.

This young Spanish screen actor, discovered some time ago by Rex Ingram and cast for the part of Rupert of Hentzau in this director's production, "The Prisoner of Zenda," followed his success in this story with another in "Trifling Women."

Before the Metro contract was signed, Mr. Novarro was given the part of the beachcomber in Mr. Ingram's "Where the Pavement Ends," a South Seas story by John Russell. This picture was made in Miami, Florida, and in Cuba. It will present Mr. Novarro as co-star with Alice Terry.

A similar arrangement will be followed in Rex Ingram's next production, "Scaramouche," based on Rafael Sabatini's novel, which will be picturized by arrangement with Charles L. Wagner.

Real Prison Views Seen in Fox Special

Interesting interior and exterior views of the famous San Quentin prison are seen in the new Fox special, "The Face on the Barroom Floor," which is on the January release schedule of Fox Film Corporation.

The scenes were made during the filming of a daring prison outbreak which is one of the many big thrills shown in the production. In order to make the scene as realistic as possible Director Jack Ford obtained permission from the prison authorities to stage the scene inside the prison walls.

The filming of this episode of the photodrama was made while the prisoners were at home on the farm which joins the prison proper. The fight and the escape of the prisoners was staged in exactly the same manner as one of America's most notorious confidence men made his way to freedom from San Quentin.

Barry Starts Personal Appearance Tour

WESLEY BARRY, the Warner Brothers star, started last week for Boston on the first lap of a twelve weeks' personal appearance tour in connection with his latest picture,"Heroes of the Street," a Harry Rapf production, which will be shown at the Modern and Beacon theatres.

The itinerary as planned will take Barry, after spending a week in Boston, to the Columbia theatre, Reading, Pa.; the Regent, Harrisburg, Pa.; Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas; Billings, Butte, Helena, Great Falls, and Missoula, Mont.; Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane, Wash., and Portland, Ore.

Following the completion of the tour, "Freckles" Barry will begin active work on the first of three productions scheduled for the coming season, "David Copperfield," the fiction master piece by Charles Dickens, to be followed by "Little Johnny Jones" and "George Washington, Jr.," both by George M. Cohan.

Lavish Cabaret Set For Cosmopolitan

What is described as the acme of lavishness in the construction of a studio cabaret for a motion picture is a scene filmed during the past week at the Thomas Ince Studio, Culver City, Cal., for Cosmopolitan's picturization of Fannie Hurst's story, "The Nth Commandment."

This particular scene is said to outdo in color, magnificence and lavishness, any of the most sumptuous supper clubs and midnight restaurants of Broadway. Adjoining the dance floor is large fountain and pool on the edge of which three different groups of beauties are artistically poised. At intervals each group disintegrates and the beauties splash into the waters of the pool. The scene gains added beauty from the fact that a Christmas Eve celebration is in progress. It is here that Jimmy Fitzgibbons, portrayed by Eddie Phillips, brings Sara Juke, the role played by Colleen More, in an attempt to win her from her sick husband.

Miss Moore and James Morrison are featured in "The Nnth Commandment." The cast, in addition to Eddie Phillips, includes Charlotte Merriam and George Cooper. Frank Borzage is directing from the scenario of Frances Marion.

Goldstone Special Is Under Way

Phil Goldstone announces work is being started on his Super Special, entitled "His Last Race."

This will be an all star picture. The first star to be announced in the cast is Pauline Stark.

The picture will be in seven reels. It will be directed by Reaves Eason; photographed by Jackson Rose. From the original story and continuity by E. Richard Schayer.

Bachmann Sees Bright Future

Lichtman Treasurer Expresses Enthusiasm Over Conditions On Coast

RETURNING from a trip to the coast, J. G. Bachmann, treasurer of the Al Lichtman Corporation and of Preferred Pictures, Inc., expressed enthusiasm over motion picture conditions there. Mr. Bachmann said he believed the outlook for pictures was better than ever before in the history of the industry.

"This is because excellent stories, interpreted by excellent players, are the prevailing thing in production," he said. "Guesswork in making pictures is being done away with by level-headed producers. And the level-headed producers are the ones who are putting over the big successes.

"The time was when a big star could put anything over on the screen. But the public has changed that. It wants not only a good star but a good story, well produced. The shrewd producer, realizing this change of sentiment, has trimmed his sails accordingly and now we have the following recipe for a picture that will prove a big box office attraction: One good story, one good director, a good company of good actors, all to be well flavored with good advertising, publicity and exploitation."

After explaining that he went to the coast to consult with B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, Inc., about financial plans for the ensuing fiscal year, Mr. Bachmann said:

"What impressed me about Preferred Pictures on the coast was the compactness of the organization, the feelnig of co-operation existing between Mr. Schulberg and all the employees and the enthusiasm of those taking part in the productions.

"Tom Forman and Gasnier are like brothers. Forman was 'shooting' 'The Girl Who Came Back.' It was a night scene. Gasnier watched him for a time and then went up and said, 'Give me a job for tonight.' 'All right,' replied Forman, 'be my assistant director for tonight.' Gasnier took the job and when finished Forman said 'I am at your service at any time you want me.'

"While in Los Angeles I wired Al Lichtman that 'Poor Men's Wives,' was one of the greatest pictures I had ever seen. When I saw the picture run in the rough it consisted of nine reels, and yet in that uncut shape it held me spellbound.

"I saw 'Are You a Failure?' Some time ago I met Larry Evans, who told me he had a story. He asked me to read it. I did, I read it to Lichtman. We considered it a world-beater. Then Tom Forman made a great picture of that story, which is 'Are You A Failure?'

"Another wonderful picture is 'The Girl Who Came Back.' Miriam Cooper does better work in this picture than ever before in her career."

Press Sees Final Scenes Shot

"The Broken Violin" For Release by Arrow Has Many Exciting Incidents

MEMBERS of the press and representatives of the Arrow Film Corporation visited Stamford, Conn., on Saturday of last week to witness the taking of some of the final scenes for "The Broken Violin," the special being made by Atlantic Features for early release under the banner of Arrowplays Deluxe. This production will be among those scheduled to go in the first eight of this series. The name Arrowplays Deluxe was selected to stamp the productions so named as the finest product of the Arrow.

The scenes made on Saturday mark the climax of the picture where the hero, Reed Howes, discovers that his young sister, Rita Rogan, has been abducted by one of the villians, Gladden James. She is being rushed out to sea in a high-powered motor boat and the heroine, Dorothy Mackaill, drives Howes to the shore where he commandeers the services of an airplane and pursues the fugitive motor boat. After an exciting chase the fleeing speed boat is overtaken but refuses to stop. The result is that Howes leaps from the 'plane to the boat and after a most exciting fight succeeds in rescuing his sister. In the course of the fight the boat is overturned and sunk and the villain drowned, but the airplane circling above, rescues brother and sister and returns them safely to shore and happiness.

Considering the fact that the scenes were shot by Director Jack Dillon at a time when the temperature was hovering around the zero mark it may well be imagined that the action furnished plenty of thrills, not only to the participants but to the large group of spectators who gathered about a huge bonfire on the Long Island coast and endeavored to keep warm.

Director Dillon employed several speed boats, a schooner and two airplanes to take part in the action and for use by his camcramen. One cameraman, George Fresihinger, was in a plane following the action from the sky while another, James Mason, operated an Akely camera from the shore. The others, headed by George Peters, were located in the various boats.

Goldstone Disposes of Territory

Phil Goldstone announces that Sidney Lust, Super Attractions Film Company, has purchased the rights on his Special "Deserted at the Altar" for the Washington territory, and that the Universal Film Company has purchased the rights for Australia and Japan. Wm. K. Howard, who directed "Captain Fly by Night," and is now finishing "The Fourth Musketeer," will direct another Special for Goldstone.

Doug's "Robin Hood" Goes Big in Pittsburgh

SHOWING to the biggest first night business in the history of the Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., Douglas Fairbanks' latest photoplay feature, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," a United Artists Corporation release, had a most brilliant and sensational opening last Monday evening, the advance sale of seats being the largest in the records of the house, which has played all of the biggest of theatrical successes, according to United Artists.

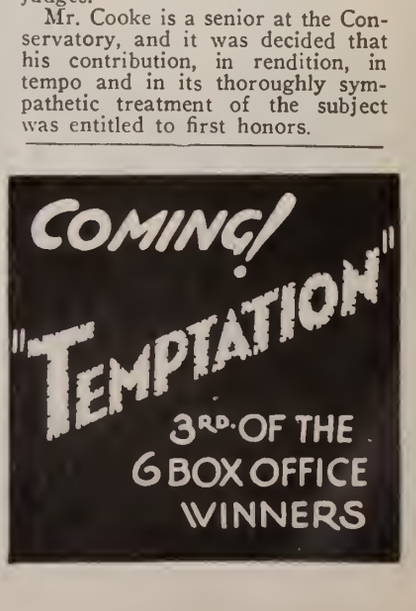
The opening of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" not only was brilliant from a box-office standpoint, but brilliant as well in the personnel of the audience which jammed every small bit of available space in the theatre. Mayor Magee of Pittsburgh really was the master of ceremonies, and others in the exceptional throng comprised the leaders of the city administration, members of the Pittsburgh bar and bench and nearly every one of social prominence in the city.

Wins Music Prize For "Headless Horseman"

To Glenn R. Cooke, of 143 Hemenway Street, Boston, Mass., has been awarded a prize of $100 recently offered by Mr. Jake Louri, manager of the Modern and Beacon theatres of Boston, through the New England Conservatory of Music, for the best cue-sheet of incidental music suitable for using in conjunction with the showing of "The Headless Horseman," the motion picture built upon the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and released by the Hodkinson Corporation.

When this picture was exhibited in Boston at Mr. Louri's theatres, where it broke all records of attendance for the past six years, Mr. Louri was so impressed with its musical possibilities, that he offered a prize for the best adaptation received, with the understanding that the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music would constitute the board of judges.

Mr. Cooke is a senior at the Conservatory, and it was decided that his contribution, in rendition, in tempo and in its thoroughly sympathetic treatment of the subject was entitled to first honors.



Sec. Davis Commends Fox Special

SECRETARY OF LABOR DAVIS, who in addition to his cabinet position holds the title of Director of the Child Welfare Bureau of the Labor Department of the United States, recently viewed the Fox special, "Who Are My Parents?" at Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, during a visit to that city.

Following the show, Mr. Davis issued this unsolicited, written praise of the production:

"'Who Are My Parents?' is a splendid entertainment. In addition to its entertaining qualities, it drives home a touching story of child life, which uncovers one of the most real and vital problems of the American nation. It is a most thrilling story—soul-stirring and heart-gripping. Every man, woman and child in America should see this picture."

Making Final Shots on "The Common Law"

The Common Law," which the Selznick company are producing on the West Coast, is nearing completion and the work of cutting and titling it will soon be in progress. An early delivery of the trial print at the home offices in New York is expected, in view of the fact that work on the negative and test prints has been going right along while the shooting has been in progress. The picture is likely to be released within the next few weeks.

George Archainbaud is directing the picture using the following well known players: Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle, Elliott Dexter, Doris May, Hobart Bosworth, Miss DuPont, Bryant Washburn, Phyllis Haver, Harry Myers and Wally Van.

Warner Picture Wins Approval

"Little Church Around The Corner" Commended at Preview Presentation

A PREVIEW presentation of the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Little Church Around the Corner," was given recently at the Wilshire theatre, Los Angeles, before an audience that is said to have taxed the house to twice its capacity. The production was directed by William A. Seiter, and the story was written by Olga Printzlau, based upon the play by Charles Blaney and the novel by Marion Russell.

Frances Agnew, the Hollywood correspondent of the Morning Telegraph, in commenting on the preview said: "They stood in the aisles to see and applaud this feature which is one of the most entertaining and effective photoplays we have seen in a long time. It's a picture that is sure to win favor for the box-office and the approval of censor boards and spectators everywhere."

The production is said to contain an exceptional number of powerful climaxes filmed amid the background of spectacular and massive sets of the Pennsylvania coal mines in which were used thousands of extras. The story of "Little Church Around the Corner" is declared to be one of the sweetest ever told on the silver screen.

It contains an appeal that is universal in its application in that the romantic flavor is declared to be mingled with the truism that there's a little church in every man's heart. The play by Charles Blaney, followed by the novel by Marion Russell, has been in vogue for many years, and its continued success is said to be of unusual value to the exhibitors booking the production.

Prominent members of the cast headed by Claire Windsor include Kenneth Harlan, Walter Long, Margaret Seddon, Bessie Love, Hobart Bosworth, Alex Francis, George Cooper, Cyril Chadwick, Tom Kennedy and Winter Hall.

Buster Keaton Back with Metro

Contracts Are Closed for Star to Make Comedies of Feature Length

CONTRACTS have been closed whereby Buster Keaton will again be a star for Metro Pictures Corporation and will appear in comedies of feature length, produced by Joseph M. Schenck.

The return of Mr. Keaton to the Metro fold, wherein he won his first fame, is regarded as making the group of Metro attractions most powerful. In the fairly brief time in which the comedian has been before the picture-going public he has made a place for himself in the hearts and risibilities of the world distinctively his own. His sure instinct of the ridiculous is unparalleled. It has, even in the pictures of shorter length, made Keaton comedies far more magnetic entertainment than even the unusual dramatic feature; and, given the scope of five reels, Metro is confident that these laugh-makers will more than triple their former value.

Mr. Keaton's return to the Metro fold is in the nature of a homecoming, for his earliest comedies were released by this company. His reputation as a stellar screen comedian was established during his affiliation with this organization, which has always taken pride in the fact that it helped make the comedian the favorite that he is today.

No details were made known concerning the contract which has been signed between Mr. Schenck and the Metro representatives, but plans have already been set in motion for the production of a series of full-length feature comedies.

The comedian, whose full name is Joseph Francis Keaton, achieved considerable popularity in the vaudeville act known as The Three Keatons. His father, also a member of the trio, coached young Buster until he became a marvel at acrobatic clowning. After his vaudeville tours, Mr. Keaton entered into motion picture work, playing in companies of the leading comedians. His first Metro picture was a film version of "The New Henrietta," by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, called on the screen "The Saphead." This was followed by a series of two-reel comedies in which he starred. His last Metro picture was released about a year ago.

Filming on "The Fog" Starts This Month

Actual filming of William Dudley Pelley's story, "The Fog," to be produced for Metro release under the personal supervision of Max Graf, will commence during the latter part of this month. Max Graf and H. H. Van Loan, who have been working on the screen adaptation, have returned to San Francisco after conferences in Hollywood with Metro studio officials.

The author, Mr. Pelley, will go to San Francisco this week to confer with Mr. Graf and Mr. Van Loan regarding the final draft of the scenario and to make suggestions regarding types, locales, settings and other details.

Australian Rights Sold On C. B. C. Pictures

Australian rights were sold this week on the two of the six features already completed by C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

According to arrangements made between C. B. C. and Australasian Films, Ltd., these two pictures, "More To Be Pitied" and "Only A Shopgirl," have been taken over by the latter company for Australian showing.

Millard Johnson, American representative for the Australian firm, was enthused over these subjects.

Burr Nickle Completing Releasing Plans

HAVING made eight of the 12 pictures they are to release during the coming year, and having cut and titled the first three, the Burr Nickle Productions has turned its attention to distribution. A careful study of the existing releasing conditions in the industry, with the big releasing centers some 3,000 miles away in New York, convinced the directors of the company that it was time for Los Angeles to make a start in the direction of becoming a releasing center.

As a result, additional capital was brought in and Robert A. Brackett, formerly with the Selznick releasing organization, was appointed sales manager.

Burr Nickle Productions have been busy establishing their own releasing organization in the 27 key cities, on a franchise basis. Their first release is a mystery drama entitled, "Sunken Rocks," which will be followed by "Tansy," a beautiful pastoral drama of love, intrigue and loyalty in the wide open ranges of the sheep country. The third release is "Bargains," a screen adaptation of the famous stage play of the same name.

"Plaything of Emperor" Given Premiere

The premiere presentation of "The Plaything of an Emperor," Jesse A. Levinson's current release took place this week at the Paramount theatre, Newark, N. J., the showing being in charge of D. J. Shephard, managing director of the Branford.

Although the opposition in the various houses were Harold Lloyd in "Doctor Jack," George Beban & Co. in person, Quincy Adams Sawyer and "The Town That Forgot God," the Paramount is said to have done the largest business by far it has done during the past year.

Buster Keaton, who returns to Metro's banner.

Gov. Edwards Endorses Hodkinson Special

GOVERNOR EDWARD I. EDWARDS, of New Jersey, foe of the Blue Laws and leading advocate of liberal legislation, was the guest of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation at their New York offices recently, where he was entertained by a private showing of the Hodkinson super-special, "Down to the Sea in Ships." The Governor was accompanied by his secretary, Harry Foley.

After the showing of the picture, an informal reception was held in the projection room. Among those present were the officials of the Hodkinson Corporation, the director and producer of the film drama, Elmer Clifton and Raymond McKee, who played the leading male role.

The Governor was enthusiastic about the picture. He was particularly interested in the harpooning of the 90-ton whale. In complimenting Raymond McKee, he said that he was delighted to meet an actor who had the courage to undertake so dangerous and hazardous a role.

He inquired for the other star in the picture, Miss Marguerite Courtot. When he learned from McKee that she had been operated on for appendicitis and was at present in St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, N. J., he instructed his secretary to send her a big box of flowers.

Complete Circus for "Souls for Sale"

Goldwyn pictures has built a complete circus on its lot at Culver City, Cal., for certain episodes in the new Rupert Hughes' picture, "Souls for Sale." A "big top" was bought from Barnum & Bailey and other equipment was either built or purchased.

All of this circus equipment will go up in flames for the night scenes of "Souls for Sale." Author-Director Hughes is making his usual rapid progress upon the film.

In the cast are Eleanor Boardman, Frank Mayo, Richard Dix, Lew Cody, Mae Busch and Barbara La Marr.

Eric von Stroheim is in San Francisco completing the continuity for his first Goldwyn picture, "McTeague," from the Frank Norris novel.

Real Color for "The White Frontier"

Allan Holubar, who is directing Dorothy Phillips in "The White Frontier," a First National release, is preparing to take a long jaunt to get real local color for this original story of the Canadian northwest by Jeffry Deprend. For only a few shots of Montreal the director will take his staff and part of his company to the big Canadian city.

Holubar has made many of his scenes at Truckee, California, and will shoot more of the northwest locale in western Canada. The de-

Strauss, "Salome" Being Released

Wiley Announces New Picture Version Ready For Independent Market

"MALCOLM STRAUSS SALOME," an entirely new motion picture version of the immoral story, is now ready for release through the independent market, it is announced by George H. Wiley, Inc., which is handling the distribution.

"Malcolm Strauss' Salome" is promised as a novel departure from other productions of the same subject, not only in acting and production, but in the fact that it uses a new and original story, based on the Bible story of Salome, which is at the same time spectacular and wholesome.

Diana Allen, formerly a Ziegfeld Follies star and dancer, appropriately plays the role of Salome, whose dance of death and passion is probably the most famous in history. Vincent Coleman, popular leading man, and Christine Winthrop play other prominent parts, heading a distinguished cast of players.

Malcolm Strauss, noted artist and delineator of beautiful women, personally supervised every detail of the production. Basing his production entirely on the Bible, Mr. Strauss shows Salome as an innocent young girl, unfortunately caught in the intrigue and plottings of an Oriental court.

"The only thing that the Bible says on the subject of Salome," Mr. Strauss states, "is that on the birthday of Herod, the King, Salome danced for him, whereupon he asked her what she wanted, promising to grant any wish. Her mother, Herodias, made her ask for the head of John the Baptist, who had reviled her in the public square, and the King had to keep his promise and comply. Later, the Bible says, Salome went to Egypt."

Apollo Exchange, Inc., has acquired the exhibition rights to the picture for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey; Imperial Pictures for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, and Federated Film Exchange for Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia.

Strong Support Given Farnum

Wanda Hawley and Tom Santschi in Picture Due for Release, January 28

WANDA HAWLEY and Tom Santschi, both of whom have been stars in their own right, appear in support of William Farnum in his most recent vehicle, "Brass Commandments," an adaptation of Charles Alden Seltzer's widely read novel, according to advice from the New York offices of Fox Film Corporation this week. The production is scheduled for release January 28th.

In addition to the two aforementioned actors, the cast boasts the inclusion of Claire Adams, one of the screen's most prominent feminine leads, and such character portrayers as Charles Le Moyne, Joe Rickson, Lon Poff, Al Fremont, Joseph Gordon and Cap Anderson.

The picture, which was adapted for the screen by Charles Kenyon, presents the Fox star in the sturdy western role for which he has become famous. Again Farnum is the outdoor westerner in quest of justice and willing to use his fists and firearms in its fulfillment.

Lynn F. Reynolds, the director, has brought forth pictorially the qualities of the robust star, which has endeared him to his vast hosts of admirers, in a most convincing and acceptable fashion, and with the assistance of Cameraman Dan Jennings has given the production a scenic background whose beauty and grandeur is only equalled in photoplays devoted solely to the recording of nature itself, according to the Fox offices.

The story is that of a prominent New York clubman who is called back to his ranch in the West to rid it of its parasitic outlawry in the shape of cattle rustlers. How he accomplishes this with the aid of his brass commandments, bullets, and wins the love of the winsome hotel clerk, is said to provide an excellent entertainment.

College Dignitaries See Hines' Features

"Burn 'Em Up, Barnes," and "Sure Fire Flint," the first two Johnny Hines' features were given a private showing last week in the library of the St. Louis University of St. Louis, Mo. There was a distinguished audience of professors and students of the college, members of the Board of Trustees, administrative officials as well as prominent local city officials and men from public life. The exhibition was given at the request of E. M. Ivancovitch, a member of the college teaching staff who is interested in the progress of American cinema art.

The pictures came in for a good deal of favorable comment as was evident from a letter received by C. C. Burr, producer of the Johnny Hines' features.

Will Exploit "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

Bert Ennis, special exploitation man for Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, leaves for Chicago this week, where "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the all star Metro-L. S. special will begin an engagement at the beautiful Chicago Theatre on Monday, January 29th.

Ennis will devote ten days of intensive exploitation to the picture, prior to the opening. Preliminary tie-ups have already been made with the Yellow Taxicab Company of Chicago and T. B. Harms, well known music publisher.

Bryant Washburn Signs for "Temptation"

BRYANT WASHBURN has been signed up to play a leading role in "Temptation," third on the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation series of six features.

Mr. Washburn, it is announced, was selected some time ago by the C. B. C. officials, and by Director Edward J. Le Saint, as being excellently suited to the role outlined in the story and continuity.

It is announced that an entire cast for "Temptation" is tentatively lined up, including, like "Only A Shopgirl," an all-star array.

"We aim to make each picture better than the last," says Producer Harry Cohn—"and the cast of 'Temptation,' when it is finally announced, will be even stronger than the one in 'Only A Shopgirl.'"

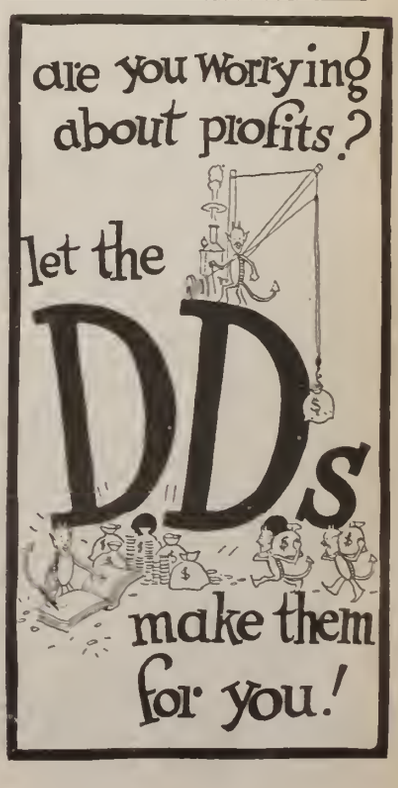
Clift Is Planning Big London Pictures

According to the London Times, Denison Clift, former Lasky scenarist and Fox director, has achieved the premier position as director of British pictures.

"A Bill of Divorcement," starring Constance Binney, to be shown in American cinemas early this year, is rated as the best British picture of the year.

"This Freedom," the A. S. M. Hutchinson novel, has just been completed in London, and will be ready in March.

Mr. Clift is now directing "Out to Win," founded on the London stage success, and upon its completion he will produce his own version of the "Mary Queen of Scots" story, using the great castles of England and Scotland as backgrounds, and with Fay Compton as the ill-fated Queen.



Tri-Stone Exchange Plan Is Discussed

Speculations have been many and varied in the trade this week regarding the announced plans of Tri-Stone Pictures, Inc., to place exchanges for the handling of its product in seventy key cities throughout the United States and Canada.

When interviewed regarding the plan, an officer of the company said:

"We are simply adapting to the needs of the film industry the distribution plan which has been inaugurated throughout the country with such marked success by such concerns as Armour, Ford, the National Cash Register Company and similar enterprises.

"Believing that the principal cause of the slump which motion picture men have been bewailing is inefficient distribution, we have decided to adapt this plan to the film industry. The exhibitor cannot prosper unless the distributor gives him good pictures, and the distributor cannot do this until he attains maximum distribution for his product. We feel that our plan will correct this condition."

Held Designs "Modern Matrimony" Posters

As part of the advertising accessories on "Modern Matrimony," their latest Owen Moore picture, the Selznick company has provided a full set of lithographed posters from designs by John Held, Jr., the celebrated American caricaturist. The set includes a twenty-four sheet, a six-sheet, two threes and two ones. The posters, according to the Selznick office, are quite unusual in their design and are certain to attract great attention. All of the backgrounds are pure white, the Held figures being done in flat colors.

The same drawings have been freely used in the newspaper advertising which has been prepared for use of exhibitors playing the picture and reproduced in the campaign book.

"Modern Matrimony" has just been completed. Prints are going forward to Select branches throughout the country.

Barnes' Injury Holds Up "Go Getters"

The filming of several scenes in "The Go Getter," Cosmopolitan Productions' picturization of a Peter B. Kyne story now being directed by E. H. Griffith at the Universal Studio, Fort Lee, was held up two days as the result of a minor accident to T. Roy Barnes, who with Seena Owen is featured in the production.

Shortly after finishing a scene in which he and Louis Wolheim engage in a realistic rough and tumble battle, and in which Barnes managed to escape with a few bruises, he slipped on the icy pavement and sprained his ankle so badly that it was necessary to place it in a plaster cast.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GORHAM

Big Week For "Week of Love

Unusually Satisfactory Results Reported for New York by Selznick

FINAL reports from the Capitol theatre where the Selznick company's most recently released superspecial, "One Week of Love" played during the week of January 7 to 13 are to the effect that the engagement was unusually satisfactory. The business is said to have surpassed by several thousands of dollars the figure which is rated as the average week's business at the same house.

As proof of the feature's drawing power it is notable that each week day's attendance was considerably greater than the preceding day's until the business on Saturday, the last day, was almost equal to the average Sunday, the big day of the week, according to Selznick.

"One Week of Love" engagement on the Loew Circuit in the metropolitan district begins February 1st with four days at the State Theatre on Broadway. The Metropolitan in Brooklyn and the American and New York Theatres in Manhattan follow within a few days. Before the 20th of February the picture will have played thirty-two of the Loew houses. Engagements in the Fox theatres begin February 12th.

Another important engagement of the picture is that at the Branford Theatre, Newark, New Jersey, beginning January 19th.

Big Game Picture Is Commended

"Hunting Big Game in Africa With Gun and Camera" Approved by Critics

H. A. SNOW'S "Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera," as the result of its New York premier at the Lyric theatre, Jan. 8, is one of the established theatrical attractions of Broadway, and an indefinite run has been booked at the West 42nd Street playhouse, according to the New York office.

Rarely in the annals of pictures has a verdict of such unanimity been given by the foremost critics of the daily, trade, fan, and national magazine press. The public evidently agreed with them, for not only capacity marked the opening week from Tuesday but also—a remarkable thing for a picture—an advance of thousands of dollars was received, it is claimed. Seats are being sold four weeks ahead, with every precaution taken to prevent speculators gouging the public.

A few lines from the principal comments of the dailies follow:

Quinn Martin of the World: "This is an extraordinary film." Gallico of the Daily News: "It thrilled, delighted and entertained us as much as anything has in years."

J. O. Spearing of the Times said: "It is the most complete, which means the most instructive and the most thrilling picture of wild animal life ever made."

"More drama than in a bale of Hollywood productions" was the vigorous characterizations of the Tribune. Evening Mail: "A marvelous panorama of wild life." The Sun: "Most fascinating animal picture ever seen." E. V. Durling, the Globe: "An example of the cinema at its best."

Pacific Ships Showing F. B. O. Pictures

TRAVELERS to the Orient will hereafter have an opportunity to see F. B. O. pictures during their long journey across the Pacific. An arrangement has recently been entered into by the Oriental line, with the Seattle branch of the Film Booking Offices of America, whereby all the passenger vessels of that line will be supplied with screen entertainment by that company.

The screening of motion pictures on trans-Pacific ships of the Oriental line marks an experiment which is expected to prove successful. Each vessel will carry five complete programs, consisting of feature, comedy and single reel novelty. The S. S. President Madison, sailing from Seattle for the Orient on January 2nd, was the first ship to screen pictures for the entertainment of its passengers. It carried five F. B. O. features, "The Blot," "The Girl From God's Country," "Salvage," "Black Roses" and "The Foolish Age."

Transcontinental Float Proves Asset

A striking example of the value of the Warner Brothers transcontinental float as an asset to the many exhibitors that have booked the seven classics being distributed by the organization for this season is evidenced in an unsolicited telegram from the Sears and Jones Circuit, Marshall, Mo.

The telegram follows: "Your transcontinental float here over Sunday somewhat battered after a week's struggle through Missouri mud, but a great advertisement nevertheless. Appreciating your efforts to sell pictures to public. We are going to book entire series of classics in our circuit of theatres."

Racing Hearts" Completed by Powell

Paul Powell has completed his Paramount production of "Racing Hearts," starring Agnes Ayres, and the film is now in the cutting room at the Lasky studio. Heavy rains delayed the production of this automobile story by Byron Morgan, making it too dangerous to undertake the big road racing scenes.

Governor Lake Approves "Oliver Twist"

Henry Needles, manager of the Princess theatre, Hartford, Conn., gave a private screening of Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist" at the home of Governor Lake for the entertainment of the Governor and his friends. The Governor not only put his stamp of approval on this production but like Oliver in the story pleaded "for more" of this kind of screen plays. The Governor wrote the following letter to Mr. Needles:

"I wish to thank you personally and the producers of the Jackie Coogan pictures for the splendid entertainment which you gave me at my home when "Oliver Twist" was shown there for me and my friends.

"It was a beautiful picture and raised the sincere enthusiasm of all of us who saw it."

"I most sincerely approve of such pictures as this one and consider it and pictures of its kind desirable in every way.

"Again thanking you for your kindness, I am,

"Signed) EVERETT J. LAKE,
Governor."

Paramount Pictures Win Contest Honors

Three of the first five winning pictures, with first and second places won by a wide margin, is the record of Paramount in the "What was the best photoplay you saw during 1922?" contest recently conducted by the New York Daily News.

"Manslaughter," Cecil B. De Mille's production featuring Thomas Meighan and Leatrice Joy, took the honor of first place from Fred Niblo's "Blood and Sand," starring Rodolph Valentino, by sixteen votes. This is the second time that "Manslaughter" has headed the list in a News contest for it was voted by that paper's readers as the best picture of last November.

George Melford's production, "The Sheik," is the Paramount picture that won fifth place in the contest closed in which thousands of votes were cast and more than 140 pictures were named.

Arrow Arranges Song for Special

According to an announcement received from Arrow Film Corporation this week that concern has arranged for a special song to be published in the interest of its Arrowplays Deluxe Special, "Lost in a Big City."

Arrangements were completed by Arrow with Irving Mills for the issuance of a song based upon this picture which is set for early release. Representatives of the publishing company are already busy preparing the words and music and the song will be released to the public coincident with the release of the picture.

This extra exploitation was decided upon by Arrow, it was stated, in view of the great success which the song, "Dear Old New York," published in connection with the Burton King Special "The Streets of New York," is achieving.

Unique Distinction Is Accorded Burr

C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., was accorded a unique distinction Christmas week by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, when "A Social Error," one of the recent All-Star comedies was filmed before the Hodkinson organization as a feature of the annual Christmas festivities. It was received with great enthusiasm by the Hodkinson staff, according to the Burr offices.

C. C. Burr has already completed five All-Star comedies, and a sixth will soon be ready for titling and editing. All-Star comedies feature Raymond McKee, Charlie Murray, Mary Anderson and Flora Finch, the veteran comedienne, who is remembered for her work with the late John Bunny.

"Canyon of the Fools" New Carey Release

"Canyon of the Fools," a Harry Carey production adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story of the same name by Richard Matthews Hallett, is the current release of the Film Booking Offices of America, and will be available at all exchanges in late January. It is a story of Western mining life, with Carey in the role of an adventurer who frustrates the attempts of a gang to transport arms across the border into Mexico to revolutionary forces.

The star's leading woman is Marguerite Clayton, and a capable cast is seen in his support. Val Paul directed.

Margaret Leahy Starts with Keaton

Joseph M. Schenck has changed the plans for the picture education of Miss Margaret Leahy, the Norma Talmadge British prize winner, and instead of rushing Miss Leahy into the big part of Aggie in Norma Talmadge's production of "Within the Law," has designated her first step in screen education shall be had with Buster Keaton in the five-reel comedy the smileless comedian has begun on the coast.

Goldwyn Takes Classics for Stories

Goldwyn points out that the seeming paradox of looking backward to go ahead does not bother the far-seeing men who are making "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," Thomas Hardy's great novel which is being produced by Marshall Neilan; "Vanity Fair," Thackeray's most popular work, which is being filmed by Hugo Ballin for Goldwyn release; "Ben Hur," from the novel of perennial appeal by the late Gen. Lew Wallace; and "The Christian," by Sir Hall Caine, which has already been produced by Maurice Tourneur, with Richard Dix and Mae Busch in the leading roles, and will be released in January.

To Exploit "Mighty Lak' a Rose"

First National Arranging Extensive Campaign for Release Due Next Month

A BIG exploitation campaign is being arranged by First National for the new Edwin Carewe picture, "Mighty Lak' a Rose," which is on the First National release schedule for next month.

First National officials feel that the title, celebrated in song as it has been, will be a box office puller in itself but intends to put the picture over in a bigger way than any other feature released, being confident that the picture itself will win approval from all those attracted by the extensive exploitation.

First National officials believe also that every person that sees it will come out of the theatre either whistling or humming the song, "Mighty Lak' a Rose," which in itself will spread publicity for the picture. The song is a big part of the picture.

It is the belief around the First National offices that "Mighty Lak' a Rose" will be one of the biggest money makers First National exhibitors have had in a long time. In a way it is a Richard Rowland picture, the first one made since he became general manager of First National. He approved the story and he watched the picture closely in its making. It was not made at a big negative cost, but at the same time no expense was spared in its making.

The advertising campaign in the press book has been expanded. A series of big attractive advance ads have been prepared as an exhibitor help.

Equity Special Is Completed

Latest Production, "Has the World Gone Mad" Being Cut and Edited

DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN, author and producer of "Has the World Gone Mad," latest Equity special, has practically completed the cutting and editing of his latest production and in the course of the next few days, will have the finished product at the Equity office, ready for the pre-release trade showing. Activity is also evident in the advertising and accessory departments of Equity Pictures, under the supervision of Nat Rothstein, so that all the posters, lobby displays, and other advertising helps will likewise be ready at the same time that the picture is completed.

The usual novelty and class will be the keynote of the press book, posters and other accessories. Equity is convinced that it has a real box-office title and a remarkable production in "Has the World Gone Mad" and will spare no expense in the "trimmings." Each poster will contain a story in itself, at the same time give the picture a wonderful display and the finest kind of exploitation, it is claimed. The same can be said of the press book—Mr. Rothstein is exerting his every effort to give to the exhibitor the finest and most complete press book that they have ever received on any production.

At the present writing Daniel Carson Goodman has succeeded in bringing the picture to the approximate length of 6,800 feet and it is hardly probable that it will be cut any further. At this length the production shows complete strength of continuity and although it has been cut from 20 reels, Dr. Goodman has retained all "the meat."

"Gimme" Meets Critics' Favor

Rupert Hughes Picture Well Received in Premiere at New York Capitol

THE new Rupert Hughes' picture, "Gimme," just released by Goldwyn, received its New York premiere at the Capitou theatre last week and was received with marked favor by the newspaper reviewers and by the picturegoing public.

Among the criticisms were:

Quinn Martin, in the World: "Designed to make you laugh and gasp. It succeeds. Extremely well photographed and is acted perfectly by Miss Chadwick and Mr. Glass; titled brightly by Mr Hughes."

Herald: "'Gimme' . . . is a film version of that always popular volume. 'The Family Check Book' . . . Major Hughes has developed his theme skilfully, and has been wise in selecting Helene Chadwick for the part of the insurgent wire."

Journal of Commerce: "Another noteworthy contribution to this highly enjoyable type of photoplay . . . handled with Rupert Hughes' sure and masterly touch."

News: "Domestic stuff with subtle propaganda in favor of share and share alike with what you (husbands) get in the old pay envelope every week. . . . We greatly admired the work of Miss Chadwick; she's really awfully good."

Times: "Helene Chadwick is a real actress, as well as good looking."

New Version of "David Copperfield"

What is reported to be an elaborate new version of "David Copperfield" has arrived in New York in the care of Andre Olson of the Nordisk Company, producers of "Our Mutual Friend" and the new version of "Great Expectations," now being groomed for presentation by Hopp Hadley.

C.B.C. Prepares Fashion Story Layout

A fashion layout, and a three-column feature fashion story set up in newspaper style, which is available to territorial holders in cuts or in mats, is this week's exploitation aid prepared by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation exploitation department on their feature, "Only A Shopgirl."

This one, it is announced, is especially effective in that the stunning gowns worn by Estelle Taylor in "Only A Shopgirl" cannot fail to be of interest to editors of fashion pages on various newspapers throughout the country—and those costumes which follow the prevalent mode in black and white have been selected for the layout—with a specially written general fashion story that will interest women everywhere.

Press Book Ready on "The Christian"

Another distinctive exhibitors' service book has been issued by Goldwyn for Maurice Tourneur's production of "The Christian."

The first two inner pages are given over to large reproductions of a dozen stills whose action is highly dramatic and suggests the trend of the story. A page is devoted to pictures of the players and director, with interesting facts about the production. Four pages are devoted to press stories—features, briefs, advance notices and other press material. An entire page is devoted to small advertisements. A full page ad is illustrated as well as quarters and eighths. Many unique exploitation angles are explained and illustrated.

Old-Time Water Fight in "Java Head"

What is declared by Paramount to be a distinct novelty for picture audiences will be shown in George Melford's production of "Java Head," filmed from Joseph Hergesheimer's novel of the same title. It is a water fight between two hose companies. This is an extinct sport now, but back in the days of 1850 in Salem, Mass., of which Mr. Hergesheimer wrote, the annual water fight between the fire fighters of the various New England towns drew enthusiastic crowds.

The old-fashioned hand water engines used in this scene in the picture were obtained from a Salem museum.

"Through the Skylight" Being Cut

Hamilton Smith announces that "Through the Skylight" the Producers Security release of which he is director, is now finished, and in a week's time the cutting of the picture will have been completed. This is a fast moving farce starring Henry Rull, of "Cat and Canary" fame, and Mary Thurman, recently seen in "An Exciting Night."

The story and treatment of this picture are said to be decidedly different from that of most farces, and Producers Security feels that in "Through the Skylight" they are offering a real novelty. Syracuse Motion Picture Corporation are the producers.

Elaborate Settings For "Glimpses Of Moon"

For Allan Dwan's Paramount production of Edith Wharton's novel, "The Glimpses of the Moon," at the Long Island Studio, Paramount claims one lavish setting after another has been used as background before which Bebe Daniels, Nita Naldi, Rubye de Remer, David Powell, Charles Gerrard and Maurice Costello move in the portrayal of the leading characters of this many-angled drama.

For the Altringham villa in Paris the Art Department built a drawing room of the Louis XVI style, a picture gallery done in French Gothic, a music room of Marie Antoinette mode, and a beautiful hallway that occupied more than half of the huge studio stage.

The Vanderlyn palace in Venice, where much of the action of the story takes place, is said to be an exact reproduction of the interior of an old Venetian palace and is old Italian renaissance style of architecture.

A section of the Venetian canals was reproduced in the studio for the exterior scenes in Venice. Eighteen inches of water flowed through the street on which gondolas were propelled.

Don't Give Up Club Aids Arliss Picture

C. Frederick, manager of the Union Square theatre, New York, organized the "Don't Give Up Association" recently to exploit "The Man Who Played God," the Distinctive Pictures production with George Arliss in the leading role.

This film is the story of a man who at first gave up to a great affliction, became embittered and defeated, and who then won out by forgetting his own troubles and helping others.

Mr. Frederick nominated and elected George Arliss president of the "Don't Give Up Association," adopted the motto of "Smile and the world smiles with you," sent a cheerful looking card inviting all his patrons to membership and then did a very good "membership" business. The initiation fee was the price of admission to the Union Square.

17 Baby Peggy Kiddie Clubs in the U. S.

There are seventeen Baby Peggy Kiddie Clubs throughout the United States, the credit for the first and original Baby Peggy Club must be given to New York, however.

Last May, the little Century Comedy star was notified by special delivery letter from Miss Annette de Fucco, aged 10, that a Baby Peggy Club had its conception several days prior to the mailing of the letter, and that Baby Peggy was made life-long and honorary president. The charter members numbered 12 at that time, and since then have increased to 31, with the age limit at 14 years.

L. A. Critics Praise "Suzanna"

Early Southern California Days Seen in Latest Mabel Normand Vehicle

"FIERY Spanish Dons, dashing caballeros, handsome, reckless toreadors and liquid-eyed, beautiful Senoritas who dwelt in Southern California prior to its acquisition by the United States, are made to live again in 'Suzanna,' Mack Sennett's newest comedy-drama starring Mabel Normand," said the critic for the Los Angeles Record, when this Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release was shown for the first time at the Mission theatre.

"Filled from beginning to end with colorful action and adventure flavored with the romance of historical incidents, 'Suzanna' consecrates the memory of a race long since dead—that of the Spanish-Californians," said the reviewer for the Evening Herald.

"Mack Sennett's latest, and said to be his greatest production, 'Suzanna,' starring Mabel Normand is having its world premiere," said the Express. "Miss Normand portrays the role of a beautiful, intelligent girl, whom fate has seen fit to deny what is rightfully hers. From the day of her birth, raised as a peon child, she was in reality the daughter of a Spanish Don."

"Pictorially depicting the battles waged between dashing caballeros and handsome, reckless toreadors, each endeavoring to win favor with some soft-eyed senorita, whose inviting lips were of the color of pomegranates and as curved as a Cupid's bow," wrote the reviewer for the Evening Express.

"It has atmosphere and it has color; and in settings and costumes and the feeling for beauty 'Suzanna' excels," wrote the critic for the Times. "It gives vibrant reality in a poetic background. The audience received the picture with great enthusiasm."

"Masters of Men" Cast Selected

Vitagraph Sea Thriller Is Making Rapid Progress at Coast Studios

WORK is progressing rapidly at the Hollywood studios of Vitagraph on "Masters of Men," Morgan Robertson's sea thriller. Albert E. Smith, president, who arrived in Los Angeles last week, has taken personal charge of this production, the second of the twenty-four specials announced by his organization for release.

The all-star cast of "Masters of Men" has been selected. There are four principal parts of equal importance and these will be played by Earle Williams, Alice Calhoun, Cullen Landis and Wanda Hawley. Others in the cast according to advices received from Hollywood are Jack Curtis, who will play Captain Bilker, commanding the three master upon which the two heroes are shanghaied; Dick Sutherland, Charles E. Thurston, Bert Apling, and Martin Turner.

The story is a "he-man" thriller of life before the mast and critics have named "Masters of Men" as the greatest of all Morgan Robertson's sea stories. Mrs. Robertson, widow of the writer, from whom Mr. Smith purchased the picture rights, said recently that the author himself considered this story to be his best.

Mr. Smith personally will supervise the production of the twenty-four specials. Particular care will be exercised in casting so that only players of known box office power will be assigned to the principal parts. "The Ninety and Nine" was the first of these super-features. This stirring human drama with a raging forest fire through which the hero drives a locomotive and rescues a village, is said to be going big.

Christie Favoring Polite Satire

"A Hula Honeymoon" Will Follow "Hazel From Hollywood" Soon

IN ADDITION to being president and supervising director of his organization Al Christie continues to direct pictures practically all the time, and in addition has Scott Sidney and Harold Beaudine directing new stories featuring the comedy stars, Bobby Vernon, Neal Burns, Dorothy Devore, Henry Murdock, and others.

A company has just returned from Honolulu, where scenes were taken for "A Hula Honeymoon." Advance information on this subject indicates that the South Sea island type of drama is in for a little gentle kidding along the same lines as that employed in "Cold Feet" and "That Son of a Sheik."

Educational, which distributes all the two-reel Christie Comedies, has just released one of Christie's biggest satires, "Hazel From Hollywood," featuring Dorothy Devore supported by Murdock, in which the movie serial "thriller" and the girls who "would be stars if they had a chance" come in for travesty. This picture was directed by Scott Sidney.

Before "A Hula Honeymoon" gets on to the screen, two other Christie Comedies will be ready. They are "Be Yourself," a comedy about a strike of the girls in a shirtwaist factory in which Neal Burns is featured, directed by Christie, and "Second Childhood," with Bobby Vernon in the leading role, directed by Harold Beaudine.

"Hero" Commended by Review Board

The Exceptional Photoplay Committee of the National Board of Review has selected Gasnier's Production "The Hero" as one of the outstanding films of the year. The forthcoming bulletin issued by the Committee will contain an extended review of the film.

"The Hero" is the second of the Preferred Pictures distributed by the Al Lichtman Corporation to be thus chosen this year. The Board's Committee recently showed "Shadow," Tom Forman's production featuring Lon Chaney, at the Toen Hall under their auspices.

"The Hero" is an adaptation of Gilbert Emery's play which Sam Harris presented on the Broadway stage last season with marked success. In the screen version which has been adapted by Eve Unsell, the featured rôles are enacted by Gaston Glass, Barbara La Marr, John Sainpolis, Frankie Lee, Martha Mattox, David Butler and Doris Pawn.

Final Scenes Halted on "The Broken Violin"

President R. W. Wood, Jr., of Atlantic Features, Inc., who are producing a series of special features for Arrow Film Corporation, announces that work on their first production to be released under the brand of Arrowplays De Luxe, is rapidly nearing completion. Director Jack Dillon has his company assembled and is waiting for the weather to break to shoot the final scenes on "The Broken Violin," an original story from the pen of George Rogan and adapted to the screen by L. Case Russell.

This production has an all-star cast headed by Reed Howes, Rita Rogan, Zena Keefe, Dorothy Mackaill, Gladden James and Henry Sedley.

"Rod and Gun" Series Meeting With Favor

"Days Afield with Rod and Gun," which is a sporting reel produced by Eltinge F. Warner, publisher of "Field and Stream," and distributed by Hodkinson, has been meeting with success all over the country.

Many reports coming in from first run theatres express great satisfaction at the manner in which their audience have received these films. Due to the unique character and interesting features contained in these films, the McVickers theatre, Chicago, and the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, two of the most important first run theatres in the Middle West, have booked this series, in fact the list of theatres which have booked this series is growing larger each day, according to the Hodkinson officials.

Bruce Wilderness Tales Acclaimed by League

Listed in the current bulletin published by the National Motion Picture League, and recommended for family showing, are the Educational releases, "Ouch," a Cameo Comedy featuring Jimmie Adams, and "Prickly Conscience," the latest of the Wilderness Tales.

Choice of Electric Sign for Motion Picture Theatre

Selection of Type Governed by Location and Exterior of the Building

J. M. SHUTE,
Illuminating Engineer.

WE will consider the theatre manager sold on the electric sign idea and ready to buy, but in a quandry to know what type to select. Of course, he can call on reputable sign companies and engineers who are only too willing to assist him in every way and have at their command much authentic data to guide their patrons. On the other hand, most of us like to be in a position to make our own choice and have some definite ideas of our own. The purpose of this article is to point out the factors which affect one's decision.

Influence of Location on Type of Sign.

The important element which governs the type of sign selected is the location of the theatre. There are three general classes of location as follows, (1) theatres located on White Ways, (2) theatres located on less important streets in large cities or on main streets of small cities, (3) theatres located in suburban sections of cities or in small towns.

For a theatre falling in any one of the above groups there are the certain general classes of patronage which will be attracted. Thus, a theatre located on the main street of a large city derives its business from a crowd of sightseers and advertises to attract a high grade of patronage, while a small town theatre with less competition attracts business to a great extent direct from the home.

Influence of Architecture on Sign Design.

The sign equipment must harmonize with the architecture of the building. Thus, if the theatre is located in one of the city's skyscrapers, an entirely different sign would be erected than if it is in one of the small buildings on some street of a country town.

Much of the criticism of electric signs in the past has been due to the lack of consideration from a standpoint of architectural harmony. Nothing can detract more from the appearance of not only the sign itself but also the building on which it is located, than a display which is out of proportion and which distorts the appearance of the combination. It should be remembered, however, that simplicity is a basis of good advertising and an overload of useless decoration detracts from the selling power, since it renders the real message less prominent. A sign, therefore, must never be expanded into a multitude of scrolls and other decorations, merely because the building is of a highly ornamental type. The result obtained is much better if outline lighting of the building is planned in such a manner as to blend with the sign itself.

Second of Series

THIS article presented herewith is the second of a series of articles on Signs for Motion Picture Theatres which are being written especially for the Technical Department of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. J. M. Shute, the author of this series, is an illuminating engineer of repute, having conducted an exhaustive study of signs.

Much valuable recommendations and data are contained in these articles on theatre signs. Every exhibitor should give this phase of advertising his serious attention particularly as a decided material part of the drawing power of the theatre rests, in a final analysis, on this feature.

Only too often a dismal unattractive sign offers an affront to prospective patronage rather than a cheering inviting display. And good sign advertising is decidedly less expensive than newspaper advertising.

Any further advice or information other than is embodied in these articles can be secured from the author, Mr. Shute.

This series will be continued in next week's issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

A point in this phase of the choice of sign equipment is the shape of the building for which it is built. Thus, if located on a tall building, a main display sign to be proportional must be narrow and extend upward several stories from the marquee. Nothing can spoil the appearance of the electrical display in such a case more than a sign of low, squatty design. On the other hand, for a low building with a wide street front the reverse shape must be used. Fine examples of proper sign proportions in respect to building construction can be seen in adjacent theatres, Loew's State (Fig. 4) and the Criterion (See Fig. 4 preceding article of this series; issue of NEWS Jan. 13) at Times Square. In both cases the designer has adapted the shape of the display to the building and in consequence has produced an attractive sign.

Effect Necessary.

Besides the general consideration given above, there is a choice in the desired effect to be provided. Shall the sign produce motion effect in addition to brightness or be continuous burning? Shall it be colored or clear? Shall it consist of a picture or text? These separate effects or combinations of them can be obtained and the manager must decide on an effect or combination suitable to give his sign the necessary attracting and selling power. If all the elements are properly balanced, the finished sign will become an integral part of the building for which it is constructed. It will add to the beauty not only when lighted but also during the day, instead of being merely an ugly mass of iron framework. The sign will perform its advertising functions of attracting and selling the passers-by, the thought for which it was constructed. Thus, no matter whether located on Broadway or in a small country town, the theatre will feel assured that its sign is really an advertiser and not an expense. With the desired effects mentioned above in mind we can now discuss the requirements of theatres in each of the three classes of locations.

Theatres Located on White Ways.

Just to mention the term "White Way" sends the imagination of the reader to Broadway with its surging crowd, theatres, attractive displays and flashing signs. Broadway on a clear night with its thousands of artificial stars twinkling brightly in an attempt to attract the attention of the pleasure-seekers no doubt presents the most striking lighting display in the world. The keenest competition in advertising has caused the creation of larger and brighter displays in a never ending effort on the part of each advertiser to give recognition to his product over that of his competitors. This continuous struggle for supremacy has resulted in the greatest aggregation of gorgeous advertising displays to be seen anywhere.

The value of electric advertising is so apparent through the results secured on Broadway that every city with a desire to succeed has taken it as an example and we now see throughout the country spectacular white ways of growing magnitude and importance. To obtain success in these ventures the same method, which has been found valuable on Broadway must be applied to give the theatre display in such a location its maximum advertising value.

The White Way theatre must be a veritable temple of the motion picture art to attract the pleasure-seeking crowd. The elecric display must be of the finest possible type to compete with the many other similar displays, each trying to lure the sightseer to the amusement which it advertises. The majority of the crowd is away from home solely bent on diversion and the sign must be so attractive that it stands out in comparison with the others and attracts the patrons to its particular theatre rather than allowing them to pass on to another. Therefore, it is seen that for the White Way theatre the sign must have brightness, motion, color and picture, combined in an original manner with sufficient text to give the final punch.

Motion and Brightness.

Such a sign must first of all be very bright and have motion of some kind depicted. Without these factors the attention will not be attracted. A blaze of light suddenly flashed on is bound to produce the desired effect, but in creating such a powerful display the manager must visualize the completed picture and know that the all important brilliancy which he is planning is not of such a character as to impair the beauty and legibility. The motion effects obtained aid the brilliancy in attracting, and tend to hold the attention for a greater period of time. The particular motion decided upon must be original and to a great extent characteristic of the one theatre under consideration. An example of this type of display is shown in Fig. 2.

Though tests show that brightness beyond a certain point decreases the legibility of a sign yet for signs in this location brightness is absolutely essential and long distance readability is not. In fact, the selling power of the sign may actually be increased if the distant observer can be brought within a comparatively close range of the theatre itself to determine the actual story in the text. Thus, a display so bright that at a distance of ten blocks it appears blurred due to the size of letters, still attracts attention by its brightness, and when the observer has approached within a few hundred feet of it holds the attention by the beauty of the picture and sparkle of the letters. In this respect the sign on the theatre itself is different from the sign advertising a certain commodity, for in the case of the latter the sign does not mark the spot where the advertised object is located. It merely is a means of impressing the advertised product upon the mind of the observer and while it must be bright to attract its share of attention it must also consist of huge letters to increase its readability and widen its circulation.

Color Adds Charm.

Coupled with this brilliancy and motion there should be color to make the picture more natural. Color effects must receive very careful thought in design. A touch of color adds charm and richness but an overload detracts from the beauty, causing the sign to appear crude and flashy. Opal, yellow and red, due to low absorption, produce the most striking effects, though soft tones of the darker and richer colors, blue, green and purple can be used in borders or decorative scrolls to make the more important message stand out by contrast.

Fig. 1. The Capitol theatre derives great advertising value from its electric sign which has become a landmark on Broadway. The Bright letters are shown to a better advantage by the background furnished by the Dome

Pictures by Signs.

Signs for this type of theatre should present, if possible, some definite picture. Here are shown the first runs of the great film masterpieces, often for periods of time rivaling the best of the spoken dramas. Higher admission prices can be charged than the smaller theatres and the advertising must be of a type to attract patrons. What can have better selling power than a sign picture illustrating some dramatic scene in the picture or characteristic of the film itself? The value of this type of advertising is being recognized and probably will be followed to a greater extent in the future.

Often the name of a theatre brings to mind some well-known shape or object. The effect of combining this shape in the sign advertising is invaluable and has been used quite considerably in the past. The display of a large brilliantly lighted star often in conjunction with a shower of smaller and rapidly twinkling stars has been used to advertise a theatre of the name which is immediately brought to mind by the picture formed. The word "Capitol" at once forms a mind picture of the characteristic dome construstion of our National Capitol building and of Capitol buildings of many of our states. The construction of an electric sign to form such a picture combining beauty and originality gives an almost priceless type of advertising to the theatre by that name on the Great White Way. This display is shown in Fig. 1.

Theatres displaying such characteristic forms of picture advertising are impressed indelibly on the mind of the human being. The value of those already in use should serve as a stimulus for others so that in the future we may expect to see many more of these

Fig. 2. *This sign formerly used by the Rialto theatre at Times Sq. shows an original combination of brightness, color and motion. original and interest-drawing signs. There are many opportunities to embody original pictures of this type in the signs of other theatres and the sign designer should not let such a chance of building a sure seller go by without giving it full attention.

Type and Size of Text.

The factor of letter size and design, is important in planning the display. The distance of maximum readability is directly proportional to letter height and inversely proportional to the brightness. Since competition demands high brightness, the letters used must necessarily be larger to be legible at a given distance than would be the case if a lower intensity of lighting could be used. Therefore in the case of each theatre the distance of desired legibility for each part of the sign must be determined in order to produce a complete display giving the desired effect. Fig. 3 shows a well proportioned display.

For this reason the letters in the message can be under two feet in height, equipped to allow for high intensity lighting, resulting in a longer text displayed in a given space. The name of the theatre itself, however, should be shown in much larger letters as in this case it is necessary that the name be readable at a considerable distance for the purpose of identification. Investigation has shown that well-proportioned letters between four and eight feet in height will allow a range of readability wide enough for this purpose with little chance of blurring effect due to brightness in lighting.

The proportions of sign letters has become more or less standardized as a result of investigation and experience. Thus, from common practice sign letters of this type are usually made to have a length of from 65% to 75% of the height, a width of approximately 20% and a spacing distance between letters of from 25% to 40% when placed in a horizontal line. For vertical signs where the spacing distance between letters has less effect on legibility, 25% or even less is allowed between adjacent letters. These dimensions are applicable to signs using the plain block letter as is customarily employed for such displays.

With this type of sign, where originality is one of the most important essentials, an attractive individuality for a certain theatre might be obtained through the use of an uncommon letter construction. To insure the success of such a venture from the beaten path, it would be well to give the factor of letter proportions and spacings a special study lest the ensemble result in an unintelligible mass wholly detrimental to the selling power of the display, as deviation from the usual practice is often necessary to make the more uncommon type of letter readable at a specified distance.

The use of a trough is strongly recommended for letters for the theatre display. It adds to the appearance and confines the light to useful areas, increasing the readability when the sign is read at an angle and preventing to a great extent halation, the cause of blurring of the letters when viewed from a distance. Such troughs vary in depth to some extent with the size of the letter, but in every case should extend out beyond the filament of the lamp to be used. Thus, all the light given off back of a plane through the filament, parallel to the face of the letter will strike some surface and be re-directed in a useful direction.

Conclusion.

The sign engineer must decide from his experience and the particular conditions at hand the proper course to follow in order to make the sign one of real advertising value. The design of signs, as that of so many other articles which are on the market in large quantities, is too likely to degenerate into practice of utilizing something which has been used elsewhere. The result of such a course is the gradual lessening in the advertising value of electric signs finally ending in a stagnation of the industry as a whole.

The physical characteristics of letter size and shape must be combined with the aesthetic factors of brightness, motion, color and picture to form an entity which harmonizes with the architectural peculiarities of the building for which it is designed. The success of the project is finally measured by the number, who from the thousands seeking pleasure along the White Way are attracted to the theatre which is advertised.

Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles on electric display signs for motion picture theatres. The third installment will appear in next week's issue.

Something New

Considerable comment not only from theatrical organists but from music lovers in general resulted from a novel idea at the Strand theatre, Market Street, San Francisco, Cal. Before the overture at each performance a 300 foot motion picture strip was run illustrating the various hand and foot operations of the organist playing their new Robert Morton organ. This was of considerable interest to the theatregoers who for the first time realized the dexterity necessary for proper organ playing.

Standard Laboratories Increasing

Although the Standard Film Laboratories at Seward & Romaine Sts., Hollywood, Cal., have been in operation less than a year, several additions have already been made to care for the organization's rapidly growing business. An auxiliary drying room was built several months ago, adding several more drums to those already in use. A number of new negative cutting rooms have been added to the facilities already available for independent producers. The Standard Film Laboratories were designed and built under the personal supervision of John M. Nickolaus and S. M. Tompkins, who were respectively in charge of the Famous Players Lasky and Universal West Coast Laboratories.

Good Suggestions

Right in line with the discussion that was published in this department in the issue of January 13th, comes a letter from a projectionist in Canada. The criticisms and suggestions contained therein are good.

Dear Editor:
